ACADEMIC LIFE UNDER HITLER LOSES FREEDOM

Student Returned from Year in Germany Describes Conditions

FIRST OF SERIES

Academic Freedom Destroyed by Interference of Government

The following is the first of a series of timely articles which "The Varsity" will present on the situation in Germany. The writer, David L. Tough, M.A., a graduate of McGill University, has spent the past year in Germany on a Moyses Travelling Scholarship, and studied two terms of the University of Munich. It is the object of the writer to give an unbiased account of conditions in general under the Hitler regime, and more especially as they affect academic life.—The Editor.

The band had played, the newly appointed Nazi Minister of Education for Bavaria had given a rousing oration telling us that at last freedom and the true German spirit had triumphed in the universities of the Fatherland, and now book after book of hated Jewish and anti-Nazi authorship was being thrown upon the blaze to the accompaniment of wild cheering and singing of hundreds of students.

Emil Ludwig's "Napoleon", Thomas Mann's "Sieben Jahre", and Upton Sinclair's "Religion and Profit" were some of the titles to be found among the hundreds of books written by such men as Jacob Wassermann, Heinrich Mann, Stephan Zweig, Arnold Zweig, Karl Marx, Lasalle, and Jack London, that were condemned to be publicly burned by the Nazi appointed student committee of the University of Munich.

The representative of the Student Body referred to the act as a symbol—the symbolical purging of the unhealthy, disintegrating Liberalism of Jewish and Communist writers from German life. To foreign students it seemed to be a symbol—but an ominous and tragic one—the destruction of that academic freedom of thought and expression which we reverence so highly in our British universities.

A Message From The President

Through the columns of your widely circulated paper I am glad in this first issue to send a message of greeting to the undergraduate members of our University.

We are still facing difficult times, nationally and internationally, but both in the Motherland and in Canada there are hopeful indications that a change for the better has already set in. Improvements, however, will probably come gradually, and as the result of continued endurance, effort and courage the people of Canada are in happier case than are the citizens of most other countries in the world.

Our registration for the coming year is likely to be somewhat less than it was last year. There will still be, however, a splendid company of men and women fitting themselves for future service to their country. Your college work will have the first claim on your time and thought. To fail there is to fail everywhere. While putting your studies in the foremost place there will still be many opportunities of entering into the general life of the University. A great English statesman, The Earl of Oxford and Asquith, once said that he carried from Oxford as his two most priceless possessions lifelong friendships and a love of good literature. These are worthy trophies to bear away from one's college.

I know that the undergraduates will heartily support those student undertakings which represent the University as a whole. Such support tends to unify the whole University in thought and action. After visiting many universities in the Old World this summer, and learning much from their organisation, I feel very proud of the equipment of our own university and of the fine spirit that animates both staff and students. After all the true test of a university's greatness is the character of the staff, who really make the university, and of the graduates and undergraduates, who are made by it.

I hope that the year will be one of hard work, good play, social unity and general co-operation.

H. J. CODY,
President.

SOPH-FROSH BATTLE IN ANNUAL FLAG RUSH

When is a Soph Not a Soph?
is Paradox Puzzling
Caput

Victoria College sophomores and freshmen will clash tomorrow on the athletic field. A flag rush, sponsored by the V. C. U. and the senior year, will be the feature of the annual battle this year. The huge flag pole is under construction and will be ready for the fracas when the ceremony commences at five o'clock.

The sophomore year held their first meeting yesterday in the College. Extensive plans were laid to give the freshmen a reception this year which will go down in the college annals. At five tomorrow a gun will be fired and both years will rush for the pole. The battle will be officially over at five-thirty or as soon as the flag is (Continued on Page 5)

BANISH BRIBERY FROM U.C. LIT.

Cigarettes, Blotters, Peanuts
Taboo in Future Elections

FIRST MEETING LIVELY

Speed, excitement and cigarette smoke were the bywords at last night's ice-breaker meeting of the University College Literary and Athletic Society. Especially the first two. In the opinion of all present and concerned, it was probably the liveliest, and one of the largest, in recent U.C. history.

The meeting was made memorable to many, many veterans. For it heard the official death-warrant of all campaign advertising, all noise and ballyhoo and peanut shells and cigarettes and blotters in U.C. elections. Even the one individual campaign sign, to be carefully O.K'd and posted in the Common Room, the one vestige of the grand old fuss that the executive decided to leave was voted out of existence at last night's meeting.

Professor Smith, acting as chairman, spoke amusingly a few moments, referred to past incidents in his connection with the Lit., called on other speakers, whose talks were brief, pithy and good.

Professor McAndrew, University College Registrar: "You have come into the presence of an august and excellent body (the Lit.) . . . To the (Continued on Page 5)

BARBER SHOP PRICES LOWER IN HART HOUSE

House Committee Sanctions Cut to 30c for Cuts

The Secretary of the Hart House Committee informed "The Varsity" yesterday that the House Committee has sanctioned a reduction in the price of a tonsorial operation in the Barber Shop in Hart House. The modest sum of 30c will now send one forth with the well-groomed appearance generally in favor with all members of the House except those on the Sketch Committee.

STUBBS DEMANDS JUDICIAL REFORM FROM GROUND UP

Former Manitoba Judge Calls for Abolition of Class Discrimination

POOR NEED PROTECTION

Holds Present System Makes
One Law for Rich, One Law for Poor

Complete overhauling of Canada's judicial system and Criminal Code, buttressed by thoroughgoing political and economic reforms were advocated by former Judge Lewis St. George Stubbs before an enthusiastic audience of 2,500 in the Arena Gardens Tuesday night, in a fiery peroration constantly interrupted by bursts of hand-clapping which rose at one point to a frenzy of applause, when he announced his intention of running in the next Dominion elections.

Among the reforms which the deposed senior court judge of eastern Manitoba outlined were free legal services of the highest quality in all courts, abolition of class discrimination and favouritism, abolition of imprisonment for debt and the seizure of household goods, protection of the homes and property of the poor as well as of the rich, all as part of a sweeping reform of our whole judicial and penal system from the ground up. Basing his arguments upon the claim that the major function of British courts is and always has been the protection of property rights, and that in both civil and criminal courts there is essentially "one law for the rich and another for the poor", Mr. Stubbs (Continued on Page 5)

COMMERCE CLUB PLANS PROGRAMME

Six Major Events Scheduled to Commence Next Thursday

BOOK EXCHANGE OPENS

As life on the Campus shows signs of re-awakening the Commerce Club, official organization of Students in C & F has already made plans for an active fall programme.

Six major events are now being undertaken. On Thursday, October 5, at 8 p.m., Mr. Bickersteth, warden of Hart House will address the Club on the subject of his recent experiences in Germany. This smoker, to be held, (Continued on Page 4)

RESPECT FOR EDUCATION GROWING DECLARES PRESIDENT IN ADDRESS

Congratulations Manitoban!

The staff of The Varsity extend to the staff of The Manitoban, student journal of the University of Manitoba, heartiest congratulations upon the attainment of their twentieth birthday anniversary. May your editorials be inspired, your reporters inquisitive, your columnists always witty and your proof-readers infallible, that your days may be long in the land.

GERMAN STUDENTS SUPPORT HITLER

Opposition Organizing, But is Inarticulate, Says
Bickersteth

NATIONALISM DOMINANT

"In Germany to-day the universities are a supreme expression of nationality. Even the Studentencorps, the most exclusive of student organizations though nominally retaining their identity, have for all practical purposes been absorbed into the Studentenschaft. Students now regard themselves as having been the pioneers of the Nazi revolution. This does not mean that there are not many undergraduates who, as Socialists or Communists, are profoundly opposed to the present regime. In universities, in factories, and even in the ranks of the S.A. (Storm-troops) and the S.S., the Communists, as well as those who in general stand for liberal ideas, are becoming better organized every day. But they are inarticulate and likely to remain so. The student body is for the most part behind Hitler."

The foregoing is an excerpt from an article published in The Times (London, England) recently by Mr. J. B. Bickersteth, Warden of Hart House, who this year made an extensive tour of France, Austria and particularly Germany, studying conditions from the student point of view. Mr. Bickersteth attended the international conference of the International Student Conference at Etal in the Bavarian Alps, about three miles from Oberammergau. Somewhat less than two hundred students represented most of the European nations, except Russia, and Canada, the United States, India and Australia. In commenting on the trip the Warden observed to The Varsity, "It was really one of the most interesting (Continued on Page 4)

Truer Sense of Values Shows
Supremacy of Mind and Spirit

NO "PAINLESS EDUCATION"

Function of University is to Offer Guidance at All Times

"In this time of darkness we have learned a truer sense of values," stated President Cody in his opening address to the students of all faculties, yesterday afternoon at Convocation Hall. "We have come to realize the supremacy of things of the mind and of the spirit. There has been a growing respect for education and partly as a result of this, the universities have had a steady increase in attendance, throughout the past years of difficulty and up to the present time, when there is a slight decrease.

"The youth of to-day must understand that there is the 'mark of blood' on everything they do—everything is purchased at great price. That is why the young men and women are responsive and serious, ready to assume their responsibilities and to aid in the solution of the problems that harass the world to-day."

The function of a University, declared President Cody, is to offer guidance and leadership to its community at all times. It must "speak with a spirit of humility, courage and conviction". The ancient University was universal in the scope of its knowledge, and cosmopolitan in outlook. That is what the modern University must seek to achieve. Every University has a patriotic and national service to render, and every student must carry out that service to his community and to his fellow men. Undergraduates should and do take a great interest in the social, moral and political (Continued on Page 6)

OUTSTANDING MEN VISIT HART HOUSE

British Commonwealth Relations Conference Adds to Visitors' List

COME FROM ALL EMPIRE

Hart House has been honoured by a surprisingly large number of distinguished visitors during the past few months as a glance at the Visitors' Book in the Library of the House will reveal. Among the more prominent of the guests during the early part of the year may be seen the signatures of John Russett, post-laureate of England; Jacques Maritain well-known and distinguished medieval philosopher; Clarence Darrow renowned locally for his debate in Massey Hall on religion; and Richard Harrison, who played the part of "De Lawd" in the play "Green Pastures." Then we see the autographs of Professor R. Coupland of Oxford University; Gladstone Murray, a Canadian and now high official of the British Broadcasting Company; Sir Arthur Salter, distinguished economist; Mr. H. Garfield, president of Williams College in New England. Sir Richard Garrahan, at present Attorney-General in Australia, and Commandatore L. Petrucci, Consul-General of Italy, were also visitors to Hart House.

Perhaps the most interesting gathering of prominent persons with which Hart House has been honoured in a long time was the British Commonwealth Relations Conference which terminated a week ago here. Outstanding among the Canadian delegates to the Conference were Sir Robert (Continued on Page 4)

Experience Unnecessary . . .

(But if you have some, that's all right too!)

The new term finds vacancies in many good positions for men and women on The Varsity staff. These jobs must be filled at once from new applicants.

If You

Are interested in journalism,

Have or want experience in writing, editing, reviewing, reporting, sports writing, technical side of newspaper publishing, etc.

Want to get in on the University's biggest, most important student activity.

Want to broaden your contacts with persons, places, and University doings.

Would like to have something enjoyable, interesting, (even exciting), and easy to do.

Think you might.

For women, attend the meeting in The Varsity Women's Office, Room 42A, U.C., at 4.30 Monday and learn further details. For men, apply at Men's Varsity Office in Hart House to-day or watch to-morrow's Varsity for hour of meeting. Be sure to come, regardless of what you plan to do.

LEARN TO THINK

"Learn to Croon" is the advice of a young professor to his class in a recent so-called collegiate moving picture. If we accept the Hollywood version of college life, crooning, dancing and football are the three major courses at the modern university. Such a presentation is preposterous.

Each individual who enters a university comes with his own ideas and ideals, and in the majority of cases he has his future outlined. Sooner or later the real purpose of a university education will be revealed to him, and he is not to be disillusioned by any pictures that Hollywood may produce. The college graduate of to-day bears witness to the fact that a university diploma is no longer the introduction to a white-collar position. The man with the degree has found it difficult of late to impress the world with the importance of his academic record. In many cases he has had to join the ranks of those who fight their way to the top rung of the ladder of success, a sheepskin is of little or no advantage in the present era. But the training which it signifies should be.

"Learn to Think" is the advice that we would give to the freshman class. Those who have tasted of the cup of knowledge will agree that this advice is sound. One may gain the capacity to store facts and to appreciate and criticise where need be, but the student who makes good in after life is the one who learns to think. There are adequate facilities for athletic and cultural and social training at our university, and the wise student will take advantage of all the opportunities which are his. However, whether he specialises or generalises in acquiring an education, he must not neglect to develop the capacity to think.

Thinking men are needed to-day, and there is plenty of room for the college graduate with initiative. Many of our own graduates have had to commence work in a humble sphere, but we are confident that those who have learned to reason for themselves will forge ahead. A university education should be but an introduction to the larger life to come—a training ground for the future.

Youth is showing a commendable interest in the affairs and problems of this bewildered world. Our field of service will be enlarged, our ambitions realised, if we determine that our primary purpose in attending the university is to "Learn to Think".

YOUR NEWSPAPER

With this issue The Varsity enters its fifty-third year of publication. Its aim is to serve the University. That aim can only be carried out if the executive body of every faculty and department makes certain that in some way it is keeping in contact with The Varsity. The larger faculties are as a rule adequately represented on the staff of the newspaper. We hope that each executive will make it a point to have some means of communication established with the undergraduate newspaper early in the year. You will thus save trouble for us and disappointment for yourselves.

PRICES UNCHANGED ON SEASON TICKETS

Two Extra Games Included at Same Charge as

PROVIDES EXTRA VALUE

"The price of student season tickets will remain unchanged this year," stated Mr. T. A. Reed, secretary of the Athletic Association, in an interview with The Varsity yesterday afternoon. "But the students will get for the same price two more important games than they did before. This year the price for all Varsity rugby, track and hockey games at Varsity Stadium and Arena will be four dollars. Including the Varsity home games, the students this year will also be able to attend the three Argonaut home games, which arrangement was come to after an agreement between the Athletic Association and the Argonaut Club."

At two of the Argonaut games the students will be able to see the intermediates perform, and the intermediates will also be the curtain-raiser at the Western-Varsity intercollegiate tilt. The special students' tickets, which include all the above and also Hart House gymnasium and swimming pool events, will also be on sale for five dollars.

"As a special treat," continued Mr. Reed, "I have arranged for a Yale-Varsity hockey game which will be played at the Arena on December 6, and to which the students will be able to go on their season tickets. Thus this year there will be two extra features, another Argonaut game and this Yale-Varsity hockey game, which should bring the value of the ticket far above the price asked of the students."

"There were 1751 four dollar tickets sold last year," went on Mr. Reed, when asked by The Varsity as to last year's sale, "and we also sold 176 of the five dollar tickets. We expect that this year's sale will equal if not increase these figures."

Men students will be able to get their tickets in the West Common Room in Hart House, October 3 and 4, at 12 p.m. Women students can secure theirs in Room 82 in University College on the same dates and between the hours of 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Art, Music and Drama

The Coming Season

Viewed in retrospect, the last musical season was indeed a very dreary affair; but there is more than ample compensation in the prospect of the season which is about to begin. Presumably the local musical life will be as brisk as ever. At any rate, the Toronto Symphony has promised us many nights of joy, and our superb Hart House String Quartet is celebrating its tenth season. But is it the array of international artists already lined up which attracts the greatest attention. It is the most exciting list which has been drawn up in Toronto for many years—if, indeed, we have ever seen it equalled. Now it remains with Toronto concert-goers, too well celebrated for their lethargy in matters of the highest art, to justify the confidence and optimism of the various managements. For those who care, this is more than a privilege—it is duty. Need we point out that those associated with the University should be in the van of all enthusiasts?

The Massey Hall concerts alone are of considerable interest. On alternate Tuesday nights—when the Symphony is not performing—a series of concerts by very famous musicians has been arranged. The list of these artists includes such names as Kreisler, Rachmaninoff, Heifetz, Menuhin—among many others. One would imagine that the regularity of these events, distributed between the Symphony concerts, should be an advantage in inducing people to subscribe. It is also probable that the re-modelled Hall will attract attention for a time at least.

Eaton's Auditorium will be the scene of affairs equally—perhaps more—distinguished. The first big event there is the recital by the great organist, Marcel Dupre, on October 9. The regular Eaton series brings Lucrezia Bori, Serge Lifar and his Russian Ballets, Tito Schipa, Josef Hofmann, Richard Crooks and the London String Quartet. Mr. I. E. Suckling provides the series of perhaps the most intense and consistent merit. He is presenting Rosa Ponselle (October 11), Elman, Sigrid Onegin, John Charles Thomas, and—as a grand climax for the entire season—Gieseking! These concerts will also be given in Eaton's Auditorium.

It is perhaps daring to hope that such an opportunity will come Toronto's way again for some time. But there is a very obvious way to ensure that it does. "Box office results" is an ugly term: so let us speak of genuine public interest. Will it be sufficient? N.F.L.

Friday Afternoon Recitals

The Music Committee of Hart House has practically completed its arrangements for the Friday Afternoon recitals of the coming year. Last year the recitals were worked into two series of connected programmes. The

And tallyho!

The open season for frosh is now upon us. Sophomores, singly and in packs, are to be seen flushing them in coverts from nooks and corners of the Medical Building, raising the scent amid the subdued grandeur of the School of Practical Science, or running them to earth on the U.C. tennis court. Even in the austere environments of Wiltonia and the rarefied atmosphere of Trinity one hears the muted cries of a dumb beast in pain, drowned by the exultant peacocks of triumph as the eurt appendage of his shame is shorn and shorn again.

Wherefore, brethren, and in consequence whereof, we deem it our duty to lay before you certain hallowed rules and regulations of that ilk which age cannot wither nor custom stale, whereof ye may be guided in the chase. To wit:

1. Never snipe a sitting bird. It is customary to creep up within four feet disguised as a gas-pump, then crying, "Hey, frosh! Ties out!" It is permitted to startle him with an assumption of ferocity and down him before he can recover.

2. Be sure that it is a freshman, and not the Secretary-Treasurer of the S.A.C. or the Senior Rugby Coach.

3. It is permitted to attack a member of the faculty only when his tie is sufficiently lurid to justify mistaking him for a freshman, in which case report the victim to the Registrar and tally two. Lab assistants no score.

4. Freshmen in short pants may not be attacked except when their little noses need a wipe-wipe. It is also customary to reserve fire till mothers or maiden aunts are out of sight.

BIG BLUE TEAM TRIM BEACHERS

Meet Argos on Saturday for Championship of City

REAL ACHIEVEMENT

By B. J. McGuire

The 1933 edition of the Big Blue team made their bow to the football followers at Varsity stadium last Saturday when they encountered Alex Ponton's Balm Beachers and emerged with an 11-5 win over the highly fancied Easterners. Considering that Balm Beach has been in action since August and were playing the second game of the season this victory looms up as a real achievement and as an indication that a championship team is again representing Varsity in the popular fall pastime.

It was a well deserved win which the Varsity squad registered on their initial appearance, which attracted 11,000 fans. The senior ranks, depleted by nine regulars last year, were ably manned by men from the O.R.F.U. and junior squads of last year. Eleven of Lou Carroll's Dominion Championship juniors were on the senior line-up and carried off more than an equal share of the glory.

The students were slow in getting the kinks out of their joints and during the first quarter the Beach team went into the lead. As the game went on Varsity tightened down and began to carry the play to the Blue and Gold squad. In the last quarter Varsity

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By John T. Stubbs

No preliminaries, hellos, etc., this time. Right into it with a bang. First of all we have an intercollegiate senior championship football team this year again. Anyone who has read the papers, listened to the radio last Saturday afternoon, heard the rumours and comments, thinks so. Those who have been watching the boys in practice can't imagine otherwise. Nevertheless it's going to be another grind like last year. The other intercollegiate teams? Well, McGill is the team to beat for the title this time. On scant information to hand so far it looks as though Queen's and Western have all kinds of smart material, good coaching, lots of fight and high hopes, but in both cases the team has yet to be built up as a unit. Everybody knows Varsity upset the dope by defeating Balm Beach 11-5 last Saturday. All the prophets said it couldn't be done and they are saying the same thing for the game this Saturday with the Argos. Draw your own conclusion. We're not calling a winner. That would be foolish now. But don't forget what happened in the Dominion semi-final last fall. With but two weeks and a half of workouts the squad is rounding into shape and form like a house afire. There has never been so much of the real old Varsity Spirit in evidence for years. The team has every ear-mark of being a scrappier outfit than last year. There is a wealth of hard-working and clever material fighting for almost every position. Some are out with minor injuries but it is expected they will all be in action before the first intercollegiate game.

This Saturday afternoon Varsity will meet Argos in the city series. St. Mike's will play Balm Beach at 1.45 and then the Blues and Double Blues clash at 3.30. Every student is requested to purchase season tickets as soon as possible. Those who have not done so by Saturday noon can secure admission for 25 cents by presenting registration cards at the south door of the Arena. This entitles them to seats in the student section.

Let's see every student out on Saturday to help the team and our ever-popular Director of Athletics, Warren Stevens, to show Argos that the 1933 holder of the Hal DeGruchy Memorial Trophy has not been decided yet.

October 14th will see the opening of the intercollegiate senior series with Varsity invading the precincts of the Redmen at the Molson Stadium in Montreal. At the same time Queen's will play Western in London. A special football issue and a big send-off are already being planned for the wearers of the Blue and White. Nothing definite in the way of lineups is yet in evidence and won't be until just before the game in Montreal.

Junior and intermediate prospects are very encouraging already. Although many of last year's championship junior team are invading the senior and intermediate ranks there is an inexhaustible supply of freshmen stars who will soon form a strong team. The intermediates as usual are the most doubtful unit in Varsity football, but with the wealth of first class material already on hand and fighting hard for positions they will no doubt form a replica of last season's mighty aggregation of seconds. Generally speaking there is no lack of first class material in any of the three squads.

Every afternoon sees more turning out for track and field work. There are plenty of promising new men with sizeable reputations entering the university and the coaches are quite hopeful of brilliant achievements for the Varsity track teams. Coach T. R. Loudon, seaman and oarsman extraordinary, is floating a light crew in preparation for the annual race on the Lachine Canal with McGill. He has every expectation that they will pull out another win and promises to keep us informed daily of their progress. As a crew they have been working together since September 11th, being an amalgamation of the heavy and lightweight crews of this last summer. They will probably entrain for Montreal next Wednesday, the race being scheduled for 5 p.m., October 14th, immediately after the intercollegiate football opener.

Now for a word about the sports page for the coming year. Co-operation and service are the mottos of this department. Every faculty and team on the campus will receive the attention and help of the 1933-34 Sports Staff of The Varsity. But we must insist on the co-operation of team managers and those responsible for teams getting worthy mention. Such representatives are heartily welcome in our office, so we hope they will do their part right from the start.

This column has its peculiar aims and honourable intentions too. First of all to present to its readers the facts as we find them, and then, when it seems wise, to give plausible forecasts of coming sporting events. This column can also be a cross-roads where the constructive criticism of the sporting fraternity of the University of Toronto can meet to the advantage of all concerned. We look forward to the year 1933-34 with the hope that the optimism now prevailing throughout the student body and the die-hard spirit evident in the performances of every squad now in action, will carry Varsity through to the greatest year in the annals of its history in sport. Last year the whole university was behind the senior football team. It helped them through to the title we had hoped for for so long. This year let's give them even better support and help them to keep the Blue and White out in front. How about it? Let's go!

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

Once more we look forward to a "prosperous and happy new year" in the realm of women's sports. Many of the old faces will be missing from the well-known haunts, and their loss will be keenly felt, but in this year's crop of freshies we seem to have the makings of some real athletes. At the very outset we would suggest that all freshettes who have any ability or interest in any line of sport get into action in the beginning of the season and not timidly hold back until the term is half over. And after all—you need your exercise, you know!

Tennis is, of course, first on the list. They tell us it was a good summer for tennis so there's no reason why we should not have any amount of tip-top players capable of raising a persistent cloud of dust on the chalk-line. The Tennis Club hope to get the Interfaculty Tournament played off early in October in order to clear the way for the Intercollegiate Tournament about the middle of October. Last year the struggle took place on Varsity courts with Queen's taking the honours home to the Tricolour citadel. This year the Blue team journeys to Kingston, so why not parallel the situation and bring the championship to Toronto? Anyway, pray for tennis weather and do not relax the tennis arm in the first mad enthusiasm over lectures and, my dear, that handsome new professor in . . .

It doesn't seem right somehow to talk about basketball with tennis very much in the air but this is one time when they practically coincide. Basketball is undoubtedly the favourite sport with the co-ed division of the campus and has always been well supported. Nevertheless McGill walked off with the coveted Bronze Baby last year—a little error we hope to rectify this year—the climate being much too cold in Montreal (or was that cracked before?). Western is the scene of the Borden, J. S. Woodsworth and Mr. E. J. Tarr of Winnipeg. From the University of Sydney came Professor A. H. Charteris, and from the University of Melbourne Professor Ernest Scott. Among the delegation from India were Ramswami Mudaliar of Madras, Zafulla Khan, Magbool Mahmood and Sir Laurie Hammond. Two of the representatives from New Zealand were the Hon. Mr. W. Downie Stewart and the Hon. Mr. Walter Nash. From Capetown, South Africa, came the Rt. Hon. F. S. Malan, and Dr. A. L. Geyser, editor of Die Burger.

Noteworthy among the British delegation are Viscount Cecil, Sir Herbert Samuel, Donald B. Ommerville, Sir John Power, Philip J. Noel-Baker, Professor Arnold J. Toynbee, and Professor A. E. Zimmerman.

GERMAN STUDENTS SUPPORT HITLER

esting and exciting trips I have had in years."

Mr. Bickersteth while in Germany visited one of the concentration camps where some 2,500 men were imprisoned simply because they were not in sympathy with the National-Socialist Government. Of the camp Mr. Bickersteth says in The Times: "In every concentration camp there is a continual coming and going of prisoners. In present circumstances more come than go, although it should be realized that as far as the rank and file is concerned there is no desire to keep men for more than a few months if they become good Nazis. The period of incarceration is considered by the authorities as a priceless opportunity for Nazi propaganda, and the regaining of a man's freedom depends to a large extent on his change of heart." A prisoner so converted does not at once obtain his liberty but is kept under strict observation for three months, "every care being taken to see that a man who had been converted did not return to an environment where he would again come under anti-Nazi influence."

At the conclusion of his article in The Times on the Nazi "camp for unbelievers" Mr. Bickersteth says: "The visitor left the camp with a feeling of repulsion. He felt guilty of something approaching indecency, not only in having pried into the lives of beings in dire misfortune, but in having been permitted to witness such inhuman treatment imposed by ruthless men on their own flesh and blood."

Of the I.S.S. Conference at Ettal at which Herr Schemm, Minister of Education in Bavaria, Herr Rohm, who commands the Storm-troops throughout Germany, and other officials of the German Foreign Office were at times present. Mr. Bickersteth states: "The non-Germans, especially the English and French students, were fully aware, throughout the time at Ettal, that they were being subjected to a subtle but intense programme of Nazi propaganda. On the fundamental issue of individual freedom they expressed their views in no uncertain terms, and on this point no understanding was, or perhaps could be reached.

"An honest attempt," concludes the Warden, "to understand the mentality of the German student to-day leads to great perplexity. On the one hand is a genuine sympathy for the efforts now being made by tens of thousands of young Germans to win back for their country after 15 years of humiliation a place in the sun. On the other hand one stands amazed and disgusted at the ruthless suppression of individual freedom and the naive simplicity which believes that a new nation can be built up on the fear of the concentration camp and the axe."

ACADEMIC LIFE UNDER HITLER

An unbiased observer must admit that National Socialism has not been entirely an evil for the German nation but their methods of asserting their authority in university life will, I believe, eventually prove disastrous for the intellectual life of the German people.

Professors of Jewish birth and all professors of acknowledged anti-Nazi sympathies have either been dismissed or have received notice of coming dismissal. The result is that professors are so afraid of losing their positions that their lectures have become hypocritical, insipid, or irritatingly dogmatic. Any Canadian politician who tries to get the government to interfere with university teaching should be given a free ticket to Germany to see what has happened there.

Some Toronto daily papers seem to have a fondness for printing fantastic stories of Jewish persecution in Germany—incidents that their correspondents have always heard about but never actually witnessed. While the very extravagance of most of these stories proves their falsity it is nevertheless true that Jewish students are suffering from a most inhuman and unjust discrimination.

On the tenth of June notice was posted in the medical building of Munich University announcing that in future no Jew was to have a regular seat in a classroom, or table in a laboratory, until all Christians had been accommodated. Because of the extremely crowded conditions of the medical faculty this in practice means that many Jewish students are seriously hampered in their work.

No Jews were admitted as freshmen to the summer session that opened in May and their older brothers were given a very strong hint that they might as well leave the university as in future no Jew would be granted a degree. One wonders how a university can make race or political affiliations a substitute for scholastic ability without some day suffering very bad consequences.

Meanwhile Nazi students proudly wear their brown shirts to class, report cheerfully at five a.m. for "Wehrsport" and are happy that their beloved duelling has been once again legalized and recognized by the government as a truly manly pastime.

STUDENTS' COUNCIL ASSISTS HOMELESS

of Inspected Rooms for Students

MANY YET AVAILABLE

"The students who are unfortunate enough not to be able to receive housing accommodation at some of the university residences, or who find it too difficult to pay the rates asked for by the residences, can, by applying to the Students' Administrative Council's office in Hart House, get rooms of first class quality," stated Mr. John Copp of the S.A.C. in an interview with The Varsity yesterday. "We inaugurated this system of housing accommodations last year and it proved a great success. By this plan all those people who have rooms to rent, and are desirous of accommodating university students, phone in to the S.A.C. office, where the addresses of all these places are taken and carefully tabulated."

Mr. Copp went on to explain that these houses are then inspected during the summer and are graded according to size, furnishings, lighting, and bathroom facilities. Information is also acquired as to whether or not the occupants will serve meals to the students, and what prices they will ask for this extra service. All this data is then placed on small printed cards made for the purpose and the inspector adds any other remarks which he deems necessary. These cards are then filed according to the neighbourhood in which they are situated and the student is thus able to easily ask for a district to his liking.

"We have already had 175 calls from people who are willing to rent rooms to students," continued Mr. Copp, "and we have supplied approximately 125 students with accommodations. This response is greater than last year and we hope to keep up the service for a number of years to come. The students are not charged for this service, and any who are desirous of good rooms should make an application as soon as possible."

Lost--One Freshman!

The library had a cold and deserted air as we wandered in on our everlasting search for news. No impatient line waited before the desk, no worried students bustled in and out of the stacks. Even the librarians had a listless air. "No, there are no new rules or regulations this year," they replied to our query.

Foiled, we wandered past the reading room doors—they were empty. But no—there alone in his glory sat a male student in the women's reading room.

U.C. freshettes are no longer liable to the errors that Hart House is University College; or that some alchemy is needed to extract a book from the University Library; or that professors are super-human; or that the University is a place to have a good time only. The annual Senior-Freshman House-party at Whitney Hall has changed all this. The house-party is held during the Saturday and Sunday immediately preceding term-opening—and provides the Seniors with an opportunity for telling the Freshies everything they ought to know.

How to dress around the Campus (always considered of vital feminine importance) was demonstrated in a fashion-show, held before the informed party on Saturday night. What Hart House is like inside—another co-ed problem, was solved by a tour through Hart House on Saturday afternoon. This was alternative with a visit to the Museum but as one Freshie said, "You can see the Museum any time."

A musicale featuring artists who had been playing at Taylor Stathen Campus this summer was held at the Women's Union on Sunday afternoon. This was followed by tea and the official address of welcome, given by Miss Ferguson, Dean of Women. Miss Ferguson gave the Freshie a kindly warning against the dangers of the new freedom they would find at the University. "We do not make you do things. You must be your own task-masters," she said.

Any gaps in the official programme were filled by the resourceful Seniors teaching the Freshies the things they shouldn't know.

A good time was had by all. The only fly in the ointment was when one Senior would walk kindly up to another Senior and ask graciously, "Are you a Freshie?"

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

Have you seen the University of Toronto Map, drawn by Helen Kemp, who graduated last year? It looks very well hung on the wall and several of the '33 Seniors got the idea of cutting it up, shellacing the pieces, patching them together at odd angles on a stout bit of brown paper, from which they make stunning lamp shades.

(Also if you are having trouble finding places or buildings, it's a very useful acquisition.)

The Map may be obtained from the Victoria Book Bureau, or any of the booksellers around town.

VARSAITY THE SAME IN GOOD OLD DAYS

Fifteen years of attack was bound to get somewhere. No one ever thought of a lonely, disoriented private member from Way Down East named Jim Whitney. Still, some Liberals were gloomy. Wickedness in high places was unpunished. Even in England the House of Lords was kicking Gladstone's Home Rule dog around, but indignation seemed to be yawning. This fellow Chamberlain had a lot to answer for. Practically a Tory now.

Never mind. Let's have a look at Good Old Toronto. Some of the wilder spirits said "Caer-Howell" Toronto was getting to be a Big Boy now; had given a company a street railway franchise, in fact. Just like all the real cities. There were even rumours of car tracks on Bloor Street.

The old college halls did look good. There was a "Main Building", a Library, the S.P.S., the Biology Building and a place for chemistry. And, of course, the new gymnasium. The medical fellows cut the corpses down by the D-N. The Trinity students were in the wilds of Queen West and away up through the woods behind the legislative walls was a new college built from Forks of Credit limestone, they said, for the pious ones who used to study at Cobourg. Those Methodists!

And so they hurried away to room and board, these ambitious students of 1893. They cluttered up McCaul Street and Orde and Murray Streets. They spread over to St. George and Huron Streets, and even east of Queen's Park to some of the thoroughfares there. They rushed to lectures in twos, threes, fives and sixes, with arms loaded with books; for the loose-leaf system—even in morals—had not been invented. Hardly one lived north of the college. Serious ones talked of a wonderful cartoon about "Dropping the Pilot", and as they hustled to the gymnasium said Bismarck had been around long enough.

None of them ever thought that, because Bismarck had outstayed his welcome, some day where they were walking would be a tower to mark a harvest of Death.

And none of them ever heard of Greta Garbo, and none had ever seen Marlene's legs.

BANISH BRIBERY FROM U. C. LIT.

freshmen: You will find a different atmosphere in this college. There is no upper year smugness. There is no hazing. In elections no noisy demagogues appear. My heart is overflowing with philanthropic advice—which I shall not give you. . . . If I did give you advice, I would say above all 'Be yourself.'

Lit. President H. Gordon Skilling: "This is the major men's organization in University College. It conducts all extra-curricular activities. Come to the Lit. meetings. They have something to offer. About the U.C. spirit. There is one kind of spirit which we have not. There is no hazing in University College. We have not found it worth while. All hazing is done by other faculties. Just keep away from those sections of the campus. But we have the spirit of good fellowship. It is here to-night."

Social Director Frank Woods: "There are three major social events in the University College year. The Fall Dance will be held Friday, October 20th in the Crystal Ballroom at the King Edward Hotel. We haven't picked an orchestra yet. The tickets will be $2.25. The U.C. Follies is an opportunity to see Hart House at its best. Their date is December 1st. The formal Arts Ball culminates the social season before getting down to work."

At this juncture J. Ensor Beamish, prominent U.C. parliamentarian, appeared from somewhere and was given an astonishing ovation.

Secretary Sid Hermant spoke next: "I have here a list—which I shall not take time to read—of forty-five freshmen who have not yet purchased their ties, Soph-Frosh Banquet tickets, or subscriptions to the Undergraduate. I would advise them to remedy this, for they are losing out on a large section of this college's life. Also they will find little preferences set up against them in the matter of dance ticket lists and so on."

Treasurer Arn Smith's chef d'oeuvre was the reading of a monumental financial report consisting chiefly of a bewildering barrage of dollars and cents, which he assured had been put in their right places by Messrs. Clarkson, Gordon, Dilworth, Guilfoyle and Nash. We took it for its face.

Fourth Year President Ben Ball: "I would follow the policy of your predecessors, and get all you can out of this society." (Roars).

Second Year President Wallace Seecombe: "To those who have bought Soph-Frosh Banquet tickets, the banquet will be on October the 10th."

Final speaker was Professor C. N. Cochrane: "I am happy to see this evidence of the emergence of an incipient opposition in the Society. A debate such as has just passed is tremendously valuable in teaching the great art of speaking well on your feet."

The First Year nominations were the one phase of the meeting which fell rather flat. They were disappointingly small.

SOPH-FROSH BATTLE IN ANNUAL FLAG RUSH

removed from the pinnacle. The V.C.U. has taken special interest in the organization of the frosh year and Ted Avison, the president, expects that the jamboree tomorrow will be a complete success.

A difficulty arose at the sophomore meeting when 376 members of last year who failed in their examinations but who are back in the pass course, were ejected. Mr. Avison explained that they could not be considered as members of 376 or as members of 377. The paradoxical situation will be considered at a meeting of the University Caput.

STUBBS DEMANDS JUDICIAL REFORM

supported his case with general and particular illustrations. "The saying, 'Law is no respecter of persons', and 'all persons are free and equal before the law', is nothing but a travesty and a mockery," he declared. "Laws are made by the rich to protect the rights of the rich."

"The laws of any given age are founded on the economic power of the age, and the law is a function of the distribution of economic power in that age. There can be no fundamental and far-reaching law reform without a fundamental and far-reaching economic reform, which means a change of the economic system under which we live."

"If you are wealthy or influential," he said, "you can commit almost any crime and get off practically scot-free. But if you belong to the general run of the common people, you will feel the full severity of the law, and not get any Collins Bay treatment, either."

Over half the prison population of Canada, he declared, are in prison solely as a result of poverty, because they had no money to pay fines. He cited the possible case of a rich man and a poor man charged with the same offense. The rich man, on payment of a fine of fifty dollars or so, which he would scarcely feel, goes free, while the poor man, unable to pay the fine, spends two or three months in jail. "He goes to jail because he is poor and for no other reason," he shouted over a thunder of applause.

A large proportion of imprisonments are for vagrancy, he pointed out, which is nothing more or less than the so-called crime of abject poverty. Over half of them are for vagrancy, drunkenness or disorderly conduct, for which only the poor are imprisoned. "Not that the rich don't get drunk and disorderly," he said, "but if the rich man is found drunk on the street a constable puts him in a taxi and sends him home. The poor man in the same plight is locked up." Many men are also still imprisoned for debt, he continued, though it is called contempt of court. When a man is unable to pay a judgment against him, he may be imprisoned.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Committee, feeling that this is a sound principle, has again planned an orderly arrangement. This year, however, the recitals will form one continuous series, based roughly on the development of music from mediaeval to modern times. The first programme will be on October 27, when Dr. Ernest MacMillan will be guest speaker. On November 3, Dr. Healey Willan will speak on mediaeval music up to the 17th Century, using a group of singers to illustrate his lecture. Dr. F. J. Horwood, of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, will lecture the following week on Bach, and Allan Sly will assist in the programme. There will be no recitals on November 17 to 24. Edward Maughan, pianist, and Enid Gray, soprano, will present a programme of Mozart's music on December 1. Viggo Kild, in a Beethoven recital, and Pearl Steinhoff Whitbread with Harold Sumberg's string quartet, in a Schubert recital, will complete the programmes for the term. The series will be carried on after Christmas.

No definite announcement can be made concerning the Sunday evening Musicales. The first of these, however, will be held on October 29, and, as is the custom, the Hart House String Quartet will open the season. It is expected that the Songsters will begin on Sunday, November 5.

Intercollegiate Basketball Tournament this year and it will probably be about the first of March, the interfaculty schedules being played before Christmas. What with the interfaculty competition and inter-year games, there is a chance for everybody to get in the game, and if you are good—and wear the holidays—to get into intercollegiate company.

Queen's and Varsity seem to be the only colleges in the Big Four who are interested in women's hockey. As in other years, they will play home and away games. Last winter Varsity won the series and we hope, if there are as too many old players missing from the line-up (a little matter we have not sniffed into yet) that we will be able to repeat the performance.

***

Baseball has never been made an intercollegiate sport but interest ran high last year when the interfaculty games were being played. Vie being successful in taking the championship, due to a lack of sufficient funds, swimming also has never gained intercollegiate status, but that has never deterred the fair mermaids from putting their best stroke forward in interfaculty competition—so don't let the sports have a chance—drag out the old kit and go over to the tub and have a paddle! As usual in other years, some of the women will help look after the parking of cars at the rugby games in order to help pull up the funds, the necessary funds for sending the teams away.

Have we been sufficiently optimistic? The plans of the faculty of Victoria College have at last been materialized in regard to physical education for women. The staff of the Margaret Eaton School is co-operating with them and this year for the first time a course is being offered. At present it will be chiefly for the first year students—for them it will be compulsory. For the other years there will be special and optional groups. During the fine weather in the fall and spring the work will be conducted out of doors—there will be tennis, archery, riding and woodcraft. In the winter there will be scheduled courses in German gymnastics and folk dancing.

University College has been alone until now in their efforts to develop the physical prowess of their women students, and Victoria are congratulating themselves on being able to offer a course that measures up to anything of its nature in any university.

STEVENS CONFIDENT OF BLUE'S CHANCES

New Additions to Team Aiding
the Old Reliables Promise Well

SINCLAIR'S LAST YEAR

By J. A. Rummels

The prospects of the senior rugby team are just as bright this year as they were last in the opinion of Coach Warren Stevens who enthusiastically claimed last night that the chances of another football title for the Blue and White this year are excellent.

The man who is so much responsible for the record established last year which will not soon be forgotten by the team supporters, is very optimistic about the way things are shaping up already and is very confident for the future of his new charges. With the help of Lou Hayman and Frank Tindall, who also hails from Syracuse, a formidable aggregation of players is to be expected.

Many people have expressed the opinion that only a shell of the 1932 team remains. This is practically true since only eight out of twenty remain, but it is a healthy and substantial shell.

Jack Sinclair, one of the greatest halfbacks ever to don a Blue uniform, will, for the last season, be seen in action and will provide a basis for a speedy and brainy backfield. Among the best of these will be Harold Arnup, the fleet-footed midget maestro. Johnny Copp is looking for his same backfield position after starring there last year.

No arrangements are definite as yet and men from all faculties are fighting for positions. Chances are still there for newcomers.

From last year's team also come Dawson and Warner, both of whom should earn regular positions, while Albie Booth, one of the best linemen of the championship team, is in there, still ringing the bell at over 200 pounds.

Andy Henderson, outside wing and splendid secondary defense man, will probably come to the fore this year. Seeking middle positions are Don McQuigge and Ken Peacock, both valuable men of last year.

The coaches are looking to these eight men to supply the needed steadiness and brains and prove a nucleus for another super-team.

But new material is providing a real field for speculation and promising a splendid showing for the U. of T. this year. From the team of two years ago are Gordie Keith and Jack Witzell, the former trying for an outside post and the latter, suffering from knee injuries at present, for his old position at middle.

From the intermediate ranks come five new men to fill in vacated positions. Brenner, Bell, Newton and Bryers were all regulars on the line, while Burgoyne, a sensational flying wing, is out for that position.

Six contestants are out practising from the junior team of last year, a fact that speaks well for the gridiron prestige of the Blue and White in the future. At present, in the quarterback post is Coulter, who provides a sensational game and handles the position superbly for his experience. McKee, sub-quarter, also is trying out, while Grecco, Harris and Burson are opposing linemen from the intermediates and elsewhere. For snap position comes Shipp, who did fine work on last year's Dominion championship team.

Perry is a strong contender for a job this season and is a new boy who comes from North Dakota. He was seen in last Saturday's game and should shape up well with time and experience.

These are the men that the coaches are trying to work into sufficient shape to justify their optimism. They are ably assisted by Al Lackner, who is the newly appointed manager.

VLASTOS ADDRESSES S.C.M. CONFERENCE

Queen's Professor Delivers
Four Illuminating Lectures

NEED OF ADJUSTMENT

The speaker who more than any other had the task of guiding the thought of the recent S.C.M. conference at Lake Couchiching was Dr. Gregory Vlastos, of Queen's University. He delivered a series of four lectures on "The Meaning of Christianity", which was thorough, inspiring and illuminating.

The first lecture was a general discussion, emphasizing the need of a mutual adjustment between religion and the man of to-day. The adjustment of oneself to religion is in the nature of a "house-cleaning"; but Dr. Vlastos rather confined himself to the reconstruction of religion. Belief, morality and worship, understood in a broad sense, were found necessary and sufficient to religion.

In adopting a set of beliefs, we are offered the alternatives of accepting authority, or of using a scientific approach to one's experience. The scientific method is characterized by a democratic spirit, emphasizing the duty of the individual to test the truth for himself, by the urge to discovery, rather than a static conservatism, and by a concern with the facts of this world. The primary fact on which our belief is to be based is the fact of good—not the whole world and nothing less than the whole good. The totality of good in the world is identified with God. Sin is disobedience to the good. Salvation is the dedication of the individual to the good in the world and the church is the community of those so dedicated. The belief in these facts will constitute the creed of the reconstructed religion.

The second lecture was devoted to a consideration of personal morality. Religion is moral because it has to do with a "must", whereas science remains in the purely hypothetical. All genuine religion gives rise to ethical action. However, there is a real danger of becoming so occupied with some particular good that one's devotion to the general good is prejudiced. Asceticism is a resolve not to be tyrannized by any particular good. Although love for the good must be the motivating principle of morality, it must have an element of fear, or it will degenerate into sentimentalism.

Passing in the third lecture from personal to social morality, Dr. Vlastos briefly traced the history of the growth of man's social consciousness, illustrating the gradual creation of objective standards of morality. Morality was first identified with social sanction, but with the growth of the prophetic tradition in Palestine, abuses in the system were attacked, until in Jesus the ultimate standard was the Kingdom of God. The Christian attitude to society should be radical yet realistic; fearless and uncompromising, yet trusting in the ultimate victory of the good.

The final lecture dealt with the fact of prayer: a subject which was very aptly related to the general spirit of the conference. Prayer commences with an attitude of effortless silence. Out of the silence grows meditation, probably on some personal problem, and this is followed by illumination—the solution of the problem. Then there is the attitude of union with God; you are "at one" with the whole world, and worship is a spontaneous outcome. For Dr. Vlastos these truths were evidently facts of experience, and this greatly enhanced the appeal of his message.

pressed hard, forcing the Beaches back and finally tied the score with a placement kick. Continuing their savage attack they again forced the play and in the dying moments of the game they fell on a loose ball behind the line for a major which was converted.

Bobby Porter for the Beaches out-kicked the Blue team for the major part of the game. His attempt to save the situation in the last moments of play, however, gave Varsity their only touchdown. This came when Porter attempted to return a kick from behind his line, when the score was tied with two minutes to go. He failed to clear the ball and when the scramble was straightened it was a Varsity player who was on the ball.

Grecco and Perry were the most effective men on the line for Varsity while Arnup, Coulter and Copp turned in starry performances on the backfield. Arnup, who made a slow start, was out-kicking Porter at the end of the game. It was his educated toe which booted over the placement kick to tie the score and give Varsity the chance to come on and win. A Coulter to Copp forward pass which went for thirty yards brought them into scoring position and made the victory possible.

Stevens, who guides the destinies of the Blue team, has produced an aggregation which is going to be hard to beat. They are fast, shifty and very scrappy. Last year's team had plenty of fight in them and this characteristic

Describes Methods of Calculating the Age of the Earth

11,000,000,000 Years

"Probably the most accurate and generally accepted method of calculating the age of the earth is based on the mutation of uranium from its original state to a form of lead," stated Professor Satterly in the inaugural lecture in the Department of Physics last night on "The Age of the Earth".

"It has been found impossible to alter the rate of change of uranium to its various other forms, and hence it is a fairly trustworthy basis for hypothesis."

The date of creation usually accepted by theologians as 4000 B.C. was computed by Archbishop Ussher the 17th century, reckoning by Jewish history.

Joly attempted to calculate the age of the earth by comparing the amount of sodium deposited annually by rivers in the ocean with the total amount in the ocean itself. Other biologists and geologists used methods involving fossils and depths of strata across England, and though the modern method of boring is more accurate, none of these are at all trustworthy.

The astronomers in turn formulated various theories as to the creation of the stellar universe, reaching an estimate varying from 15 million to millions of millions of years.

The most recent and most trustworthy estimate of the age of the earth is 11,000 million years.

problems of the day. In this way they become vital factors in the future welfare of our nation. On our youth will rest in no small degree the responsibility of the great choice which the nations will in all probability be called upon to make within the next third of the century; the choice between the suicidal and the creative powers of civilization.

In his survey, President Cody remarked with satisfaction on the increasing use that is being made by the students of the University Library. He strongly urged undergraduates to make full use of all the facilities offered by the University for their common enjoyment and benefit, and to grant their heartiest support to all undertakings of the University or its representatives. A word of friendly advice was tendered—"While there may be 'Painless Dentistry', there is no such thing as 'painless education'. It is only by sweat and travail that we accomplish anything. Steady work, even on the part of the average brain, will produce astounding results."

Looking back on the work of last year, President Cody commented on the outstanding educational events that took place at the University of Toronto, the visits of several distinguished men who gave lectures on various topics of general interest.

The President also commented on the excellent facilities at our command within this University. In point of material equipment, he declared, Toronto need be considered second to no University either in the Mother Country or in Italy. At the new Dunlop Observatory, our Astronomy Department will have for its use the second largest telescope in the world. Our new Museum, which will be officially opened on October 12th, will prove a valuable auxiliary to the University.

Besides these, a new school of nursing is to be opened this week. Several new beneficiaries, notably Miss Mary Walberg's gift to the School of Practical Science and Colonel Leonard's scholarships for University College, have been received in the past year, and will be still another aid in the carrying on of the University.

Union. Nominations for the fresher executive will take place. Sophomores come and elect a new president. Everybody welcome!

LARGER ATTENDANCE AT SUMMER SCHOOL

Extension Department Courses and Lectures Prove Popular

"THINK FOR YOURSELF"

Last Summer the University was a stamping ground for 427 students who were divided into 3 groups. One, of teachers who are at a distance from the University while teaching and cannot attend the winter class to obtain their B.A. degree. The second group consisted of those teachers with a degree who wished to obtain their Doctor of Pedagogy degree. The third group of students were those wishing to become specialists. The number in attendance was larger than during any previous Summer.

Now, the Extension Department is preparing for a busy Winter. They expect to have enrolled in night classes approximately 400 students, who by taking 2 or 3 subjects a year will get their B.A. degree. They will take the same subjects as the other undergraduates but since they cannot take more than 3 subjects a year it will take them longer to get their degree.

There will also be classes for the general public held in U.C., beginning on the 10th of October and lasting until March. There are no examinations or entrance requirements for these classes and usually about 2,000 people take advantage of them.

In the Economics Building, classes, under the direction of the Workers' Educational Association, will be open for all manual workers who wish to improve themselves. The pamphlet advertising these W.E.A. classes asks workers to "Think for Yourself" and ends with the little verse

Cannon balls may aid the truth
But thoughts a weapon stronger.

Last year the Department of University Extension gave instruction to 419 students in its various courses and 15,440 people listened to Extension lectures in Toronto and through the province.

VARSITY BANDSMEN BEGIN REHEARSALS

New Tunes Prove Popular, But Many Vacancies Still Unfilled

At their first rehearsal last evening the Varsity Bandsmen began the season in a lusty manner to the strains of one of the season's most popular gridiron melodies "You've got to be a Football Hero", which will be included in their repertoire of marching airs this fall.

Under the leadership of Captain John Slater, V.D., the band, which boasts an enrolment of 37 to date, showed great promise of musical ability, and with a large nucleus of last year's men to assist the talent that is rapidly being recruited from the freshmen ranks, they hope to increase their numbers to sixty for the coming season.

At the conclusion of the rehearsal the bandsmen were measured for their new blazers of blue and white which, with the regulation caps, capes and flannels, should make them one of the smartest appearing university bands in Canada. With a few more workouts they should be as musical as they will be ornamental, and rugby fans will find them no mean addition to their rooting sections.

When interviewed by The Varsity, Captain Slater was enthusiastic about the prospects for the season. "We can use more players in practically every section," he said. "Some four new songs like the British hit 'Marching Along Together' should prove very popular, and we hope to have a large turnout within the next day or two."

Any embryo bandsmen about the campus who have not yet registered with the band are advised to do so at the rehearsal to-day which is being held on the front campus at 5 p.m.

TRACK AND FIELD PROSPECTS BRIGHT

Strong Team Expected for Intercollegiate Struggle This Year

FEW FRESHMEN OUT

The Blue and White prospects for track and field honours seem to be particularly bright this year and it is expected that a strong team will be entered in the intercollegiate meet.

Wednesday's turn-out of about 25 men showed some of last year's stars with a few new men who are expected to be outstanding in their particular class. As yet there has been no great turn-out of freshmen most of those who are out being in their second, third and fourth years.

Two of last year's indoor stars, Dore and O'Leary, who tied for the 50 yard event, are now out for the outdoor sprints. Three other sprinters who are expected to show up well are Kendall, Caldwell and Porter.

McGuire, a new man from the University of Saskatchewan with numerous records, is expected to show up well in the quarter mile.

Although "Bud" Stewart has now turned to rugby, Penlington and MacFie of last year's relay team, are back in harness. Distance so far relies on MacGladery, Thompson and Conway.

In field sports, Passmore of McMaster and Hickey are showing up well in the hurdle. Isabister and Maundrell, two well-known field men, are again tossing the weights. Maundrell in 1931 was winner of three of the events at the University of Melbourne.

Westheuser, last year's record breaker in the intercollegiate discus throw, will be out again. The coaching for middle distance will be done by the well-known Nic Phillips of the West End Y.M.C.A., who is a new man to collegiate circles. Frank Hallus will again look after the sprinters, while Chester Martin and Archibald will guide the field men.

The Glendale TWO TROUSER SUITS at $25.00

Will Appeal to College Men!

College men want style in a suit and that's what the Glendales give them. But Glendales do not stop at style alone. The smart style is backed up by good Old Country woollens and the tailoring is of the sort that makes it possible for the suit to retain its original smart appearance after months of wear.

Glendales have value, too. That's because of our planning. Tailored for Eaton's, sold by Eaton's, co-operation and economics are possible which are passed on to the customer who buys Glendale.

Now the new fall stocks are in. Fine worsteds in blues, greys, browns, fawns, blue-greys and many other shades. Pleasing stripes and small patterns. You are practically certain to find a suit to meet your requirements.

A full range of size and models for all types of men.

GLENDALÉ SUITS MAY BE PURCHASED ON DEFERRED PAYMENTS. TERMS (Toronto Delivery Area) 25% down and the balance, plus a carrying charge, in 3 equal monthly payments.

SPECIAL EXCURSION TO MONTREAL GAME ARRANGED BY S.A.C.

Splendid Opportunity Offered to See Two Intercollegiate Fixtures

RETURN FARE $8.05

Low Rate Obtained by Guaranteeing Party of 100 Persons

The Varsity is informed by Mr. E. A. Macdonald, General Secretary-treasurer of the Students' Administrative Council, that arrangements have been completed with the railways to run a special student excursion to Montreal on Saturday, October 7th, the day of the first intercollegiate senior rugby game of the season and the annual rowing race between Varsity and McGill.

No special excursion for the general public was planned by the railways but the S.A.C. has available for the students return tickets at the low price of $8.05 good only in coaches. This has only been made possible by guaranteeing the railway a party of at least 100 people, but half of this number will be made up by the band.

The students now have a real opportunity to help the rugby team get off to a flying start and cheer the rowing crew for their seventh consecutive intercollegiate title and at the same time get a cheap week-end trip to Montreal.

Any students who are interested are urged to get their tickets at once at the S.A.C. office in Hart House or Room 82, University College. Any tickets not taken up by Tuesday will be offered to the general public. The regular week-end fare is $14.40, so the rate obtained by the S.A.C. is a real bargain. Tickets are good up till Monday night for the return journey. Be sure to get yours early.

Band to Make Trip

Once again the Varsity band will make the trip to Montreal to support the Blue team when they swing into action at Molson Stadium a week from tomorrow against the Red and White. This has been made possible again this year through the generosity of Dr. Cody and a few of his immediate friends; their donations having sufficiently augmented the limited funds of the S.A.C. to make it possible to finance the trip.

Inconsequence

Although the spring was intended for bigger and better things, like examinations and marbles and new hats, it has always seemed rather a pity that the annual blossoming forth of the freshman year could not have been arranged for at a more seasonable period than this era of the last rose of summer.

There is a glorious bluster and exhilaration about the goody month of September, but as one casts one's jaded optics about the venerable campus and college halls, one is far more impressed with the meekness and mildness of the first year than startled by bluster. Of course we must give them time—you can never tell! Nevertheless, it does seem that the frosh should arrive trailing clouds of something or other along with the dainty hepatica and the bursting of the green buds, tra la . . .

Perhaps we should be reconciled to things as they are and leave the aesthetic arrangements to the powers of this honoured institution. Who wants to write a final examination on New Year's Day, anyway—with a cup of

GERMANS POLITE HOSTS

In the course of an interview printed elsewhere in this issue, Miss Joyce Tedman of University College expressed her dissatisfaction with the report of an interview with her run by The Toronto Daily Star in the issue of Monday, September 25th, and expressed the desire to correct the impression which may have been left by that article. Miss Tedman's experience in German universities does not correspond with The Star's statements and the gross exaggerations have cast an unfavourable light on her year's stay there. The Germans have a profound respect for foreigners, and Miss Tedman states that nothing but politeness and consideration were met with in her case. Being called a spy in Germany was so far from the truth that she could not believe the Star's article when she read it.

POLITICS SPOILING ACADEMIC GERMANY

Varsity Students Recount
Hitler's Influence on

JEWS BARRED AT BERLIN

Such widespread interest has been shown in the effects of the Hitler regime on the German universities that The Varsity has got into contact with two students of the University of Toronto, who relate their experiences in the following article.

"In the summer of 1932 German students were forbidden to wear Nazi uniforms, but now even those who are not completely sympathetic wear them regularly," stated Miss Betty Burton, who studied for a year at the Davis exchange student from the University of Toronto at the Johann Wolfgang Goethe University in Frankfurt am Rhein. "However, even this was not enough to differentiate them. All foreign and Jewish students were given red registration cards, while the Germans had grey ones entitling them to extra privileges, such as attendance on certain lectures whose contents they were forbidden to divulge." The pure German students were organized into a Studentenschaft, with a very ardent Nazi president. However, the non-Nazis were not bothered as long as they took no part in the Studentenschaft manifestations. Almost every two weeks are new national holidays. In June there was an exuberant meeting in protest against the Treaty of Versailles before the Bismarck Memorial—the year before it had been prohibited by the police.

Three Nazi students attended all the meetings of the Auslandsstelle (a university office looking after foreign students) to explain National Socialism. "They answered any questions we asked," stated Miss Burton, "and though their replies were sometimes

While it has not definitely been decided if the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation will be represented on the campus by an officially affiliated society, plans are under way for the formation of a group to disseminate the ideas of the C.C.F. in more vigorous fashion in academic circles.

Because there is a definite tendency to organize the constituent clubs of this new political party on regional lines, in conformity with constituency boundaries, it was questionable at first

HIGHLY SUCCESSFUL

For nine days in late September 150 students and professors from the various Canadian universities met to discuss the problems facing the world of to-day, and the possible answer to them, under the theme, "The Relevance of Christianity to Our Day".

The whole conference was pervaded by a spirit of spontaneous, informal fun. Tennis, boating, basketball and folk dancing, as well as a thoroughly successful regatta, in which everybody had a part, kept the delegates in good trim. Conference singing, several violin recitals, poetry and art all had an important place. The seven student groups appear to have been highly successful, while the worship services, conducted by various leaders, proved richly beneficial.

Bob Clarke, of Emmanuel College, opened the conference, speaking on the theme. On subsequent evenings ad-

Lost--Another Freshman!

A solitary figure passed between the pillars that guard in stately silence the portals of Convocation Hall. Timidly he tried the door, to find it locked. He tried the door on either side, with no greater success. There was a determined set to his jaw as he returned to the central door of the awe-inspiring building.

Knock--knock! No response. Knock--knock, louder this time. Bang--bang--bang! And still only echo answered him.

Sophs Hold Frosh in Flag Rush

BATTLE HALF AN HOUR

Rushing through a barrage of over mature tomatoes, through a cloud of flour dust and into the splashing spray of a fire hose some one hundred and fifty freshmen of Victoria College had their first official clash with the college sophomores yesterday.

It was the scene of the much discussed flag rush. The freshmen and the sophomores were assembled at different sides of the campus and at five o'clock Dr. Brown fired a gun which was the signal for both years to rush to the pole and attempt to remove the flag fluttering in the breeze thirty feet in the air.

RACIAL PROBLEMS ACUTE IN AFRICA

Awakening of Negro Masses Dismays European Immigrants

EXCLUSION PRACTISED

The racial situation in South Africa was vividly brought home to the delegates to the S.C.M. conference at Lake Couchiching by Max Yergan, Y.M.C.A. student secretary of South Africa. Although the situation he pictured appeared desperate, yet through his deep Christian faith he was able to meet it with courage and hope.

In just a few generations Africa has been penetrated by outsiders to such an extent that now less than one-tenth of the country is in the hands of the Africans. Africa is rich in natural resources, and labour is cheap and unprotected by any organization. As a result there has been immigration to the extent of half a million Europeans, drawn thither for commercial reasons. However, they have cherished their European heritage and look with dismay at the gradual awakening of the great African majority. They have succeeded in excluding Africans from parliament and

NEWS STAFF MEETING

A meeting will be held in The Varsity office, Hart House, to-day at 1.30 p.m. for all those interested in joining the men's news staff. Old members are also requested to attend.

VARSITY OARSMEN TO MEET MCGILL

Light, Well-Balanced Crew Promises Seventh Straight Win

HUGHES AGAIN COX

After a summer of strenuous work and consistent training, the U. of T. rowing team once more is rapidly shaping itself into another classy and efficient machine to oppose the rival oarsmen from McGill on October 7th in Montreal. Varsity rowing teams in the past have been something to boast of, as a record of six consecutive wins in the last six years indicates, and from all evidences this year will not be an exception.

Under the veteran leadership of Coach Loudon, a large squad has been cluening up the waters of Lake Ontario since early spring in an endeavour to produce a speedy, smooth and muscular crew, and only as recently as the middle of September has any definite announcement been made as to who would make up the team's personnel. An exceptionally light crew has been evolved, differing materially from last year's squad which outweighed the McGill men by as much as 15 pounds per man. And while changes may yet be made as regards the competing team the probable starting crew is pretty well fixed in Coach Loudon's mind.

W.U.A. ELECTIONS SET FOR TUESDAY

Nomination Tea to be Held at Women's Union Next Monday

The first meeting of the Women's Undergraduate Association was held at 1.30 yesterday in the Women's Union for the purpose of nominating officers for the Freshman Year Executive, and also an Athletic Director of J.T.S. Miss Jean Hunnisset presided and announced that elections would be held next Tuesday, October 3rd in the Women's Common Room at U.C. from 12 to 2 o'clock. All freshmen and candidates for office were also urged to attend the nomination tea at the Union next Monday, October 2nd. Initiations are scheduled for Thursday of the same week at 7.30, also at the Union.

The slate for the J.T.S. executive is as follows: President, Mary Clark, Yvonne Ritchie, Freddie Chapman; Athletic Director, Mary Becker; Secretary, Betty Evans, Bettina Wolverton, Phyllis Morgan; Treasurer, Dorothy Smith, Mildred Parker, Joan Romlin; Social Service Representative, Elizabeth MacPherson, Margaret Taylor, Margaret Kennedy.

Miss Betty Brice was elected Athletic Director of J.T.S. by acclamation. Any further nominations, if signed by two other members of the class, may be handed in to any member of the executive before noon to-day.

It is not known yet whether it will be necessary to hold elections for the presidency of J.T.S. But if this is found unavoidable, the year will find a mass meeting for this purpose.

Varsity Out to Avenge Defeat Suffered at Oarsmen's Hands
Last Year

ARGOS HAVE STRONG LINE

But Stevens-Coached Squad
Have Plenty of Fighting Spirit

By B. J. McGuire

With the Reg De Gruchy Trophy, emblematic of the city rugby championship, at stake, the Varsity Blue team will take the field on Saturday and take up their annual struggle with the Argos. This year the students will be out to avenge the defeat they suffered last year at the hands of the Oarsmen in this same series.

It will be recalled that last year Varsity lost the city championship 9-7 to the Double Blue team after leading the Scullers till the final quarter when Box's great kicking gave the Argos three points and the game. When these two squads tangle again on Saturday it would seem that the Argos will have a slight advantage as they are obviously stronger than last year.

Argos seem to have a real team, a few strange faces having made the Blue line the most formidable in Canadian football, while in Ab Box they have an exceptionally good kicker. Varsity, however, also have their share

SCHOOL OF NURSING A NEW DEPARTMENT

Important Additional Field Offered to Women
Graduates

INTERNATIONAL INTEREST

Housed under the familiar and gracious roof of old Queen's Hall, number seven Queen's Park, is a department new to our university, and one which should be of something more than casual interest to all women—especially to those who this year are facing graduation and the Great Indecision. It is the School of Nursing, a new and most interesting experiment in this country. The work of the school, primarily, is to give a thorough training in the art of nursing. At the end of the three year undergraduate course, the diploma in nursing is granted and the graduate is qualified either for hospital work or for public health nursing. At the same time an effort is being made to offer a reasonably normal life to the undergraduate nurses.

To achieve this, there have been most attractive residence quarters and classrooms fitted out, where the nurses will live and carry on part of their work. And they will have enough leisure time so that they may get in touch with different organizations of the university. The school is in affiliation with the Toronto General Hospital and other special city hospitals.

There are ten in this year's undergraduate class and it is interesting to notice that of these ten, there are three Arts graduates and six who have had previous university work. Counting in the graduate students there is an enrollment of fifty in the school and of these there are twenty-six in residence. There is a graduate course of one year which is meant to be a preparation for hospital staff work or public health nursing.

CALL OUT THE TROOPS!

The eyes of the world are focused upon Stratford, Ontario. Wires and cables have carried the name far and wide, to parts where it will be heard for the first time. The pity of it is that the world will not be told of the beauty of the city which is situated so favourably on the banks of a tranquil stream. The press will proclaim Stratford as a storm-centre. Troops and tanks have been paraded through the city, to take their stand behind a barbed-wire entanglement. And this in peaceful western Ontario, in the year nineteen hundred and thirty-three!

The present generation of students has but dim memories of the Great War. We do recall that it was heralded as a war to end war. We have observed the growing antipathy to armed warfare, and we are in hopes that the day is not far distant when intelligent arbitration will replace brutal killing, untold suffering, and enormous destruction of property.

As Canadians we pride ourselves on our efficient police administration, especially as compared to the system of our nearest neighbour. Despite recent local agitations, we feel assured that the majority of our countrymen hold all due respect for the representatives of the law. Nor did we dream a few days ago that armoured tanks would soon be seen on Ontario streets.

Call out the troops! In obedience to the command the militia were rushed to the scene of disorder, and slept with arms by their side. Fortunately, to date they have not clashed with the public. Statesmen are exerting their influence in favour of arbitration, and it is stated that the troops are merely a symbol of the law.

The authorities undoubtedly have some justification for such hasty and drastic action. However, they will have a great deal to explain to the law-abiding citizens of Stratford. Our sympathy lies with the latter, whose city has so suddenly become a citadel.

Call out the troops! History repeats itself, and the youth of Ontario learn a new command. Is it to be wondered that we smile at this thing called progressive civilisation?

GOOD LUCK, BLUE TEAM!

To-morrow afternoon the University of Toronto Seniors trot out on to the gridiron to try conclusions with the Argonauts for the De-Gruchy Memorial Trophy, emblematic of the city championship. Warren Stevens' warriors have been hard-hit by injuries, but they mean to give the Big Four team a battle for the honours. There is no need to ask for support, for we know that reports of last week's game will bring out all the interested students.

Good luck, Blue team!

JUNIOR FOOTBALL SHAPES UP WELL

Secondary School Standouts Carefully Groomed
by Laing

PLAY ARGOS TO-MORROW

The large squad of seventy Varsity juniors was yesterday weeded out to a more workable group of footballers by the careful hand of Grady Laing. The remaining men with the team are the cream of the secondary school football leagues around the country.

To start off the list of auspicious names in the way of backfield footballers, the university may this year put down Bob Isbister of Hamilton, who is big, fast, and can kick a ball from fifty to sixty yards regularly. Along with him, Powell and Ripley, a pair of halves from Ridley, McPherson and Tafts from North Toronto Collegiate, Murray from Mimico, and Barry from our own faculty of Medicine will perform in a manner which promises to be scintillating.

To steer the team through various difficulties, Coach Grady Laing is grooming Miller of Mimico, a brother of last year's Varsity quarter, Whitey Miller. Cam Gray of Humberstone is also working in this position, and although light, is very fast. Ripley, a strong youngster from Ridley College, can also be trusted to handle the plays.

Along a heavy line, Willoughby and Powell from Parkdale, Pritchard, Bridle, Jacobs and O'Connell, all from Toronto high schools, are expected to provide good interference for the fast halves.

The boys have been receiving plenty of tuition in the nailing of runners, about an hour each day being spent in running back punts, and may it be said that there are plenty of deadly tacklers among the outsiders who are trying for positions. The first real test of the squad will be a game with Argo juniors on the back campus at five to-morrow afternoon. Although the schedule has not yet been definitely arranged, the intercollegiate league, consisting of Toronto, R.M.C. and Queen's will open for Varsity on October 14, with a home game.

"The University of Toronto," remarks The Star, "is to receive a Chinese library of 41,000 volumes. Chinese is all Greek to most of the professors, and Greek, it must be confessed, is all Chinese to most of the students."

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By John T. Stubbs

A real power house will be stacked up against the Argos to-morrow afternoon at 3.30 o'clock. Warren Stevens has a squad of twenty-five grid stars already molded into a unit. Contrary to the expectation expressed in this column, Varsity's backfield threat will be in action—namely, Jack Sinclair, the mighty booter. The win last Saturday gave the squad enough confidence to make all the difference in the world in the fighting spirit they can display. They have been working like Trojans every afternoon this week and in comparison to this time last year, they are miles ahead. Condition is the only thing that need be feared for this time. If injuries can be miraculously avoided you can expect almost anything to happen.

Everyone will be watching the battle with Argos for the city title with a peculiar interest. Two old friends and probably the two smartest football coaches in Canadian football will match wits in the contest. Warren Stevens and Lou Hayman are getting a great kick out of it so don't be surprised if a few surprises are dished up before the game ends. Both teams have rounded into shape like lightning for the time they have been in uniform. Great credit is especially due to the Varsity mentor in this respect. The crowd of spectators that lines the edge of the back campus every afternoon are continually heard to remark, "How does he do it?" This time last year prospects were not half as brilliant as they seem right now on the eve of the Argo-Varsity clash. In every department they look strong. The line hasn't a noticeable weak spot as yet. Of course it will be easier to find these Saturday afternoon when the two outfits test their strategy. Similar types of plays are being used by both coaches so their tactics will be the same except for last minute changes.

The way the tacklers have been running down under kicks reminds the onlookers of the reception accorded the Hamilton Tigers last fall in that never-to-be-forgotten Dominion semi-final. "Steve's" exclamations of delight have been frequent and those who know his manners know that when he expresses satisfaction with any performance, it must have been good. The backfield is especially strong. Jack Sinclair will be supported by Harold Arnp, whose sensational last-quarter display last Saturday warrants him a place among the great in this season's openers. Harold bore the brunt of the load through most of last year's schedule while suffering from a minor injury. The way he carried on almost single-handed at times in his department gives him the status of a veteran worthy of responsibility at any time. Jack is back in there this year with his old superb style and power. Varsity need never fear about the backfield standing up to any contenders in the country when Jack is in action. Johnny Copp, who proved himself a big threat at all times last season will be out there fighting hard again and snaring points on passes as often as ever. From the other two teams of last year come Burgoine, Taylor, and Holden. They will be on tap in the backfield also. Then a seventh man will likely be in uniform too. Willis, the rangy secondary defenceman who performed so creditably last week, looks like a strong contender for a place on the senior line-up. That covers the backfield repertoire for to-morrow's game. These snaps are listed for the contest, including Peacock, Shipp, and Bell. Each has shown up well in practice so far so it is just a case of another of those old scraps for a position. At inside there will be Burson, Brebner and Warner, all three coming up from lower Blue ranks of last year. Even though Albie Booth and Wittell are out with injured knees there is a powerful set of middles ready for action. McQuigge has the experience, having been a member of last year's championship team. Grecco is the big lad who helped the juniors plow through to the Dominion title last year. Harris has been making big impressions in opposing line assemblies since practice started. Newton will be remembered as the flying mass of brawn that scored so many touches for the intermediates last year. McGinnis, Bryers, Henderson, Keith and Welch make up two and a half braes of outsiders. Every one of them has had lots of coaching and looks like a fleet and hard hitter tearing down under kicks. At quarter there are two brilliant performers. Coulter of last year's juniors keeps the outfit going like a house afire and looks like a real general. He has been stepping into the shoes vacated by Whitey Miller in a manner which almost makes one prophesy for him a great record already. Last Saturday's game was evidence enough for those that saw him in action. McKee is another contender for the job and he knows what it's all about too. His handling of the plays makes one think he will make another great strategist.

Dawson of last year's team is in at flying wing. He is another reason for the steadiness the team displayed in that last-quarter victory against the shocked Beavers. Allison is also making a good impression in this position and will undoubtedly be used considerably in to-morrow's contest.

It was the forward pass that trimmed the Purple and Gold proteges of Alex Ponton and it was Coulter that flipped it to Johnny Copp. That one successful play put the Blues in a scoring position. So it looks as though Varsity will be strongest in that department as far as the intercollegiate teams are concerned. We don't say that because one pass worked to advantage last week. Harold Arnp has been tossing some beauties around in practice lately and that just doubles the strength of the passing game for Varsity.

Injuries will cause the absence from action of four players for the city title contest. Witzel, Booth, Perry and Richardson are all out with knee injuries. But there's nothing weak about the knees of the team as a whole. They are going to make the much-touted Argos look to their laurels. Condition and an edge in the time they have been in action are the only advantages we will concede the Double Blues now. Argos are a smooth and a powerful machine and they are granted two to one odds downtown. But downtown authorities have been as far out as ourselves on several occasions before to-day so let's all get in there and grit our teeth for a big push behind the Blue team to-morrow. Football enthusiasm is already running high throughout the city as evidenced by the surprisingly large turnout at the Stadium last Saturday.

By special concession students will be allowed admission to their usual sections in the bleachers for 25 cents and a registration card at the south door of the Arena. Trinity's back campus is going to be crowded so get there early and let's hear a big noise from the East Side.

The Blue juniors play an exhibition game with Argo juniors to-night at five o'clock on the back campus and they look like a powerful outfit again this time. Stick around after lectures and get an eyeful of Grady Laing's youngsters. They're good.

The intercollegiate senior opener is a week from to-morrow, October 7th, not October 14th, as we intimated incorrectly yesterday. The rowing classic takes place in Montreal on the Lachine Canal right after the McGill-Varsity tussle at the Molson Stadium. Look over the break the S.A.C. is giving those who want to help the Blue and White to a perfect start in the stronghold of the Redmen. Last year was a gala affair. The band is putting the added bit of dash into it that makes people sit up and take notice. Dash along yourself and get your money's worth.

Think that's enough for to-day?

Save Your Eyes--
Lessen Study-fatigue

Made from paper special tinted to absorb harmful light rays and to reflect a color restful to the eyes, "Eyesaving" sheets are the biggest improvement in note books since the invention of the loose leaf ring book.

They prevent the eye strain and headache frequently resulting from the constant reflection of white light from note book pages during long periods of study.

Start the year right with these better note book sheets. Examine them at any of our stores. Loose leaf covers at surprisingly low prices are also on display. Convenient and inexpensive note book subject indexes are shown, too.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

In the tennis line, a bright future seems to be ahead of Varsity with all members of last year's Intercollegiate team warming up on the courts for another season. Agnes Gardner and Pat Callen of St. Mike's are ready to put forth their best efforts in the interfaculty tournament which is scheduled to get under way early in October. From St. Hilda's Kay Symons, who played tennis of a very high quality last season, will probably lead the attack. Incidentally, wedding bells have been ringing for Gilbert Nunns, the Davis Cup player, and Bee Symons, a graduate of J.T2, an outstanding athlete and one-time intercollegiate tennis champion. Obviously, one love match which can't go to the deuce.

of stars. Greco, one of last year's championship juniors, has been moved up to senior ranks and is always good for a gain when he hits the line. Boothe, McQuigge and Harris are always a worry to the enemy when they go through on a plunge. On the backfield the diminutive team of Ar-nup and Coulter are sensational in broken field running and seasoned experts in the art of catching the ball on the run. Another halfback who is bound to cause plenty of trouble is Johnny Copp, the Varsity hard plunging backfielder.

Another feature of the Stevens-coached squad is the hard fighting spirit they have developed. These boys have started to hustle at the beginning of the season and will keep it up till the old mole skins are wrapped with moth-balls and tucked away for the season. However, before that occurs there will be exhibited a series of thrilling games, with the probability of them garnering more than one championship. At any rate with the team Stevens has on hand, a smooth working combination who are getting better every day, Argos are assured of a worthy opponent and a hard fought contest is inevitable. This is a great opportunity for the students to see their team in action. With such a team to support as many as possible should attend, get behind the team and give them the support a championship team deserves.

In reply to the question whether Jewish students were barred admission, Miss Burton stated that in Frankfurt at least, a certain percentage of students were allowed to study, especially those whose fathers had served in the war. Aside from some Jewish professors in mathematics and physics, most of the Jewish professors were dismissed. "In fact," Miss Burton added, "the university was supposed to open about the middle of April, but so many professors were dismissed that only in May was it well enough organized for lectures to commence. "And now," Miss Burton concluded, "there are rumours that women students will be forbidden to study at the university."

Miss Joyce Tedman attended the Universities of Berlin, Munich and Bonn. Here the oppression of Jewish students and professors was much more severe. Nazi guards were stationed at the gates to forbid them entrance. Most of those Jewish professors who were not dismissed left of their own accord, unable to bear the insults and humiliations which were their lot. Indeed, at the last convocation of the University of Munich, the number of empty seats in the staff section was startling.

The Nazis, as well as censoring lectures, controlled all outside activities. Although their proposal to make the membership of the "Vereinigung ausständischer Studierende" (a club strictly for foreign students) half German and half foreign was safely countered during the semester, in the absence of officials they dissolved it into a German foreign club.

"Every student is an active member of a political party," added Miss Tedman. "Politics are spoiling the German universities."

if the parent organization would encourage the affiliation of the embryo society.

Then again there was opposition in the group to the definite alignment with the parent organization, because it was felt that there would be many persons sympathetic with the spreading of C.C.F. propaganda, but who were not prepared at present to affiliate with any party. The flexibility of such an organization, it was felt, might aid to its effectiveness in achieving its purpose.

The matter was left over for further discussion and it was decided at the last meeting, Tuesday afternoon, to delete the sections of the proposed constitutions referring to affiliation. However, the primary purpose of the club will remain the spreading of the ideas of the C.C.F. as expounded in the Regina manifesto.

The Liberal and Conservative clubs, it is expected, have derived renewed vigour from their respective summer schools and the political pot may boil more furiously the coming year. It has been suggested that the C.C.F. club arrange debates with the other political clubs on the campus.

The provisional executive elected to carry on negotiations with the district C.C.F. council consisted of Mr. Gordon Skilling, Pres.; Mr. Ted Avison, Vice-Pres.; and Mr. Frank E. Coburn, Secretary. The next meeting to decide on the matter of policy, will only be open to those who have assisted in the deliberations of the last few months.

FILLS REAL NEEDUsed Books Sell Speedily to Economical
Students

To any casual observer, walking through the upper halls of Hart House the sight of the crowd of men, overflowing with eagerness to own books is rather disturbing. But it seems that books must be bought and it seems that in this day and age of financial dejection the Student Christian Movement's Book Exchange is one of the most popular institutions on the campus.

The S.C.M. runs the exchange by having students bring in books on which they put their own price. If the books are sold the S.C.M. holds on to ten per cent. Later on in the middle of October the student is given his share of the proceedings or if not so fortunate, his book is returned. In this manner the S.C.M. with its very thriving business adds greatly to its own coffers and at the same time saves time, money and effort.

dresses were given by speakers on the family, the international situation, unemployment, and missions. Through these addresses and others delivered at one or two afternoon meetings, a comprehensive picture of the world situation was offered to the delegates. The implications of personal responsibility were inescapable.

But besides presenting their challenge, each of the speakers had something more positive to offer. They displayed a courageous idealism in the face of a very difficult situation, and their idealism was contagious. An evening devoted to problems of personal religion showed that the students were determined to accept the challenge and to seek for the inward power to meet it. On the last day of conference, Dr. Vlastos' address on "Prayer", and Mr. Brooks' closing service of worship fittingly reflected the mood of most of the delegates.

OARSMEN MEET MCGILL

In the coxswain's seat will be Sam Hughes, who adeptly guided the shell last year and who, as might be expected, is the lightest man in the outfit. Larry Skeg is the only other veteran of previous U. of T. struggles and provides an exceedingly important cog. Six other men who are all being given their first opportunity constitute a well-balanced team with more backbone than has been seen handling U. of T. oars for some time. In stroke position is Jack Cameron who is supported by Cleland and Greenwood. Skeg, Lennox and Barton ride in fifth, fourth and third positions respectively, while Bradshaw and Dave Woods come next, the latter in bow position. This is the team that it is expected will leave the Redmen trailing in their wake and add another victory to the string already earned.

The rowing race will take place on the Lachine Canal in Montreal immediately following the initial rugby game of the season when the Varsity men meet McGill in the Molson Stadium. Transportation will be handy to transfer the football fans to another scene of competition, the race being scheduled for 5 p.m., October 7th.

To return to the freshman and his girl friend. Have you seen them—and who hasn't? And what are the thoughts of the sweet young things as they fill in blanks and wander with tentative footsteps down dark corridors and over the dear old daisy fields. We stopped one yesterday while crossing the same and questioned her emotional outlook on it all.

"Are you trying to get fresh?" she asked. We assured her we would not mind and how about it. But she had been prepared for all the dangers of the big dirty white city.

We phoned Annesley Hall and a fresher answered.

"How do you like college?" we queried conversationally.

"Oh! it's inspiring!" came the rapid reply.

"Uh!" we parried (and can we parry a mean parry). "And about residence life—what are your impressions?"

"Oh! I think it's wonderful!" seriously. "One learns to take so much and give so much . . ."

Ah me!

All of which goes to prove our original theory that there are but three types of frosh—those who bubble, and those who burp, and those who neither bubble nor burp. These last, however, are not strictly frosh.

After our own nine years in the place we are, for all practical purposes, weary of hazing and the recording of such.

But in case you think the old coltish spirit is dead, in case you think old man de Pression gone done you wrong, get out the old tortoise shells and give young 3T the once-over.

Because, after all, it is only the hest magazine agents and only the snappiest summer waitresses who can come to kow-tow at the sacred portals this year of our Lord knows what.

CLASH AT VIC

While the humble frosh were having their organization meeting in the college the sophomores purchased all the ancient vegetables Yonge Street merchants could supply. With bags of flour and tomatoes in their blackened hands they awaited the arrival of the yellow-tied cohorts. The huge frosh class streamed out onto the campus outnumbering the sophomores some four to one. In spite of the tremendous physical handicap the 3T7 class was prevented from climbing the pole while the fight raged for half an hour.

Grimy frosh, looking like the incarnation of a tomato cocktail stormed the pole time and time again. The minority of sophomores struggling against the tremendous odds fought in the maelstrom of heaving bumping bodies to push a member up the pole. Early in the struggle one bleating frosh originally clad merely in a pair of shorts struggled out from the crowd bunched around the pole, an upstanding specimen of Canadian manhood without even his shorts, to the great amusement of the spectators.

Flying wedges, human ladders and every device of human ingenuity failed to put the sophomores mighty atom Harvey Halbert to the top of the pole.

At five o'clock through the dust, the spray and the clamour the gun was heard and the battle was over, the flag still fluttering in the breeze. With a superhuman effort Halbert was heaved up the pole and he detached the flag from its pinnacle to the immortal glory of the class of 3T6.

While the hostilities were in progress on the campus the freshettes were lined up in the college hall and had the painted evidences of feminine pulchritude removed from their faces by the application of a strong solution of Lifebuoy soap and water.

ADVISE APPOINTING ROYAL COMMISSION ON PRISON REFORM

Seeks Effective Substitute for Punitive Confinement

NOT DETERRENT TO CRIME

Social Workers Concerned with Whole Question of Recreation

"A Royal Commission, by all means, if it results in action, but also a continuing sense of responsibility, not only on the part of those in authority, but also in the minds of every citizen," replied Miss McGregor of the Department of Social Science, in answer to The Varsity's question as to the advisability of a Commission to investigate Canadian prison conditions.

"Already," she continued, "we have had excellent commissions who have made searching reports; one in 1914 and one in 1921. Both these reports have been pigeon-holed. Also, the report of the Public Welfare Commission had some very severe things to say regarding the treatment of prisoners in this province. These inquiries, instigated by both political parties, have revealed injustices and unproductive expenditure of tax money. Reforms have been made, but in general, we are told, the prison regulations of 1899 are still in force in Kingston Penitentiary."

"A Royal Commission will result in a wisest attack on the whole problem and substitution of methods of reformation for the present ones, if it reveals the fact that our whole treatment of prisoners is based upon the doctrine of an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth. As a matter of fact, no one has ever discovered whether or not

PROSPECTS GOOD FOR ROWING CREW

Oarsmen

RACE MCGILL SATURDAY

By J. A. Runnells

Coach T. R. Loudon has been putting his intercollegiate rowing crew through two regular workouts every day since the 9th of September in preparation for the McGill race on Saturday afternoon.

Under his expert handling the crew are getting into excellent condition for the two-mile grind upstream when they meet a stronger McGill eight than has taken the water of the Lachine Canal for some years. They are heavier and are stroking faster than they did last year, and it appears as though the Blue oarsmen will need all the strength and experience they can muster to dictate to their opponents.

The local shell will contain, in all, five men from the tack-weight crew and four senior men. Among the latter, the standout is undoubtedly Jack Cameron, who will be rowing his last race under Varsity colours. Three years under Professor Loudon's guidance have rounded Cameron into a smooth and driving rower, imparting confidence to the crew as the stroke oar. Sam Hughes, scholar and orator, holds the tiller position once more, while Larry Sker completes the list of veterans. Hughes, we know, has equal prowess in a coxswain's seat as he has on an open rostrum.

Loudon is once more depending on that long swinging stroke that has

Tennis Draw

The preliminary rounds of the annual interfaculty tennis tournament will commence on the courts of the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club at 9 o'clock this morning.

The entry, although smaller than in former years, is an exceedingly strong one. Gordon Shields, of Vancouver, heads the seeding list with Bill Pigott, the Hamilton star, Sydney Hermant, defending champion, and Ken Black, of Regina, equally strong contenders. The two intercollegiate teams are to be chosen from among the winners.

The following will report at the Toronto Tennis Club, Price Street, at 9 o'clock: O'ram, Story, Crossley, C. Boyd, Phillips, Shulman, Rae, Moffat, Bronsfield, Griffith, Lasserre, Carveth, Woolrich, Crowson, Hermant, Faux, Strout, Burt-Gerrans, Haig, McNaughton, Hunt, Everitt, Losier, L. Black, Gray, Scrivener, Keppy, Janis, Bruns, Eaton.

The following at 10 o'clock: K. Black, Schaffer, Fenner, Shields, Hibloom, Laforce, Finch, Scott, McKenzie, Bland, Johnson, Barnes, Rigby, Davies, Grover, Newman, Tomlinson, Godefroy, Charles, Morrison, Stewart, Hardy, Burrett, Hagerman, McAtty, Steer, Service, Spence, Harris, Neill, W. Boyd, Pigott.

All players are requested to be on time as two rounds must be completed by noon. The committee will be forced to default any player who is not ready to play at the appointed hour. The doubles will commence on Tuesday morning.

GET-RICH-QUICK RACKETS RAMPANT

Newest Gag is Popularity Contest Involving Magazine Sales

"ABSOLUTELY FREE"

Students who suffered under last year's get-rich-quick scheme of buying bill-folds for three times their value and then trying to get rid of them to someone as gullible as themselves, should be warned against a new racket. According to two unnamed gentlemen who accosted The Varsity there is a money-making Popularity Contest in progress.

It is judged on the number of female subscribers obtained by a male canvasser, for certain magazines. "There is no catch in it," the magazines are sent free of cost—but the subscriber pays the postage. The way postage can mount up is amazing—almost as amazing as the logic by which one can maintain that "This is absolutely free, all you pay is—".

According to these two popularity seekers "Lots of the fellows are doing

Fifty-Fifty Dates Universal
Among German
Students

By David L. Tough, M.A.

Did you ever dream of a university where there are no term examinations, no compulsory attendance at lectures, where you can go in late to a lecture and leave early if you are bored without any fear of the professor later wreaking vengeance, where you stamp your feet with approval if the lecturer says something that pleases you and you shuffle equally loud if you disapprove, where the professors are paid according to their popularity with the students, and where co-eds go fifty-fifty on the cost of a date? That is not a vision from More's "Utopia" or a Hollywood film version of college life but conditions as they exist in the tradition-steeped German universities.

The German student passes the matriculation examination, which permits him to enter the university and then he has no further tests until five or six years later when he presents himself for his doctorate. If you think it is a great system be sobered by the fact that several German students told me that they envied us and wished that they could have yearly exams instead of one grand finale.

There is no attempt made to force attendance at lectures or to check up on delinquents. You pay for a course, get the professor to sign your book stating that you were present at the first and last lecture that he gave, and you get credit for taking the course. Believe it or not but they do attend faithfully—such is the perversity of human nature.

Being permitted to walk out of a lecture if you are bored is a sensible idea. Why should a student be forced to sit through a lecture from which he is receiving no benefit? All praise to the German pros who are big enough to admit that a student is capable of deciding whether a lecture is worth staying to hear or if his time could be better spent elsewhere.

The practice of stamping lustily when a popular professor enters to lecture, and of punctuating the high spots of his lecture with a thunderous din, is another admirable custom. In the first place the noise keeps the students awake and there is something thrilling when a class breaks into loud

Frenzied Frosh Fight Like Fools Fail To Follow Etiquette Rules

The first symptoms of the historic S.P.S.-Medical feud were very much in evidence on Friday afternoon, when a group of soph engineers emerging from the School building found themselves confronted with the gorgeous spectacle of some seventy or eighty brilliant red ties draping the doorway and grounds of the Physics Building across the road. After a brief consultation, the School-boys yielded to a time honoured custom and went foraging. Unfortunately the embryo Meds had not discovered that meekness is the prime virtue of a freshman, and becoming rather bellicose, sailed in with fists, heels, nails, teeth and practically everything handy. A couple of the offending Frosh were escorted in a horizontal position to the depths of the Engineering Building, where a short water cure was administered to cool their ardour. The Schoolmen eventually emerged the proud possessors of several thick ears, a few minor bites, bruises and cuts, and a variety of lengths of flaming crimson.

Rumour has it that unless the Meds can teach their children to scrap like gentlemen, a number of Schoolmen may take a hand in furthering the educational process with a rather painful curriculum. They feel that only the best are worthy of the honour of being their close neighbours, and any little points of etiquette needed to bring the Meds up to that high standard before emerging from their first year will be carefully, if somewhat forcefully taught.

TROOPS AT STRIKE AID LOCAL POLICE

Lt.-Col. Cockburn Explains
Status of Soldiers at Stratford

QUOTES MILITIA ACT

"The principal thing to remember is that in such a case the troops are not present primarily as soldiers. Practically, they are merely an addition to the local civil police."

This angle to the Stratford situation was given to The Varsity last night by the highest active military authority on the campus in the person of Lt.-Col. J. Roy Cockburn, commander of U. of T.'s C.O.T.C. contingent.

"A good many people don't understand that," said Lt.-Col. Cockburn. "Except that he uses his judgment as to the nature of the force to be taken into the area, the officer in command of the unit cannot make the least move on his own initiative."

"The whole thing is laid down in the Militia Act, which should be read in order to understand the situation thoroughly. The troops are sent on the request of the local civil authorities, who have perfect legal right to make the request if they consider it necessary."

"Once in the area, the troops are used principally to make a show of force. And it positively cannot be taken without orders from the civil magistrate."

"When such action is taken, it must be the magistrate who personally directs the troops to the point where he considers action necessary. He must accompany the troops and he must give the commanding officer directions before an order is spoken."

By the commander's remarks The Varsity was shown plainly that the strikers' demonstrations against the troops has been misdirected, and that the mayor was perfectly within his rights to summon the militia to the city.

"Always remember," said Lt.-Col. Cockburn, "that in a case like that, the troops are present in aid of the civil authorities, not instead of them."

U.C. Caretaker Tells Stories of Ancient Initiation Ceremonies

NO CO-EDS IN OLD DAYS

Everybody knows "Scotty", the caretaker of University College. Everybody likes him and considers him a gentleman, but who would imagine him refusing to tell the complete story of the University College initiations way back around 1900 when men were men and there were no coeds to blush at the proceedings on the back campus. Oh yes, we wheedled it out of him—the frosh weren't allowed to wear even red and white ties!

After valiant but vain struggles—though one freshman is said to have successfully defended himself in the door of his room with a sword in one hand and a dagger in the other—the freshmen were forced from the men's residence, now the sedate Germain, English and Mathematical departments in the Cloisters, down into the subterranean chambers of University College where a good coat of blacking was substituted for their more adequate garments. The sophs were even lavished with the coal in the boiler room—though at other times one paid a quarter for a scuttle full, unless, of course, one had more faith in the warming properties of beer.

Then the freshmen were rushed along the cold, dark cement corridor, which is still rather formidable even with the electric light at the head of the stairs, just opposite the entrance to the Cloisters, they were forced to contemplate a stone upon which was the foreboding inscription in Latin: "Here lies the body of a freshman." If you closely examine it, knecling in the grass, you can still faintly decipher the word "corpus".

Then, without warning, the poor first year men were herded across to where Hart House now stands, and washed more or less thoroughly in Twaddle Creek. They were then permitted to grab a few miscellaneous coverings, and marched downtown to afford amusement for the mothers and fathers of the present generation of briefly "tied" freshmen, and becomingly "bereted" coeds. Sic transit—

FINAL SCORE 25-1

Both Teams Make Free Use of Forward Pass on the Attack

Varsity lost a 25-1 decision to the powerful Argos squad in the final round of the city championship and the fight for the Reg DeGracy trophy here on Saturday. The event was witnessed by a record crowd of 12,000 people who saw a game in which everything by the way of good football was produced. The contest despite the one-sided score, which would indicate a dull game, was a hard fought, exciting battle which established the students as a courageous, determined football team who will not admit defeat and who will be in there trying until the last whistle blows.

Although after the first half the outcome was never in doubt the Big Blue team refused to back up before their hard-hitting rivals and fought back hard all the way. The Argos proved themselves to be a powerful aggregation. They were superior to the Varsity team at plunging, forward passing and even had a slight edge in the kicking. The Scullers plunged for yards on eight occasions while Varsity moved the sticks on plunges in only three attempts. That about sums up the difference of the two squads. In the aerial attack the Oarsmen were more effective, completing three forward passes in the first half to Varsity's one. In the last few minutes of play both teams opened up with a barrage of passes, Varsity completing four and the Scullers two.

Copp, Greco and Barson were the most effective men of the Blue and White squad in their assaults on the Argos line. Coulter and Arnpur on the backfield were always dangerous if they could break away, but the lofty hoists Box sent up always gave his tacklers plenty of time to get down the field and the Varsity backfield very little chance to get going. ### COLLEGE TEACHES ART OF THINKING

Thrashing Through Theses

Thoughts
MOODERATING INFLUENCES

"Learn to Think in Four Years", or "A College Education in a Nut-shell" might be the title of a high pressure U. of T. publicity pamphlet, according to the latest findings of Professor E. K. Brown of the English Department of University College. However, though we may grant that students learn to think at College, it is a rather moot question as to whether they use their newly-acquired thinking faculties within the shadow of the academic halls. Our more cynical contemporaries are inclined to believe that the power to think is presented, if at all, with the graduating diploma—and is thereafter usually stored in the attic or framed on the wall.

Most students, off-hand, answer in the negative when that important query "Do Varsity students actually think?" is presented to them. One sophomore, however, whose record shows that she evidently thinks, was more lenient in her view. "They think they think," she said piously.

Most of the people interviewed agreed that many university students are handicapped in this line by their previous education. In high school

ATAVISM

The resurgence of nationalist sentiment in the post-war era has, in the main, brought to the fore belligerent expressions of sword-rattling patriotism. The Versailles Treaty doomed the hopes of internationalist idealism and the last few years have witnessed a steady decline in the morale of progressive movements.

Nineteen thirty-three has already chronicled the collapse of the German Republic and the dissolution of the World Economic Conference under the most inauspicious circumstances. The threat of war hangs over a prostrate world like the sword of Damocles. The exigencies of the times have driven Italy and France into united effort to support a tottering Austrian dictatorship to offset the influence of a revived Prussianism. France, Poland and Rumania have signed non-aggression pacts with the Soviet Union, Pilsudski, defender of Warsaw against the Bolshevik armies, even going so far as to visit the land of his former enemies. Herrjot too has just returned from a visit to the Russian capital. Mussolini, fearful of a Nazi government on the other side of the Brenner Pass, is no longer a sponsor of German revisionist aspirations. Not wishing to lose the diplomatic bargaining power of German friendship, Italy alone of all the world powers was officially represented at the Hitlerite convention at Nuremberg. Mussolini has, however, assumed the role of the patron of Austrian isolationism, especially since the pro-Italian Heimwehr are helping to maintain the present unpopular government.

There is a great disparity between the militaristic chauvinism that is threatening to rend asunder the present European state structure and the nationalist philosophy as expounded by the pre-war heroes of national liberation. Mazzini, Achad Ha'Am, Dr. Sun Yat-Sen, these were men whose idealistic aspirations were not based on a faith in exclusive dominion of grace. Rather in the cultural expression of their diverse civilizations did they look for the growth of nationalism.

That philosophy of nationalism that is based on hate, economic rivalry and militaristic pretention, is the very negation of cultural nationalism. Individual expression is the basis of nationalism but high-tensioned, hysterical, ranting patriotism is the surest road to that "collective mediocrity" that is the inevitable result of dominant prussianism.

As long as it is to the interests of cynical, self-seeking groups to attain political or economic power by exploiting ruthlessly the national sentiment, progress will be as effectively frustrated as it has been the last few years. Nationalism finds its raison d'être in our very being. It cannot be eliminated. It is to our interest to so mould national movements so that they do not run counter to international co-operation.

ADVISE APPOINTING OF COMMISSION ON PRISONS

severe punishment prevents or stimulates crime."

"What would be a more effective substitute for punitive confinement?" The Varsity asked.

"As social workers, we consider not only the question of the administration of justice to the living and working conditions of our people, but we are also very much concerned with the whole question of recreation. We are only too well aware that the average age of the prisoners in Kingston is twenty years. We know that a conviction costs the country an average of $1,200, and that the maintenance of the prisoners costs about $500 per year. We also know that good supervised recreation is one of the best preventatives of juvenile delinquency, and a good boys' club, with well supervised recreation, costs only about $15 per boy per annum."

"A Royal Commission might be excellent," declared Mr. Ketchum of the Department of Psychology, "if it meant anything."

"In working among juvenile delinquents, I have found that the prospect of further imprisonment is not usually a deterrent to previous offenders," he explained in response to further questioning by The Varsity.

Replying to our inquiry as to the qualifications necessary for dealing intelligently with delinquents, he stated, "The legal training of the average magistrate might well be supplemented by a course in psychiatry."

RUGGER TEAMS PREPARE FOR STRENUOUS SEASON

New Material Expected to Fill All Vacancies Competently

At a meeting held in the Hart House locker room on Friday, equipment was distributed to about 40 candidates for positions on the two rugger teams of the university.

Under the expert guidance of Coach J. Bowles, the team is in working out daily on the back campus in preparation for their first crucial game with the championship Redmen from McGill.

Leading candidates for positions on the team are Captain Caverhill, Telford and Coughlan, who gained their experience in the old country. Another bright prospect is A. S. Thorburn, who starred with Harvard for two years on his arrival from Scotland, where he gained his excellent knowledge of the game. The experience and ability of this blonde 200 pounder should add greatly to the all-round effectiveness of the team.

Hard practices for conditioning are the daily order till the 21st of October when the Blue team will renew its bitter struggles of former years with the McGill Redmen. There is still room on the teams for any aspiring candidates, and everyone interested should get in touch immediately with the secretary of the team, M. G. Whillans.

Wynilwood Musicale

The first Wynilwood Musicale of the year was given last night in Burwash Hall. The artist was Mr. Frederick Skitch, pianist, an undergraduate of Victoria College. The programme, exacting enough, was admirably played. Mr. Skitch not only possesses musicianship of an extraordinarily high quality, but he also knows how to play the piano. In fact, from the very first measures of the Bach Partita in B Flat, the certainty of his pianistic sense that to talk of his nervousness is quite irrelevant. His playing of this difficult work was at times exquisite, and always satisfying. Impressive, too, was his performance of Schumann's Symphonic Etudes, if one did not find his sustained appassionata too monotonous. With Chopin Etudes he is entirely at home, and his Debussy encore ought to have brought joy to everyone. I am not in a position to say how far his audience appreciated his work; but in so far as they may not have appreciated it they betrayed a poor sense of fine music and of sure and profound piano playing. It cannot be emphasized too often that not only is Mr. Skitch a pianist of remarkable promise, but that right now he is one of the finest assets of the undergraduate musical world in this university. We must have more of him!

Mr. Skitch was assisted by Mrs. Schoeni, soprano, who contributed some excellent singing. Mrs. Schoeni's voice and ability deserve much more notice than they must necessarily get here. The merits of her German songs—from Wagner and Schubert—were especially noteworthy.

An explanation, perhaps, is provided by the particular facts that she appears only in Yiddish productions, and that her admiring public is eager and delighted to have in its midst a tragedienne of Miss Gersten's propensities. ### THE FRESHMEN

(After Walt Whitman)

I think I could turn and live with freshmen, they are so placid and self-contained;
I stand and look at them long and long.

They do not sweat and whine about their condition;
They do not lie awake in the dark and weep for their sins;
They do not make me sick discussing their pseudo-psychoses;
Not one is dissatisfied—not one is demented with the mania of learning things;
Not one learns from another, nor from his kind that lived thousands of years ago;
Not one is respectable or industrious over the whole earth.

FRESHMEN ONLY

When you ask the way to the Physics Building and are directed to a Women's Residence, do you know what's wrong until you get inside the front door? Even if you know everything about the Campus, you still need the University of Toronto Map.

It is one of the cleverest things that has been done in Varsity for a long time, and it looks very nice hanging on your wall over the desk.

You can see it at the Hart House Tuck Shop, the Victoria Book Bureau, or any of the booksellers around town.

Price 75c per copy.

Hours of Study Ahead--

PROTECT YOUR EYES

Medical men and eye specialists state that the constant reflection of light from white paper is a frequent cause of headache and study-fatigue.

"Eyesaving" Note Book Sheets prevent this eye-strain. They are made from a paper specially tinted to absorb glare. Prominent oculists and physicians have endorsed "Eyesaving" sheets—students find them "kind to the eyes".

Drop in to one of our stores and let us demonstrate these better note book sheets. You will be interested, too, in our loose leaf covers, and our convenient, inexpensive note book subject indexes.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By John T. Stubbs

We asked you in Friday's column not to be astonished if there were a few surprises dished up in the Varsity-Argo game before it was over. How about the score? It wasn't at all indicative of the play in one respect because we never have seen a game that was as good to watch from start to finish where there was such a difference in the score. In the first few minutes of the game we had visions of seeing a different result on the score board but the Blue line suddenly gave way and it never came back. Once again in the second quarter it looked like a brick wall when they stopped Argos short on the one yard line. But after pushing the play out another six yards they let Argos romp over for their first touch with Taylor carrying the ball. In the last quarter the Blue team looked brilliant for about five minutes when they completed three successive forward passes on very clever attempts that left Argos flat-footed. They moved up the field 75 yards on those three plays.

Some of the high lights of the game were real football. For Argos, Taylor's work on the half line, the Mullan-to-Morris passing combination, the barging plunges of Tommy Burns, Ab Box's kicking, and the play of Bell and Valeriot on the half line. Bobby Conter was the outstanding player on the Blue team and although he was responsible for a couple of errors, he did the smartest broken-field running of the game. Mel Henderson made the best tackle of the game when he stopped Taylor dead in his tracks, mostly to the surprise of Taylor. Jack Sinclair was booting them nicely but not getting enough protection. Argos seem to be getting praise for a wonderful passing attack that worked better than that ever employed by a Toronto team. Well, they completed eight passes and Varsity completed seven. Argos made more yards on the passes but there have been better passing attacks worked in Varsity Stadium than yesterday's. Burson made several good plunges for the Blues as did Greco before he was removed with an injured leg. Several others on the Blue team played good games but the team fell down as a unit in the tackling and line work.

McGill was the only intercollegiate outfit to come through with a win in the several exhibition tilts yesterday and they played an intermediate team, defeating R.M.C. 17-0. Queen's performed well against Ottawa, holding them to a 9-5 count so it looks as though the old satirist Teddy Reeve is stirring things up down at the Tricolour town. We still think that McGill is the team to beat for the intercollegiate title on the dope so far, and that Varsity is the team that is hard-fighting and smart enough to trim them. It will be do or die next Saturday afternoon in Montreal.

There was just as much of fun and interest after the game as there was during the hectic fracas. Maybe some of you saw Bill Bryers and his Blue cohort Dawson trying to snaffle the ball for keeps. It was just another case of too big and too many Argos in the melee. It was finally pronounced Bell's ball and the Double Blue half back gets the souvenir pigskin. There was quite a knot of curious spectators around the broadcasting mike as the presentation of the Reg. DeGruchy Memorial Trophy was made. Lou Hayman was having a tough time trying to get outside the circle for fear of having to make a speech in front of that dreaded mike. But Jimmy Keith kept him in by the ear. Congratulations, Sailors.

Grady Laing has a real team lined up under the Blue kid colours. They tied the Argo juniors Friday afternoon one-all in a practice game on the back campus and the Little Sailors are getting the reputation of being the best in years under Double Blue colours. Isbister looks like a real find for Varsity but it looks at present as if the chances are he will move up and enter Lou Carroll's intermediate school when he enrolls the intermediate team.

For the crowd of Varsity supporters in the student section there was comparatively very little noise Saturday afternoon. How about giving Graydon Parmenter, and his cheer-leaders out front, a roar when they exhort you to cheer? Last year they had to keep jumping up and down all afternoon to satisfy the student desire to let off steam. Get all wound up for the first home game against Western here on the 14th of October. We've all got to get in there and help the Blue team win their second successive title. How about it?

And anybody that wants to show just how much of the old "spirit" they have in their bones, not elsewhere, has that grand opportunity now. Drop in right away and see Sandy MacDonald in the S.A.C. office. Ask him about the trip to Montreal next Friday. He will be glad to give students first preference on those fifty tickets to go with the band. The train leaves at 11.30 p.m. Friday night and you can make it a real Thanksgiving holiday week-end in Montreal, returning as late as Monday night. Transportation for the football fans will be arranged so they can get right down to the Lachine Canal bank for eight-oared crew race between Coach T. R. London's blade-benders and those of McGill. The tickets are $8.05 which is a gift compared to the only other fare available. Those who made the trip last year will be first in to make reservations but there may be some left by the time you read this. All information on the trip can be secured there.

brought his charges so much success in the past and may be depended upon to get the best out of any crew that he coaches. Noncommittal and tactful, he turns aside all questions as to the result of the race, picks up his megaphone and turns his attention to smoothing out the rough spots visible to his critical eye.

The Varsity crew average about 154 pounds, which should bring them almost up to the McGill weight, making for a close decision and a keen race.

CAMPUS RACKETEERS BUSY ON SCHEMES

They also claimed that their pictures had appeared in The Varsity. Their knowledge of feminine psychology was interesting. After all other arguments and revelations had failed one said persuasively, "I know. We'll give you a bargain."

The Varsity has heard no word of a similar popularity contest for co-ed or pseudo co-ed canvassers—but will investigate this phase of the matter diligently.

JUNIOR TEAM TIES ARGOS IN EXHIBITION MATCH 1-1

Varsity juniors and Argo juniors fought to a 1-1 tie in an exhibition game on the back campus on Friday night. With nothing at stake but much needed practice, the two squads tore into each other like traditional enemies. The game served as an opportunity to discover the real players on both squads and with a berth on the regular squad as an added incentive every player was out there to show just how good he was and an exciting battle ensued.

Varsity went into the lead in the first quarter when Isbister hoofed one from 30 yards out which went beyond the dead line. No further score came till the third quarter when Gray muffed a catch and Argos got possession twenty yards out. A placement kick went wide but went for a point.

Gray, Isbister and Jacobs were good for Varsity while Shepard and Johnny Munro stood out for the young Sailors. Munro displayed sensational speed every time he had possession.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

The ambitious and energetic spirit which usually is very apparent during the first few weeks of the term, has evidently affected the Baseball Club. They are planning to get things started some time this week so that the schedule may be run off during the last week in October or the first in November. There have been no final arrangements made as yet regarding a gym nor has it been definitely decided whether a player may compete in both baseball and basketball. This is a vital question as the preference in the majority of cases seems to be toward basketball.

U.C., St. Mike's, and Vic, the contenders last year, will probably fight it out again this year, although other entries would be greatly welcomed.

Graduation always plays havoc with the personnel of teams and this year St. Mike's seem to have suffered most with Marie Writ, Una Murray, Marion Shadle, Anne Quinlan and Carol Hamel missing from the line-up. U.C. will be without the support of Mary Robb, Ruth Payne and Marg Hogarth. Though only two players have departed the Scarlet and Gold ranks, Vic will be considerably weakened as both Jean Davey and Mary Thom, the two graduates, turned in a very good account of themselves last year. But with all teams being able to draw on the freshie reserves, it is impossible to form any opinion of their strength as yet.

VARSITY IS DEFEATED BY ARGONAUTS 25-1

Burns and Taylor were very effective at plunging, while Box and Bell were hard to beat in the backfield. Mullan was also good, causing the students trouble more than once.

The game opened with Varsity having their backs to the wind and taking advantage of this they worked into position and kicked their one and only point of the game. Argos broke into the scoring column in the next quarter, running up 14 points before the end of the first half, Taylor crossing the line on an extension play, which was converted. Wilson went over again on a fumble and Box kicked two more points. Score at the end of half time, Argos 14, Varsity 1.

In the last half Burns crossed the line for a major on two occasions and Bell kicked a point to pile up a total of 25 to Varsity's lonely one.

In the first quarter Varsity began a kicking game which advanced them up the field. The Blue team messed up a nice chance here when they attempted to dribble a loose ball from an Argo snap. Argos, however, recovered. A series of plunges by Copp and Greco again advanced the ball into scoring position and Sinclair hooped one to Box who was caught behind his lines. Argos began to rip the Blue line and by the end of the quarter had Varsity deep in their own territory. When the teams changed ends the Scullers took advantage of the wind, Box kicking to Arnp, who just failed to get clear. A Varsity fumble and a blocked kick which they recovered gave the Double Blue team possession one yard out. There Varsity looked like a championship team.

Three times the Argo tanks hit the Varsity line and three times the students held, getting possession of the ball when Argos failed to dent the Collegians' line on the third attempt.

An exchange of kicks and a fumble by Arnp gave the Scullers possession five yards out. Two attempts ended in a loss as the Varsity line held tight. On the third down Taylor disclaiming to kick for a single point, went around the end to cross the line for the first major. Varsity were only in scoring position once again during the game. In the second quarter a Coulter to Harris pass took the ball to the Argo twenty yard line; a placement was attempted which was wide, Upper running it clear for Argos.

UNIVERSITY TEACHES THE ART OF THINKING

they have not been obliged to think and only a few have made any effort to do so. Accustomed for five years, or for ten years, to having knowledge handed out to them in easily digested doses they have faithfully reproduced that knowledge on their examinations with success varying in accordance with the fallibility of their memories.

Professor Brown, when asked if students think, felt that this was not a subject about which to make generalizations. Naturally enough, there are students who think and students who do not. But he was quite certain that, on the whole, the years at the university taught students to think.

From his reading of examination papers he has found evidence of intelligent thinking, which increased during the four years of the Arts course among both honour and pass students. In the case of the student who has, previous to coming to college, had little necessity to do serious thinking of any kind, the university usually develops a keener capacity for forming sound, unbiased opinions. In the case of the student who comes in with very strong preconceived opinions the university tends to have a moderating influence. Occa-

Lost Freshette Has Queer Notion Hart House Entrance in Commotion

By Audrey Howard

She was standing in front of Hart House in a red and white beret. She accosted us, "Please," she said, looking perplexed, "is this the main door of U.C.?"

We hastened to explain. We felt rather proud. Probably she thought we were seniors, while, in reality we are only sophs.

"Another thing," she frowned, "what the heck is the Panhellenic Association?" She pointed to an item in her Thursday's Varsity, which said that all freshmen and Whitney Hall sophs were invited to tea in Eaton's College Street Round Room on Saturday, September 30.

"That," we replied, looking worldly-wise, "is an association made up of the members of the different sororities of the university."

"Oh, thanks," she heaved a relieved sigh, "I was afraid it might be an initiation."

She was so obviously innocent that we decided to enlighten her further.

"Rushing," we explained, "really begins October 10. From then till the twelfth there will be invitations sent out to the rushees, for tea at the sorority house. From the sixteenth to the nineteenth there will be luncheon invitations, and from the sixteenth to the eighteenth there will also be evening parties on the 23rd and 24th of October there will again be invitations to luncheon at the various sorority apartments."

"And rushing is all over then?" she asked.

"Yea and verily," say we authoritatively.

"But last year," she said, "my cousin didn't join her frat till February."

"It was different," we explained.

"Last year you had lunch every day with a different sorority girl at a tea room, and there was a rule that the rushee should buy her own lunch."

"It'll be nicer this year," she contemplated.

"It's more like the good old days. Though even this year there aren't to be any dances," we told her.

The clock bonged. "You say the main door of U.C. is around here?" She pointed to the west.

"Right!" we smiled graciously, trying not to look too superior.

"Thanks a heap," she yodelled. "It's so nice to meet freshies who know something."

BULLETIN BOARD

Bulletin Board and Coming Event notices must be handed in at either the men's office in Hart House, or at the women's office in University College. No notices will be taken over the telephone, after 6 p.m. notices must be taken to the Press Building. Notices for the Bulletin Board are limited to ONE insertion only.

C. C. F. MEETING

A final organization meeting will be held this Tuesday at 4.30 in Room 13 of the Economics Building. All those who have helped in the initial discussions are asked to attend.

sionally, however, it may have an antagonizing effect and the student may become unsatisfied and leave. Whether students on examinations say what they think or whether they say what they think they ought to think, Mr. Brown did not feel in a position to say.

Do Varsity students think? Well, surely if they hope to get anything from their years at the university, they must think. For, in the words of President Cody's opening address "there is no painless education."

Graduate nurses, public health and a nurses' training course are all given in this building. The last is an experiment which is focusing upon itself widespread interest. Doctors favour it because theory is emphasized to a greater extent than in similar courses given by hospitals—they believe that this method will eliminate costly mistakes on the part of the students through a clearer conception of the reason for a particular course of action.

arrival of the Governor-General, Mr. H. G. Skilling, the Speaker, on bended knees, will claim "all the ancient and undoubted rights and privileges of this House in this Parliament Assembled". The request will be assented to by the Governor-General, who will then rise to deliver the Speech from the Throne, a provisional statement of policy.

The speech, according to Mr. G. K. Drynan, the Prime Minister, will reach out in three directions, striking at the very heart of the industrial, political and social life of the Dominion. "The Governor-General will propose," said Mr. Drynan, "the organization of all industries that have reached a state of incipient monopolization as national industries to be non-profit making departments of the State. Measures will be taken to achieve the gradual appropriation of surplus private wealth. Minimum and maximum wage scales will be provided and contributive unemployment insurance will take its place as a fundamental element in industrial life. Politically, it will be proposed that the senate be organized into a body of technical experts to form a permanent advisory council to the House of Commons. The improved character of the electorate will be assured by improved adult and child education. Social insurance is to be enlarged to include life, health and old age insurance, while hospitals and similar institutions will be reformed to harmonize with the new insurance plans."

Following on the Speech from the Throne the Prime Minister will introduce the traditional Bill Number One, respecting the administration of oaths of office. Two back benchers on the Government side will then move and second, respectively, a reply to the Governor-General's address favouring the propositions contained therein. This motion will result in a debate, opened by J. Max Patrick, Leader of the Opposition, in which the pros and cons of the proposals will be discussed. The meeting will close with a vote on the motion.

All members of the University Literary and Athletic Society are welcome at the meeting, the freshmen in particular.

C. O. T. C.

Training for the season 1933-34 will commence on Monday, 2nd October and students wishing to be enrolled should apply at the office, 184 College Street, as soon as possible, where any information desired can be obtained.

MILITARY STUDIES

Lectures in the Department of Military Studies will be held during this week as under:

1 year—Thursday, 5th Oct.—12 noon
11 year—Monday, 2nd Oct.—12 noon
111 year and IV year—Wednesday, 4th Oct.—12 noon.

Students intending to take this option should attend the introductory lecture of their year if at all possible. Information may be obtained at the office of the Department, 184 College Street.

applause in appreciation of the fact that the professor has tried hard to collect good material and has exerted himself to make the time in his class well worth while. It is also a stimulant to professors to "pep" up their lectures and discourages them from feeding their class on fodder that was harvested back in eighteen ninety-nine.

It is no exaggeration to say that the custom of men and women students splitting the cost of their mutual entertainment is almost universal among German students. Post-war conditions have forced the Frauleins to pay their share or stay home. How long will it be before Canadian students are forced to adopt the same policy? It would be interesting to hear what the Toronto girls who have studied in Germany think of the system.

On the whole German universities are more "grown up" than ours and the students are not forced to be "Yes-men" to the same extent that we are in this country.

ENGLISH ATTITUDE MORE CHEERFUL SAYS PROF. DALE

Slight Increase in Employment but Conditions Still Acute

CLASS ANTAGONISM GONE

Nazi Development Synonymous with Old Militaristic
Spirit

"The attitude of the English people has become definitely more cheerful and contented." Such is the opinion of Professor Dale of the University College Classical Department after spending the summer holiday in Great Britain. Professor Dale travelled extensively by motor while in England and came in contact with all classes in English society. "It was not so much an improvement in material conditions as a radical change in the mental outlook. While statistics show that there has been a slight increase in employment, conditions are still acute in certain localities, such as the Clyde Bank district near Glasgow where the construction of a new Cunard liner, recently started, has been dropped completely. The people are putting less faith in the various schemes to restore prosperity. They feel that things will right themselves in time and that the best thing to do is to sit back and wait as cheerfully and as contentedly as possible. There is a less critical attitude towards the government and people are much less willing to discuss political and economic problems. The feeling of class antagonism that was quite prevalent at the time of Professor Dale's last visit to England four years ago, has disappeared completely. They feel that they are all in the same boat, so why make any fuss about it."

Mr. Dale was particularly impressed by the large number of new buildings that were being constructed all over the country. These are all of a fine style and many are very impressive. Most of these are the result of various municipal and governmental houses.

Inconsequence

Mr. C. K. Ogden has arrived? Ephraim need no longer disturb tranquil, mediocre flowings in the voiced expressions of the indelicate mind. Meanderings shall be damned, or should I say damned; and platitudes shall abound as the proverbial sands. Art can cease to be itself and follow on—as some would insist—the ignoble ways of the artist. You may clip the wings of your literary aspirations and fasten them to the disquieting back of futility. Repetition—inglorious refuge of hateful harbours of consistency, may take dominant sway and use a potential sceptre for a club.

For from out the galaxy of Cambridge luminaries has emerged Mr. Ogden with his little idea of "Basic English". Eight hundred and fifty words shall adequately replace twenty thousand. We shall soon be able to fish in stagnant waters with blunt spears, for succulent reward will no longer exist for the eater of sensitive bait. Scientists and commercialists will see another of their artificial sunders and revel in the seeming splendours. What tremendous possibilities the linguistic abortion presents. What a wealth of time can be saved at the expense of puny aesthetics. (This idea is not irregular. A clever man never saves at his own expense.) I am certain that Basic English shall be devalued with the same avidity as are patent medicines.

SUPPORT BIG BLUE TEAM

When the Varsity rugby team and rowing crew entrain for Montreal for their encounters with McGill Saturday, it is expected that a goodly number of supporters will accompany them, taking advantage of the special excursion rates arranged by the S.A.C. The regular week-end fare to Montreal is $14.40 but the S.A.C. by guaranteeing a party of at least 100 persons has obtained the low rate of $8.05 return. This affords the students a splendid opportunity to see the opening inter-collegiate senior rugby game and the annual rowing race and to spend Thanksgiving week-end in Montreal at very low cost.

The Varsity is informed that any students interested should call at the S.A.C. office, Hart House, or Room 82, U.C., as soon as possible as any tickets not taken up to-day will be offered to the general public.

STUDENTS LAUD BAN ON ELECTIONEERING

Action of U.C. Lit. Endorsed in Interviews with
"The Varsity"

NO HINT OF DISHONESTY

"I am heartily in favour of the doing away of all bribery and ballyhoo in University College elections," declared R. A. Bell, IV Law, in an interview with The Varsity, regarding the hectic events of the last U. C. meeting, when all forms of electioneering were abolished by the Literary Society. "This method of gaining votes had been carried to a ridiculous extent in recent elections, and their disappearance will add a great deal to the dignity of future U.C. elections."

When asked by The Varsity if there was any suspicion of defalcation of funds, Mr. Bell stated that the fact that the Lit. executive presented no budget at the meeting should lead to no suspicions that anything of an illegal nature was taking place. "I have been in touch with finances of the U.C. Lit. for three years," continued Mr. Bell, "and I made a complete survey of the whole matter a year before last, and I can assure anyone that there are no financial difficulties at this time in the Lit. There are absolutely no suspicions of defalcation of funds."

"The giving of favours and gifts in order to secure votes is totally unnecessary, and I entirely agree with the vote of the U.C. Literary Society, when they did away with this system," said George Drynan, IV U.C. "I was the one who proposed the motion that a budget should be presented at the opening meeting, but this does not in any way mean that I have any suspicions regarding the finances of the society, or the way they are kept. There was no question of defalcation of funds either this year or last year."

JIM AND AMY MOLLISON FAILED TWICE TO TAKE OFF ON LONG TRIP TO BAGDAD

Wasaga Beach, Ont., Oct. 3, 7 a.m.—Special to "The Varsity." The first attempt of Seafarer II to take off was unsuccessful, and a second was being made. Speeding over two miles of sandy beach, the Mollison plane failed to rise more than four feet from the ground with its 3½ ton load, in the final attempt made at 7.10 a.m. The flyers will not leave today, "The Varsity" was informed from the Beach at 8.15 a.m.

According to a special despatch to The Varsity received from Wasaga Beach at 6.15 a.m., the take-off of the flying Mollisons on their attempted flight to Bagdad was expected to take place at any minute. Attendants have been loading their plane, Seafarer II, with gasoline for two and a half hours and this operation was nearly completed.

HAS SUBSTITUTE FOR ESPERANTO

Outstanding Ornithologist Reveals Self As Man of Few Words

24-HOUR COURSE

There is something new under the sun! The ever-present problem of assimilation of the foreign-born should be materially minimized by the most recent experiment in international languages, "Basic English". Emanating from the fertile pen of C. K. Ogden of Magdalen College, Cambridge, England, director of the Ornithological Institute at Cambridge, and author and editor of many books on the psychology of language, this new system, whereby 850 words can do the work of 20,000 is attracting world-wide attention.

It is unlike Esperanto and other forms of international talk which the invention of scholars in the past has produced, in that it is simple, ready-made and living language; and although it is not quite the regular dictionary English, it embraces within its narrow confines all the every-day thoughts that occur to the mind of man. Experience has already shown that it can be learned, along with the necessary idiomatic uses and rules for application, in twenty-four hours of concentrated study.

"I am in entire accord with the person who remarked that one of the prime needs of the world to-day is fifty more dead languages," Mr. Ogden once stated. Science is bringing the farthest-flung countries in close communion with one another, and completely transforming international life, and yet there are 1,500 languages acting as barriers to world understanding.

Ruddy, Ripe Tomatoes Thrown Residence Men All Out For Fun

There was a sound of revelry by night last evening when the University Residences held their annual bed-race and Middle House, Burwash, also extended themselves a bit. The Burwash affair started out as a Middle House initiation, till Laurie Cragg, President of Gate House, inadvertently entered upon the scene, and Middle House, unable to restrain their enthusiasm, gave him the usual ceremonial welcome. Mr. Cragg was well and truly tapped, but meanwhile the pibroch was sounded in the corridors of Gate House and Middle House shortly took on the appearance of a city beleaguered. Came the don, however, and an armistice was declared.

Other festivities of the evening included a fight between North and Middle Houses over a large and ornate porcelain trophy known as the Warriors' Mug, won by Middle House, a parade to Annesley Hall, where with due ceremony a symbolic lamp (re-

MASSEY SPEAKS ON CONSUL SERVICE

Canadian Club Luncheon Occasion of Criticism of Dominion Officers

MASSEY AT CANADIAN CLUB

The need for a better system of consular service between the various Dominions of the empire, was stressed by Hon. Vincent Massey at the Canadian Club luncheon at the Royal York Hotel yesterday.

"The British dominions, although their relations cover much more than trade, still exchange no officers except trade commissioners. Dominions do have indirect relations through their various high commissioners in London and in some cases through ministers in foreign capitals, but we have still to supply direct continuous relations with other British states."

Mr. Massey pointed out that the Canadian business man in other countries finds his consular needs ably looked after by the British consul, but he declared it a pity that a Dominion should be permanently dependent on Great Britain in this respect.

Re Addresses

Every University student is asked to make sure, at once, that his correct Toronto address and telephone number are entered upon his registration card in the office of the University Registrar, Smeoe Hall, or of his College Registrar or Faculty Secretary. ### HIGHEST ENROLMENT 1932

Although complete figures for this term are not to be had until the issuing of the Directory, which is being prepared by the Registrar's office in co-operation with the Students' Council, available statistics show a marked decrease in registration. The estimated total is about 6000.

In the Faculty of Arts there has been a drop of nearly 600 from the 3752 students enrolled last year. In Household Science the enrollment is only slightly more than half that of last year. The Faculty of Medicine shows the least proportionate decrease. The total registration according to the estimated tabulation, prepared for the President's address presents a drop of approximately 1,000 students.

Hon. Doctor Cody Addresses
Meeting in Convocation Hall

NOTABLES SUPPORT UNION

One of the major events in connection with the programme of city officials to create a greater interest and generosity towards Charity Federations will be held in Convocation Hall this evening. Honourable Doctor H. J. A musical introduction will be provided by the Toronto Police Band, playing from 7.45 to 8.15, and choral numbers will be rendered by a choir of fifty voices under the personal direction of Harvey Robb, well known Toronto musician. The soloist will be Mr. Cameron Geddes.

The Lieutenant-Governor, acting as Chairman, will give the opening address, followed by his worship Mayor W. J. Stewart, who will stress the greater need of co-operation on behalf of charitable undertakings.

Addresses of approximately five minutes each will be given by Mr. A. D. Hardie of the Federation for Community Service, Mr. Wm. Bennett of the Federation of Catholic Charities, and Rabbi M. N. Eisenstath of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies. Following this Doctor Cody will speak.

The main event of the evening will be the proposing of a resolution endorsing the work of these organizations and appealing to humanity at large to support them with their good will and financial assistance. This will be

NATIONALISM IS REVIEWED BY ECONOMISTS

Professors Believe that Stand is Compatible with Internationalism

NECESSITY MAIN INFLUENCE

Attitude of United States in Recent Conference Considered Justifiable

That nationalism may be compatible with internationalism is the opinion of members of the faculty whom the Varsity interviewed yesterday with regard to the editorial of Monday's issue. "At first sight," stated W. M. Drummond, Professor of Political Economy, "the two may seem quite incompatible. Yet it is possible for us to have a measure of each. After all, the past shows us that the two can exist side by side."

"Internationalism quite definitely reigned in the pre-war era. Modern methods of transportation and communication, combined with the great increase of international travel, all contributed to this end. The World War, however, gave a great impetus to nationalism, and the results of which we see to-day. The formation of new states in southern Europe and by the Baltic contributed. To-day nationalism is in the ascendant, but this need not be taken as a sign that the nations have definitely discarded internationalism. Their present attitude is more pro tem."

Professor Drummond does not consider that the display of nationalism to-day is the result of innate nationalistic pride, but that it has arisen because of an economic necessity. "The nations of Europe have been struggling," he thinks, "to fulfil the obligations which the Treaty of Versailles imposed upon them. But the action of the United States in refusing to accept trade in the place of gold, and the erection of tariff walls, has given rise to the attitude in those countries that, to safeguard themselves, they will themselves produce what they have hitherto imported from America."

Internationalism, Professor Drummond pointed out, is sometimes desirable from the point of view of enlightened self-interest, and if a nation considers that it would profit by following the policy of internationalism, it may follow that policy. "We are all inter-

SMART SLATE PREPARED

The University College ladies' first year nominee tea was held at the Women's Union at 4.30 on Monday afternoon for the purpose of making known to the freshmen those of their classmates who are running for the various positions this year.

They are as follows: "Freddie" Chapman and Mary Clark for President, Mary Becker and Joan Romeyn for Athletic Director, Betty Evans and Bettina Wolverton for Secretary, Dorothy Smith and Mildred Parker for Treasurer, and for Social Service Representative three candidates, Margaret Taylor, Margaret Kennedy, and Phyllis Morgan.

The short nomination speeches were given with the usual display of everything from the traditional "Freshie" bashfulness to the heights of budding dramatic ability.

HIGHER EDUCATION FOR WOMEN

The Hitler regime in Germany has revived interest in a matter that most people decided to accept as a commonplace after it ceased to be fashionable to be a suffragette—that of admitting women to institutions such as our fair university of which the aim is the dissemination of knowledge and true learning. His reasons for discouraging women students are purely economic; he states quite rightly that women are holding positions which men, as the pater familias rightly deserve—in which positions they are, moreover, willing to accept a lower salary than a man would who has a corresponding amount of experience and education.

To go beyond this and compare the efficiency of the sexes in identical situations would be dangerous—he wisely abstains—but the question nevertheless exists. It is needless to say that any opinion as to their comparative efficiency is coloured by prejudice in one direction or another—a generalization is also difficult since individual differences in both are so marked and depend so largely on the occupation in question. It is fairly safe to say, however, that men are more acceptable in positions of responsibility, that they make better employers and better employees, this being especially true in situations where one expects, indeed requires, the services of an educated person.

Women who plan to go into the business world would be much better advised to confine their attention to a course in typing and stenography. When they travel downtown with their newly-won degrees they know slightly less about the way to conduct themselves in an office than second-formers who are at least cognizant of their inferiority. They expect to be treated as privileged individuals, to have their superiority acknowledged by everybody from the office boy to the manager and to receive an ample salary almost immediately.

Their amenability for the scholarly life is, save in the exceptional case, almost non-existent. One can say very little more than this for the male sex, of course, but the philosophical view-point which is necessary in such pursuits is their birth-right and it seems scarcely fair to allow the feminine hoards to disturb the sacred turf for the sake of the precocious few.

Furthermore, university life completely suppresses independence in somewhat more than ninety per cent of the women that attend. The student is catalogued according to the accomplishments of her first year both socially and academically and we admire the enterprising young lady who manages to rise above that classification. Strange as it may seem the impression that she makes in the Year One of her college career seldom takes a turn for the worse no matter how high or low it may be. Everyone is therefore sure of her capabilities.

But the freshtette is ever with us. So we can only advise her to be as inconspicuous as possible and to strive to catch a small fleeting glimpse of that something called Truth.

LIBERAL CLUB IS TO BE REORGANIZED

Will Follow Ideas Expressed at Port Hope Conference This Summer

INVITE ALL INTERESTED

"The Liberal Club is organizing for the coming year with the idea of providing an opportunity for liberal-minded students to study the problems of the day," said J. A. Hartley, vice-president of the club in an interview with The Varsity yesterday. "This study will be based on a continuation of the methods of approach adopted at the Liberal Summer Conference held at Port Hope this summer. The attitude of the Liberal Club toward present-day problems follows the ideas expressed at the conference, especially those of such men as Professor R. M. MacIver, formerly head of the Political Science Department here and now at Columbia, and Mr. J. W. Dafoe, editor of the Winnipeg Free Press. "Professor MacIver argued that the things which are aimed at by those who decay the present system and want it to be in present order destroyed can be obtained with destruction.

"Let us put the house in order," he said, "but don't let us first destroy the house so as to rebuild it, for one thing I am not sure of the architects of the new house. Let us remember also some of the evils outside our house. Liberalism must assert itself in a world of extremes and violence. I hope we are sufficiently remote here to keep our balance. Let us keep our Liberalism for the sake of material insurance and spiritual freedom. I think that the nations of the world will start the process of learning Liberalism again."

"He said that for Liberalism there was no finality of goal, no cocksureness of method, but that Liberalism was an expression of progress.

"Mr. Dafoe said, 'the weakness of the modern state is its refusal to be liberal. Democracy is the task ahead of us and a Democratic government must safeguard the individual.

"I believe that Liberals are going to become combative. Younger Liberals will be able to look back and thank the reactionaries who weakened them. We hear parrot-like cries 'Liberalism is dead,' but those who cry fail to recognize that men who have been free, will remain free and see that their children remain free.

"Also to quote an editorial in the New York Times last week. 'Such things (Liberal ideas) take on warmth (Continued on Page 3)

NIGHT EDITRESS REMEMBERS STORY

Important News Item Receives Due Attention Despite Sarcasm

CAT'S SENSITIVITY SCORED

What do freshtettes think of the "Champus Cat"? Or do they think at all? The general opinion of the wearers of the red and white berets was that it is "good," but they really had not thought much about it. Some had not even seen it. Others, however, had quite definite ideas on the matter. "I think everyone reads it before anything else," was the statement of Yvonne Richie, U.C. But she was rather sceptical as to whether or not it would be possible to keep it up. The statement of Doris Urch was not so generous. "I don't think the 'Cat' is at all intelligent! But once in a while there is a bit of satire which makes it worth while."

Harriet Kamman, a student in P. E. or H., was not particularly impressed by the column in Monday's Varsity, entitled "The Freshman," but said that she thought entertaining when the "Cat" refrained from poetry. "I think that The Varsity needs such a column," was her opinion.

A great many freshtettes were surprisingly modest, but though they withheld their names, they confessed confidentially that they thought the column was worth while.

With the Theatres

Royal Alexandra—

With Dinner at Eight the Royal Alexandra preserves intact its reputation for grabbing off the one or two best films to come to the city every season; it is not likely that a better will appear in a long, long time.

(Orchid the first) This is not one of those alleged "All-Star Productions" where half the stars apparently just dropped into the studio long enough to get their features on thirty feet of film and their names in the billings. Lionel Barrymore, Marie Dressler, Jean Harlow, Edmund Lowe, Wallace Beery, John Barrymore and Lee Tracy all take full part. In fact, (orchid the second) most of them give just about the best performances of their screen careers. This certainly goes for Dressler, Harlow and Beery, and the rest are right with them. And in addition (orchid the third) they manage it without either getting in one another's way or keeping the various threads of the plot so far apart it falls to pieces.

Finally, the rest of a large bouquet goes for the script itself. This tangled skein-of-many-lines theme is about the hardest there is to handle, but the deftness with which the various elements in Dinner at Eight are interwoven and set off against one another is in itself fascinating. And the lines are superb. A few of them, notably the curtain-raiser, must have given the censor a few conscientious qualms—but they're still in there.

N.B. The house was packed—and probably will be all week.

C. L. C.

Loew's—

The elite of Park Avenue, hard-boiled gangsters and one fast-thinking lawyer feature in "Penthouse", the current presentation at Loew's. Warner Baxter again gives a capable and human performance, Myrna Loy, however, forsakes the exotic roles for which she is admirably suited by nature to play the part of a straight-shooting "don't kiss me unless you're crazy about me" girl. Smoothness of sequence is sacrificed to suspense and swift action, both requisites of a gangster film and here successfully achieved. A Laurel and Hardy comedy and an excellent newsreel complete the programme.

INTERFACULTY TENNIS CONTINUES TO-DAY AT 10 A.M.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

Definite arrangements have not been made as yet in regard to the Intercollegiate Tennis Tournament, with the result that no one is getting particularly worried about the interfaculty games. We hope the faculties will get busy on their draws and arrange for their tournaments to be played this week so that their teams may be ready to enter the lists the following week in interfaculty competition. The place will probably be the Toronto Tennis Club.

Although only those proceeding to a degree in the university are eligible for the intercollegiate team, the Tennis Club would be interested in having entries from other departments such as Pharmacy or O.C.E. in the interfaculty tournament. If you come under the vague category of "other departments" and swing a tennis racket gracefully or capably or maybe just interestedly, don't hesitate to get in touch with Lola Boehmer, President of the Tennis Club. We give you our word, she'll be very glad to hear from you.

Trinity seem to be taking the lead so far. They have already begun to run off their games, part of the first round being played yesterday on their own courts. They expect to complete the first round to-day, play the second one to-morrow and proceed to the third on Thursday. By that time they will be able to choose the group of players they wish to represent them in opposing the other colleges. It seems like a good system and let's hope the weather co-operates. It would be too bad to have such a hopeful beginning spoiled.

Vic are making tentative moves in the direction of the courts but nothing definite has been done. University College and St. Mike's are showing the usual amount of interest and will probably play their games toward the end of the week.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT GETS UNDER WAY

Seeded Players All Advance According to Schedule Except Black

DOUBLES MATCHES TO-DAY

Favoured by perfect weather the Interfaculty Tennis Tournament got away to a flying start at nine o'clock yesterday morning on the courts of the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club. By noon the first round list of 63 had been reduced to 15 with all second round matches completed.

The first seeded player, Shields, who ranked in the first ten in the Dominion a few years ago came through as expected but did not show the brand of tennis of which he is capable. Bill Pigott, another of the four seeded players, was right at the top of his form and swept his matches without undue difficulty. Sid Hermant, last year's champion, while not as brilliant as usual, advanced to the fourth round quite handily.

Alan Eaton, who ranked third in the Ontario Junior Tournament this summer, played well to reach the third round, but Ken Black, third seeded player, dropped out of the singles. However, it is expected that he will be in action in the doubles to-day.

The doubles matches are called for ten o'clock to-day. All players are asked to be on time as there are singles matches to be played before noon also. The first four teams in the list below have been seeded in that order. Herman-Pigott; Black-Shields; Davies-Godefroy; Tomlinson-Eaton; W. Griffiths-M. Gray; E. Rigby-L. Hunt; J. Van Allan-M. LaForce; Grover-Newman.

The following players remaining in the third round are requested to be on the courts at ten o'clock this morning: Shields, Boyd, Rae, Crowson, Gray, Eaton, Fenner, LaForce, Leibel, Davies, Godefroy, Hardy, Service, Pigott.

First round matches resulted as follows: Shields, bye to 2nd round; J. Stony defeated E. O'wram; C. Boyd def. A. Crossley; Shulman def. Philippi; Rae def. Moffatt; Bronskill def. Griffiths; Lasserre def. Carveth; Crowson def. Woolrich; Hermant def. K. Faux; A. C. Strout def. G. Burt-Gerrans; A. MacNaughtan def. G. Hays; L. Hunt def. W. Everitt; P. Losie def. L. Black; M. Gray def. R. Scrivener; A. Janis def. M. Kappy; A. Eaton def. J. Brunke; J. Scheffer def. K. Black (default); E. Fenner def. G. Scott; W. Johnson def. J. Blanche; J. Leibel def. E. Rigby; R. Davies def. J. Grover; J. Tomlinson def. H. Newman; C. Godefroy def. B. Charles; G. Morrison def. J. Stewart; T. Hardy def. C. Burnett; A. Hagerman def. S. McCatty; C. Service def. C. Spencer; M. Spencer def. A. Harris; W. Boyd def. W. Neil; W. Pigott def. Barnes.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By B. J. McGuire

With the city football series over Varsity can now concentrate on getting into shape for the intercollegiate schedule which opens this week-end when Warren Stevens' charges journey to Montreal to take on the Shaughnessy-coached McGill Redmen. In these events the college teams will not be facing opponents who have had three weeks' advantage in getting into shape. The early pace was disastrous to the Varsity squad. In the first half of the game with Balmy Beach six of the Blue and White players left the game on account of injuries. Practice workouts injured several others, most of whom are about ready for action again. Sinclair got into harness for the Argo game, while Witzell, Perry and Booth will be back in action for the opening game at McGill. Greco, who was hurt on Saturday, was out to practice last night. Richardson, who has been out with knee injuries, is recovering but may not be able to get into Saturday's game.

The only permanent injury reported is a twisted knee suffered by Jackson, one of Lou Carroll's starry halfbacks of last season. Jackson was out with knee trouble for some time last year and again received an injury in the early training this season. Although the knee is O.K. now doctor's orders keep him out of the game. A recurrence of this trouble would be inevitable.

Grady Laing's junior squad is rapidly rounding into shape for their first game with R.M.C. on Saturday. Of the 50 freshmen who turned out for trial some 35 ambitious players still remain. The remaining squad includes a smart bunch of runners and several heavy-duty line men. They are headed for another championship this year, so they say, and fifty freshmen can't be wrong.

While we are on the subject of football it is worth noticing that several of the interfaculty teams are out at practice. Although no schedule is available as yet the Mulock Cup contenders will be opening their series next week. This series always provides some interesting football and as usual a number of hard-fought contests will result before this historic cup is definitely located for another year.

The interfaculty tennis has as yet provided no upsets. The four seeded players have yet to be eliminated at the end of the third round. For the benefit of those who, like ourselves, need an explanation of what a seeded player is, we have gathered the following information. Seeded players are simply those of outstanding ability who are arranged in the tournament so that they will meet opponents of lesser or unknown ability. This eliminates the possibility of the best players meeting early in the tournament while a player of mediocre ability proceeds to the finals because of lack of worthy opposition.

Considerable comment has been aroused by the lack of interest shown in this sport by the student body. Entered in the tournament are some of Canada's outstanding tennis players. No admission is charged at these games which are played at the Toronto Tennis Club and there is no reason why more students should not witness these contests. The games start every morning at 10 o'clock and will continue each day till the finals are played, probably on Saturday.

INTERCOLLEGIATE GOLF TRIALS HELD

New Material Promises Well for Success of Team in Competition

FRANK CORRIGAN AT MCGILL

Trials for the Intercollegiate Golf team will be held sometime next week on definite date as yet being set. Ronnie Phelan, Jim Boeckh and Tim Stewart are back from last year's winning team. Frank Corrigan has registered at McGill. His loss is bound to be felt for he is rapidly becoming one of the crack amateurs of the East. Boeckh, Stewart and Phelan are known quantities and form an experienced and skilled nucleus for the team that will go to Montreal for the matches on October 21st. That leaves three places to be filled. Stan Biggs, club champion at Briers, Jackson's Point, is a newcomer who will take some beating for a place on the team. Archie Olmstead from Hamilton, who has had a great deal of tournament experience, will also be out. Carl Burton, Bob McAdam and Bill Morton are three other announced candidates. Hartley Patterson is a doubtful starter in the trials due to some question as to his amateur status.

There will be some change in the system of scoring in the matches this year. As they are all scheduled for one day, Saturday, October 21st, it is likely the two ball foursomes will be dropped from the lists and the title be decided on match play alone. Entries are expected from McGill, Queen's and Toronto. University of Montreal was represented only in the individual matches last year and this fall are expected to be back in the team play as well.

SPRINTERS IMPRESS COACH IN PRACTICE

FACULTY MEET OCT. 11

Day by day, interest in track affairs around the university is increasing. The hearts of the coaching staff were gladdened last night by the sight of some forty-six athletes in uniform at the workout in the Stadium.

Johnny Fitzpatrick has joined Mr. Halbus in the coaching of the sprinters. This adds another Olympic man to the already illustrious band of instructors. Among the sprinters who are running fast distances may be found Porter from West End Y., Eddie Dore, O'Leary, Smith of S.P.S., and Joyn of Dents. With these men the colours of the University may be safely trusted.

A group of quarter milers headed by Web McGuire from Saskatchewan, with Campbell, Cooper, Morgan, Amos and Penlington are working hard, and while with the exception of Penlington and McGuire, little is known of their records, they are running fast quarters. Harrier runners, in the persons of McGladdery, Thompson and McKernacher are cutting down the time for the three mile run. Bob Seaborn and Galloway are also running in this class.

Varsity are well assured of a victory in the intercollegiate discus throw from the wide throws given the weight

Save Your Eyes-- Lessen Study-fatigue

Made from paper special tinted to absorb harmful light rays and to reflect a color restful to the eyes, "Eyesaving" sheets are the biggest improvement in note books since the invention of the loose leaf ring book.

They prevent the eye strain and headache frequently resulting from the constant reflection of white light from note book pages during long periods of study.

Start the year right with these better note book sheets. Examine them at any of our stores. Loose leaf covers at surprisingly low prices are also on display. Convenient and inexpensive note book subject indexes are shown, too.

HART HOUSE LIBRARY REPORTS GOOD YEAR

The Library Committee of Hart House is glad to announce that the past year has been one of the most satisfactory in the history of the House with respect to the loss of books. It is true that a certain number of books has been removed but many have been returned and the net loss is the smallest on record. Members are reminded, however, that books belonging to Hart House Library may under no circumstances be taken out of the room and those persons who have inadvertently done so are asked to return them; the regulation by which members may not take their own books into the library will also continue. The library is one of the most appreciated parts of the whole House and is in constant use.

The books which have been purchased by the Library Committee since the opening of Hart House and which will be added to during the coming years, form a magnificent collection to which all members have access. It is only by the adherence of all members to the above mentioned regulations that the library can continue to fulfil its important purpose in the life of Hart House.

KING PASSES INCOGNITO

But the Moment Passed and Editorial Life Goes On

By Florence King

We were just beginning to reconcile ourselves to being mistaken for a freshie and having a beret forced on us for the fourth (and we hope last) year, when Fate smiled on us, and we were elevated to the height of being mistaken for a professor—yes, a professor in Greek and Roman history, no less.

The first time, as we sat in the women's office of The Varsity nudgeling our brain for news for you to read, dear reader, we were somewhat surprised to find a bright-eyed, washed-behind-the-ears freshman timidly advancing towards our desk.

"Excuse me," he stammered. "Most certainly. You can't help it," we almost replied.

"You see, I registered in Greek and Roman History, but I can't go to any lectures because I have no time-table yet. Could you—"

"Oh," we smiled sweetly. "That's up those stairs at your left. They're rather dangerous. Be careful you don't break your neck."

"Thank you," he said gratefully.

After that we were quite prepared for our next visitors—two future sweet girl graduates. They were better prepared than the freshman. One of them stood at the edge of the desk and recited her piece, with frequent promptings from her companion. We let her finish. After all, it was good practice. Then, very gently, we pointed out their mistake.

The visits became more frequent. Some frosh blushed and retired, backing away from the presence; others laughed hollowly and slipped out; one, in a burst of gratitude, offered a piece of a much-abbreviated tie. Each time we adopted a more and more professional air. We were prepared to give a learned lecture at a moment's notice though our memory of things Greek and Roman was somewhat dusty. "The Greeks had a word for it," and "This was the noblest Roman of them all".

Once again footsteps approached. We looked up expectantly. Alas! Gently but firmly someone attached a sign to our door, stood back to make sure it was in the most advantageous position, and retired. We knew our professional days were over. The sign warned all erring frosh which is synonymous with world peace. When asked recently how it was possible to make 850 words accomplish the seemingly incredible task of satisfying the demands of ordinary language, Mr. Ogden explained, "Most English verbs are luxuries, and thousands of them can be replaced by simpler forms. Basic English has only eighteen verb forms. It is simple; there are no complicated irregularities to burden the memory. I would not suggest that it is a final language, but it is a sure foundation on which to build."

Scientists and commercialists are particularly keen about the movement, and in conjunction with that inevitable fascination novelty always holds for the people, have added a definite stimulus to its already considerable popularity. Books for teachers and students of all nationalities have been printed and circulated, and operations are in full swing for the translation of great literatures, including the Bible, into Basic.

"It will always remain a commercial rather than literary project," observed Professor Woodhouse of the English Department of University College, when asked to comment on this most modern of linguistic endeavours. "A language is a living thing which grows years, the peak was reached for the depression years. There are fewer students at present in all years, as compared with last year, although the largest decrease is among the freshmen.

The Varsity was told by the Assistant Registrar, Mr. Laidlaw, that in his opinion, the drop this year was not due to any improvement in the opportunities of gaining employment, but rather to the effects of the prolonged depression. Many families, he believed, had reached the end of their resources and were unable to send their sons and daughters to the university. The decrease was not only being felt in the first year. Many students, well on in their courses, have had to drop out for financial reasons.

TOMATOES THROWN

At Knox College, the Residence men paused to enter a West House Room and bear away two captives. An alarm took two carloads of Knox men to the University Residences, where a sturdy patriot was persuaded to abandon his fair home. After an interval of arbitration via the telephone, delegations from the camps of both combatants deposited a painted hostage in front of Whitney Hall.

Again a carload of the St. George Street gangsters swooped down upon Devonshire Place, to find that their man had returned long since, full of pie and milk. In the argument that ensued three Knox men were taken into the enemy camp, one escaped, and the other two were eventually allowed their freedom.

At an early hour this morning (2.05 a.m. to be exact) The Varsity was informed by special correspondent that all was quiet on both fronts, with snores and moans, rendering the night air. Ah well, college boys will be collegiate!

and develops from generation to generation. It is awfully human, full of tradition, replete with the particular characteristics of the race. It has beauty, poetry . . . This 'Basic English' must be a drab technical affair, but will doubtless serve its purpose."

Dr. Clawson of the same Department expressed similar sentiments. "There will of a necessity be no synonyms," he declared. "Frankly I know very little about it, and should not care to say anything detrimental or otherwise until I have had evidence of its direct practical application. But whatever it is, it cannot be worse than the 'pigeon-English' of foreigners, each race of which has a version peculiarly its own!" he added laughingly.

WITH THE THEATRES

forms, same old plot, same old battles, this picture has one redeeming feature, and that is the acting of Victor Jory in the leading role. This is the first time that we have seen Mr. Jory in anything but the most villainous parts, which we attribute to the fact that he has one of the finest horrid leers since the days of Simon Legree. Jory was stamped for the heavy-duty loving roles by his work in "I Loved You Wednesday" with Elissa Landi. (Screen Secrets—15 cents at all news stands.) This is his first trial as a hero, so the directors probably did not want to waste money on plots and scenery. The highlight of the stage show is the performance of Sybil Bowden, who imitates Garbo, Dietrich, Mae West and Ethel Barrymore better than they could do it themselves. The tight-wire artists were all unstrung and couldn't stay on the wire. Chester Frederick, who tap dances and cracks wise, provides most of the laughter of the bill.

Imperial—

The bill at the Imperial this week is guaranteed to cure an attack of the blues. The feature is a mystery story in which the audience becomes convinced of almost everyone's guilt but the true murderer. However, the humour created by the Chinese detective (Warner Oland), is so subtle, that while you are not held tensely alert, keen enjoyment is assured. The whole cast is splendid, and Heather Angel is a charming portrait of all that the girl friend should be. The stage show, "Hot Chocolates" is excellent. It is packed full of excellent Southern dancing, singing and humour intermingled with marvellous rhythm. One of the highlights is the fascinating arrangement by the orchestra of "Stormy Weather" and "Shadow Waltz".

A. L. H.

Tivoli—

The policy of the Tivoli of running two full length pictures brings to us this week a well balanced programme. Samarang tells a romantic and dramatic story that constitutes real entertainment while the laughs are provided mostly by Jack Buchanan in the British comedy, Yes, Mr. Brown.

Samarang was filmed on a South Sea Island with native actors. It is well directed and the photography is excellent, particularly some of the under-sea shots of pearl divers and a battle between an octopus and sharks.

Yes, Mr. Brown, set in Vienna, lacks a good story and originality but Buchanan makes a good job of his comedy role and it makes good entertainment.

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

ing schemes but a large amount of private capital is also being invested.

The general attitude towards the N.R.A. is unfavourable. They feel that it runs counter to the natural economic laws and is doomed to failure. There is a great deal of personal sympathy for Roosevelt. The general public wish him well and would like his experiment to prove a success but they do not expect it to do so.

The Irish question has been relegated to a subsidiary position in the minds of the people. It bulks a great deal less largely than it did a few years ago. One seldom hears an opinion expressed concerning it.

The English people are horrified by the entire Nazi development. There is a rapidly spreading idea that the Hitler regime is simply a new form of the old Prussian militaristic spirit.

nationally minded," he remarked, "to the extent to which we believe it will pay us to be so."

Professor Drummond believes that the attitude of the United States at the recent Economic Conference was justified, and that "it is impossible for units which are themselves in a state of disorganization to come to any agreement beneficial to them all." But if each first of all "puts its house in order", then they may be more successful. Sir Arthur Salter, Professor Drummond pointed out, has recently

E. A. Havelock, Professor of Classics, declared his conviction that nationalism and internationalism are compatible. Recent criticism of President Roosevelt's attitude at the Economic Conference is, he thinks, unfair. "It is the duty of each nation to first set its house in order. A good deal of the talk about internationalism is a sham and an excuse for not righting the affairs of one's own country."

TORONTO SPEAKERS START CAMPAIGN FOR CITY NEEDY

Federated Charities Hold Mass Meeting at Convocation Hall

MAYOR STEWART SPEAKS

Catholic, Jewish and Community Federations All Represented

Last night Toronto's charitable organizations accepted en masse the invitation extended by Mayor W. J. Stewart and the City Council to come together at Convocation Hall in a "Friendship and Fellowship Night". Lieut.-Gov. Bruce, in opening the meeting, read a message of encouragement from His Excellency Lord Bessborough, and went on to congratulate those in charge of the campaign for funds being conducted by the Federated Charities of the city on their plan of action and their efficient administration.

The second speaker of the evening was His Worship the Mayor, who pointed out to what he called the most representative body he had ever addressed, the dire need for co-operation in meeting the demands of the many unemployed in Toronto, the majority of whom were in this class only by a cruel trick of Fate. He strongly commended the work being done by the Federation for Community Service, the Federation of Catholic Charities and the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies. Making a ringing appeal for voluntary contributions and personal sacrifice on the part of the whole body of Toronto citizens in facing the none too encouraging prospects of the coming winter, he concluded his remarks by saying that in his belief the only hope of successfully maintaining the morale of the city's unemployed was by practicing the motto

MUSIC CLUB HOLDS ITS FIRST MEETING

Students' Activity in Club No Impediment to High Standing

PRINCIPAL BROWN SPEAKS

Good fellowship and gaiety marked the opening of the Victoria College Music Club in Wynilwood last night. A large attendance of both graduates and undergraduates featured the meeting and the freshman year was well represented. Marsh Laverty, president of the club, acted as chairman and welcomed the students.

Principal Brown of Victoria addressed the meeting, expressing the hope that this year would see the Music Club reach greater heights than ever. He remarked that the organization was an excellent medium by which the college spirit might be expressed and advised the students to take an active interest in its work. "For," he said, "I believe that a student can engage in the work of the Music Club and without difficulty succeed in making good standards on the examinations."

The past presidents of the Club for '30, '32 and '33 also addressed the meeting. A number of soloists entertained the gathering and a male trio consisting of Messrs. Joliffe, Joliffe and Bates were repeatedly encored. The production of the Music Club will undertake this year will be "Merrie England", an opera of the time of Queen Elizabeth. The production will, as usual, be under the capable direction of Dr. Crawford.

STAFF MEETING

A meeting of the entire staff of The Varsity, men and women, will be held in the Women's Union on Thursday afternoon. It is important that all editors, assistants and reporters attend. Tea will be served at 4.30 p.m.

EARTHQUAKE SHOCKS ARE RECORDED HERE

Attempts at Prediction of Earthquakes Not Yet Achieved

BREWERY SURVIVES SHOCK

The earthquake shocks that momentarily terrified southern California residents on Tuesday of this week, were recorded here by the seismograph in the Provincial Observatory. The Varsity was informed yesterday. The local instrument is of the very latest and most sensitive type, and records even minor shocks taking place a great distance away.

Mr. William Carroll, seismologist of the Meteorological office here, further informed The Varsity that California scientists are making great progress in the study and forecasting of such large shocks as the one that caused heavy damage on the Pacific coast last March.

"Earthquakes of a minor nature are occurring continually," stated Mr. Carroll. "You must understand that the earth's structural formation is ever changing, and the many minor shocks recorded by our seismograph are the visible evidence of this."

"Many acute shocks escape public notice, occurring in the ocean bed or in regions not heavily populated. Occasional oceanic upheavals, however, cause tidal waves that do great damage."

Some attempts at forecasting earthquakes have been made, it was learned, but although there is great hope for further progress in this work being made, little success has so far resulted.

A heavy earthquake that recently wrought considerable havoc in Nicaragua, found the film comedian Will Rogers, an eye witness. In the files of the Ontario Observatory may be found the immediate bulletin that Rogers rushed to American newspapers.

"All churches, schools, banks and stores have been demolished. The only large building left intact is a brewery. When further discoveries showed the waterworks system to have also been

Varsity Bandsmen MUST JOIN C.O.T.C.

Captain John Slatter Drills Windy Chorus Into Harmony

"MY FOOTBALL HERO"

Under the leadership of Captain Slatter the Varsity band has been forging ahead rapidly the last few days. With the promise of new blazers to come, blue with white facings, and a trip to Montreal, the collegiate musicians are blowing to the last breath. The fortunate fifty who will make the trip are drilling every night and with their new composition, "My Football Hero", they should certainly show their red-coated rivals just how it should be done. A ruffing prevails, obnoxious, no doubt, to those aesthetic natures that rebel against the humble bugle blast. It provides that all musicians who do not own their own instrument must join the C.O.T.C. to remain in the windy chorus.

'Varsity' Scoops Toronto Papers ON BAGDAD FLIGHT

News of Mollison's Failure Was Relayed by Wire from Wasaga

THREE-HOUR SCOOP

Two Editions Needed to Give Latest News of the Attempted Flight

Do you know that there were two editions of The Varsity yesterday? And that The Varsity published the biggest scoop in the history of this journal? Your newspaper was on the campus with the story of the failure of the Mollison's take-off fully three hours before the downtown papers were on the streets and the news was, of course, too late for the morning papers.

When it was known late Monday night that Jim and Amy Mollison were expected to take-off from Wasaga Beach at sunrise Tuesday on their projected flight to Bagdad, The Varsity, seeing a scoop in the offing, got in touch by telephone with the manager of a summer hotel on the Beach near the spot where the attempt was to be made and arranged with him for an up-to-the-minute news service.

Shortly after 6.15 a.m. the phone rang in The Varsity night office. It was Wasaga Beach on the line with the news that fueling of the plane had been going on for some two and a half hours and was nearly completed. At seven o'clock word came through that the plane had been warming up since 6.20 and that an attempt to take-off was about to be made.

Seven o'clock is the regular time of going to press so the paper went to press with this much information.

Later, word came that the first attempt had met with failure and when, at a few minutes past eight, our Wasaga correspondent flashed the news from the Beach that the flying pair had failed a second time, the presses were stopped, the news inserted, the page made up again and the biggest scoop in the history of the paper went out on the campus.

INCONSEQUENCE

Enough has been talked about the imminence of war in Europe and Asia during the past few months to justify serious consideration on the part of every student—or, for that matter, every young man who for the next ten years will be of an age to be called in the first draft, should this country become embroiled in warfare.

We are all pacifists these days; that is to say, we all, with the possible exception of a handful of professional military men, view with alarm the possibility of another major war regardless of the question of our own participation in it, and we all agree that it is part of our ethical responsibility to our country and the human race to use every means available to prevent its recurrence.

Pacifism in its accepted meaning, however, goes a step farther. It declares that one of the causes of war is that false patriotism which is prepared to spring to arms whenever it considers its country's honour endangered, that uncompromising militant nationalism which too often in the past has developed wars out of diplomatic crises and has comforted statesmen with the assurance that whatever blunders they may make, they need only wave the bloody shirt and mouth elegantly of "our national honour" and "the safety of our wives and mothers" to swing the country solidly behind them.

Your true pacifist believes that one

RADIO COMMISSION FINDS DISAPPROVAL AMONG STUDENTS

But G. A. Martin Claims that Charlesworth Has Nothing to be Ashamed of

FEW ARE SYMPATHETIC

Perry Says Suppression of Radio Speeches is Suppression of Free Thought

The consensus of opinion among the students interviewed by The Varsity yesterday seemed to incline towards opposition to the actions of the Canadian Radio Commission to date. A few seemed rather sympathetic towards the efforts of the Commission to improve conditions in the Canadian radio field but the majority were inclined to think that we would be just as well off without our Commission.

The Varsity found at least one rather loyal defendant of the Commission in G. A. Martin, III Law, who believes that Mr. Hector Charlesworth had done nothing yet to be ashamed of and had a good word for the programmes which had been introduced by the Commission. When asked as to his opinion in regard to the suppression of controversial speeches, his reply was: "I think that such a policy is all right since the radio is primarily for purposes of entertainment and speeches of a controversial nature are only likely to cause trouble."

J. H. Perry, III Arts, when interviewed, was a little more critical of the Commission, however. Asked to comment on Mr. Charlesworth's assertion that if he were to go to his grave to-morrow, he would have nothing to be ashamed of, Perry declared that, although that was quite true, Mr. Charlesworth had likewise nothing to be proud of. "Just another example of government suppression of our modern 'supposedly free thought,'" was his reply to the question of what he thought of the policy of suppression of controversial speeches. Mr. Perry said, however, that he had not read enough criticism of the Commission to say whether or not it was "muddled."

STUDENTS PROCURE PECULIAR JOBS

Agile Dancer Pirouettes with Siamese Twins at Exhibition

STUDENT READS HISTORY

With our mind on the McMaster student who spent the summer pulling rabbits out of hats, The Varsity went sleuthing. What had Toronto men and women been doing this summer? But we didn't find one rabbit and the only hats were those Jean Hunnisett has been selling in Eaton's College Toggery Shop.

We met several people who worked hard all summer, looking for work, and one poor soul who did her duty by the History Department and read Ramsay Muir.

Henry Noyes, who graduated from Moderns in June, was a Camp Councillor at Pine Crest. We hear he gave a very uplifting address on "Building Your City".

Reg. Watters, III Phil., explains his bleached blond hair by the fact that he was a lifesaver at the Island. He says he sat all day in a rowboat reading Plato, scared stiff for fear someone would yell for help.

Gilda Cramer established a new world record this summer. Back at her old summer job of waitress on a Thousand Islands steamer she saw the island for the nine hundred and ninety-ninth time without setting foot on them.

Gordon Skilling had an eye on the new C.C.F. group to be formed in the University this year. He hitch-hiked to the C.C.F. convention in Regina.

But the ornamental cauliflower goes to the boy who was in first year Pol. Sc. last year. He danced with the Siamese Twins on the Midway! He says the main reward was a new outfit with tails, rather appropriate, we thought.

FORMAL CEREMONIES OF KNOX COLLEGE

Professor Macdonald from McMaster University Speaks

INCREASED ENROLLMENT

At the formal opening of Knox College in the college chapel last evening it was announced that the enrollment for the coming year is the largest on record since 1925. Thirty men are registered in theology, thirteen are taking post-graduate work, and forty students in Arts are preparing for theology. Professor Norman Macdonald of the department of history of McMaster University was the special speaker, and Deputy Acting Principal Rev. William Barclay of Hamilton was in the chair.

The Deputy Acting Principal expressed the hope that the investigation being made in connection with the college, which is in the hands of a committee under the sponsorship of Hon. W. F. Nickle, K.C., of Kingston, would be left to those appointed to deal with it, and that the faculty and students would get on with their work. He made a plea for the co-operation of the students.

U.S. INTERVENTION IN CUBAN AFFAIRS IS LAST RESORT

Mr. Emil Sauer, U.S. Consul-General Discusses Policy

NO PARTIALITY SHOWN

Strength of Communist Body in Cuban Republic Uncertain

"Only in the case of utter chaos would the United States Government send an expeditionary force to Cuba, I am certain."

Such was the significant statement made to The Varsity last night by Mr. Emil Sauer, United States Consul-General in Toronto.

"The handling of the Cuban situation and the American policy in those affairs, is quite out of my province, and I am really not competent to say anything definite," said Mr. Sauer in substance, "but the President will certainly be very careful before taking any move at intervention, and it is evident, I think, that the United States will step in only as a last resort, when the Cuban government shows itself incapable of dealing with the situation."

Questioned as to the likelihood of a Communist revolt breaking out in the disorganized island republic, "I have very little information on the strength of the Communist movement in the country," confessed Mr. Sauer. "As a matter of fact, I have not been in conversation with anyone who has been in Cuba recently, and there is no other way in which I could have any direct knowledge of conditions there."

"One thing, however, should be made plain. That is that the United States desires strongly to show absolutely no

Doctor Channon of Liverpool: "British Students Would Benefit Here"

DOCTOR CODY IN ENGLAND

For the past month the School of Hygiene has been fortunate in possessing the services of Professor H. J. Channon, of Liverpool University, who is assisting Dr. Best with his investigations into fat metabolism. Dr. Channon has had a distinguished career. He went up to University College, London, in 1912, where his studies were interrupted by the war. In 1918 he went back and graduated first in Arts and subsequently in Science. Later he turned his attention to Biochemistry. From 1923-1926 he held the Best Memorial Fellowship in Medical Research. On the expiration of the Fellowship he went to Leeds University as a Biochemist in the Department of Experimental Pathology and Cancer Research. Then in 1931 he was appointed to the Johnston Chair of Biochemistry in the University of Liverpool where he still is. In about three weeks he expects to conclude his work in Canada and return to his duties at his own university.

Dr. Channon is very favourably impressed with our university although he has been too busy during the time he has been here to see very much of it. He speaks with admiration of Hart House, both as a fine building and as a social centre for the students. He believes the students here do not realize how much better off they are in this respect than English students. No English university can compare with

ADVICE TO A FRESHMAN

Soon the freshman will have become his old self, or perhaps we should say a new self in the old body. Tyranny and tradition will presently make him cognizant of the fact that he is now a member of the undergraduate body. To him the door is open—before him lies the formative period of his life.

The freshman can afford to be optimistic. A senior can scarcely be blamed for being fearful of the future, and depressed at the thought of breaking college ties. For him the term is one of anxiety, he will make the most of the fleeting moments, and carefully prepare for the uncertain future. For the freshman the future is obscure, the present alone matters. Prosperity may have returned by the time he graduates. In the meantime, a number of interesting and instructive years lie ahead of him.

Apart from academic opportunities, many advantages are his. If the freshman so desires he may participate in athletics, and enjoy the thrills and benefits attached to physical achievement. If he is fond of books, there are countless volumes of them in the libraries close at hand. The first year man may, if fortunate, win a place on his class executive, and obtain experience for the larger field of undergraduate administration. If he has musical or dramatic ability, there are college societies in which he may develop his talent along this line. In the college debating societies the freshman may orate and argue and display his wares, or may be initiated into the awesome atmosphere of a Hart House debate. These are but a few of the extra-curricular activities which may be engaged in during the year.

We envy the freshman. His worries are in the present, his energy may be devoted to a number of profitable and diverting sidelines, sufficient to make time pass all too quickly. Opportunity beckons to him on every hand, and we would advise him to participate wholeheartedly in as many of the campus activities as possible. Classes and books are primary, but they need not occupy all his time. Let him enter the open door determined to make the best use of the advantages which present themselves.

The Canadian Microscope

Political Madhouse in America and Nearer Home. A lecture given by Bernard Shaw to the Academy of Political Science in New York last April. Published in England by John Constable and Co., and to be published shortly in Canada by Macmillans. Price 60 cents.

We begin to wonder just how much longer Mr. Bernard Shaw will keep on writing and publishing. Certainly his Black Girl is a small masterpiece and probably the best thing he has done along with his play, Candida. But when a man reaches the ripe age of 77 and has only managed to write one masterpiece for every generation, we should only be amazed by such a book as the Black Girl.

We expect too much of Mr. Shaw simply because he himself has led us to anticipate greater things, on account of his own enormous self-confidence in his own ability. So when we read The Political Madhouse in America and Nearer Home, we find it isn't up to scratch, and seems wordy and meaningless after the Black Girl.

But that doesn't matter because it really is interesting in a sketchy sort of way and we find he thinks highly of almost everything American except the Constitution. And although he ridicules the Hundredpercent American and the Constitution, yet his remedy is merely to write another Constitution and rehash the country with another Hundredpercent American, and all will be orderly. The only difference would be that the new Constitution and the new Citizen would be products of George Bernard Shaw's idealism. But he hits a few nails squarely. He has some real insight into the psychology—a hugely overworked term but applicable here—of Americans and illustrates with some significance their capacity for political action. He also has some amusing theories on financiers, bankers, and stock brokers, every one of which he says "is 95 per cent lunatic".

He coins a new phrase for America which probably will stick. "You have become a wonderful night-clubby sort of nation; but there is nothing so helpless as a raided night club."

His arguments on international economic problems are lucid and original enough, but from an academic viewpoint, they do not hold much water. However they are easy to read and understand which, of course, is the reason his book will sell. And it is only the second rate that is popular, Frank Harris has said.

He ends his lecture by a fine climax—"Everywhere Progress meant Poverty". He verges on sophistry, yet escapes because of the truisms which he discovers as by-products.

As a lecture this Political Madhouse would bring down the house; as a book it is interesting but by no means momentous. A great man is Bernard, however, for at least he makes you stop, if only a minute, and consider. J. P. M.

TENNIS TOURNEY SEES FAST PLAY

Hermant Versus Eaton Match Postponed Until This Afternoon

RESULTS OF YESTERDAY

Playing according to form all the favorites came out on top in the second day's play of the Interfaculty Tennis Tournament yesterday. The play is becoming faster and more accurate with each set and anyone with some spare time to fill in would be well advised to go to the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club on Price Street and watch a few matches.

Fourth round singles matches are called for ten o'clock to-day with second round doubles at eleven. The match between Hermant and Eaton will take place in the afternoon instead of the morning. Both players are right up to snuff now and it will be a game worth seeing. Results of yesterday's play are as follows.

Singles—Shields defeated Boyd; Crowson def. Rae; Hermant def. MacNaughton; Eaton def. Gray; Fenner def. LaForce; Davies def. Leibel; Godefroy def. Hardy; Pigott def. Service.

Doubles—Griffith-Gray def. Spencer McCarty; Tomlinson-Eaton def. Van Allan-LaForce; Shields-Black def. Rigby-Hunt.

The draw for to-day's doubles is: Pigott-Hermant vs. Griffith-Gray; Shields-Black vs. Davies-Godefroy; Tomlinson-Eaton bye to next round.

BLUE ROWING CREW MEET M'GILL SQUAD

President Cody Witnesses Successful Trial Run

READY FOR FRAY

Only two more practices remain for the senior rowing crew before they entrain for Montreal on Thursday afternoon to test their skill on foreign water. For nine months now, Coach Loudon has been endeavouring to smooth out and convert into a perfect machine, the candidates who presented themselves to him last January. How far he has succeeded will be known only on Saturday next, but judging from past showings, he is the man to be where he is. The eight oarsmen, six of whom have fair curly hair, are splendid to watch in action as they glide over the water with a powerful swinging stroke, bending and rising in perfect unison.

Last night's practice was very satisfactory in spite of rough water and a cold wind. On Monday night a trial run took place witnessed by none other than President Cody and the time was quite satisfactory as was the stroking. Regarding the personnel of the team it is interesting to note that only two of last year's men are enrolled. These are Sam Hughes, the cox, and Larry Skeay. However, the crew has a couple of real veterans and mainstays in the persons of Gord Bradshaw and Jack Cameron. Both have rowed with the club for the last three years and work perfectly together with Cameron as stroke. Bradshaw last year was spare man for the Intercollegiate owing to his versatility at rowing either on the

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

RUGBY SQUAD AND OARSMEN PREPARE FOR WEEK-END

VARSITY TO CLASH WITH REDMEN AT MONTREAL

Team Shows Fighting Spirit in Clash with the Intermediates

RICHARDSON STILL OUT

Stevens Sending One of the Best-Balanced Teams in Some Time

Saturday the Varsity football team journeys to Montreal to meet the McGill Redmen in the opening game of the Senior Intercollegiate Rugby season. What a busy afternoon those Redmen have in store for them if they think they are going to open the intercollegiate series with a win.

Varsity is sending to McGill one of the best balanced teams they have had for some time. They are in the pink of condition and although many of the players were injured in the early season practices most of these have returned to the wars. Richardson will probably be unable to start on Saturday but Booth and Witzell are expected to be going as well as ever by next week.

Last night on the back campus Warren Stevens had his team out for some real practice with the second string men forming the opposition. These teams tore into one another with all the vim and vigour of a team with a championship at stake. They hit the line like a through train and throughout the entire practice they demonstrated that fighting spirit for which the Blue team is becoming justly famous. Stevens was always present to correct any errors which his charges made and we feel certain that they don't make the same mistake twice.

McGill last Saturday were the only college team to emerge with a win. However, their victims were the R.M.C. squad and the soldier boys are lacking in such line men as Greco, Harris or McQuigge, while it is decidedly unlikely that they have a backfield which could equal that sensational pair of Coulter and Arnp. Regardless of the strength of their opponents last Saturday, McGill emerged full of confidence in their team and their ability to repeat their victory when they meet the Toronto team. That will be decided on Saturday but we look for the Big Blue team to come out on top.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By J. A. Runcells

Apparently Coach Loudon is taking nothing for granted as far as the rowing crew is concerned. The old trouble common to Varsity crews for the past year has shown signs of creeping back again, but not for long. After a heavy workout last Friday afternoon the oarsmen were subjected to a stinging pep talk on the subject of, "rowing yourself out". This expression means that every man should gauge his strength that when the finish gun is fired he is absolutely incapable of taking another stroke. So, on Friday, when the crew were told to row a half a mile and finished sitting up in the shell, the popular S.P.S. professor explained in a few scorching terms that, in future, after a course had been rowed, the man who finished anywhere but on the flat of his back would be asked to vacate his berth in favour of another candidate.

Judging from bits of news that come from the Quebec metropolis, Coach Loudon's attitude is quite justified. This year's race will not be a whitewash for either crew. Averaging only 154 lbs. per man, the local oarsmen are at least 20 lbs. lighter than last year and are now lighter than their hosts. But the long swinging stroke that has brought credit to the university for the past few years is still as strong as ever and should be a match for the quicker pace of the red and white shell. Forming a nucleus around which the crew is built are Bradshaw and Skey, Cameron at stroke and Hughes as cox. These men have all seen service in the Rowing Club in past years.

As a newcomer to the board of strategy that guides the destinies of the various rugby divisions, comes Grady Laing. His Junior recruits met Balmy Beach last night in an exhibition fixture and showed just how valuable an addition he has become. The Beach youngsters are no mean aggregation to engage and the fact that they were held to an eleven-eleven tie by the Blue Juniors augurs well for Varsity's reputation in the intercollegiate junior schedule.

The interfaculty tennis tournament will soon be a thing of the past. Favoured by fine weather and managed by capable heads the play has been run off in record time and with the singles advanced to the quarter-finals and the doubles to the semi-finals, the week-end should find the competition finished. To date the entrants have played consistently with only one or two upsets. Favourites in most cases have justified themselves and now the play is reduced to the cream of the tournament. Those who enjoy good tennis would be well advised to take a look in on the remaining sets.

It is very gratifying to see the interest and patronage that President Cody is lending to the rowing crew. Always a follower of this historic sport the President turned up recently at one of the evening practices and watched the shell from the coach's launch as it skimmed over the calm waters of the bay. We hope that his visit to Montreal over the week-end will be rewarded by a double victory for the Blue and White.

When Varsity and McGill clash on Saturday afternoon on the Montreal gridiron, the game will climax a month of hard work under the guidance of Warren Stevens. The rest of the week will be spent in eradicating certain weaknesses perfecting scoring plays. It is gratifying to see the injured men returning to the roll call and restoring the needed zest and confidence to the team. The players were never in better trim than at present and with the hardest game of the schedule ahead of them their veteran players and their condition will be an important factor in deciding their future course.

VARSITY JUNIORS TIE BALMY BEACH

Powell, Tafts and Jacobs Are Stars for Blue Team

SCORE IS 11-11

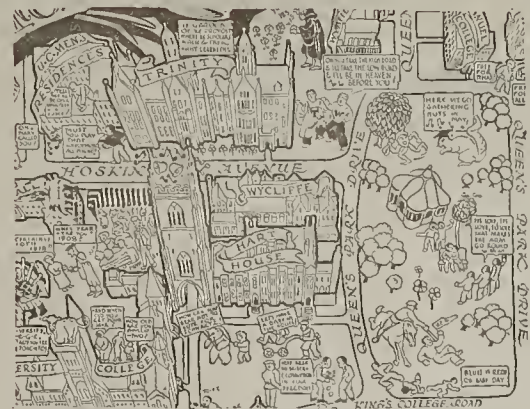

Proving themselves to be splendid opportunists, the Varsity junior rugby squad were able to hold Milt Jewell's determined Balmy Beach gridders to an 11-11 tie in a decidedly interesting game on the back campus last night. After donating 11 points to the Blue cause, the Beachers came on with a rush in the last quarter to tie the score and were prevented from carrying off a much deserved victory only due to lack of time.

The first Varsity touchdown was secured after Bob Story had gathered up a loose ball on a Beach end run and carried it to the Eastenders' five yard line. G. Powell plunging through the Beach line. Tafts converted with a beautiful placement kick. In the second quarter Tafts secured a loose ball on a Beach fumble and ran for a touch which was not converted. This ended the scoring for the first half.

In the last quarter the Beach team came to life, displaying smart football tactics to carry the Blue team off its feet. Two beautiful forward passes gave Murphy a chance to plunge for a touch which was not converted. Two minutes later a Murphy-to-Grant end run resulted in another major score for the Beach team, this one being converted, to tie the score.

Throughout the whole game the Beach backfield showed to advantage. Grant especially running back kicks for twenty or thirty yards as the Blue outsiders failed to get close to

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

In spite of the fact everyone is very busy getting timetables straightened out and selling "pour-fekt-lee" good books to conscientious freshmen, there seems to be time left over for playing around with the lil' ol' basketball—which is precisely as it should be. Now is the time to get the ground work done, for the later Big Four Tournament. The best way is to start training immediately to keep fit and retain that smart physical condition gained by weeks of summer sports.

The problem of practice hours is already being worked upon and as soon as it is definitely settled, some real workouts will be held. St. Hilda's are trying to get U.T.S. gym for Wednesdays and Thursdays but have not been able to make definite arrangements as yet. They expect, however, to hold their first practice next week. Owing to some confusion in the management of the team Vic are not sure when they are starting, but it will probably be very soon.

The interfaculty championship was won last year by Sr. Vic. They will be a very real threat again this year as most of the old team is back with the addition of some good material stepped up from the juniors. They will certainly be a team to watch but they are bound to encounter some keen opposition from the direction of U.C. As is the case of St. Hilda's and St. Mike's, U.C. has many of the old players back and will be able to send forth a line-up containing players of high calibre. The teams will soon snap into tip-top form with the drill and training they will get from their coaches so that once more we can get out and yell ourselves hoarse at every basket—that is, every basket after the score is tied at 18-18!

As far as the intercollegiate team is concerned prospects for a live-wire team seem pretty bright even at this early date. Although Helen Smith will not be eligible this year and graduation has taken Muriel Atkin away, the rest of last year's team are back. It's a little early though, to talk about after-Christmas affairs so we'll refrain from any long-distance conjectures.

ON THE WHO-WAS-THE-LADY JOKE

Every time I hear a couple of ham actors ask each other why the chicken crossed the road, I shudder. When they crack (and what I mean crack!) a mother-in-law or parachute-won't-open joke I squirm in anguish. But when they callously utter a who-was-that-lady-I-seen-you-with-last-night joke, my powers of resistance are broken, and I just naturally scream, tear my hair, and froth at the mouth. Finally in desperation I decided to write this essay, in which I intend to give a complete history, and go into a thorough investigation and renovation of this time-worn, moth-eaten, diaphanous poster. If this treatise puts an end to all qui-tait-la-dame-avec-laguellet-je-vous-ai-vu-hier-soir jokes, I will have done my duty towards posterity. If it doesn't I will give up in despair, and spend the rest of my days making faces at wrestlers.

After puzzling for years over vague Egyptian hieroglyphics, and after spending decades mucking around ancient Babylonian remains, I finally discovered that it was the serpent in the garden of Eden who, during a two-handed pinocchio game, innocently asked Adam "Who was that lady I seen you with last night?" But Adam, who was suffering from a terrific hang-over, replied "That was no lady, that was my wife", and that started the whole miserable business.

Well, that lousy crack kept going the rounds, until a courtier asked King Solomon "Who was that lady I seen you with last night, that I never seen you with before?" And that wise old monarch with a twinkle in his eye (if it wasn't a twinkle it might have been a monocle) replied "Oh! that must have been my wife!"

Hardly had the ancients recovered from that one when someone asked Nero "Who was that lady I seen you with in the street last night?" And Nero, that old rone, answered "That was no street, that was an alley."

Now during the Dark Ages people as a whole were supposed to be mighty dumb and since all records were destroyed I could find neither hide nor hair of a lady-I-seen-you-with-crack. Which to my way of thinking doesn't make them so dumb.

Then Queen Elizabeth one evening asked Shakespeare himself that embarrassing question "Who was that lady I seen you with last night?" And the mighty dramatist without thinking a moment said "That was no scene, that was an act."

It seems that even the most uncivilized of peoples had their version of this so-called joke, and the barbaric Eskimos (I learned from an old Norwegian tract) would jokingly mutter while partaking of mouthfuls of blubber and candlesticks, "Who was that lady I thawed you with last night?" And when you realize that a night is six months long in that country, you can imagine the potentialities of an Eskimo.

It was during the World War that Field Marshal Foch asked of his cook one evening "Who was that lady I seen you with last night?" And the cook, not to be outdone, came back "That was no lady, that was my knife."

And now coming back to modern times I discovered that when Al Capone's income tax reports were being investigated, the prosecuting attorney thundered at Scarface "Who was that lady I saw you with last night?" And Capone, without blinking an eyelash answered "That was no saw, that was a chisel."

And so you see, my dear readers (if there are any more of you left by now) this lady-I-seen-you-with-remark is becoming an ever-increasing menace to our society, ranked (and oh how rank!) with the Yellow Peril and the Russian Menace. Something must be done about it and co-operation is vital. The next time a person approaches you with the remark "Who was that lady I seen you with last night?" just fix him with a baleful stare, and haughtily reply (and try and get that reply out quick as a flash) "Oh Yeah! That is the only remedy, the rest is up to you."

TORONTO SPEAKERS

START CAMPAIGN

"To give that others may live". Mr. A. D. Harvie, Secretary of the Federation for Community Service, who spoke after the Mayor, discouraged the attitude adopted by some people that public funds should be the sole support of charity. He briefly outlined the work carried on by the private charity organizations and stated that public relief could only extend its activities to supplying the bare needs of life, beyond which the charity federations had to step in and render such services as nursing in the homes of destitute families.

Speaking for the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies Rabbi M. N. Eisen-drath assured the Mayor that his organization was prepared to do its utmost during the coming winter to meet the shortage of food and clothing, and he stated that the meeting was a particular inspiration to him, since he had but recently returned from gloom-laden Europe, where such a gathering would be an impossibility. We are facing a war in which we must succeed, a war in which defeat means death, was the gist of his concluding words. Mr. Wm. Bennett of the Federation of Catholic Charities also spoke briefly and urged every citizen to think of what it means to be hungry, homeless, sick, and despondent when charity workers called at their door during the next few weeks.

The last speaker of the evening was Hon. Dr. Cody, who lauded the efficient methods of collection and distribution used by the private welfare organizations in Toronto, pointed out that there is a real necessity for coping with the present situation among the unemployed since degradation in a community does not remain isolated but spreads like a contagious disease. As citizens of Toronto we have not only rights and privileges, but also duties and responsibilities. To-day the duties are predominant. We must face them with courage and the will to succeed.

During the evening entertainment was provided by the Police Band and the Fire Fighters' Band. Mr. Cameron Geddes, and the choir of over fifty voices under the direction of Mr. Harvey Robb.

wives and orphan children; the glory of victory will not restore that of ruined cathedrals; nor are the advantages of imperialism made manifest to destitute parents and undernourished children.

It is not enough to tell ourselves that we are seriously considering the impossibility of war when we are merely weighing the possibility in the same spirit as we would weigh the possibilities of Varsity's winning a rugby title. Such an attitude merely encourages people to accept war as an unfortunate but inevitable affliction. We must look the facts in the face, and force ourselves to realize exactly what another war will mean in terms of human values.

Neither is it sufficient for us to develop the most thoroughgoing convictions if we keep them to ourselves. For one thing, the pacifist who waits till war is declared to announce his pacifism is in an almost untenable position; he is indistinguishable from the shirker who adopts "conscientious objections" to shield his cowardice. Nor can individual convictions alone prevent another war. Only through the organization of a definite pacifist movement can anything be accomplished. It would be interesting to see what reception would be accorded the organization of such a movement at the University of Toronto.

trained". K. D. Landel, II Pass Arts, was bold enough to make the statement that the Commission was spoiling the radio business. He said also that "I believe that newspaper criticism was biased, maybe for political reasons."

A student in III C. & F. who begged to remain anonymous, expressed himself as opposed to the suppression of controversial speeches while at the same time broadcasting speeches of relatively little or no importance. He declared, nevertheless, that Mr. Charlesworth had done nothing to be ashamed of and added that most criticism that he had read had been based on the opposition to the expenditure of so much money for such purposes during these strenuous times.

M. Duinaige, III Arts, had two principal criticisms of Mr. Charlesworth: he believed it a foolish policy to broadcast the same programme on more than one station in a given city and he also found fault with the broadcasting of French programmes outside the province of Quebec. He was inclined to support the other policies of the Commission, however.

Toronto in the way in which buildings are laid out, centering around the campus and Queen's Park. In medicine he considers we are to be congratulated upon the Connaught Laboratories where everything necessary to work with is at hand. There are no better facilities in England, says Dr. Channon, and he fails to see why students should go there to study except for the value of the personal contacts they acquire. On the other hand British students would probably benefit by a year or two spent in study here.

While President Cody was in England this summer he met Dr. Channon and was shown by him around the University of Liverpool. Dr. Cody found two main interests there. One was the School of Architecture, recently built at a cost of £35,000 and the other was the Department of Education of the university. This latter building is formed of a number of Georgian houses which have been left practically intact and have been furnished with really antique furniture, the idea being to develop real cultural interest by providing the right kind of surroundings rather than by lectures alone.

In Dr. Channon's opinion Toronto is a fine city. Both he and his wife, also a doctor, are enjoying their sojourn here very much and say that they have been overwhelmed with the Canadian hospitality.

Miss Marie Walberg Leaves

"The money will probably not be used for buildings but perhaps some other form of memorial," was the comment made by Mr. W. J. Dunlop, of the Department of University Extension when interviewed by The Varsity yesterday afternoon on the matter of the $500,000 legacy recently left the University by Miss Marie Walberg. "There has been considerable discussion concerning the use to which the money would be put," stated Mr. Dunlop. "A suggested memorial, which seems to be popular, is the use of the interest on the bequest for bursaries and scholarships. For the next few years at least bursaries and scholarships will solve a serious financial problem for a great many of the students."

The brother of Miss Walberg was an engineer and it was her desire to leave a memorial for him that would be appropriate. She therefore decided (Continued on Page 4)

PACIFISM LIKELY TO BREAK DOWN IN WAR TIME, STUDENTS BELIEVE

Would Collapse into Thin Air With First Blast of a Bugle

A pacifist movement at the University of Toronto might have some temporary success so long as the country remains at peace, but would break down before the onslaughts of militaristic propaganda should war become an actuality, in the opinion of the majority of students interviewed on the subject of pacifism introduced in the "Inconsequence" column of yesterday's Varsity.

Only one student agreed fully with the article. Goldwin Smith, a graduate of Western University studying in the Graduate School, was enthusiastic as to the possibilities of a pacifist organization here. He is past president of the International Relations Club at Western, one of the most popular societies on the campus, and felt that in this larger university the results of such a movement would prove even more propitious.

"The pacifism we know to-day would explode into thin air with the first blast of a bugle," said Sid Hermant, U.C., "As for forming a pacifist club (Continued on Page 4)

The most unique and perhaps the least appreciated possession of the University of Toronto is the carillon in Hart House tower.

In an interview with The Varsity yesterday, the carillonneur, Mr. J. Leland Richardson, informed us he has been with the University for the past four years. Mr. John Skillecorn was his predecessor. Mr. Richardson began his career as carillonneur ten years ago at St. John's Anglican Church, in Toronto. He later studied in Europe at the Belgian National Carillon School, and on his return to Toronto played for three years on the carillon of the Metropolitan United Church.

Asked to name his favourite composers and selections, Mr. Richardson explained that, as the bells have a range of only two octaves, a carillonneur is restricted in his choice of compositions to folk songs, patriotic airs, hymns, and the simpler works of Mozart and a few other great composers.

Mr. Richardson stressed the fact that (Continued on Page 4)

Decision on Canadian-Labrador Boundary Dispute Based on These Books

The University of Toronto Library is greatly indebted to Lord Warrington of Clyffe, a member of the British Privy Council, for the presentation of three volumes of historical maps. The collection contains actual maps used in the internationally famous Canadian Labrador boundary dispute. Dr. H. J. Cody, while in England last summer, was fortunate in receiving them.

The Barbary Coast of 1655 and the Malabar Coast of 1723 are among the numerous reproductions of old prints contained in the first volume.

The second and third volumes deal with North American geographic outlines entirely.

The second volume can be termed a record of the evolution of Canadian exploration and map making. It contains maps of Canada dating from 1689 down to the present day. The earliest of the above mentioned are little more than crude inaccurate and badly proportioned attempts. They are so drawn that the St. Lawrence River is (Continued on Page 4)

PORTRAIT ADDED TO FINE GROUP

Painting of First Chancellor Added to Collection in

GIVEN AT CONVOCATION

A new portrait is now to be seen among the portraits of distinguished men who have held important offices in the University of Toronto which hangs in the Great Hall of Hart House. It is that of the first Chancellor of the University, the Hon. Peter Boyle DeBlaquiere, which was presented at the last Convocation, through the generosity of a few friends of the University.

The Honourable Peter Boyle DeBlaquiere was Chancellor of the University of Toronto from 1850 to 1852. He was at the same time a member of the Legislative Council of Upper Canada. He was born on April 25th, 1773, and died on October 23rd, 1860. He was the fourth son of the first Lord DeBlaquiere and his mother was Eleanor Dolbon of Ann's Grove, County, Cork, Ireland.

As a boy of ten years of age, the first Chancellor of the University joined the navy and was awarded a medal for his conduct at the battle of Camperdown. But the medal must have been won after the exercise of (Continued on Page 4)

COMMERCE CLUB

The Commerce Club will hold their first smoker for the term in the Music Room, Hart House, at 8 p.m. to-night. They are very fortunate in securing Warden Bickersteth as speaker, as he spent his summer in Germany and will have many interesting incidents to relate.

Mr. H. D. Ross, K.C., D.C.L., of Montreal, is expected to speak in the near future on the subject of "The Defects in Our World Monetary System and the Remedies".

Re Addresses

Every University student is asked to make sure, at once that his correct Toronto address and telephone number are entered upon his registration card in the office of the University Registrar, Simcoe Hall, or of his College Registrar or Faculty Secretary. The University Directory is now being prepared for the press and it is of the greatest importance that all addresses and telephone numbers be correct.

GERMANY'S DESTINY IN HANDS OF YOUTH

Industrial Chemical Club Hears
About a Reborn Germany

MILITARISM NOW RAMPANT

At an exceptionally well attended meeting of the Industrial Chemical Club at Hart House last evening, Willson Woodside, B.A.Sc., of the Department of Engineering Drawing, Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, vividly outlined the German situation as he found it during his extensive travels in Central Europe for the past three summers.

Germany, Mr. Woodside pointed out, has turned the clock back and adopted most of the old militaristic tendencies that prevailed before the establishment of the Republic. Under the Nazi programme, the affairs of the country are in the hands of a group of youthful leaders, who have been fired with the apparent oppression of the Versailles Treaty, the seeming bondage of the nation crushed with reparations. Carried away by the enthusiasm of Adolph Hitler, whom they have elevated from a mortal leader to a new Mahomet or possibly a demi-god, they have spread their propaganda to include every activity and interest. The press, the theatre, educational institutions, even the offices and street corners have become the means of rapidly furthering their irrational and headlong dash for purity of race, and the return of the highly militaristic and arrogant Germany of pre-war days.

"The first cause of their educational programme states that 'Military training is essential for the development of a good German citizen'. Duels have become again an important factor to the German student and 'Germany will be fighting someone in the not so very distant future. It is impossible to evade the question. The Nazi policy definitely anticipates the annexing of Austria, and it would be impossible to alter this intention without an immense loss of prestige in the eyes of the German people. Hitler has aroused his followers to a high pitch with a policy that is based more on mob psychology than sane reasoning, and torch light parades will not for any length of time give vent to the restrained (Continued on Page 4)

STATE MEDICINE IS INEVITABLE SAY MEDICAL FACULTY MEMBERS

Bruce Murray Elected
New S.A.C. President

Bruce Murray was elected yesterday afternoon to the presidency of the joint executive of the Students' Administrative Council. Mr. Murray was President of the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society in 1930-31 and the same year was vice-president of the joint executive of the S.A.C. The new president was a member of the committee which drew the constitution of the student body. At present Mr. Murray is with the Royal Canadian Institute.

State Medicine is in Process of Evolution Declares
Dr. Ryerson

ADOPTED IN EUROPE

European and English Doctors Better Off Under System

Concerning the controversial question of State Medicine which was reopened by Doctor E. A. MacDonald in his presidential address before the Toronto Academy of Medicine yesterday in the Royal York, opinion among Varsity medics seems fairly uniform. Dr. MacDonald intends to show the Government its duty, and he does not lack supporters. "State Medicine is the coming thing," "It is inevitable," are some of the views expressed by members of the Faculty of Medicine, including Dr. Ryerson. Although not one of the doctors interviewed by The Varsity had heard Dr. MacDonald's address, this fact did not seriously affect their decision. Dr. Ryerson explained, "Both the Dean and I think State Medicine is evolving, not revolving," he said. "The evolution has been steady and is being an additional impetus by these years of depression. If an address such as the one that was given last night had been delivered ten years ago, every one would have been amazed. Now it is heard and discussed calmly." Dr. Ryerson went on to point out that 23 countries of Europe have state control of medicine in one form or another. He cited the success of the English panel system instituted by Lloyd George in 1911, which is similar to Dr. MacDonald's proposal for 800 persons to one general practitioner. Dr. Ryerson stated that of the 50,000 British doctors approximately 1,500 are on panels and that their services are for those with incomes less than 1200 dollars, that is, indigents.

S.C.A. Corner

The need in our time for a religion which is able to adapt itself to changing needs, which is related to actual life, and which can give an answer to the great problems of suffering, injustice, and evil in the world, was the subject of a sermon preached last Sunday morning to the Conference of members of the Student Christian Movement Executives in the University of Toronto. Mr. Bob Clark of Emmanuel was the speaker at this Conference, which met for the week-end, September 30th, October 1st at the Y.M.C.A. boys' camps at Nornal.

The recognition of this same need in student life, and an endeavour to meet it, lay beneath much of the discussion of those two days. The plans of the S.C.M. in the University and its programme for the coming year were carefully discussed. It was decided that study groups, week-end conferences, and supper parties with guest speakers should continue to be an important part of the programme. Such outstanding men as Dr. John R. Mott, Rev. William Paton, and Professor King Gordon are expected to visit the Toronto S.C.M. this autumn. The announcement of an international conference, unique in its kind, to be held at McMaster University, Hamilton, during the Christmas holidays, was met with great enthusiasm. Fifty students from United States and fifty from Canada are to represent different countries in an endeavour to come to some understanding of problems, social, political and international now being faced in those countries. In anticipation of this Conference, in (Continued on Page 4)

STUDENT LEAGUE SPLITS ON POLICY

S. Gampel and B. Borsook Are No Longer Members of League

GUILTY OF "SABOTAGE"

Trends in world politics are once more reflected in local academic circles in the split that has materialized in the Student League of Canada, radical student organization. It is reported that two of the prime movers in the organization have been forced out as a result of doctrinal schism. S. Gampel and B. Borsook, who were two of the stalwarts of the organization last year and who were largely the spokesmen for the intellectual ferment that the League represented, are no longer members of the society because they have been found guilty of sabotage.

There were discussions in the ranks of the local camp Marxians last year when, at a meeting of the League the members renounced the offensive attitude of several members of the executive and decided that the proper approach to the students in general had not been pursued. At that time Mr. S. Ryerson led the forces of revolt against the offending executives. He pointed out that the communism of interest between students and proletarians was not skilfully enough portrayed, in that the policy of the League had lacked the proper subtlety. Mr. Borsook and Mr. Gampel, who are disciples of Leon D. Trotsky, were at variance with the sympathies of the Stalinist majority. They are of the (Continued on Page 4)

Thirty Nine Beers is Bad Enough But Ink is Real Essential Stuff

By Ken G. Robb

Many a thirsty fountain pen is to be found in the environs of the Little Red School House these days. For many years it has been a custom to maintain a bottle of ink in the Engineering Society's Store, where parched pens could be slaked to their fullest extent. Last year a neat sign of "I cent a shot" was appended to the container of this essential fluid, and this department did a rushing business, as the ink flowed out, and the pennies flowed in with a merry jingle.

Unfortunately, however, oversight or perhaps economic conditions and a lack of space have caused the discontinuance of this valuable service for this year, and the engineers are searching high and wide for a convenient and inexpensive filling station. Already a fund is under way to provide the necessary accommodation, but the promoters are experiencing difficulty in obtaining the required finances. Rumor has it that the government has been approached with regards a grant, and it is considered likely that this important matter will be considered at the next political brawl. In the meantime, the School boys have reverted to the use of the plebeian graphite stub.

THE CASE FOR STATE MEDICAL SERVICE

Reverberations may be expected throughout the medical profession in this province as the result of statements made by Dr. E. A. MacDonald, newly elected president of the Academy of Medicine, in his inaugural address Tuesday night. Dr. MacDonald declared in no uncertain terms that the medical profession could no longer continue to provide free service for indigents; either municipalities must be forced to bear the cost, or the Ontario government must institute a socialised state medical service.

As Dr. MacDonald pointed out, doctors are being called on to do as much work as they have ever done, their professional expenses are just as high, but they are finding it more and more difficult to collect payment for their services, due to the high proportion of indigent cases. Some doctors, he claimed, are not even receiving enough to pay their expenses, and are forced to fall back on savings to carry on. Yet common humanity makes it impossible for them to refuse their services to those who cannot pay.

On the other hand, the condition of the poor and near-poor is becoming daily more serious, and neither the municipalities nor the provincial government have more than begun to meet their pressing needs. To quote Dr. MacDonald:

"This irresponsibility for health matters is shown most pitifully in the lack of sufficient funds to carry out possible means of preventing diphtheria. Every child in the city of Toronto should be thoroughly toxoided, both school children and pre-school children, a matter of 120,000 children, not the sixteen or twenty thousand now toxoided (by the starved health department) but the entire junior population, and we would not have a repetition of last year's scene again of 153 cases of diphtheria (straight and mixed) with a mortality of 13 deaths in our isolation hospital against that of Hamilton where the children have all been toxoided and there have been no deaths.

"During the past three years, the medical profession has been exceedingly hard hit by the depression, one may almost say wrecked. Previously, the Canadian people were seen by medical men in the early stages of disease and steps were then taken to ameliorate the conditions and effect cures where possible. This service was paid for to a great extent. Since the depression and lack of employment has become so marked, the Canadian people are not consulting their doctors until disease has a very firm grip upon them and symptoms are very pronounced and condition critical. Much suffering results and many valuable lives are too often lost from this absolute neglect."

These words must be hammered into the heads of our representatives till even the most hide-bound of them realize their significance. Not only are lives being lost and much needless suffering endured, but the health and strength of thousands of our people in city and country alike are being slowly undermined. The reports of medical health officers have already made this clear. In innumerable working men's and workless men's homes, lack of proper nourishing food for parents and children and the absence of proper medical attention even in pre-natal confinements are working to degrade us physically to a nation of second-raters. These conditions, if not rapidly ameliorated, are bound to produce results which will not be eradicated for decades after the present depression has lifted.

Dr. MacDonald has presented a comprehensive plan for the organization of a state medical service. It is to apply to all people with an annual income of $2,000 or less. General practitioners and specialists are to be appointed (at suggested salaries of $6,000 and $8,000 to $10,000 respectively) to provide free service to these people. The money needed is to be raised by a municipal tax and turned in to the provincial treasurer, who will pay it to the medical profession subject to three conditions: (1) The free choice of physician by patients. (2) The maintenance of the essential personal relation between patient and physician. (3) Continuation of medical services on a fee basis for those who prefer the present method. The whole system to be administered by a board of medical men representing the government (as the Minister of Health), the five provincial districts of Toronto, Hamilton, London, Ottawa and Kingston, and Fort William, Sault Ste. Marie and Sudbury, and the Ontario Medical Association.

There may be objections to portions of Dr. MacDonald's proposals. Differences of opinion as to details of organization and administration can be ironed out as the system takes form. What is of immediate importance is that it be widely recognised that some such system must be organised, that this question is fully as pressing as that of relief for the unemployed. It is to be hoped that the University's Faculty of Medicine will lend whole-hearted support to the project.

THE CANADIAN MICROBE

The subject of to-day's book review is a very interesting volume which we picked up while delving in the murky fastnesses of the University Library: Mr. Meeson's Will by Rider Haggard, vintage of 1888, with sixteen illustrations.

It is really the illustrations that make the book. The frontispiece portrays a young lady of gentle breeding obviously the heroine seated on a large rock while a rough but kindly sailor tattooed Mr. Meeson's will across her shoulder-blades. Right away we make up our minds that this is going to be pretty hot stuff.

A little farther on we see a most forceful picture entitled "Mr. Meeson Tearing Up His Will". This is not, needless to say, the same will as we previously saw being inscribed on the heroine, especially as Mr. Meeson—a robust old gentleman whose clothes have apparently been pressed beneath a very bumpy mattress—is not exactly tearing it, but seems rather determined to chew it up piecemeal and swallow the pieces. Clearly a determined old gent, as is borne out by a neat bit of description on the opposite page: It seems that he "deliberately rent it into fragments with his strong fingers, and then completed its destruction by tearing it with his big white teeth. This done, he mixed the little pieces up, threw them upon the floor, and stamped upon them with an air of malignity."

A gentler note is introduced, however, by a better illustration: "Augusta gently lifted the sheet, revealing the sweet face of little Jeannie in her coffin." There sure enough is Augusta, the heroine, clad in a long black gown and an hour-glass figure, lifting the sheet for the edification of a young gentleman registering astonishment behind a walrus moustache. We are not quite sure who little Jeannie was or why all this pother about her sweet face, but it was always good literature in the eighties to give the ladies at least one opportunity to loosen their stays and have a good, satisfactory weeping jag, and little Jeannie has filled the bill in a couple of hundred other novels, so she ought to be good for one more round.

As to the book itself, we have only read one chapter, describing the tattooing on the desert island and Augusta's shoulder-blade, but that's worth the (Continued on Page 4)

TENNIS TOURNEY SEES FAST PLAY

Hermant Defeats Eaton After Being Extended in Two Tiring Games

QUARTER FINALS REACHED

After a little delay the fourth round of the Interfaculty Tennis Tournament was played yesterday morning on the Toronto Tennis Club courts and produced some of the best tennis of the whole tourney. The singles has been reduced to the quarter finals at the expense of some excellent players.

Of the four singles matches played the fastest and hardest was that between Crowson and Shields. The first set going to 10-8, saw both men come from behind to even it up with hard drives or tricky court play. Both men used a mixed game, not depending on one or two strokes for most of their points, Shields especially using a chop stroke at unexpected moments with deadly effect. In spite of this the match was not decided until the last point as Crowson fought hard and cleverly to make the issue always doubtful.

Sid Hermant, last year's champion, was extended almost to the limit to take his match from Alan Eaton who, although almost run out, fought it out to the end.

Continuing his smooth play of the last two days Bill Pigott took his match from Godefroy but not without some trouble. Godefroy plays a tricky game that takes a bit of getting used to and he extended Bill a bit before finally going under.

Davies and Fenner both played a species of waiting game, drawing each other out of position before making a kill. Lobbing was frequent in this match with an occasional drive, but there was not the hard, fast-driving speed that characterized some of the other matches.

In the doubles the Pigott-Hermant combination had little difficulty in defeating the Griffith-Gray team.

Doubles: Pigott-Hermant defeated Griffith-Gray 6-1, 5-1.

Singles: Fenner def. Davies 6-3, 9-7; Pigott def. Godefroy 6-3, 6-2; Shields def. Crowson 10-8, 6-3; Hermant def. Eaton 6-4, 6-2.

Draw for Thursday—no change of time will be made:

Singles—11-30, Hermant v. Shields; 12-30, Pigott v. Fenner. 3 out of 5 sets.

Doubles—10-30, Davies-Godefroy v. Grower-Newman; 2 p.m., Pigott-Hermant v. Tomlinson-Eaton.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By B. J. McGuire

With the kickoff on Saturday the intercollegiate football series will be officially opened. The senior team will journey to Montreal to do battle with the McGill Redmen. The intermediates will make their debut at their home grounds when they tangle with Queen's. This promises to be a real battle and is carded in front of the Argo-Montreal game. This is an exceptional opportunity for the football followers to see the football season officially ushered in. The two leagues, intercollegiate and Big Four opening in a double header at the Stadium should attract a real crowd.

The game at McGill is certainly arousing plenty of interest. From reports it would appear that the Red team are the team to beat in the intercollegiate series. Don Young, captain and flying wing for McGill, has returned to action after being absent with injuries. This is certainly a break for Shaughnessy's squad as Young is one of the best flying wings in the Dominion. Westman, who was slated to do the kicking for the Red team, has had to be relieved by Richard, so this gives Sinclair an edge in the hoofing duties. Westman and Sinclair were considered the best kickers in college football.

Lou Carroll's intermediates, although they have not had a chance as yet to show their wares, look very impressive. In the scrimmage practice they can hold their own with the senior squad. Work and plenty of it is Lou's formula for producing results. Incidentally, Warren Stevens doesn't appear to be too well satisfied with the work the Blue team have been doing. The team has been playing heads-up ball so far and it would be a bad time to go into a slump.

The junior team looked rather bad in their exhibition game with Balmby Beach. Naturally they are badly in need of practice but then so were the Beaches. The Junior Blues gathered up 11 points in the first half but when the Beaches got going they were too good for Varsity. Given another few minutes and it would have been good-bye ball game for Varsity. This squad appear to have a lot of good material on hand but they don't appear to be organized. They have the goods but can't deliver it. Given another week, however, and Laing will make plenty of improvement on his team. However, he will have to if he hopes to duplicate the feats of last season's juniors.

The University rowing crew are holding a final workout at 11 o'clock this morning in preparation for their annual race with McGill. The crew will entrain at 4.30 this afternoon for Montreal where they will polish off their training in the Lachine Canal. This year's crew is the lightest in years, being 20 lbs. per man lighter than last year's champions. Coach Loudon is still the popular mentor who has brought six consecutive victories to Toronto, and there is a prevailing feeling of optimism in his ability to repeat again this year even with his lighter crew.

The annual tennis tournament is rapidly drawing to a close and the question of who will possess the McEachren Cup will soon be settled. There are remaining in the tournament the choice of the players. Pigott, Hermant, Fenner and Shields are slated to play this morning. There is certain to be provided free of charge, some excellent games of tennis for anyone who cares to go up to the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club to-day or Saturday.

INTERMEDIATES PLAY HERE THIS SATURDAY

Lou Carroll is the Coach of the Intermediates
This Year

JUNIORS PLAY ON 14th

The first whistle at Varsity Stadium on Saturday afternoon will start the Varsity intermediates off in quest of an intercollegiate intermediate football title. Arrayed at the opposite end of the field will be the Tricolours of Queen's University who will be doing everything in their power to ring up a victory and take the lead in the intermediate series.

Guiding the destinies of the intermediates is Lou Carroll, who built up a reputation for himself by bringing the last year's junior team to a Dominion championship. Lou is one of the most popular coaches around this seat of learning and there is every reason to believe that with the material on hand he will have a team in there for the finals again this year.

The personnel of the team is not certain as yet but there is an abundance of material with which to fill every position well. Bob Ishister from Hamilton Delta is the answer to the coach's prayer for a kicker. This husky lad can hit the line as well as kick. He originally was lined up with the juniors but was moved up.

The junior team is a promising looking squad which appears to have plenty of talented players. They are badly in need of practice, which is to be expected since they have only been working together for two weeks. Grady Laing, who is in charge of this department of the football faculty, is working the boys hard in order to be in condition for the opening game on October 14 when they meet Queen's at Varsity Stadium.

BASKETBALL MEN GET WARMED UP

Last Year's Senior Team Will Recruit Many New Players

GOLD EXPECTED TO SHINE

Football is and will be king on the campus for some weeks yet but during this time the boys will be warming up for a strenuous basketball season. At the helm again this year are Coaches Mac McCutcheon and Warren Stevens, who in the light of their successful season last year stand more than an even chance of bringing McGill's supremacy to an end and annexing an intercollegiate title.

However, Coaches McCutcheon and Stevens are faced with the very difficult task of rebuilding as four of last year's regular squad, including the whole forward line of Allison, Ford and Collins, will be missing from the line-up this year. In addition they will be minus the services of Don Wood, stellar defenceman, and Caplan, whose decided improvement at the end of the season would have made him a valuable asset for this year's team. Wagman, youthful forward, will also be ineligible for this year's competition.

With the loss of the above mentioned stalwarts, Coach McCutcheon intends to build his team around the two star defencemen of last year's squad, Sniderman and Gold. Sniderman's scoring punch and defensive ability are well known to all who have seen him play and Phil Gold in his first year in senior company, proved himself a real star, and his last minute baskets pulled several games out of the proverbial fire. Willis, substitute centre man last year, will be groomed for a regular position at this post.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

Definite word has been received that the Intercollegiate Tennis Tournament will be held at Queen's on October 27-28, which coincides with the week-end of the Queen's - Varsity rugby game. Once the date is fixed, the time seems ever so much nearer—it may only be an illusion but nevertheless, stick to the tennis!

Every now and again in the past there has been criticism of the way games have been reported. Occasionally, but only very occasionally, a score has been incorrectly given, a circumstance which causes a great deal of resentment on all sides. It certainly must be very disappointing, not to say annoying, to reach for a Varsity and hunt up a write-up which you counted on showing your dotting parents and countless friends, only to find yourself completely left out and not even listed in the line-up, when, deep down in your heart of hearts, you are quite convinced you did pretty well by your team.

All of which only goes to prove that an adequate sports staff is absolutely necessary for the satisfaction of all concerned. It is quite impossible to have games covered, and accurate and detailed reports sent in, if people are not interested enough to sign up for such activity. There are a great many who are interested and would like to do such work but who, owing to an inferiority complex or a lazy streak or just that amount of push required to make such a decision, have neglected to take the first steps. Once the first steps are taken you are bound to find it more than just "interesting".

If the heads of the different athletic clubs along with those people who are first to criticize inaccuracies would see that they have a representative on the staff of The Varsity we believe that in future, write-ups would meet the approval of everyone—after all, a very difficult feat. It does not monopolize your time to the exclusion of any other activity (we said "any" other activity, madam), it is a lot of fun, and—think of the nice people you meet—? . . . (page Mr. . . .)

A list is posted in the Women's Varsity Office, Room 42A, U.C. Those roused to action by the little pep talk just given, kindly sign as soon as possible. Thank you . . .

VICTORIA COLLEGE LITERARY SOCIETY HOLDS A MEETING

The Women's Literary Society of Victoria College held their first fall meeting yesterday afternoon in Wymwood. Tea, at which Mrs. Brown, wife of the president of Victoria, presided, was served at four-thirty to the crowd of girls, freshmen and seniors alike, who filled the mellow rooms. After which there followed a most vital and entertaining address by Mrs. Creighton, lecturer in English, on the importance of literature as an integral part of life.

The society then proceeded with the business of the day—the election of two representatives, one from each of the first and second years. Frances Campbell was elected representative from the first year and Helen Siner, from the second.

Helen Robertson provided a pleasant interlude by playing one of Chopin's best-loved nocturnes. Doctor Ford is to be Honorary President of the society, which this year comprises four groups. Mme. de Kresz is to continue her popular musical study group and the art study group is to be again directed by Mr. Arthur Lismer.

BASKETBALL MEN GET WARME UP

sees great possibilities in Normie Newman, high scorer for last year's junior team, as well as in Himel, Levy, Prince and Applebaum, mainstays of the intermediate team.

In the opinion of McCutcheon, the success of this year's team depends on the showing of the new men who have come to Varsity this year. He is exceedingly fortunate in that players of the type of Dr. Moe Mitchell, Red Gordon and Bill Bodrug have signified their intentions to come out for the team. These men are players of known quality and are all capable of the very highest type of basketball.
Dr. Mitchell, who intends returning for a post-graduate course, along with Red Gordon, starred with Riverdale Grads last season while Bill Bodrug, a former Assistant Physical Director at the Central Y.M.C.A., has received his amateur card, and will be out with the team. Also at the University are W. G. Neill and A. Hamilton, who played basketball with Manitoba University and Lethbridge, respectively.
Russ Boettger has also returned to his Alma Mater, and will be available for the team.

STUDENT BODY LACKS INTEREST IN CARILLON

simpler compositions which do not require adjustment to the short range, are much more effective and melodious than more difficult compositions which must be cut up to fit into two octaves.
Mr. Richardson explained the difference between chimes and bells.

"There are three types," he said,
"the English peal, for which the bells make a complete swing, the American chimes, and the Belgian carillon such as we have here in Hart House tower.
The carillon bell does not swing. The sound is produced by a hammer swung against the bell."

"I prefer to play the music that people will understand best," he added.
"Belgian carillonneurs play compositions difficult to understand. I think people appreciate the carillon most when they can anticipate each note of the selection. I may add I am glad the University insists on the correct spelling of carillonneur. Most newspaper men make the mistake of spelling it with one 'n'."

So far as The Varsity could discover around the University, the chief beneficiaries of the programmes are the American tourists. The Sunday afternoon recitals conclude at the end of October, and are resumed the beginning of April, when students are studying for final examinations. If short programmes were given some time between one and two p.m. week days, Spring and Fall, when hundreds of students were on the grounds, the student body would have as much opportunity as American tourists to enjoy the music of the bells. Another thing—we can broadcast from Hart House. Why not let all Toronto hear our carillon?

BULLETIN BOARD

cially invited.

LIBRARY RECIEVES GIFT OF VOLUMES

practically the only recognizable part.
Mr. Wallace, the Librarian, when interviewed by The Varsity, expressed his opinion to the effect that the three historical atlases were of exceptional value as well as of interest. Mr.
Wallace then turned to a reproduction of a Portuguese map of the world, printed in 1502 and contained in the largest volume of the three and drew attention to the name of "terra Labrador" marked in the vicinity of Greenland, explaining that the word Labrador is of Portuguese origin and was shifted to the coast line now bearing the name. According to Mr. Wallace it is generally accepted that the decisions of the Canadian-Labrador case were based on Map 11, which is now being framed and soon will be hung within the walls of the library.

PORTRAIT ADDED TO FINE GROUP

a good deal of self-control. There is a tradition in the family that, just after the battle had commenced, the captain of one of the ships turned to find the terrified child had taken refuge behind him. "What are you doing here, Mr. DeBlaquiere?" said the captain. "Please, Sir, I am frightened," said the boy who was afterwards to become the first Chancellor of our University. "Go to your post, Mr. De-Blaquiere," said the captain. He went, and won his medal.

Mr. DeBlaquiere left the navy early in life and was induced to come to Canada. He settled first near Kingston and lived there for some time, then moved to Toronto. He died of heart failure in 1869 and was buried at Toronto.

The DeBlaquieres were a Huguenot family who fled to England on the revocation of the Edict of Nantes.

to establish this memorial fund of half a million dollars in the Faculty of which the bequest will be used has not yet been reached. Mr. Dunlop intimated. Miss Walberg was born in Sweden.

STUDENT LEAGUE SPLITS ON POLICY

opinion that the revolution has been hindered in the Soviet Union by the growth of the Stalinist bureaucracy, that the group which now dominates the communists should try to work world revolution, that a united front with the socialists should be encouraged to fight the fascist menace and that communists should try and work from within the ranks of the less radical factions instead of forming separate organizations.

The C.P. denies that it has betrayed the revolution and maintains that by ensuring the success of the Soviet Union it is in reality achieving the victorious prosecution of the revolution.
Many members of the Student League graduated last year and this split further weakens their society. As yet there has been no announcement as to future plans.

S. C. A. CORNER

tense preparation is to be carried on through study groups and special meetings.

Around a bonfire in the evening the trend the S.C.M. should take during the coming year was discussed. Many felt that in these chaotic times students are seeking direction for their own lives and that if the S.C.M. is to be a dynamic force in the University it must be relevant to this need.

PACIFISM WILL COLLAPSE ON WAR, SAY STUENTS

on the campus, it undoubtedly would result in a disturbing clash with the
C.O.T.C."

Herb Higgins, III C. & F., declared he would be prepared to fight if the conflict involved the British Empire.
A true economist, Mr. Higgins would uphold economic liberty with the bayonet. He also was of the opinion that present-day pacifism would die a sudden death under the onslaught of organized propaganda.

"Why not advertise war as the curse it is?" suggested Les Rowntree, II Political Economy. "It could be called 'public welfare' advertising sponsored by the government and would educate the public to the curse of war. This would have far greater results than the pacifistic pledges that university students sign, which would melt away before the patriotic pleas of some politician for war who is probably hand in glove with armament manufacturers."

Max Patrick, IV U.C., felt that a pacifist organization "would probably arouse an antagonistic spirit of jingo-ism throughout the country and would create an opinion of the University similar to, but equally as false as, such movements as the atheism controversy stirred up a few years ago by Ontario newspapers. Pacifism is an individual conviction and not a group concept."

Two former C.O.T.C. members,
Hugh Bedford-Jones and Reid Tilley,
III Trinity, admitted the value of a pacifistic organization in peace time, but felt that in the stress of war such principles would be forgotten. They did not feel that any such action undertaken by University of Toronto students would have much influence on the nation at large.

Standing on the Library steps, thoughtfully smoking his heavy briar, Bernie Shaeffer, II Law, mused deeply over the problem, then uttered his opinion: "They wouldn't take me anyway. I've got flat feet"

STATE MEDICINE COMING OCEANIC MEDICAL DON'S

are under state control of medicine," was the view of Dr. Grant. Asked if he considered state control involved loss of personal interest in patients by doctors, he replied that while this arrangement obviated the spur that competition gives to any line of endeavour, still it was of importance for all classes of the population to be assured of adequate medical attention. Dr.
Grant remarked that the difference between the English system and that proposed by Dr. MacDonald, the new Academy president, could be accounted for by the differing conditions in the two countries. "It is expensive to be sick in Canada," he concluded, "and in the West several hospitals have had to be closed through lack of funds."

price alone. One passage somehow stuck in our memory (possibly because we jotted it down on our cuff).
It describes the offer of Augusta (her last name, by the way, is Smithers) to undergo the process and Mr. Meeson's reply:

"Yes," said Mr. Meeson, "that is an excellent idea. You are young and strong, and as there is lots of food here, I dare say you will take a long time to die. You might even live for some months."

That is all we have read, but it is

GERMANY'S DESTINY IN HANDS OF YOUTH

emotions of his thousands of storm troops.
"Germans have many admirable qualities, and are very clever," said
Mr. Woodside, "but they lack ordinary English common sense." He pointed out further that the Germans had a nature peculiar to themselves, that lent itself to an expansive and ruthless militaristic policy.

When questioned as to the validity of current stories of anti-Semitic atrocities, Mr. Woodside gave some startling concrete examples of the prevalent exaggeration and pointed out the false source of various photographs that purported to depict actual Nazi activities, that originated in entirely different settings. "They are not lopping arms and legs from the Jews or burying one in the cemetery every night," he said. "But while the campaign is somewhat abating at the present time, there will always be a relentless drive to oust them from German life."

At the conclusion of the address,
Professor E. G. R. Ardagh contrasted
Germany as it was when he last visited it, and amused the audience with some witty remarks about his journey. A vigorous "Toike Oike" and light refreshments terminated a successful evening.

VARSITY AND MCGILL MEET IN MONTREAL TO-MORROW

MCGILL OARSMEN CONFIDENT OF ENDING VARSITY'S STRING OF SIX STRAIGHT VICTORIES

Redmen a Much Heavier Team Than in Recent Years

GALES IS STRDKE

Try-Outs Reveal Speed and Smoothness of Stroke

By L. Hyams

Special to "The Varsity" (CIP)
A comprehensive survey of the 1933 edition of Coach Urban Molmans' rowing squad elicits the fact that the crew flying the marlet at the bow will be considerably heavier than any crew the Red have boasted in years. The average poundage of the crew man for man will be some ten pounds heavier than the 1932 edition. This fact is significant in view of the fact that the race is run upstream against a current of a mile and a half per hour.

The Lakeside training quarters of the club have been a bustle of feverish activity during the past month or so. Practices have been held with regularity for the past three weeks and the remaining three days or so should suffice to put the men in the traditional pink of condition.

Coach Molmans has the eight plow up the canal for a distance of four or even six miles, following them by car and timing them at mile and two mile intervals. These times have been kept secret, but the smile on his face reveals that he is satisfied.

New blood has found its way into the ranks of the McGill crew. Of the nine men holding down positions in the boat seven of them are veterans at the game and two are new to the team this year.

The veterans on the crew are: Lorne Gales, Harold Elliott, Joe Blumer, Odric Smith, George Jose, Harold Campbell and Bill Carter. The newcomers are Louis Johnson and F. DuBois. Johnson, who, in the short time he has been at rowing has shown himself to be highly adept at the game, holds position number three. DuBois fits in well at number eight.

Lorne Gales has been in the boat for several years and has his stroke (Continued on Page 4)

TENNIS FINALS PLAYED TO-MORROW

Shields and Pigott to Contend for the Interfaculty Championship

BLACK AND SHIELDS WIN

With only one match left to decide the interfaculty tennis championship the number of competitors has diminished from 64 till now only two men remain undefeated. Shields and Pigott are the only two players left in the contest. These two men face each other on Saturday morning with the interfaculty championship at stake.

The draw for yesterday brought together Shields and Hermant. It was a good exhibition of tennis with Shields winning the match 6-1, 6-1, 6-2. In the other singles match Pigott won handily from Fenner, taking three sets 6-2, 6-2, 6-1.

In the Doubles Black and Shields won over Davies and Godefroy 6-1, 6-1, 6-2.

To-day Tomlinson and Eaton team up against Pigott and Hermant in the doubles. Shields and Pigott play the deciding match on Saturday at 10 a.m.

Blue Oarsmen Determined to Keep String of Wins Unbroken

SHDW FINE FORM

To Use Same Long, Sweeping Stroke of Last Year

Months and months of practice, and to-morrow it will all be over. Already our intercollegiate rowing crew is in Montreal familiarising itself with the difficult upstream course of the La-chemie Canal in preparation for the two-mile grind on Saturday afternoon. Then the fair-haired stalwarts will be called upon to ply their blue-striped oars as they have rarely done in the past. A title is at stake, but it is more than a title. Six times in the past six years the University of Toronto Rowing Club have left their McGill rivals trailing in their wake and each time the Redmen return, more determined than ever, to end the long accumulation of Varsity victories. This year, according to all indications, their challenge will call out a supreme effort on the part of the local oarsmen if they expect to stretch their spray-won victories into the lucky number. The Blues are a lighter outfit than has been presented to their hosts for several years and are practically a new aggregation.

But Coach Loudon is still the guiding hand in U. of T. rowing endeavours and under his care and attention every ounce of available energy and skill will be submitted by the chosen nine. This has been the record of this popular and veteran coach in the past. And with the excellent material with which he has to work the challenge (Continued on Page 4)

GERMANY BELIEVES HITLER SAVIOUR

German Ideals Admirable but Methods Loathsome and Unfair

SITUATION PECULIAR

"Germany emerged from the Great War a thoroughly beaten nation. Now, a man has arisen whom the country believes to be divinely sent, a man who will lead it out of its crisis, back to its position as a great nation. It is supporting Hitler." These are the words of Warden Bickelsteth in recounting to the Commerce Club last evening his personal experiences and views resultant from his trip to Germany this summer.

One leaves Germany with a feeling of tremendous perplexity, Mr. Bickelsteth pointed out. There is so much going on behind the scenes that it cannot all be recognized and taken into consideration. There is something magnificent about their experiment, something which must be admired, but their methods are foul and unspeakable. Their leaders ought to be ashamed of their actions, but how they could accomplish their revolutionary ends without these atrocities is not known. Their explanation as to why we cannot understand their attitude towards the Jews is concisely stated: "You have not Jews as we have." ## SENTENCES FIT MAN, NOT CRIME

Criminals Convicted of Same Offence May Receive Different Sentences

INMATES MUST WORK

"I want to emphasize the fact that ten men charged with exactly the same crime might quite justifiably be given ten different sentences," said Col. W. H. Price, Attorney General for Ontario, during the course of an interview granted to The Varsity. That, with all conditions of the case before him, the presiding judge alone is in a position to properly impose sentence, is his conviction.

The Hon. George H. Chalmers, the Provincial Secretary, expressed similar views. "Sentences imposed in our courts fit the criminal, not the crime," he stated. "A man sentenced to a term not exceeding two years less a day, is assigned to a provincial institution."

There is a separate institution for first offenders, it was learned, and in all cases there is complete segregation of prisoners bearing any contagious disease.

In the Guelph reformatory, where only first offenders are confined, the inmates are afforded the opportunity to receive both academic and practical education.

"Every man in the institution must work," stated Mr. Chalmers, "and this work is carried on in the mornings."

INCONSEQUENCE

For a lonely student, whose existence is usually more gregarious than the average business person, holiday time is the cruellest part of the year. To see friends, and then there, planning jaunts, gathering bags, catching trains, leaves him, whose home is a thousand miles away, sunk in the deepest state of melancholy. Even his usual haunts look like deserted villages.

But to be a lonely student in an enormous city is just so many degrees worse. There is no soul to commiserate with, to offer compassion. The world is a cold and sunless one.

That could be a picture of a London student. But the English people, a dutifully charitable race, could not allow such a one to rest on their consciences. Whereas Canadians regret, we merely shrug our shoulders and do nothing; the English regret, and immediately form an English Organisation of volunteer workers and do remarkable things.

Here is an example. It began in the war when Colonial soldiers were on leave and had nowhere to go. The same organisation is still carried on

There will be a meeting of the ushers today at 5 p.m. in the Debates Room. Passes will be given out and assignments of location made. A full attendance is necessary.

RADICAL POLITICS MARK PARLIAMENT

Speech from Throne Displays Marked Socialist Tendencies

GOVERNMENT SUSTAINED

Socialism and radical politics have invaded University College with a vengeance. Yesterday a socialist party occupying the government benches successfully defended the speech from the throne in the initial meeting of the U. C. Parliamentary Club against a combination of Liberals, Tories, state socialists, anarchists and syndicalists. When the vote of the house was taken, a deadlock resulted. The speaker then intervened and declared the motion carried.

Parliament opened with all due ceremony shortly after four o'clock. The Speaker, Mr. Bell, was unanimously elected for the year and ushered His Excellency the Governor-General into the parliamentary chambers. Conservative minded members of the opposition were shocked by the radical trend of the speech from the throne. Economic planning and control of industry were striking intimations given of the government programme.

Attacking the government programme vehemently as leader of the opposition, Max Patrick termed it a mild, wishy-washy socialism. He emphatically charged that the speech from the throne erred in the omission of a programme for fundamental problems such as unemployment, and the farms.

Eloquently mouthing his protest against the speech from the throne and the socialist government, Mr. Patrick termed the speech a thoughtless, puerile, vague generalisation containing nothing concrete, and a blot on the face of

Big Blue Team Ready and Fit for Struggle with McGill

A STRONG TEAM
Westman and Richert Fill Former Need of Booters

By Frank Gorman

Special to "The Varsity" (CIP)
Coach Frank Shaughnessy's 1933 edition of the McGill football team is hard at work in preparation for the opening of the intercollegiate schedule with Varsity on Saturday. The Redmen have engaged in two pre-season games, losing the first to Westward Intermediates by a score of 6-3. Last Saturday, however, they administered a 17-0 trouncing to R.M.C. and showed considerable improvement over their first appearance.

Monday night they commenced the final week's training but did not do anything of a strenuous nature, being content to take it easy and limber up, finishing off with a light signal drill. Tuesday they commenced to buckle down once more and "Shag" directed them through a strenuous session that included everything from calisthenics to a scrimmage with the McGill intermediates. Special emphasis was placed on the functioning of the line while the backfielders were drilling on catching and passing with Ralph St. Germain, former McGill kicking star.

McGill's worry of previous years, namely, the lack of a dependable booter, seems to be well taken care of this year with Herbie Westman and Tom Richert, hoisting the pigskin in spectacular fashion. Westman performed last year with the freshman team and previously starred with a local high school squad. Richert is an American student studying Medicine and has shown that he has the necessary class in his work to date. The former Occidental College star has taken aptly to the Canadian game and will be an important cog in this year's Redmen.

At Krikowski, stellar performer of previous years, will direct the team from the quarterback position. He is noted for his plunging and forward passing ability. Gil Gilbert and Bobby Craig of last year's outfit are back again and working well on the backfield, along with Johnny Riddell, also of last year's team. Either Bud Free- (Continued on Page 3)

STUDENTS FAVOUR CARILLON RECITALS

Problem of Suitable Time Being Considered by President

SUGGEST SUNDAYS

To have the carillon in Memorial Tower played at a time when the majority of students may benefit has been under serious consideration by Canon Cody, president of the University of Toronto, Dean MacMillan of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, and the Alumni Federation of the University. President Cody informed The Varsity in an interview last evening.

President Cody went on to say that if the student body was really interested in this project, and the height of its interest is not known—he would continue to consider the proposition, which has always greatly interested him.

As Mr. Richardson, the university carillonneur, is only available after 5 o'clock during the week on account of business, the best arrangement would be for the carillon to be played on Sunday afternoons during the winter instead of the summer. This would benefit the students instead of the comparatively disinterested American tourists.

All students interviewed wanted the opportunity to hear it often. "How can we ignore them if we (Continued on Page 3)

SERIOUS READING GIVEN PREFERENCE

Bids on Hart House Magazines Show that Men Prefer Non-Fiction

BIDDING LIGHT AS YET

Varsity students evidently prefer the more serious and cultural types of magazines for their reading material; at least, the bidding, thus far, on the old Hart House magazines seems to point to that conclusion. Since the opening day for receiving bids, the bidding has been, almost without exception, in favour of the non-fiction publications. Among the most popular magazines are: Canadian Forum, Canadian Historical Review, Current History, Life, New Republic, Queen's Quarterly, Reader's Digest, Saturday Review of Literature, The Sphere, Fortune, Time, University of Toronto Quarterly, and World Wide.

HOLIDAY HOSPITALITY

The first break in the college term is close at hand, and for those who have homes nearby, or those who have the means and inclination to travel, the brief vacation means an interesting and happy time. To others not so fortunate it may be a lonesome period.

An article printed in this issue in the department entitled "Inconsequence" tells of the English custom of Lady-Rydering, so named after Lady Frances Ryder, whose interest and hospitality are enjoyed and appreciated by students studying in the Old Land. The article gives a description of the organisation which Lady Ryder has sponsored, an organisation which provides for the entertainment of Canadian and other colonial students sojourning in England.

As the writer suggests, the idea might well be adopted here. We have in our midst students from universities in Great Britain and on the continent, as well as exchange students from the sister universities of our Dominion. Many of them are here for a brief stay, and they will judge the University of Toronto partly by the hospitality which is extended to them in that time. More than that, it is our business to make the students feel at home.

Visitors are looked after in an official way, and exchange students are under the care of the National Federation of Canadian University Students. However, in an informal way our friends from other universities should be given an opportunity to experience Canadian hospitality, especially at vacation time. The suggestion made in the above-mentioned article is an admirable one. We trust that it will reach the ears of a Canadian Lady Frances, and that the kindly custom of Lady-Rydering may be introduced to this part of the province. The long interval of the coming Christmas vacation could thus be made brief and jolly for those to whom it might otherwise be dull and lonely.

"We must find a Lady Frances"

REPRESENTING THE UNIVERSITY

Those who have the good fortune to represent the University in two major spheres of athletic activity are already on their way to the scene of battle. A large following entrains for Montreal to-night to support the senior rugby team in its initial game and the rowing crew in its defence of the intercollegiate championship, which Varsity has held for six successive years. We assure the Blue and White representatives of the support of those who are unable to demonstrate their enthusiasm by cheers, and we believe that we echo the sentiment of the student body in general when we say, "We'll be waiting for the news of two victories."

The current depression (it is still with us as we go to press) has at last hit the Cat. The Editor tells us that as there seem to be a couple of athletic contests of some sort coming off to-morrow and the Sports staff need a lot of space to explain why Varsity is sure to win, we'll have to take a cut of about fifty per cent.

C—C

Too bad.

C—C

But at least we have space for a rather amazing headline run by The Star earlier in the summer:

TWO YEARS FOR ESCAPING

And out of Hollywood comes an interesting tid-bit. It seems our friend DeMille's next epic is an invasion of Olympus, with the chaste Diana in the leading role. The trouble has been to find an actress with sufficient "virginal youth" to use Mr. DeMille's own phrase. Jean Harlow applied, but couldn't pass the youth test. Marie Dressler and Bing Crosby were also will look after the kicking chores and his lofty hoists will be a feature of the opening game. Peacock will start at snap. Arnap and Coulter, who will be on the backfield, are expected to treat the crowd to some real running and passing before the game is over. Johnny Copp, another halfback, is expected to star in the plunging duties as is Greco.

The players have been allotted numbers and will wear them throughout the season.

Flying wing, Dawson (7); halves, Arnap (8), Copp (5), Sinclair (2); quarter, Coulter (18); snap, Peacock (3); insides, Warner (14), Newton (16); middles, Greco (17), McQuigge (4); outsides, Allison (20), Kieth (11); subs, Burgoyne (15), Harris (28), Taylor (24), Bryers (21), Jackson (23), Hennessy (19), Henderson (9), Bell (12).

turned down. At length The Master found his ideal in a little-known actress, whom we shall call Judith Allen. Everything seemed hunky-dory, but just as they were about to commence work, Mr. DeMille made a somewhat disconcerting discovery. "Judith Allen" had been married for two years to Gus Sonnenberg.

C—C

Too bad.

Art, Music and Drama

St. Thomas' Church

Thanksgiving will be fittingly observed at St. Thomas' Church, Huron St. at about 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. services on Sunday. Festival service in F major by Dear, will be sung in the morning, also a motet, "God be in my head," by Sir Walford Davies.

In the evening there will be the Festival service in B flat by Sir Charles Stanford, and a Thanksgiving anthem "Behold I have given you". Two very fine and noble hymns "Ein Feste Burg" and "Nun Danket", will be used during the processions.

During the half hour of choral music over CFRB at 5.30 p.m. an excerpt from Mendelssohn's "Elijah", "He that shall endure", will be heard, followed by a motet "O Salutaris Hostia" (Wilson), Master Richard Freeman will sing Mendelssohn's "O rest in the Lord" and the men's section of the Choir offer a two-part setting of "Nunc Dimittis".

Eaton Auditorium

An outstanding feature of Brownlow Card's production of The Merchant of Venice (to-night and twice to-morrow) is the use of a unit set, made up of interchangeable elements, which not merely eliminates long pauses, but gives the actors and their costumes the prominence they merit, instead of distracting attention with an insignificant ornateness. The costumes, too, designed and made especially for this production, are authentic and beautiful.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By John T. Stubbs

To-morrow afternoon sees the official opening of intercollegiate sport for the year 1933-34. In what may turn out to be the crucial game of the schedule, Varsity will be entertained at the Molson Stadium in Montreal by the McGill Redmen. At the same time the Mustangs will welcome the Tricolour team to London. After these two games have been worked out of the systems of the four teams concerned it will be easier to gauge the relative strength of the intercollegiate outfits. Queen's are now claiming to be among the powers that be for the title this year. There was a time when they made an annual claim to that mighty seat but lately they have had to change their tune. They have a powerful line but their defence is very weak against aerial attacks. As for the Varsity team they are lighter than last year, while McGill has increased its average weight by at least 15 lbs. per man. Don Young is back in the game at flying wing. Varsity will be minus the services of Booth, Witzel and Richardson. But nevertheless the old fight is not missing in the team. This week has seen a real upset in temperament. They "fight" now and they are showing Warren Stevens that there are a few brains scattered through the outfit too. Yesterday afternoon the boys elected their captain and Ken Peacock was honoured with their choice. Congratulations Ken. You have a real team with you all the way.

Contrary to the information provided by last night's downtown press, McGill did not win the rowing race last year. Varsity won by a little better than 27 seconds or how many boat lengths? You can count them up. However, this time it won't be as easy with a light Varsity crew against the McGill heavies. The race is anybody's on the information at hand. Down in Montreal the sport fans take their aquatic very seriously. One year, for this historic race, there were 30,000 people packed along the Lachine Canal bank.

Varsity's Intermediate rugby team will take a bow at the Varsity Stadium to-morrow afternoon in the first game of a double header against Queen's Intermediates. Lou Carroll has another powerful aggregation under his wing. Isbiste, is the kicking half. Boarding is flying wing. Burson is in at middle where he excels. Last Saturday maybe you noticed that on three successive plunges he went through for 17 yards. There are others on the lineup that also help to make it a truly rival outfit for the Big Blue team. And by the way before we close we would like you to know that in scrimmage the night before last with Argos, the seniors outplayed the mighty oarsmen. A lot of people are running down the Varsity team for being defeated last week. It is very strange how rapidly they forget the victory against Balmy Beach. Such supporters are not the kind U. of T. wants in the bleachers to give the team lots of help. Watch that score board during the Argo-Montreal clash and give the Blue team your moral support and all of it. See you Tuesday with good news! (Or maybe you're going to Montreal with the band.)

man, third year Meds student, or Frank Shaughnessy junior will be at snap. Young "Shag" is also a capable bucking half. McMorran, Law III and McGregor, are slated for middle wing posts. Lou Olker, of last year's team and another Meds student, will work with the laney and elusive Bill Carley in outside wing berths most likely.

Don Young, star of many McGill teams, and a master field general on the gridiron, will likely be back at flying wing. Young is captain of the team this year and is now a fourth year Meds student. Wally Markham is understudying Young in capable fashion.

By E. H. S.

Congratulations are due Isobel Pepall who is in third year Trinity for her outstanding performance in golf this year. We are very proud to say that Isobel won the Ontario Ladies' Junior Golf Title. Not only that, but she was runner-up in the semi-finals of the Canadian Open and the Canadian Closed in Winnipeg this fall, being defeated by last year's Open champion, Margery Kirkham of Montreal.

Rain this morning held up the tennis tournament for a while but in the afternoon there seemed to be plenty of action around the courts. The faculty playoffs will not be completed this week although the middle of next week should see everything cleared away for the intercollegiate struggle. The date of the Intercollegiate Tournament is changed from October 27-28 to October 20-21 as Queen's is accustomed to hold its reunion the week-end of the Queen's Varsity game—a little matter that was overlooked in the first arrangements for the Tournament.

Victoria has not quite completed the first round of their tennis draw as they have a very large list of entries—some forty-two in all. Already some very fine material is apparent. U.C. are playing their games at the Rusholme Club and will probably have a speedy sextet left when the smoke of battle clears, as several of last year's team are back and showing their old form. In the case of Trinity and St. Mike's, the usual amount of interest is being shown, Trinity having about thirty-two entries and they have now reached the quarter-finals. Although St. Mike's have not such a large list, their players are of high calibre, as was the case last year when they had two players on the intercollegiate team.

GERMANY AND HITLERISM

paganda: "The Jew is the overthrewer and destroyer of the race. He cannot think or write German, but only Jewish."

In the German Universities, in addition to the final examination, the students are required to pass a character test which is, in reality, a means of discovering their political standing. Those who are in sympathy with the Nazi regime find it rather difficult to graduate. Most of the students, however, realize that they are in the throes of a great revolution and are looking forward to the restoration of free speech and liberty of action when the crisis is past.

The Warden told of the great privilege enjoyed by him and his party of being shown through a prison camp near Munich. Conditions there are rather grotesque and horrible, he said. Men are confined for their political views who have been prominent students in earlier days—to see them obeying every beck and call, wearing shorts and shoes only, is extremely pitiful. These men are freed upon conversion to the Nazi viewpoint, but the means taken to assure the party that the conversion is legitimate are so strenuous that few are released. Men who are born leaders are never freed.

An exchange student from Germany, Mr. G. R. Schott, complimented Mr. Bickersteth upon his unbiased presentation of the situation. He said that, while in Canada, he had never heard the "other" side of the question as fairly.

dially welcomed. And there are various concerts and different entertainments; tickets for musicals, dinners at Sir So-and-So's. The men, of course, being always in demand, receive more invitations.

But all this is minor, uninteresting, compared to the really worth while part of the programme. The homes of the best English people are opened to these lonely, poor, and ignored colonials. You can receive invitations for one, two, three weeks, visiting families throughout the country, and probably if you are really down and out, they will arrange a whole vacation. You are entertained as a friend of the family. You are shown the district, taught its history, its culture, architecture and dialect; you are given excellent dinners—three times a day in the good English custom—and if you fit into the family congenially, and don't make too many gaffes, they make a companion of you. You become friends and hate to leave.

Lady Frances Ryder is so well known among students, especially at Oxford and Cambridge, that the impudents, grateful though they certainly are, have taken to calling the system "Lady-Rydering". It is really a good phrase, however, for pun that it is, it represents innumerable things, easily expressed. And often while one is Lady-Rydering it is not unusual to find some other fellow student who is an acquaintance, Lady-Rydering in another house in the same district. And you have picnics together, and there is great glee.

that will be thrown out by the rival faction should be more than met.

In the personnel of the Blue and White are four men of noteworthy ability. Two of them, the only two representatives of last year's outfit, are well known to university sport fans. Sam Hughes, the coxswain, who ably guided the Toronto shell last year, will once more occupy the tiller seat and Larry Skeel will be found in fifth position. The other two men, while they are making their debut on the intercollegiate senior crew, have had experience in the Club, both of them for the past three years. They are Jack Cameron and Gord Bradshaw. Cameron, in the stroke position is one of the real mainstays of the team. He passes on with admirable skill and perfect regularity, the stroke that Coach Loudon has taught him. It is picked up by Jim Cleland, who rows in seat seven. Gord Bradshaw was last year's spare man due to his inability to row either stroke or bow, and supports the bow section in seat two. These men are the central vantage points in the shell and on them the coach relies. Between Skeel and Cleland sits Greenwood, while Lennox and Barton ride in fourth and third positions respectively. Dave Woods occupies the bow chair and we hope will have the honour of being the first man to cross the finish line.

The resulting crew that Coach Loudon has produced after nine months of strenuous endeavour is a spectacular eight which works in complete unison. He is employing a long sweeping stroke, the same one that led the race last year by a margin of six lengths and which is executed by eight men acting as one. They dip and swing in absolute harmony.

Lady Frances to organize the families of Toronto and southern Ontario to take kindly to students who come from abroad, or from homes either west or east. If we could discover such a person, her immortality would be assured. And in a university like Toronto, which every year is becoming more and more significant, the need is pressing.

We cannot be beaten by the English! We must find a Lady Frances!

DuBois will be at number seven and Bill Carter pulls at number eight. Harold Campbell will be at cox position again this year.

Spectators observing the Red crew's practice on the canal are favourably impressed with their smooth stroke and balanced action. A new power seems to be noted in the boat since the newcomers added their backs to the strength of the veterans, and a revitalized eight, in the very tip top of condition is expected to go out and burn up the old Lachine Canal on Saturday after the football game.

Canada. Following this rhetorical denunciation of the government, the prime minister, Mr. Drynan arose. "My head is bloody but unbowed," he began. The prime minister ably defended the government and the plans it had for the salvation of Canada. Answering the charges of the opposition with regard to war, he declared that the government would socialise the oil, steel, and armament industries of Canada. He stated that the senate would be re-organized and consist of highly trained technicians and not of irresponsible, broken down political war-horses with which other Canadian prime ministers had packed their chamber.

Representing the secret society for the abolition of societies a branch of the anarchist party, Mr. Gelber attacked the government. Mr. Gelber brought his heavy economic artillery into play and blasted the government with denunciations of their wrong interpretation of the present depression. He declared that their government had no legal power to abolish the senate and moreover that government interests were centred in petty power and not in changing the fundamentals of the country.

Defending the government in his capacity of Minister of Medicine, Sam Rae reiterated the statements of Dr. Bruce in regard to social hygiene.

The Radical Socialists, represented by Arn Smith and the Syndicalists waved their flags of protest, but the debate adjourned in an orderly manner.

BLUE ROWING CREW VICTORIOUS BY HALF A LENGTH TO KEEP TITLE

Varsity Takes Sixth Successive Title in Stiffest Race in Many Years

NEARLY EQUAL RECORD

Take Lead at Half Mile Mark and Never Passed to Finish

By J. A. Rimmels

Over a choppy two-mile course, with a cold autumn wind blowing upstream astern of the shells, Toronto Varsity and McGill last Saturday fought to a finish what has been termed the greatest race in intercollegiate rowing, with a gallant U. of T. warriors leading an equally gallant McGill eight over the finish line by a mere half length to retain the intercollegiate title.

Before a madly cheering crowd of some 5,000 persons who lined the banks of the Lachine Canal, Coach London's rowers dipped and pulled in perfect unison to cover the measured distance at the terrific speed of 11 minutes and 48 seconds, only three seconds behind the record set by Varsity in 1930 under vastly fairer rowing conditions.

The pace was gruelling. In the first half mile the McGill crew took a half length lead, rowing 42 strokes per minute as compared with Varsity's 38, but dropped their lead at the half mile mark as the Varsity crew evened up the distance. At the three-quarter mile mark the victors crept ahead to lead the race by a length, rowing at the somewhat easier pace of 32 strokes per minute and their lead was never overcome.

For another half mile the shells kept the same relative positions until Varsity went slightly over a length ahead. (Continued on Page 4)

ENGLISH STUDENTS SUPPORT PACIFISM

Anti-War Movements Flourish at All Universities Says Graduate

FORM ANTI-WAR COUNCIL

The following article on the Anti-War Movement in English Universities was written for "The Varsity" by Miss Sally Lum, B.A., of Cambridge University, who is doing post-graduate work at the University of Toronto. Miss Lum was one of the three members from Cambridge in the Anti-War Council, and is holder of the Headmistresses Scholarship to Canada, and the Cairns Scholarship from Girton College, Cambridge.—The Editor.

Not only at Oxford are students strongly opposed to fighting. At Cambridge as at all the other English Universities there is a flourishing Anti-War Movement. Cambridge has been startled by processions of students parading the streets carrying banners and shouting slogans.

Inspired by the International Congress against War at Amsterdam, the opening congress of the British Anti-War Movement was held last February at Bermondsey. Students had their own section and formed a Students' National Anti-War Council. On their return the Cambridge delegates got busy and found a great mass of students in agreement with the Bermondsey resolutions. The S.C.M., the League of Nations Union and the Socialist Society agreed to co-operate. (Continued on Page 4)

Summer School Activities Are Basis of Student Group

Mr. J. Harley, recently from the Summer School at Port Hope, conducted the organization meeting of the Liberal Club, which was held in the Music Room, Hart House, on Friday evening, October 6th. The president, Mr. J. Cleland, was of necessity absent, being in Montreal. Mr. W. H. Gemmill was acting secretary of the meeting.

Mr. Harley explained it to be the expressed desire of those at the summer school that larger and more active clubs of this nature be formed. He also pointed out that assistance, necessary in making such organization successful, was available on every hand and all that was necessary lay in having an active interest of a large membership.

The Sunday school picnic of the band on Friday night was an affair to be remembered. At twelve o'clock the tiddly game closed down for the night, at twelve fifteen the story telling quit, at twelve thirty the sassafras was served, and by one Mr. McDonald had all the boys tucked into their pullmans, and all was quiet on the Varsity front, and rear. A nice time was had by all. Despite the fact that Ruddy Vallee's father was on the train, the boys cast their big opportunity to the winds and snored harmoniously.

Protest Against Troops in Stratford at First Meeting

RESOLUTIONS PASSED

"Students are beginning as never before to evince a radical interest in politics, not only as adherents of particular parties, but in the deeper sense of the word, as observers of the great underlying social forces. The deepening and intensification of the social, political and economic crisis has impressed them to a hitherto unknown degree," stated Mr. S. Ryerson at the first meeting of the Student League of Canada held in Wymilwood on Friday evening. The meeting was held in protest of the recent state-sending of troops against the strikers in Stratford. Its purpose, he explained, was not to view the matter in an abstract, theoretic way, but to determine a definite plan of action in support of the strikers.

The Stratford affair, reverberations of which have penetrated to the farthest corners of the commercial world, was discussed in detail during the course of an illuminating address (Continued on Page 4)

LONG JAWN SINCLAIR'S TOE KICKS EVERY VARSITY POINT TO GIVE EASY VICTORY, 8-0

VARSITY'S FORWARD PASSING MUCH IMPROVED

Sinclair's Long Hoists, with Brilliant Passing and End Runs Provide Enthusiastic Fans with Fast and Snappy Game

By John T. Stubbs

Molson Stadium, Montreal, P.Q., Oct. 7th. — In one of the greatest aerial attacks ever sprung by an intercollegiate football team, the mighty right foot of Jack Sinclair, Varsity's kicking ace, gave the University of Toronto, Canadian Intercollegiate Champions of 1932, a decisive 8 to 0 shut-out victory over McGill here this afternoon before a large crowd of high-spirited fans in the 1933 opener. The prowess of the greatest back-fielder in intercollegiate football, assisted by the deadly tackling of the fast Blue ends, a stone-wall line, and last but not least, the strategy of Coach Warren Stevens, contributed every one of the eight singles recorded on the ever-changing score board. Andy Henderson downed the receiving Redmen behind the line for four of the eight points while Captain Ken Peacock and Gordy Keith were responsible for a Redman's fatal fall on two more of the scores. On the remaining two singles, Sinclair hoofed it out of touch, once right in the corner at the goal line and once, booting it right from the McGill 42 yard line, he sent it sailing right out over the touch line at the west end of the gridiron. The sly efforts of the renowned Shag Shaughnessy to overwhelm the Blue and White visitors with last-minute surprises were all to no avail. After reporting several absentees from the McGill lineup, Krukowski, the regular quarterback, was the only missing player. Don Young was in at flying wing, Westman went on as kicking half, and Dregan, the U. of California end of 1931 and 1932, strengthened the line, but Varsity, minus Boothe, Witzel, and Richardson, strode right into the highly-touted homesters at the starting whistle and proceeded to show them who the champions really were.

VARSITY SECONDS TRIM QUEEN'S 3-0

Few Brilliant Plays and Many Fumbles Make Poor Contest

GAME CLOSE BUT DULL

By B. J. McGuire

Intercollegiate football made its bow to Toronto when University of Toronto intermediates met and defeated Queen's intermediates 3-0. On Saturday at Varsity Stadium. As an opening game it was far from brilliant with both teams making many fumbles.

There were few exciting moments during the sixty minutes of play. Both teams used the two buck and a kick method with little variation. Only one forward pass was completed. The kicking was not particularly good, Isbister having a slight advantage over McIntosh of Queen's. In the punning plays Queen's had a slight advantage although they certainly didn't develop any habit of moving the yard sticks.

For most of the game the play hovered around the midfield. Isbister got within kicking distance in the final frame and hoofed one to Scott, who was brought down behind his line for the first point. An exchange of kicks and a fumble by Queen's again gave Varsity possession 15 yards out. They moved the poles on the first down but in the next three bucks failed to dent the tri-colour line. Once in possession Queen's attempted to plunge (Continued on Page 3)

With the wind in their favour, Varsity opened a scoring deflag in the first quarter and never once gave the Redmen a chance to get out of their own end of the field. On the kick-off Harold Arnap ran it up to his own 28 yard line and after successive plunges with both teams in exchange, Sinclair kicked from nearly centre field to Westman, who was downed behind his own line by Henderson for the first score after three minutes of play. McGill attempted a Westman to Young forward pass which was incomplete. Varsity then attempted one from Arnap to Henderson but it failed. (Continued on Page 3)

TARGET MEN PLAN YEAR'S ACTIVITIES

Civilian Rifle Association to Hold Competitions Through Year

In an interview with Professor G. H. W. Lucas in the Medical Building last week The Varsity learned of the proposed activities of the Civilian Rifle Association of the University for the coming year.

This Civilian Rifle Association is as its name implies, a non-military organization for the purpose of instructing undergraduates in rifle shooting. Every year it has approximately 100 members from among the undergraduates of the University. Competitions are held on the outdoor ranges at Long Branch in the autumn and on the indoor ranges at Hart House in the winter. The rifles consisting of Lee-Enfield and the regulation .22 calibre are supplied, as is also the ammunition by the Government, although as above stated, the organization is entirely civilian.

"TICKET-OF-LEAVE MAN"

The Hart House Theatre season opened last night with the Green Room Players presenting an old melo-drama in as authentic manner as is possible in this day and age. In May, this same aggregation gave us Tolstoi's Ivan the Terrible, a tragedy not played on this continent since the death of Richard Mansfield in 1907, in whose repertoire it held a prominent place. The play given by the Green Room Players this year is Tom Taylor's Ticket-of-Leave Man, not seen here for fifty years, and it is difficult to realise that our forefathers were entranced and breathless over a play that now, with our changed point of view, becomes a riot of fun, when given seriously and in the idiom of the late '70's. The point is that this group of players is bringing us interesting plays which are of distinct value for comparative purposes to all lovers and students of the drama, as well as good entertainment for those who wish merely amusement. The group itself is interesting, composing the younger actors who have till now had little opportunity in showing what can be expected of them, and the courage of their director, St. John Betts, has been amply justified.

Their medium is not confined to just out-moded plays is evidenced by the announced production of Pirandello's Right You Are, If You Think You Are in February, and a whisper of a Noel Coward opus not too far away.

It was gratifying to note last night the spontaneous response which the play evoked. Yet the detached theatre-goer must surely have been struck with the vastness of the gulf which separates our generation from that of our forefathers. It is incredible that scenes which brought whole audiences to tears now convulse us in laughter. The heroic episodes, the harrowing scenes, the ruthlessness of the villain, the bald humour, the sentimentalism, the moralising and sermonising, all produce upon us an effect wholly different to that which the author intended to create. But while conscious of the completeness of that change, we shall be guilty of a rash judgment if we conclude that we possess the true perspective of life, and that we are the realists, and that we are more sincere in our emotional reactions. The Ticket-of-Leave Man ought to teach us that a view of life which may be good and true for one age may not be, indeed is not likely to be, good and true for another.

Hart House Theatre

For the first time, probably, in the history of Hart House Theatre, an audience cheered the hero and heroine, hissed the villains and roared their enthusiastic approval of the finale, when the Green Room Players presented The Ticket-of-Leave Man last night. It is that kind of a play. Its first production was at the Olympia Theatre, London, in 1863, and it is, as far as we know, the first dramatisation of a detective story, presenting for the first time upon the boards the one and only original Hawshaw, lineal forer of Sherlock Holmes.

It has everything. No heart could be more courageous, no intentions more honest, than those of Robert Brierly (Mr. Barry Fitzgerald); no heroine purer in the midst of evil or more unrelentingly optimistic when misfortune dogged her every footstep than May Edwards (Miss Jane Mallett); and certainly no villains have ever been more sinister, more unfinishing in their efforts to do a bad turn every day than Melter Moss (Mr. H. E. Hitchman) and James Dalton, alias Downey alias The Tiger (Mr. Murray Bonycastle), whose motto is, "Never put off till to-morrow a crib you can crack to-day."

As for Hawshaw (Mr. Lionel Reid), when at the close of Act IV, Scene 1, the hero asked, "Whom can I find to take this note to Mr. Gibson warning him of the evil which threatens him?" and Hawshaw, who had been craftily simulating a drunken navvy, rose and declaimed "I will," then removing his wig, struck an attitude and disclosed himself, "Hawshaw!"—when he did this the audience roared its approval; if there had been a top gallery it would have shaken to the stamp of enthusiastic feet.

I have never seen an audience throw itself more thoroughly into the spirit of a play than that of last night; and I have never seen an audience quite so thoroughly enjoy itself. This is especially remarkable in that the Players were very careful to avoid any appearance of burlesque. The play was presented entirely in the spirit of the original production. It is not a farce. The humour lies entirely in the exaggerated action, with its superfluity of asides and naive soliloquies which were so prevalent on the popular stage of seventy years ago.

The acting was supremely good; especially that of Hitchman, Murray Bonycastle, Lionel Reid and Jane Mallett. Andrew Allan, William Strange, Clair Stewart and Margaret Tytler had smaller parts, but carried them off very well. We must also mention Miss Elizabeth Pescod, who sang sentimental ballads in the manner of the period between the acts.

It is unfortunate that The Ticket-of-Leave Man has not been more widely advertised, but it is the sort of thing which is bound to "get around" by word-of-mouth advertising in any case. It should on no account be missed.

C.L.C.

Eaton Auditorium

For purposes of advertising, the adjective "phenomenal" is applied to Marcel Dupre, who played last night in Eaton Auditorium. The term is appropriate enough. M. Dupre's recitals seemed to be designed to deprive the audience of breath; and they do so most effectively. The technical facility of this organist is astounding. It is as if nothing could go wrong in one of his programmes. Few would believe that the organ could be handled with such consummate ease. Yet, while the audience might be enlightened as to what technical miracles can be worked on the instruments, its insight into organ music in general would hardly be improved by such a programme as that given last night. Its virtuosity was amazing; but it was not a profound organ recital. I do not suggest that M. Dupre can not be a profound organist. But the mixture of Mendelssohn Scherzos and Handel Cinquantos and numerous brilliant and minor works was not altogether edifying.

The Bach and Handel were superb; would that there had been more compositions of the same order! M. Dupre played excerpts from his Stations of the Cross, lengthy work composed during 1931 and 1932. A notable fact about the parts performed last night was that while they were impressive

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The scene is laid in The Old Gentleman's study in the year 1973. The Old Gentleman and The Little Child have just been watching a television broadcast of the annual tank-rugby match in the Sahara Desert between the University of Toronto and the University of Timbuctoo. Go on from here, if you think you can stand it.

The Little Child: Gee, Grampa, that was great! The way those Varsity tanks crashed through the Timbuctoo line. Gee!

The Old Gentleman: That was nothing. You should have seen us in the good old days, when rugby was a man's game. None of this folderol with armoured tanks and such. Just one team of he-men against another and may the toughest bunch win. Those were the days!

L.C.: What was it like? (He is probably not at all interested, but we dramatists have to stick in lines like this to "maintain the action," to use a technical term. It's as inevitable as the lady who asks the detective how he did it in the last act of the mystery-thriller.)

O.G.: Ah, I remember how I was thrilled the first time I set foot on the field. I was always the first there, eager to take up my position. Those charges through the line when it was every man for himself. And blocking kicks. Every time we blocked a kick I felt all gone in the pit of my stomach. And that time, when the score was 37 to 33 against dear old Varsity, with fifteen seconds to go, and good old Whaps hurled a forward pass fifty-seven yards across the goal-line. There I was, right behind the goal-posts, watching it come, and

Mr. Picobac Shakes Hands with Montreal

"It's a mild... cool... sweet smoke," said Mr. Picobac, of Essex County, on his arrival in Montreal.

With a graceful sweep of his left hand he passed his business card to the door man of the Windsor Hotel. "Any reservation, Mr. Picobac," enquired the Major Domo, politely. "No reservations whatever," returned Mr. Picobac, firmly. "I make the statement without strings or equivocation. Picobac is the pick of Canada's Burley Crop, grown in sunny southern Ontario."

"Let me take your grip," suggested the Major Domo.

"Put it there, brother," replied Mr. Picobac, heartily, extending his right hand in the free fraternity of good fellowship.

Mr. Picobac, having shaken hands on the front steps, proceeded to register at the desk, preliminary to pursuing enquiries into smoking conditions in Montreal. Watch for his reports. Meanwhile try Picobac. You'll enjoy it.

With the Theatres

Tivoli—
Tarzan the Fearless is billed as the feature picture at the Tivoli this week, but we warn you now you only see about seven reels of a long serial—to be continued next week. Still, if you like Tarzan, it's worth seeing. We confess shamelessly we did. Buster Crabbe is an adept at wrestling with lions and swinging through the jungle, though he always seems to light on the same lion or the same tree—possibly due to the high cost of Hollywood lions and jungle. The epic is replete with villains—white men, Arabs and the Egyptian (ancient) followers of the Great God Zar, the Emerald-Fingered. Not a highbrow production, but naive enough to be genuinely amusing—and what more can one ask?

There is a second full-length picture, The Wrecker, with Jack Holt and cast, also reminiscent of Saturday afternoon at the little theatre around the corner. Mellerdrummer at its mellowest. But it fits in with Tarzan, and the programme as a whole provides a rather refreshing change from the more modern innuities that infest the screen, if you're not too hopelessly new-fashioned.

Forbes Randolph's Music Hall—

A new combination of three favourite types of entertainment is offered to Toronto audiences with the opening of Forbes Randolph's Music Hall. A show of the revue type is the curtain-raiser, then the legitimate theatre has an hour to present a condensed show is brought to a close by a full stage presentation. This departure from the orthodox theatrical fare is sure to appeal to all and Mr. Randolph spent a full season in preparations before the opening performance. The show is continuous and if you want to be entertained for about three hours at small cost you can drop in any time after noon.

Imperial—
The Imperial Theatre this week is presenting one of the best shows to be seen there in some time. Will Rogers is always popular, and while Dr. Bull is by no means one of his best efforts, chiefly due to poor directing and assembling of the shots, it is generally pleasing. There is also a Silly Symphony in colour, The Pied Piper of Hamelin, which fully bears out prophecies made a few years ago that animated cartoons were bound to fill an important place in screen programmes, for it is in reality a genuine operetta, conceived in a style impossible either to the stage or the photographic film.

The high light of the programme, however, is the stage show, in which department the Imperial is showing a remarkable improvement over past years. The ballets are graceful and well-conceived, and the costume and stage-settings are really beautiful. Two of the individual acts in particular were enthusiastically applauded, one a very clever juggling performance with a side-line of snappy monologue and the other a pair of Southern girls who dance like nobody's business. It is to be hoped the Imperial will keep up the standard of its presentations to the level of this week's.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

It is high time basketballs were in the air and evidently some of the faculties agree with us. Managers are showing quite distinct signs of life and any time now we expect them to break through with announcements as to the where and when of practices. The matter of arranging a convenient hour—which usually turns out to be not so convenient—is a real problem on the hands of the managers, not to mention the question of a gym. It looks as if it will continue to be just such a problem as long as gym facilities for the women remain the same and a problem over which managers—be they ever so good—are bound to encounter difficulties.

A basketball meeting is being called for to-day by Victoria at which they hope to reach some decision concerning their practices and also one concerning their coach who has not been definitely appointed. Victoria, with most of last year's players back, seem to be the team to watch when we remember they won the championship last year.

Sally Ballard, an intercollegiate star of a couple of years ago, is coaching St. Hilda's again this year. Sally, active on the forward line, used to roll them in for Varsity along with her team-mates Wilma Hazlit and Louise Crouch.

With a great many of the old players back eager to get into uniform, U.C., judging from their performance of last year when they met Senior Vic in the finals and gave them a hard struggle, are apt to upset the applecart in interfaculty circles. The dark horse so far is St. Mike's. Last year they dropped out early in the race for group honours but with the freshe year to draw from some surprises may be forthcoming.

it out but were rouged in the attempt. This was the last score of the game. Just as the quarter ended Queen's completed the only forward pass of the game which went for 30 yards.

For the Blue team Brebner, McKee, Burson and Boomer at various times turned in nice efforts. Hud Stewart was alternately good and bad, making the best runs of the game, and also the most glaring fumbles. Sonshine, former Harbord Collegiate student, McPherson and McIntosh looked to be the choice of the Queen's team.

Queen's — Flying wing, Sonshine; halves, Kirkland, Scott, Manner; quarter, McIntosh; snap, Barker; insides, Isbister, Bresenthal; middles, Waugh, Jones; outsides, Alson, Swartz; subs, McManus, Nesbitt, Hare, Mack, Teague, McPherson, John McManus, Marks.

Varsity — Flying wing, McMichael, halves, Steward Isbister Boomer; quarter, McKee; snap, Herman; insides, Brebner, Gibson; middles, Perry, Holden; outsides, Edwards, Williams; subs, Burson, MacLachlan, Agnew, Lougheed, Ruddock, Hornfeld, Welch.

NEWCOMERS NEEDED

IN SWIMMING CLUB

Early Practices Held to Give Opportunities to New Candidates

With the rugby season barely started the Swimming Club is digging in to build up a team that will give McGill a bit of their own back this year.

It is hoped that new men will come in large numbers as new material is urgently needed. The main reason for the early practices is the fact that they must give everyone a chance to show just what they can do in order to have the best possible team later in the season.

The executive of the club also announce that this year's junior inter-faculty swimming meet will be held in November. At this meet no one will be allowed to participate who has competed in an intercollegiate meet. The practice Saturday will be a great chance to see where you stand and to start getting in trim for this meet.

VARSITY VICTORS OVER MCGILL 8-0

ed. Then Sinclair kicked to Westman and Henderson downed him behind his line for the second point. A few minutes later, with the fans almost frantic over what was going to happen to a loose ball, Sinclair appeared from the bottom of the heap in possession for Varsity. Coulter attempted another forward to Sinclair but it failed to connect. Then once again the Blue halfback took to the air with a long spiral to Westman, who was downed by Ken Peacock, Blue captain, playing middle. That made the count 3-0 with five minutes to play in the first quarter.

Riddell, playing quarter in Krukowski's place, faked a forward and started an end run but Dawson for Varsity broke through and nailed him for a 12 yard loss which set the Redmen back on their own 13 yard line. With their backs to the wall again, McGill turned on the juice, but the best they could do was gain six yards on two plunges after which Westman booted it to Coulter at the McGill 40 yard line, where he was downed with a headlock by Hornig, a red-coated middle. McGill lost ten yards on a penalty and Coulter tossed an incomplete pass to Allison which caused some keen excitement as Allison was open for a clear field to the goal line. Varsity then changed outsiders. Arnpup snatched a bounding ball from Richert's toe on the run and on the next play made the first completed pass to Sinclair for a gain of 16 yards. Burgoyne plowed through for 6 yards and then passed laterally to Sinclair on the next play, which was an end run. Sinclair broke away fast, evading three tacklers along the line of scrimmage, and in a beautiful exhibition of broken field running advanced the pigskin 25 yards into the Redmen's territory as the first quarter ended. Varsity 5, McGill 0.

In the first play with Varsity in possession right in front of the McGill posts and 11 yards out, they fumbled and McGill recovered to relieve the pressure and what looked like a great opportunity for a touchdown. With the wind in his favour for the first time, Westman kicked out to centre field to Arnpup. Greco banged his way through for seven yards on the first down and was stopped by Frank Shaughnessy Jr., son of the McGill coach, on the next play. Referee Joe O'Brien, however, changed the time with a ten yard penalty for McGill interference. This put the threatening toe of Sinclair in scoring position again. Kicking against the wind he cleverly placed one to go out of touch right in the corner. After some argument the score was allowed, which made it 6-0 for Varsity.

A few minutes later Varsity's most sensational effort of the game was enacted with Arnpup heaving a beautiful pass for 40 yards which was snatched out of the air by Gordie Keith travelling fast down the field under close escort of four McGill players. It almost sent the Blue and White supporters wild and then they went wilder still when Arnpup tossed and completed another for 10 yards with Burgoyne receiving. Greco battered the Redmen's line for 8 yards but a penalty put Varsity back ten yards on the McGill 38 yard line. Sinclair kicked against the wind to Richert behind the line but he escaped and sneaked out by a scant margin. Coulter displayed his superb ability in the art of broken field running for the benefit of Montreal fans when he took Richert's kick at top speed and evaded six Redmen to take it back 12 yards to the 42 yard line. Dregman, the big McGill outside and former U. of California star, was thumbed off the field for five minutes by Referee O'Brien on a penalty for roughing it while tackling. Then Arnpup flipped a long pass which was taken by Warner for a gain of 35 yards. That put Varsity once again in a scoring position but once more they got over-anxious and a penalty resulted. Sinclair then hoofed it to Richert who was nailed by Keith for Varsity's seventh point. On an exchange of kicks Toronto was in possession at centre field. Varsity made

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By John T. Stubbs

Here it is Tuesday and we've still got a dollar. And Varsity won the football game in Montreal. Oh, yes, even though most of the mighty sages spent most of last week calling Queen's and McGill to fight it out for the intercollegiate title this year. In Montreal, where they are supposed to know their football, two newspaper columns called us to take the Redmen Saturday. However, Ralph St. Germain, former McGill triple-threat star, claimed before the game that his successors in red shirts would make Varsity look sick in the first half and then take it easy. The Big Blue team had two points in the first four minutes. The column of one Toronto paper had the distinction of calling every one of Saturday's games wrong. Congratulations. Western, supposed to be the weak sister this year, rather upset the dope by defeating Queen's 5-3. Ottawa also upset the apple cart by trimming the Tigers right in their lair. Wait till the Tigers start snarling again. Somebody will get scratched. Montreal A.A.A. supported our opinion to the effect that they are the team to beat for the Big Four title, by downing Argos 18-14. With Ab Box out suffering from a fractured skull, Argos' chances are getting slim already. The U. of T. intermediates snared three points in their opener here with Queen's. If they settle down in the next few weeks after they get a chance to work together for a while, they might go places this year.

You would have been disappointed in the Varsity-McGill game if you were a McGill supporter. It was a treat for the hundred Toronto fans in attendance to see their team come through with the decisive victory over the Redmen. The home team looked good until the end of the third minute of play. After that they only threatened Varsity's peace of mind twice. The strategy employed by the rival coaches was very interesting to watch from the Press Box. Shap Shaughnessy has a telephone connection with his assistant perched up in the broadcasting room. The yes-man in the box can tell him what is going on to advantage. One of Shag's old stunts, and one which does not meet with universal sporting approval by the way, is to give out an incorrect lineup right up until the game starts and then spring surprises. It was definitely reported that both Young and Krukowski were out with ankle injuries and would not be used. The latter did not play. Young did, but it may be a long time before he does again. He was injured in the third quarter and carried off when his bad ankle was hurt again. Westman was also supposed to be out but he was well enough to go the full game and he didn't look weak even though he was far over-rated as any opposition to Jack Sinclair.

It looked like the classic occasions of other years as the two gaily-bedecked college bands marched onto the field. Captain Slater is to be congratulated on the performance of the Varsity musicians. It was really a credit to the University of Toronto and made those men of Varsity present experience a thrill of genuine pride as they saw the crowd respectfully rise as the strains of the Blue and White poured forth in perfect harmony. This grand display was made possible through the generosity and work of our highly esteemed President, and true sportsman, Canon Cody. Another treat was dished up to the sporting palates of those present when Phil Edwards, anchor man on the McGill relay team, took the baton from Sampson, his team-mate, fifteen yards behind the M.A.A.A. anchor man, Wade. In the most beautiful running display we have witnessed yet, Edwards gradually decreased the lead from fifteen yards to nothing and then, coming down the home stretch, he stepped out to finish ten yards in front. His leg action is a treat for sore eyes and a perfect example of that necessary for a champion middle distance runner.

And now last but not least, as a matter of fact most, we turn our eyes to the happy countenance of Coach T. R. Loudon, the typically fine, true British sportsman. His crew returned from Montreal with Varsity's first intercollegiate title for the year 1933-34. The race was the most thrilling aquatic event ever witnessed by the writer of this column. As is the custom, the occupants of a Press Box say little and express no enthusiasm during a game. But Saturday we stood in the bow of one of the accompanying launches with two other representatives of this paper and yelled through a megaphone down the whole two and a half mile course. Then we tried to answer stroke Cameron's question as to who had won. If ever a race was close that one was. The race was also followed by the Presidents of McGill and U. of T. and E. W. Beatty, Chancellor of McGill, President of the C.P.R., and grad of S.P.S. We noticed a broad smile cross the latter's face as other members of our launch rendered "Toke Oike" in true engineering fashion.

yards with two plunges, one by Greco for seven and one by Copp for nine. Coulter tossed a forward to Arnpup for an 8 yard gain, putting Varsity in possession once again at the 30 yard line. Arnpup tried a pass to Copp but it was out of reach. Coulter then tried one to Arnpup but Gilbert intercepted for McGill. Half time. Score 7-0 for Varsity.

On the kick-off Coulter received and once again did some clever running to get by McGill tacklers and put it on Varsity's 30 yard line. A loose ball sent both teams into a panic and the crowd into hysterics. On an end run Sinclair was unable to get the pass and it fell loose in the midst of four McGill players. They all tried at once to nab it but it bounced out and Arnpup relieved the tension by falling on it. Henderson and Dawson made one of the sweetest combined tackles of the game when they both hit Westman on the run at once as he tried to break away after receiving Sinclair's kick. Both lines were holding well and very few gains of any account were made. McGill tried to open the game up a little more and opened an aerial passing attack but they were unable to complete any. With the wind again in his favour, Sinclair was making gains in his kicking duel with Richert but the McGill line prevented the intercollegiate champions from getting into scoring position during the third quarter, which passed scoreless. On an end run Sinclair passed to Arnpup just in time and the latter ran it on to make the gain 23 yards. Don Young was injured and carried off the field amid the cheers of every fan in the stadium. Just before the last quarter began, Coach Warren Stevens called out his half line and outsiders for a conference. The score did not leave the Toronto team any leeway because all it needed was a converted touch to tie up the count. As was expected McGill turned on the tap and opened the game wide. They tried everything but the breaks weren't coming their way at all. McQuigge made yards for Varsity five times. Varsity tried a placement in front of the Redmen's posts but as Coulter took the high snap he was nailed for a loss. That gave McGill possession. After an exchange and a Blue gain, Sinclair once more kicked to Westman, who was tackled badly by Henderson for the last score of the game with the count 8-0. McGill completed their first forward pass of the game for a gain of one yard. The game ended with Sinclair kicking to Richert, who was downed by a hard tackle by Dawson, Varsity's flying wing.

McGill — Flying wing, Young; halves, Westman, Richert, Gilbert; quarter, Riddell; snap, Shaughnessy; insides, Matheson, McMorran, Wigle, Letourneau; outsides, Degan, Olker.

Varsity — Flying wing, Dawson; halves, Sinclair, Arnpup, Copp; quarter, Coulter; snap, Bell; insides, Warner, Newton, McQuigge, Peacock; outsides, Henderson, Bryers.

McGill subs — Freeman, Craig, Byrne, Hornig, Savage, Stockwell, Markham, Carsley, Krukowski.

Varsity subs — Burgoyne, Harris, Greco, Hennessy, Jackson, Taylor.

FEW COMPETITORS IN U.C. TRACK MEET

W. L. Mackay Wins Individual Honours by Three Victories

THOMSON BIG SURPRISE

The comparatively few competitors in the University College track meet, which was held in the Stadium on Friday afternoon, gave each other spirited competition to make each event worth the watching. H. M. Thomson, an unknown freshman, sprang the surprise of the day by leading both sprint fields to the tape. The quarter and half mile runs saw N. L. Campbell turn in his usual heady race to finish first both times. Individual honours went to W. L. Mackay by his capturing all three jumps. Perhaps the most outstanding performance of the afternoon was Grant's winning javelin throw of 137 feet 7 inches. The results were:

220 yds.—Thomson, McMaster, Turner.

Shot put—McMaster, Cooper, Roy.
Discus—Roy, Campbell.
High jump—Mackay, Jones, Roy.
440 yds.—Campbell, Cooper, McMaster.

880 yds.—Campbell, Huether, Grant.
1 mile—Huether, Jones.
Javelin—Grant, McMaster, Campbell.

Pole vault—Mackay.
Broad jump—Mackay, McMaster, Roy.

Officials—H. Philips, C. Martin, G. Jernyn, W. Kibblewhite.

given by an active observer and reporter direct from the scene of the strike, Frank Love, business manager of "The Masses" magazine.

"While the Stratford strike has been in the headlines for over a week one must not imagine that it is a sudden, peculiar thing, to merit such prominence. The newspapers would have us believe such is the case," he observed. "It's not an isolated phenomena—it's part of the surging wave of struggle that has been growing for years until it has now assumed the proportions of an international crisis. The strike shows in miniature what on a world scale is determining the fate of nations."

"We are brought up to believe the state is above class prejudice, that it is utterly impartial in its attitude to all levels of society. Yet it is obvious that state-power right here in Ontario is used for the benefit of the minority (the industrialists) in an attempt to suppress the struggles of the majority (the workers) for better working conditions."

In a scorching tirade Attorney-General Price was blamed for the sending out of state troops and tanks to quell any "violence" on the part of the strikers, as directly representing the interests of the great financial corporations. "And now he actually attempts to deny it!" stated Mr. Love, and added laughingly, "You'll note he has postponed the elections so that the bad taste left in the general mouth by this Stratford occurrence will have been cleansed by that time."

With striking vividness of detail the speaker depicted the subtler technical aspects of the situation. He described in an amusing manner highlights of his experiences in interviewing the strikers and especially the girls. "I am convinced," he said, "that as long as the Stratford girls have a crust of bread to eat, they will not go back to the same degrading conditions. Far from rendering a gloomy atmosphere to the Classic City, the troops, who paraded every day, disseminate on the contrary, a spirit more akin to levity. They swell out their many chests, and the girls pass remarks, complimentary and otherwise."

"If the workers of Stratford, led by the 'Workers' Unity League', strike organizers, win this strike, it will be a long step forward for all workers in Canada, a 'striking' example that strikes can be won," was the view expressed by S. Kaplansky, chairman of the meeting.

Two resolutions were read by Miss Waits and adopted by the members of the League; first, that a written protest against the sending of troops be forwarded to the proper authorities, and secondly, that a note of greeting pledging the moral and financial support of the Student League of Canada be sent at once to the strikers.

U.C. FALL DANCE DATE IS CHANGED

The bewildering rapidity with which the date of the University College Fall Dance was changed last week from the 20th to the 18th and finally the 25th of October has caused some confusion about the campus. The executive thinks that some explanation is in order. The first change was a concession to those wishing to attend the Charity Ball at the Royal York, and the second (and final), was necessary because of the fact that Wednesday, October 18th, had been set aside by the sororities for one of their rushing parties. It is hoped that no serious inconvenience has been caused.

The U.C. Fall Dance will be held as stated above, on Wednesday, October 25th, in the Crystal Ballroom of the King Edward Hotel, Luigi Romanelli providing the music. Admission will be $2.20 per couple (tax included).

enough, they were polished rather than deeply moving, hard and polished throughout. No real pathos was revealed in them. This is not a matter of superficiality: such a charge would be a libel on this fine artist. But it is a significant point of temperament. Very characteristic of M. Dupre was his brilliant Carillon. The improvisation at the end, on themes submitted by Toronto musicians, was, of course, memorable. And it was pleasant to see a Toronto audience as enthusiastic as that one. Let us hope that Yorkminster Choir finds itself able to bring this astonishing master to us again.

Sketch Room

The present exhibition in the Sketch Room is good and interesting and its sponsors are to be commended for including the works of so varied schools of painting, Symbolism, Expressionism, as well as Portraits and some Water-Colours. Their value is uneven, of course, yet, everyone will find satisfaction from a visit. Strange as it may seem the works are not predominantly modern, that is if we accept the definition that "modern art is anti-realistic", not picture-like, in a word. But perhaps the public is still largely under the idea that a Saturday Night cover, or any Greek statue from the third century B.C. is the last and highest standard in Art?

Among the many water-colours F. Carmichael's "North Ontario", P. Hawthorth's "Forest and Water", and S. Turner's "Quebec" are works that remain in your eyes. Alone in her style, Miss D. Stevens' "Native Girl" is both striking and forceful; it has something in it of Rodin's "Eve", and to me it is one of the best works exhibited.

Of the four portraits shown by Y. B. Zrikinkow, G. Davies, Marion Long and E. W. Grier, all are very similar to their models certainly—but then a picture may be as good—though the three first artists make good use of colours and contrast. Near the fire place hangs a rather arresting impressionistic landscape—unsigned unfortunately—a good example of modern painting even though a bit cold.

One of the most impressive, if not the most, landscape, is Miss M. E. Winch's "Top of the Hill" that communicates to you what the painter felt in front of her stormy passage. G. A. Kulmala's "Canoe Lake", R. K. Courtice's "Valley" are well worth seeing, too, not only interesting but living works. Of the Group of Seven Messrs. L. Harris and Lismer are the best representatives yet without overshadowing all the other paintings. The puzzle of the exhibit is C. Comfort's symbolic grey block of wood against a cold steel blue background called "Louise"—allusion? reminiscence? . . . Almost everyone looking at T. MacDonald's "Moonlight in an Orchard" wonders why a rabbit got lost in it; why indeed? though the artist may well reply: Why not?

There are more paintings but who wants to hear or look long at picture-like paintings of a grain elevator, or "Depression", even more of a bowling game at night?

still rowing slower and seemingly with greater ease than McGill and kept this lead to within a half a mile of the finish.

Then the excitement became intense as the Red crew, dipping their oars at the rate of 40 strokes per minute as compared with Varsity's 38, slowly decreased the lead and crept up to within a half a length of the Blue and White shell as the finish gun sounded.

Both crews fell over their oars in almost complete exhaustion and even after the finishing shot had been fired, some of Varsity crew did not know who had won.

This is the eighth time that Varsity and McGill have competed in this fixture and six consecutive victories have now gone to Toronto, none any closer than the latest. Varsity were down in weight from last year by an average of twenty pounds per man, while McGill were both heavier than their rivals and heavier than last year. Also they were rowing with seven of their last year's crew while the local shell contained only two intercollegiate senior veterans.

The crews were as follows:

McGill — Cox, Campbell; stroke, Gales; No. 2, Elliott; No. 3, Johnson; No. 4, Blumer; No. 5, Smith; No. 6, Carter; No. 7, DuBois; bow, Jost.

operate. Hundreds joined the movement and signed the pledge. Some of the promises were: "To work for the stoppage of the manufacture and transport of munitions and all materials of war." "To support in every way and especially by militant action against student seething any section of the workers who by strike or otherwise decide to take action against war." "To expose the militarism of the Universities, the use of laboratories for research in poison gas and munitions and the militarist character of celebrations such as Empire Day, Armistice Day, etc.; and to fight against official support of the O.T.C."

Some of the slogans used on the demonstrations were "Workers and Students Unite to Fight War", "No More Guns for Japan", "Scholarships not Battleships",—the last inspired by the recent increased expenditure on the fighting services and decreased expenditure on education.

As some of the students interviewed yesterday suggested, such an organisation was bound to clash with the O.T.C. In Cambridge the movement had to contend also with the Fascist party, an avowedly war-making organisation. Opposition helped more than anything to spread the movement, which is rapidly going ahead.

wondering whether it would come far enough. That was the touchdown that won us the Dominion Championship. L.C.: Gee, tell me some more. (He doesn't really want to hear any more, but we have to give the Old Gentleman an opportunity to get his breath.)

O.G.: Well, let me see. Oh, yes, there was the time when Argos played Hamilton, and we made a 75-yard run in the last ten seconds to win the game. (Why do these long runs and desperate passes always happen in the last ten seconds on the stage? You're asking me! But let the Old Gentleman finish.) Everybody seemed to be all over the field on that play. I nearly stepped over the side-line and ended the play, but someone shoved me back in time. It broke my jaw and knocked out seven teeth, but it was worth it to win the game for dear old Argos.

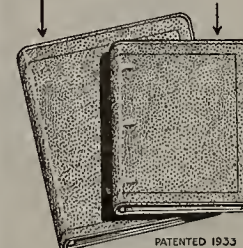

L.C.: But I thought you were with Varsity.

O.G.: Oh, I was with all the Toronto teams when I was a lad. I was so eager about the games, there wasn't one played in the city where you wouldn't find me, always in the same position, working my head off to help things along.

L.C.: Gee, Grampa, what was your position?

O.G.: Right in the front line, my boy. The front line of the cheering section. I never missed a game. Shrdlu.

MUCH INTEREST IN LIBERAL CLUB FORMATION SHOWN

Club Might Prove Popular Under Certain Conditions

WOMEN'S CLUB DISCUSSED Mixed Club Conducive to Intelligent Discussion of Politics

Whether or not a Liberal Club would be popular on the campus was a question to which few students were willing to give a definite answer when interviewed by The Varsity yesterday. However, most of them were of the opinion that such a club might prove popular under certain conditions.

A. C. Smith, II Political Science, was a little skeptical of the outcome of a Liberal movement of that kind, asserting that "the popularity of a Liberal Club will depend upon whether the Liberal party swings to the left and announces a definite liberal policy on which to base its campaign during the next election period." He added that the present indefinite stand of the Liberals would discourage any student interest in the Liberal party. When questioned in regard to the formation of a women's Liberal Club, Smith was not inclined to express an opinion, however.

Wilson, IV Victoria, believed that a Liberal Club might prove popular and if so, it would be likely to create student interest in politics and possibly to put a little renewed life into the existing Liberal party. Questioned about a similar club exclusively for women, Wilson replied that, since men and women were in politics together, a mixed club would probably be more conducive to the intelligent discussion of political questions.

Declaring that a Liberal Club would probably be about as popular as most of the student organizations, Al Campbell, II Victoria, added that it would give the students further opportunity for discussing political questions and for furthering ideas along Liberal lines. Concerning a women's Liberal Club, however, Campbell was much less enthusiastic; he remarked that "women have enough ways at present for causing trouble without entering clubs for political discussions."

ADVICE TO SCRIBES GIVEN PRESS CLUB

Mrs. Muir Points Out Aids in Short Story Writing

PERSISTENCE NECESSARY

"The two biggest things in short story writing are the recognition of story material and the persistence necessary to carry one through the difficult period of apprenticeship," said Norma Phillips Muir, addressing the Women's Press Club yesterday. "Years of disappointment, years of study must be put in before a writer really can arrive," she continued.

According to Mrs. Muir the first requisite in a would-be author is the ability to read, firstly oneself to see if the essentials for a good writer are there, secondly material. Question if you can see drama, pathos, comedy, in the little everyday commonplaces all around us. Train yourself to do that. Then go on the staff of a big daily newspaper," is Mrs. Muir's advice. There one learns about life and most important of all learns the art of condensation—of taking the meat out of

HONORARY DEGREES

The Varsity is informed that, in connection with the re-opening of the Royal Ontario Museum a Special Convocation will be held in Convocation Hall at 8.30 p.m. to-morrow, for the purpose of conferring the degree of Doctor of Laws (honoris causa) upon the following: Charles Greeley Abbot, Esq., Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, Washington. James Brock O'Brien, Esq., Chairman, Board of Trustees, Royal Ontario Museum. Mrs. H. D. Warren, Vice-Chairman, Board of Trustees, Royal Ontario Museum. Sigmund Samuel, Esq., Member of the Board of Trustees, Royal Ontario Museum.

STRIKING CHANGES AT MASSEY HALL

Rebuilding of Lobby and Addition of Lounge Are Improvements

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

Massey Hall has a new dress. Last night, Toronto's dowager auditorium ushered in the approaching musical season in a surprisingly modern gown. Music lovers will find the old Hall strangely changed. The entrance, with its glaring lights and its ugly panelled walls and the worn wooden floor has been illuminated and decorated in Chinese red with a floor of grey and black terrazzo and a ceiling of gold and blue. Now the gallery will have an entirely separate entrance and stairs, and the ground floor will be connected directly with the lobby by a new ramp.

On the balcony floor, patrons will find a lounge, a long-desired commodity, decorated in gold and light blue. The auditorium, as well, has been completely renovated. The old multi-colored ceiling is now one solid dove grey and the walls are a warm red with baseboards of black and gold.

The renovation was instituted by the Massey Foundation, of which the Honourable Vincent Massey is Directing Trustee. Mathers and Haldenby were the designing architects. The Hall will open under new management, Mr. Wilfred C. James, a member of the senate of Victoria College is the director and Mr. Ross Creelman, a former sporting editor of The Varsity, as his assistant.

FIRE DAMAGE NOT LARGE AT DR. GORDON'S OFFICE

Early Morning Blaze Believed Caused by Defective Wiring

On Friday, at 6 a.m., a startled milkman saw flames shooting from a basement window of Dr. Gordon's office, 44 Hoskin Ave. District Chief Tate responded to the alarm, ladders were thrown up, streams of water were turned on the building and excitement reigned. But contrary to reports in the daily papers there was no spectacular damage.

Instead of the gaping hole we had been led to expect we found the floor intact. There was a strong smell of smoke and dark patches on the walls. The real damage is in the basement where the timbers are charred, the windows broken and everything burned but the coal. The blistered paint in cellarway and kitchen gives evidence of the heat of the fire.

Mr. Maxwell said yesterday in Simcoe Hall that the fire had been started by a short circuit in the wiring. Though the exact amount of damage is not yet known it is well covered by the insurance.

STATE CONDITIONS OF RHODES AWARD FOR COMING YEAR

Distinction in Personality,
Character and Intelligence Required

APPLICATIONS DUE NOV. 10 Two Scholarships Awarded Annually in This Province

Applications for the Rhodes Scholarships should be handed to the Secretary of the Committee of Selection for the Province of Ontario, Henry Borden, Esq., 320 Bay St., no later than November 10. Two scholarships are awarded annually in this province by the committee, which holds sittings in this city to review the records of the applicants and interview them.

The Rhodes Scholarships Memorandum states, "Distinction both in character and personality and in intellect is the most important requirement for a Rhodes Scholarship, and it is upon this that committees will insist. Success in being elected to office in student organizations may or may not be evidence of leadership in the true sense of the word. Mr. Rhodes evidently regarded leadership as consisting in moral courage and in interest in one's fellow men quite as much as in the more aggressive qualities. Physical vigour is an essential qualification for a Rhodes Scholarship but athletic skill is of less importance than the moral qualities developed in playing outdoor games. The strongest candidate should be appointed regardless of his financial circumstances. In general candidates will be preferred who will be under the age of 23 when they get into residence at Oxford. In the absence of a strong candidate the committees will make no appointment." Candidates may obtain application

New Band Uniforms

New uniforms are a big event in the life of a brass band. Even of a university brass band. When U. of T. invaded Montreal last week-end those glittering, spanking new blue and white uniforms were a great contribution to the general optimism of that highly successful expedition, according to Mr. E. Alex. MacDonald, S. A. C. general secretary, who had the band under his wing during the excursion.

As for the trip itself, "Not many know," said Mr. MacDonald, "that it was through the generosity of the President of this University and a few of his friends, and through the efforts of the Students' Administrative Council, who secured the low rate from the railroad, that the excursion was made possible."

Schoolmen Lose Their Pantaloons Climb Trees Like Young Baboons

Ancient tradition held sway again at S.P.S. yesterday. Driven to a frenzy by the taunts and jeers of "fresh" freshmen, maddened by the tall tales of ancient battles retold by seniors and juniors, torn asunder by internal strife, the sophomores of the ancient Schoolhouse at last rallied at its doors and administered severe chastisement on their green-tinted colleagues.

Summoning all possible troops, the sopho stood guard at the west entrance while freshman storm troops charged. The charge was soon turned into a rout by the more experienced and better organized veterans of the second year. Not content with the mere clipping of ties the sophomores proceeded to remove the nether garments

WILL BROADCAST LECTURE SERIES FROM UNIVERSITY

Lectures by Prof. MacDonald
Well Received by The Public

DATE NOT YET FIXED Will be Similar to Those Given Six Months Ago

Arrangements will be made with the Canadian Radio Broadcasting Commission in the near future for a series of lectures similar to those given six months ago. The previous series was of an anthropological and historical nature. The coming series will make use of those given last year as a basis for further discourse on various topics which will be of wide interest and of cultural value. As final arrangements have not been made the exact date of the first broadcast has not been fixed.

The University does not expect to meet with any opposition from the Commission due to the controversial nature of some of the subjects. It is hoped that the addresses will be every bit as successful as last year and that they will meet with the same enthusiasm which has greeted them previously.

For the past six months Professor J. T. MacDonald of the Department of English, University College, has been delivering lectures every Thursday evening at 8.30 over CKNC entitled "The Latest and Best Books". These broadcasts have been received by the public with warm appreciation throughout Canada. Many letters have been received by Professor MacDonald congratulating him on his talks, the greatest number coming from the Maritime Provinces which reveals the nation-wide success with which his broadcast was received. These talks which will be continued during the coming season, indicate that they will be as interesting as in the past.

Middle House Hike

The trooping trail-seekers from Middle House, Burwash, might have been seen "homeward plodding their weary way" from Lambton Mills this morning anywhere from midnight on, some trailing, others being trailed. It was one of those annual affairs, "hikes" they call them, when the whole house takes possession of a street-car, go somewhere, eat, dance and go somewhere else, some to bed. This time the Middle House men chose Lambton Mills where a nifty little dance hall is to be found, a man to make the fire and cook the weiners, and all modern conveniences. Weiners, coffee and apples were in order until the marshmallows and chelsea buns were discovered.

Vic S.C.M. Groups

The Victoria women's S.C.M. have organized the following groups for their year's programme:
For First and Second Year girls only:

1. A Beginners' group on the study of "Jesus in the Records", to be taken by Miss Bowlby.
2. A group on "Adventurous Living" under Miss Margaret Govan.
3. A Missionary Group under the leadership of Miss Isabel Griffiths.
4. A Junior Group to begin on January 1st on C.G.I.T. Leadership, led by Miss Evelyn Crow.
- For Third and Fourth Year girls only:
1. An advanced group on C.G.I.T. Leadership to be led by Miss Jessie MacPherson.
2. A group on "The Art of Living" under Mr. Wasson.
3. "Reconstruction in Religion" to be taken by Dr. Line.
4. A group on "Rethinking Missions" the leadership not yet decided.
5. A Eugenics Group led by Dr. Marion Hilliard, for Fourth Year girls only.

For Girls of Any Year:
1. A Beginners' Group on the study of "Jesus in the Records" to be led by Mrs. Hutchinson.- 2. A Senior Group on the study of "Jesus in the Records" under the joint leadership of Dr. B. Abbot and Mrs. Hutchinson.

Dr. Cody remarked upon two characteristics that marked the universities of the Middle Ages which were, he said, impressed upon him during his visit to European seats of learning this summer. "The first of these characteristics," said the President, "was their cosmopolitanism. They drew students from all over Europe. The students themselves had a broad loyalty to a university that was making a contribution to the civilization of Western Europe. The other characteristic was their cosmopolitanism. The university must never lose that interest in all things, that international outlook."

O.C.E. ENROLMENT DROPS THIS YEAR

Only About 475 Expected as Compared with 510
Last Year

INCREASE IN FEES

According to information given to The Varsity at the Ontario College of Education, there are not as many young men and women seeking admission to the teaching profession at the present time as there were a year ago. Although some 510 registrations were made in the fall of 1932, present indications are that when enrolments are completed they will be in the neighbourhood of 475, a drop of about 7 per cent. A possible explanation of the decrease in attendance is the fact that, whereas the tuition fees paid by all students was $25 a year ago, this year residents of the province who wish to enrol must pay a fee of $50 and non-residents of the province a fee of $100. Despite this sizable increase, however, so far 25 pupils have come in from points outside the province. (Continued on Page 3)

SEASON TICKET DEMAND AMONG WOMEN IS SLOW

Should Pick Up Before Came on Saturday States
Miss Parkes

The rugby season is now in full swing. Each game brings new thrills and new victors. The women, as usual, are giving their ardent support to the home teams from what could be seen at the Stadium on Saturday. But from a report from Miss Parkes of the Women's S.A.C. office, the sale of season tickets to women is rather slow.

Miss Parkes could not give a very definite report of the number of season tickets sold to date but she placed her estimate at a little over three hundred. This number is lower than that of last year at the same time. However, hopes are held that the sale will speed up during the coming week.

Miss Parkes said that the fall in sales might be accounted for by the fact that there was no big game over Thanksgiving week-end. The first intercollegiate senior home game is to

FRESHMEN ENJOY FINE ADDRESSES AT U.C. BANQUET

President Cody Stresses Need of Loyalty to University

DR. WALLACE PRESENT Admirable Qualities of Hart House Pointed Out by Warden Bickersteth

"Always add to your college loyalty, your loyalty to the University as a whole, and don't forget to translate that loyalty into constant action," was the advice of Dr. H. J. Cody, President of the University, in his address at the annual Soph-Fresh banquet of University College held in Hart House last evening. "In the world to-day, nationalism is becoming almost rabid. It seems to me, however, that nationalism is a necessary basis but nationalism is complementary to internationalism. You are called upon to do your best through your own particular contribution to your own nation to contribute to the world at large. And so it is with college. You have your own contribution to make to University College but do not forget your loyalty to the wider academic entity—the University of Toronto."

Dr. Cody remarked upon two characteristics that marked the universities of the Middle Ages which were, he said, impressed upon him during his visit to European seats of learning this summer. "The first of these characteristics," said the President, "was their cosmopolitanism. They drew students from all over Europe. The students themselves had a broad loyalty to a university that was making a contribution to the civilization of Western Europe. The other characteristic was their cosmopolitanism. The university must never lose that interest in all things, that international outlook."

'C.C.F. ON CAMPUS TO STAY' IS OPINION

25 Selected Members Form Nucleus of New Group

WILL PUBLISH OWN PAPER

The C.C.F. has definitely arrived on the campus, according to H. Gordon Skilling, the chief organizer. The university branch has already been formed and plans for the year are under way. The group will not be affiliated with the national body, Mr. Skilling said. C.C.F. clubs elsewhere are organized by constituencies and are linked for electoral purposes. The university club will be quite independent, at the same time believing in the doctrine of the party as set forth in the Manifesto.

The membership at present, The Varsity learned, consists of 25 selected individuals as a nucleus, whose number will be later augmented through a membership drive towards the end of the month.

It is the purpose of the executive to produce a four page newspaper which will give an account of the various activities of the body. The first number will appear on Monday, October 23, as part of the campaign for members. After this date it will come forth periodically.

The first meeting of the C. C. F. will be held on October 24, when arrangements will be made for a series of monthly meetings open to everyone and for study groups.

ESPERANTO, AN INTERNATIONAL LANGUAGE

Esperanto is to be taught in the University this year in the evening classes conducted by the Department of University Extension. This international language, which was introduced for world-wide use some forty-five years ago, has become very popular with those whose interests and occupations necessitate constant communication with people of other nationalities. Consequently a lectureship in Esperanto has been established in various well-known universities, such as Liverpool University.

One of the chief arguments in favour of Esperanto is that it breaks down the language barrier, which is one of the greatest obstacles to international friendship and understanding. The Esperanto Press, which contains news of all countries, has already shown that it can be a powerful aid to international stability and peace. As the knowledge of the language spreads its possibilities become apparent, indeed, international congresses and political organisations are even now greatly facilitating their work by the use of the new form of speech. There are to-day some 130,000 Esperantists in one hundred countries, and these claim that Esperanto is in fact "the living language of a living people."

Esperanto has been adopted by religious denominations and organisations of various kinds. For twenty-two years a non-sectarian divine service has been held monthly in the city of London, and in 1926 the Bible was issued in Esperanto. The blind have found the new language a boon which gives the opportunity of keeping in touch with their fellows throughout the world, and the Braille magazine Esperanta Ligilo is circulated in thirty countries.

Commercial interests have found Esperanto to be of great value, and over fifty Chambers of Commerce have passed resolutions favouring the use of it. Esperanto words are being used as trade names, and a score of systems of shorthand have been adapted to the international language. It has been recognised by postal authorities, and by the international Telegraphic Union. The Soviet authorities have issued several stamps with Esperanto text.

Its recognition by scientists may be seen in the fact that the Esperantist Medical Society publishes the Internacia Medicina Revuo, and a detailed medical dictionary is just off the press. Some fifty radio stations in Europe use the language for broadcasting programmes. The British Esperanto Association has a library of nearly 13,000 volumes, and a great many magazines are published in the language. A collection of six hundred songs is the contribution the language has made to the musical world, and numerous dramatic performances have proven the value of Esperanto for the stage.

Apart from its use by those who travel, Esperanto makes a contribution to civilisation in numerous ways. It has been in use a comparatively short time, and its scope is as yet limited. The language may yet have a tremendous influence upon international affairs. Its value has been recognised by some of the world's leading educational centres. We would suggest that if the course offered by the Department of University Extension proves popular and practical, that it be added to the Arts curriculum.

We are told that Esperanto is easy to learn and speak, and that it is clear, flexible and expressive. It has flourished for nearly half a century. It is proved to give a better knowledge of the mother tongue, and of grammar in general. It is also a valuable aid to the learning of foreign languages. Esperanto might well be offered as a course for the student who is taking a general education, and would be more appreciated than some of the dead languages which he is compelled to study now. To the student whose field necessitates correspondence and communication with other peoples, the study of an international language would be of great interest and incalculable value.

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

Attention Meds!

Editor, The Varsity,
University of Toronto.
Dear Sir:

Through the columns of your paper I would like to arouse the Medical Society of our University from their lethargy and to stir our large body of Medical Students into long overdue action regarding certain situations which vitally concern them.

It is time that these matters were tackled energetically and worked out with some degree of satisfaction to the long-suffering students. A few of the most important considerations are:

(a) Investigation and reorganization of the entire course from first to sixth year by a combined committee of staff and students with a view to bettering the dearly-paid-for but mediocre instruction in certain departments after paying tuition fees amounting to over $200.

(b) Co-operation of all Canadian Medical Colleges with a view to abolishing the unnecessary Licentiate examination. (Continued on Page 4)

Massey Hall

An almost unduly enthusiastic audience crowded the renovated Massey Hall last night to hear Edward Johnson, Canadian-born tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, assisted by Scott Malcolm and Reginald Godden, in the first of the series of Tuesday evening concerts planned for this year. Mr. Johnson, unfortunately, was not at his best: he was apparently suffering some discomfort from a slight cold, and toward the end of the first half of the programme his voice showed distinct traces of roughness, though not enough to be too painfully obvious.

The most appreciated numbers of Mr. Johnson's first group were Antica Canzone, a traditional Italian song arranged by Giannini, and the familiar aria of Rodolfo from La Bohème. In his second group he included two particularly good French numbers, Serenade Italienne of Ernest Chausson and Debussy's Chevaux de Bois, which stood out in strong contrast to the pair of rather sickly-sweet Brahms lyrics which preceded them, In Waldes-räuschkrit and Der Gang zum Lieben. The fact of the matter is that Edward Johnson is a dramatic tenor rather than a lyric tenor, and while he turns to good effect the dramatic possibilities of almost every number he sings, abstract emotionalism, as found in German lyrics particularly, is out of his field.

seemed considerably refreshed, and though he rather held himself in, his voice was again as clear and pure of tone as could be wished. He was particularly successful with Stop all this idle chatter, a very interesting and lively Nass River Indian folk-song arranged by Dr. Ernest MacMillan, the stirring We Two, Together, by Marshall Kernochan and as an encore, Herbert Hughes' The Spanish Lady.

It is scarcely doing them full justice to state that Scott Malcolm and Reginald Godden assisted Mr. Johnson in the programme, for they contributed their full share to it, and divided the glory equally with him. In their opening number, their own arrangement of Bach's Fantasia and Fugue in G Minor, they pounded a little heavily in the Fantasia, but made up for it when they struck into the compelling rhythm of the Fugue. In the second group they gave a marvellous rendition of their own arrangement of a Rachmaninoff Serenade. A general criticism may be made with regard to piano duets, that because the two pianos form to all intents and purposes one instrument it is necessary for both performers to sink some of their personality, their own sensitiveness of interpretation, to avoid clashing, and there is a resultant tendency to strive rather for technical effects than for creative interpretation. Malcolm and Godden, however, have played— (Continued on Page 4)

The Canadian Microscope

By Isabel M. Jordan

The Christian Renaissance, Professor G. Wilson Knight, MacMillans.

Interpretation is a valuable and dangerous necessity. Professor Knight, in his latest book, The Christian Renaissance, recognizes both its value and its danger. His style is clear and sincere, so that on reading, the book appears strangely simple and the interpretation just and inevitable. The ideas, however, are expressed through images that so blend themselves with the ideas as to become elusive to the analytic intellect when the process of reviewing is begun.

Professor Knight himself mistrusts the analytic pretensions of the intellect and defines his method as an effort towards "an imaginative understanding; first of the prophets and the poets, next of life itself." The book is an interpretation of the New Testament and renaissance poetry in terms of their creative implications in life and their symbolic revelation of the life impulse. Proceeding from and growing directly out of his Shakespearean criticism it arrives at certain fruitful conclusions.

First, through an analysis of the creative process in the Shakespearean art-form, in the symbolism of the New Testament, and in life itself, Professor Knight reaches the conclusion that "Poetic art incarnates in shapes the vague forms of the spiritual world. These shapes are earthly things, they are images, sensory impressions, words of any kind: the forms are indefinable, spiritual realities." The word incarnates attains a rich significance in the book, and when further interpreted in the studies of Jesus as the life-principle expressed in Jesus' divine birth in human flesh, his conclusion assumes a form definitely relative to life, in that neither spiritual nor physical is real in itself. # INTERFACULTY TRACK MEET AT STADIUM TO-DAY AT 1.30

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

Somewhat or other, the faculty tennis tournaments are not turning out to be all that they might be. What with damp days and the resulting damp courts the plans that have been made have had to be revised several times. The holiday week-end also seems to have held up a good many games so that contrary to expectations in the beginning, the players who are to represent their faculties have not as yet been declared.

* * *

University College reports very little doing as game seem to be still recovering from the week-end—or returning—or something—and the courts were too wet anyway. There seems to be a real hold-up at Vic where the entire first round has not yet been completed. Something drastic has to be done about it immediately as after all there is no use mixing tennis balls and snow flakes—which some of the would-be players seem to have in mind. The result is that there are two alternatives open to the manager—either picking out those who appear to be the first ranking players and letting the others challenge in, or marking out of the lists all those who have not played their first round. It is unfortunate that either of these methods have to be used.

Some real progress seems to have been made by St. Hilda's who are almost down to the semi-finals. The results of the St. Mike's tournament will probably be available to-morrow afternoon. Betty Shanahan and Rosamund McCullough have been outstanding so far and will no doubt make the team. As soon as the rest of these faculty games are run off—may it be in the very near future—final arrangements can be made concerning the interfaculty which, of necessity cannot be far away when we remember that the Intercollegiate Tournament is scheduled for October 20-21.

JUNIOR BLUES WIN EXHIBITION MATCH

Youngsters Show Good Form in Trimming Malvern 12 to 1

GRAY'S KICKING FEATURE

Varsity's junior football squad defeated Malvern Collegiate by the score of 12-1 yesterday afternoon on the back campus. The Junior Blues were full value for their win, scoring a placement in the first quarter, a converted touch and a safety in the third, and a rouge in the final quarter. The game served as an excellent practice, both teams' coaches taking advantage of the opportunities to point out errors to their respective charges under actual fire.

The entire backfields played exceptionally well for Varsity as did Willoughby, Strachan and Miller. Swardfager was outstanding on the visitors' half-line, Penney, Noble and Warner also playing heads-up football.

In the first quarter an exchange of kicks brought the Blue juniors in position for a placement from thirty yards out and Gray made no mistake on the play. Gray's kicking played an important part in Varsity's victory, his long hoists frequently giving much needed relief. Malvern completed two forward passes and scored a single to

TRACK TEAMS SHOW CHANGES IN YEAR

U.C. Team Loses Strength it Had in Maundrell and Engel

KIBBLEWHITE INJURED

The track and field season of the University will be officially ushered in this afternoon when the Interfaculty Track and Field Meet takes place.

The meet gets under way at 1.30 p.m. and takes place at the Varsity Stadium.

University College, last year's champions, will not be as strong as last year owing to the loss of Maundrell and Engel, who, along with Hickey of School, tied for first place in the individual championship.

S.P.S. has a large list of entries and there should be a close battle between School and U.C. for first place.

Several of last year's intercollegiate team are entered, among them Smith of School and Dore of Dents in the sprints, Stewart and Hamilton in the pole vault, the latter also in the high jump and hurdles, and Westheuser of School, who is the holder of the intercollegiate discus hurling record. Kibblewhite, one of Wycliffe's main threats in the three mile run, will not be in action owing to a leg injury. This will leave Seaborn of Trinity, MacGladdery of Meds and Gilbert of Wycliffe, intercollegiate champ in 1928, to battle for the honours in the distance event.

There will be several new men who will bear watching in to-day's meet. Isbister, the Hamilton Delta athlete who is doing the kicking for the second football team, was an outstanding field man in interscholastic circles and is entered in the javelin, discus and shot-put. McGuire of University of Saskatchewan is in the quarter-mile event, and Passmore, who has come from McMaster to O.C.E., should give a good account of himself in the high and low hurdles.

dominate the second quarter, and Miller stopped Swardfager from dashing through to a major score by a sensational tackle.

Varsity scored a touch in the third quarter when Phillips recovered Penney's fumble inside Malvern's goal-line. Powell and Willoughby combined on a forward pass to convert the touch. Gray's long hoists gradually forced Malvern down the field and Powell finally attempted a placement kick, which just fell short. A bad snap by Malvern rolled behind the posts and Forbes was smothered by Blue tacklers for a safety touch.

The last quarter was played in semi-darkness and was featured by an 80-yard punt by Gray and some fine plunging by Willoughby.

Varsity—Flying wing, T. Powell; halves, Gray, Storey, Humenick; snap, Jacobs; quarter, Miller; insides, Holt, O'Connell; middles, Willoughby, Morrison; outsides, Woods, Reid; subs, Buck, Vaughan, Ripley, Cochfield, Tafts, Caldwell, Pritchard, Rodway, Stornach, G. Powell, Strachan, Phillips.

Malvern—Flying wing, Watson; halves, Swardfager, Forbes, Penney; quarter, Turner; snap, McPherson; insides, Powell, Warner; middles, Duke, McKeon; outsides, Milne, Ballagh;

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By J. A. Rummels

Three wins in one day is not a bad beginning for intercollegiate teams and should certainly fill the most dubious fans with some ray of optimism. One of them was our first intercollegiate title for the season and we hope, one of many. The other two were rugby victories, one senior and one intermediate, and they all happened last Saturday.

* * *

Just how keenly contested the rowing race was can be judged from some remarks that escaped from Coach Loudon. After the race was finished he exclaimed, "The best race I have ever seen. I cannot understand how those boys made such time under such conditions." The course, it will be remembered, was two miles long and was covered in 11 minutes and 48 seconds. He also had high praise for the gritty battle that McGill put up on that last stretch. This is unusual from a man who is so taciturn and reserved.

This statement of Coach Loudon's appears all the more striking when it is borne in mind that he has been coaching Varsity crews ever since 1920. His record of six consecutive wins also shows that he has produced the best of teams in this period. It is a fine record. But when such an idea was related to him at his hotel after the race he quickly replied, "Don't forget that Cambridge has beaten Oxford in ten consecutive years!" In the same interview he said, "Give the boys all the credit; they have worked day and night to prepare themselves." These remarks will perhaps give some indication of the type of man who guides the Rowing Club's endeavours and why he is so universally popular around the campus. This is not a eulogy, but merely a case of getting down to brass tacks.

Professor Loudon's theory of rowing, by glancing at his achievements, seems wholesome enough. He maintains that if a crew pulling with long, slow strokes, can keep up with a hard pulling at a faster rate, then the easy-stroking crew will be fresher at the finish. This seems very simple and certainly is logical, but to know how hard a coxswain's position is and how hard it is to follow orders, you should have watched Sam Hughes in action in Montreal. Sam, who handled the race so beautifully is, incidentally, in his last year. The crew will only bequeath three men to next year's enrollment. They are Greenwood, Lennox and Barton.

The senior rugby game with McGill was widely known as the crucial game of the season. Perhaps this was true and perhaps McGill were over-rated. In any case, the local team was not hard pressed for a victory and with this milestone behind them the way is open for predictions as to the future. McGill certainly appear to be the strongest of the three remaining senior teams which also speaks well for Varsity advancement, but they have a faculty of suddenly turning into formidable opposition before their season ends.

* * *

The intermediates defeated Queen's by a 3-0 score. Evidently it was a case of one team being just a little worse than the other. The intermediates will meet stiff opposition in the future and might profit considerably by such an experience as was last Saturday's game. They are a good team, but perhaps their best policy would be to start tightening up right at the beginning of the season.

* * *

The interfaculty tennis tournament is all over and to the winner, Gord Shields, go the laurels, after eliminating by large scores in both cases Bill Pigott and Sid Hermant. The men's intercollegiate tournament is to be held in Kingston on the 19th, 20th, and 21st of this month. The team is under consideration now, but will probably be chosen from the end men of the interfaculty tournament and will include these three. With such a trio to do battle for the Blue and White, some fine matches are in store, if not a title.

The speaker then enumerated the various parts of a story and commented upon them. The title, she said, is vastly important. It should intrigue the curiosity and should preferably not tell anything about the story. The introduction must have punch, a very definite appeal of drama, of humour, of clever dialogue or of description for the reader's decision whether to read on or not is made in the first four minutes of reading.

Plot fabric, balance and rhythm and subject matter were discussed in turn. Summing up, Mrs. Muir described the necessary qualities of a good writer to be an ability to read what one lacks and to make up that lack, a sense of rhythm, an appreciation of alliteration, a gift of words and perseverance.

ince, as compared with 42 last term. Although the office at the College was skeptical about making any statement concerning the number of graduates who had obtained positions in the teaching profession, it was ventured as a tentative estimate that between one-third and one-half of those who had obtained their degree last summer are now teaching.

An interesting feature of the enrolment this year is the predominance of women over the men. There are approximately 100 more members of the fairer sex registered than there are men, a great increase over last term, when the attendance was fairly evenly divided between the two.

be played on Saturday, October 14 between Western and Varsity. It is expected that many who had given no thought to the purchase of a season ticket will be rudely awakened by the imminence of the first big game.

Some freshies when approached by The Varsity agreed that a season ticket gave the holder good value for the money spent, but they said they had not bought theirs yet because of a shortage in funds.

A good number of the freshies in residence at Whitney Hall when interviewed had already purchased their tickets while three or four were contemplating the purchase.

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

LIBERAL CLUB FORMATION TOPIC FOR DISCUSSION

B. G. Saunders, I Victoria, was convinced that a Liberal Club would prove popular among Varsity students who were interested in questions of a political nature. He thought that the recent summer schools held by the Liberal and Conservative parties had awakened interest in political discussions and that they may have contributed to the popularity of a students' Liberal Club. Saunders favoured a mixed club, however, for the present; a women's club could be formed later if such a venture seemed desirable, he thought.

A more pessimistic reply, however, was elicited from L. R. Graham, III Arts. He told The Varsity that a Liberal Club, in his opinion, would not prove popular, because the Conservatives in Toronto are too strong. He believed a Conservative Club would be much more popular on the campus.

Shea's—

All those who like to take in a real display of the "Black Art" will find plenty of entertainment in Thurston's act at Shea's this week.

By way of warming up, Thurston places a young lady in mid-air, and allows her to drift around over the stage, supported, so far as the audience can discern, by nothing in particular. Just when one is beginning to fear that she must surely suffer a forced landing, prest! she disappears. Another young lady is, to all appearances, sawn through, without suffering from the experience, although she claims to suffer from a tickling sensation. But the chef d'oeuvre of the evening is the act in which an Indian maiden is swung aloft in a basket above the orchestra, and, after the basket is covered over for a moment, is seen to have disappeared into thin air. A few seconds later a small trunk comes swinging down onto the stage (collect), with the missing damsel inside.

The story of "One Sunday Afternoon", the talkie which supplements Thurston's act, is rather out of the ordinary, and certainly well done. The tale is that of a spite marriage in the days when the merry-go-round was the highlight of an evening's fun in town. Gary Cooper as "Biff" Grimes, the disappointed lover, and Fay Wray, the wife whom he finally realizes to be his true soul mate, do some excellent acting. Roscoe Karns, who plays the part of "Snappy" the village clown, supplies the humour of the picture. A Universal Newsreel completes the programme.

but only in so far as they are united. The creative act in art then, is not mysterious, in its union of spiritual and physical, but rather an act by the individual, analogous to the life-process itself which is made up of the spiritual and the physical gloriously symbolized by the Christ.

His second conclusion then is that Christianity is important not so much as a factual reality, since facts are not real in themselves but only in relation to ideas, but as an expression of the principle of life as the incarnation of the divine. This leads to another conclusion concerning the nature of reality which is fruitful and which can be used by artists and critics to advantage. He concludes that "If experience alone be real, and neither the experienced nor the experienced have complete reality, we see at once that reality is extra-human, super-personal; related to humanity and to human action and never to the person."

On this basis, that reality is a relation, Professor Knight attempts to interpret such mysteries as the Virgin Birth, Death, Immortality and Life. His approach to these mysteries is through the examination of analogies in art. As Professor Knight affirms, this approach is the most congenial to the modern mind, and indeed, the synthesis attempted in this book which prophesies a Christian Renaissance, and deals with the romantic poets, Dante, Goethe, and Shakespeare, and also T. S. Eliot, is undoubtedly the most fruitful synthesis of literature and life that has appeared in modern times.

Whether it is possible for the reader to accept all the conclusions reached by Professor Knight or not, it is nevertheless true that his method is fruitful, and the sincerity of his attitude makes certain that he will be able in future writings to deepen our appreciation of both literature and life, which is what the modern mind most urgently seeks, and in dedicating himself to this task, Professor Knight is doing work which will never be in vain, since it is itself possessed of the creative principle which Mr. Knight interprets so ably.

If Mr. Knight can defend his intuitions intellectually, and he admits the invalidity of intuitions which cannot look. A university must never forget its loyalty to the whole world."

The speaker pointed out that the university was a great place in which to learn a true sense of values—"One of the greatest lessons which can be learned. Also, he said, the university is the place to acquire a sense of relationships. "Everybody ought to have some measure of philosophy in his life or in his soul. Never forget the search for universal relations. You must have some philosophy of life, some philosophical interpretation of what you are seeking."

H. G. Skilling presided as toastmaster of the banquet. A welcome to the freshmen was extended by Mr. J. B. Bickersteth, Warden of Hart House, by an interesting manner outlined the opportunities offered by Hart House to undergraduates in art, music, the theatre, literature and the Student Christian Movement. The toast to University College was proposed by Mr. W. W. Secombe, president of second year. Dr. M. W. Wallace, principal of the College, responded. Dr. Wallace said that two things principally may be hoped for at college: the opportunity to grow in self-knowledge, and the opportunity to develop an interest in the world of men, "for," he said, "you have really unique opportunities to develop that interest here." In concluding the principal admonished the students to avoid partisanship. He extended a very cordial be so defended, his interpretations should be accepted by an increasing number of people who are temperamentally opposed to his ideas, and his intellectual defence becomes stronger in each book, so that this acceptance is likely. In the Christian Renaissance the intellectual defence is clear and convincing, but many of the matters dealt with are themselves incapable of intellectual explanation. When dealing with matters less difficult the defence is crystal clear, and to any student of literature, they are invaluable for illuminating certain romantic complexities that are fast becoming inexplicable to the scientific-economic consciousness of the contemporary

The toast to the University was proposed by the president of first year, Mr. Paul Bridle, elected yesterday afternoon, who stated, "If I were asked to say what was the greatest contribution that the University of Toronto has made to Canada, it is co-ordination—intellectual and social." The speaker took occasion to retort on the sophomores with a few well-chosen remarks and proposed the toast in an appropriate manner.

Art Gallery

Modern American Painting, a gallery of Portraits by Kenneth B. Forbes, a selection of British photographs are the main sections of the new exhibit now shown at the Art Gallery.

American painting is represented by works of Robert Henri, George Lucke and A. B. Davis. To those who read Henri's The Art Spirit his paintings are a true and concrete expression of his vision and philosophy of art. His portrait of a Lady in Black, the Gypsy Woman, or the Fish Market Man are arresting because they show clearly the character of the models as seen by the artist. In his landscape of a Summer Storm and a Thunderstorm we are moved because we sense in them the intense feelings they aroused in Henri. George Lucke is more impressionistic and catches your eye from your first steps into the room. His Red-headed Girl, Man with a Parrot, "Bon Vivant", and Mahony City, get you, startle you even. Davies' "Madonna of the Sun" and nudes will shock many while some will enjoy his very personal conception.

Quite different is Mr. Forbes' series of portraits, all very realistic. No doubt his models will appreciate his rendering, yet Forbes' too great care of costumes, chairs and background makes you yearn for more originality. In the above mentioned book R. Henri says: "The average idea of portraiture needs reconstruction. When Rodin made his Balzac he made a great portrait. It is probably not much what Balzac looked like to the ordinary eye but it is the man as Rodin understood him." Judged by this standard Forbes' portraits, though showing great skill are rather terne. Someone has commented the fact that none of his portraits shows a smile, but can we believe that none of his charming feminine models was gay and smiling? Some of Forbes' mountains pictures and smaller portraits show greater depth and a reality that is better than a mere realism.

The Times' collection of British photos contain many fine and impressive views, such as those of the last aerial expedition to Mt. Everest; they are simple and wonderfully realistic, all that we can ask from a photograph. A view of Mount Everest, especially, appearing between two layers of clouds is most thrilling for all mountain lovers. There are also some fine photos of sailing in a stiff breeze, English countryside is also well represented, though one regrets that hunting scenes, which cannot give us the colour element, are too predominant. Industrial views are few, and usually inferior to the photos taken in this continent, as published by "Fortune" for example.

No visitor to the Art Gallery should miss the small room containing some very good paintings of Monet, Pissarro, L. Hunter, Johnis, H. Knight, and a few other European artists. Nor should the Canadian paintings be overlooked, for Messrs. Harris, Gagnon, Kulmala, T. Thomson and Macdonald show us a most valuable and interesting offering towards a more individualistic rendering of nature.

Montreal, Que., Oct. 9.—It is usual for those who visit western Canada to return with a greater appreciation than ever of the optimism and courage of the people of that part of the country, and my recent trip has only confirmed what others have so often commented, "Mr. E. W. Beatty, K.C., Chairman and President of the Canadian Pacific Railway stated to-night when commenting on his recent western trip, "Notwithstanding drought, frost and the serious damage in some districts done by grasshoppers, the farmers in Saskatchewan and Alberta still retain their buoyant view, and the vacating of lands for those more favourably situated has not reached very large proportions. Direct relief in some portions of the country will again, unfortunately, be necessary during the coming winter. But this, if efficiently administered will be cheerfully given by the taxpayers of the Dominion."

It would be idle to say that the political and financial situation of the western provinces is satisfactory, and one is struck by the obvious fact of the pre-eminent importance of wheat in the prosperity of the west. Developments there and the enormous expenditures on railways, elevators, and the other facilities, have been based upon the assumption that for all time Canada would produce and would be able to sell enormous quantities of wheat to almost 35 per cent of the wheat imported by European and other parts of the world; in other words, while we only enjoyed 14 per cent of the total international trade in wheat and flour in the five year period prior to 1914, we have expanded our acreage sown to wheat from less than ten millions to over twenty-five million acres. Indeed in 1932 the area sown to wheat was 22.2 million acres. This has resulted in large carry overs during the past few years, with the prospect of a substantial amount on hand at the end of the present crop year notwithstanding a relatively light crop. It is a debatable question, therefore, whether we will not have to revise our plans for the west and not place such complete reliance on our ability to export our wheat in the world, and produced under present conditions at costs which are moderate. It would be idle to suggest that this is a universal opinion."

U. OF T. PROFESSORS MADE DISCOVERY OF NEW ANAESTHETIC

Professors V. E. Henderson and G. H. W. Lucas Credited with Find

OPENED UP NEW FIELD

Discovery Made While Searching for Impurity in Ethylene

The discovery of the anaesthetic property of cyclopropane, which has opened up a new field of surgical work, occurred by mere chance, according to Dr. V. E. Henderson, Professor of Pharmacy and Pharmacology here, who, along with Professor G. H. W. Lucas is credited with the find.

It seems that a compound known as ethylene, used as an anaesthetic, when left stored for use in tanks under pressure for some time, developed certain properties unfavourable for its use as an anaesthetic.

Dr. Lucas and Professor Henderson, suspecting that this might be due to the formation of cyclopropane, prepared some of the latter compound and tested it to find out whether it possessed the same harmful properties. Far from discovering any harmful properties, they found out that cyclopropane, which had been classed for years as a chemical curiosity along with thousands of other compounds for which no commercial uses have been found, is itself an anaesthetic much superior to ethylene.

Some research was done here using the compound on animals but the first use of it in surgical work on humans has been made at the Wisconsin General Hospital. It is reported to be not unpleasant to take, having few uncomfortable after-effects and has no harmful cardiac action.

A partial report of the work at the Wisconsin hospital has been presented by Dr. Stiles and Dr. Neff before the Congress of Anaesthetists in session at Chicago.

ELABORATE PROGRAMME

Hon. G. S. Henry to Officiate—Much Credit Due Prof.
Currelly

An important event in the history of the University of Toronto and the Province of Ontario will receive formal recognition this afternoon with the official re-opening of the Royal Ontario Museum. With the construction of the new wing and additions to the collections which have been made possible, the Museum now ranks, as an archaeological museum particularly, among the three most important on this continent and the first five within the British Empire. In a recent expert British survey of the museums within the Empire it was remarked that "outside London and the National Museums of the British Isles generally, possibly the finest collections have been found at Toronto, where the Royal Ontario Museum, the largest of all the Dominion museums, has not only incomparable Canadian collections but also a world-famous collection of Chinese antiquities and art."

An elaborate programme has been arranged for the re-opening ceremonies to-day, commencing at 11 o'clock with a private inspection of the galleries by visiting savants, directors of similar institutions in Canada, the United States and Europe.

Student League Flays Attitude

PRICE DEFENDS STANO

Although the Student League of Canada supported the strikers of Stratford during their past meetings, they have as yet taken no definite action. The strike is now well into its fourth week in an effort to gain recognition of the Chesterfield and Furniture Workers' Industrial Union while the radical voices about the campus laud their efforts and ridiculously visualize a form of progress in the winning of such an attempt. The League to many conservative thinkers is an organization of words and not deeds comprising a band who have pledged themselves to agree with anything radical. The Varsity in endeavouring to learn what else the League intended to do besides sending "protests" and "votes of greeting," heard only criticisms of Attorney-General W. H. Price. Col. Price in his address at Hamilton last week gave convincing explanation.

Students Ask for Combination of University and Medical Council Exams

PROTEST $175 FEE

The consensus of opinion amongst the medical students interviewed to-day by The Varsity was that the licentiate examination which they are required to pass after graduation was absolutely unnecessary and should be abolished. A letter published in yesterday's issue, protesting against this examination sent The Varsity cruising about after opinion concerning this matter.

B. Cohen, II Meds, was in perfect agreement with abolishing the examination in question, stating "The medical licentiate examination is nothing but a lot of graft."

E. L. Davey, 5th Meds, when approached about the matter, stated, "The licentiate examination is an absolute farce. The university and Medical Council examinations should be combined into one."

He further stated that the Medical Council fee of $175 was outrageous.

INCONSEQUENCE

It may seem suspiciously like grave robbing to reopen the question of a pacifist movement on this campus, especially after the liberal applications of cold water which followed the earlier article in this column, but a letter to the Editor which appears elsewhere in this issue has made it clear that the question is by no means closed.

It was particularly interesting to note that among the recent expressions of opinion on the matter there was no condemnation of pacifism whatever. Practically the sole objection which was raised was that pacifism could endure only in times of peace—that it would crumble before the actuality of war. To which point of view, as to all attitudes of defeatism the inescapable rejoinder is that the proof of the pudding is in the eating. No movement can be summarily dismissed as impracticable until it has undergone the test of practice.

And even in this respect it was not so much intimated that convictions would be sunk before a wave of spontaneous militarism, as that they would go under before the campaign of intensive propaganda which always accompanies a state of war. Surely

James Taylor, II Vic. Missing Since Monday

Mystery still shrouds the disappearance of James Taylor, II year Victoria philosophy student, who has been absent from his home since Monday.

It is thought that he went for a hike to Scarboro Bluffs, intimating that he might go swimming. No word has been heard of him since. The aid of police and Victoria students has been enlisted in the search for the missing boy. On Tuesday and Wednesday search parties combed the Scarboro section from Highland Creek to the pavilion without success.

Dr. Brown and Mr. Lawson of Victoria College both emphasized the fact that Taylor kept in close touch with his parents at all times and his unusual absence is of a decidedly serious nature.

GEORGE O. FALLIS AT TRINITY CHURCH

New Pastor Expected to Show
Keen Interest in Students

COMES FROM VANCOUVER

Of special interest to Toronto students is the coming to Trinity United Church this year of Rev. George O. Fallis, who for the past thirteen years has been the minister of Canadian Memorial Church, Vancouver. Mr. Fallis has taken a keen interest in the students of British Columbia, having been a governor of Columbian College and a member of the senate of Union College. He is also an active worker in the field of international understanding and good will, having been for three years president of the League of Nations Society.

The many students who have come to recognise Trinity as their Toronto church home have found it considerably changed upon their return this year. Redecorating, refurbishing and general renovation inside and out have achieved a complete and more than satisfying transformation in the appearance of the building. Among the changes which will be most appreciated is the installation of a modern indirect lighting system.

The work of reconstruction will be of particular interest to the university in view of the unremitting attention which has been paid by this church to the needs of the many students who

PARLIAMENTARY CLUB DEBATE PRISON REFORM

The conditions in Canada's penal institutions and the moot question of prison reform will be harangued by the U.C. Parliamentary Club to-day at its second session.

Commencing the debate for the government, Sid Hermit is expected to demand that a Royal Commission be appointed to investigate the prison situation. Upholding the principles of His Majesty's most loyal opposition, A. C. Smith will open the debate for the opposite side of the house. The verbose Max Patrick will lead his party again in violent renunciation of the government policy.

It is rumoured that the opposition is going to attempt a great gesture for power to amend its disheartening defeat of last week. Information obtained last night from a well-informed source stated that the opposition was going to go beyond the power of the government and to formally declare its lack of confidence in that body.

TAKING OF CENSUS REAL JOB IN NORTH

"Hap" Gilbert Travelled 1700 Miles by Rail—Many More by Plane and Trail

NORTH OF "THE PAS"

Few of us have the opportunity of visiting the far north and it was with this thought in mind that The Varsity sought out one of last year's better known seniors, W. A. Gilbert, better known as "Hap."

Last summer "Hap" spent two months north of The Pas, Manitoba, as a census taker for the Bishop of Brandon. Census taker in the north is not the simple job that it is in more settled areas and Mr. Gilbert not only travelled 1700 miles by rail but many hundreds of miles by plane and trail. His wanderings took him from Hudson Bay to Saskatchewan through Flin Flon, The Pas and numerous smaller communities with no name beyond that of a railroad mileage.

Mr. Gilbert did this work preparatory to spending two years in this area as a missionary. Leaving Toronto in early December, he will be ordained in Brandon and expects to be in the field by Christmas.

Asked as to the kind of people among whom he would associate, Mr. (Continued on Page 4)

FRENCH LECTURE SERIES INAUGURATED TO-OAY

The first of a series of ten free lectures on nineteenth century French literature to be delivered weekly on Thursdays at 5 p.m. by Professor J. S. Will in Room 8, University College, takes place to-day.

The subject matter is not the personal choice of Professor Will, nor has it been selected through popular suggestion, or experimentally but (as Professor Will stated when interviewed) "has been a request of the college as part of the regular lecture programme—and a permanent air is given to the whole series of lectures."

Thus the college is offering through an authority to the cultural minded of the student body, past graduates and general public, as well as students taking courses relative to the subject, opportunity for ready information in Nineteenth Century French Literature. Accordingly the subject is not to be popularly considered but is treated as a university course, that is, "will be scholarly but in such a way as to be popular."

Three Records Broken, One Equalled in Keenly Contested Meet

U.C. COME SECONO

Passmore, Porter, MacGladdery
All Tie for Individual Title

By George Burt-Gerrans

With the blessing of ideal weather the annual senior interfaculty track meet produced some record breaking competition yesterday afternoon at the Varsity Stadium. Two field records, one beating an intercollegiate mark, and one track record in the discus and javelin throws and the one mile race, were broken and the interfaculty high hurdles record was equalled as S.P.S. won from University College, champs last year.

The outstanding performances of the meet were those of Westheuser of S.P.S. in the discus, J. T. Stewart of Trinity in the javelin throw, and MacGladdery of Meds in the one mile race. Westheuser again dominated the discus throw as with beautiful form he led his nearest rival, Isbister, by 15 feet. His distance, 123 feet 7 3/4 ins., exceeded his own record of last year by 3 feet 5 1/2 inches, and his intercollegiate record, also of last year, by 4 feet 4 1/4 inches. Stewart won the javelin throw at 146 feet 3 1/2 inches and on his second throw in trying for a record his javelin sailed superbly through the air to come to rest at 158 feet 3 inches, bettering the old interfaculty mark by 11 feet 1 1/2 inches. MacGladdery ran a heady race in the mile to finish well in front and ahead of the previous record by 1 4/5 sees.

Varsity, St. Mike's MEET IN PRACTICE

Blue Plungers Riddle Irish Line as New Workout Stunt is Introduced

TO BE A WEEKLY EVENT

Something new in the way of football practice was introduced last night when Coaches Stevens of Varsity and Storons of St. Michael's lined their teams up opposite each other for a scrimmage practice. This is to be a weekly event, and both teams are certain to receive valuable practice from these Wednesday afternoon workouts. Considerable comment has been aroused as to the respective merits of each of these teams. There are many who maintain that the Bay Street squad would take the Big Blue team if they were given an opportunity. As a result there was quite a number of interested spectators out to see the two squads tangle even if it was only in practice.

Judging from the performance of last night there would appear to be very little difference in the abilities of the two teams. In the aerial attack St. Mike's were obviously the better team. Their forward passes clicked with amazing regularity. However, they lacked the plunging ability which was displayed by the Varsity squad. Copp and McQuigge developed the habit of making long excursions through the St. Mike's line and the Irish have yet to find the formula for stopping them. Varsity met with little success in their passing play, most of which failed to click.

Both squads were at full strength for the practice, which will at least serve as a good workout for the squads which again go into action this weekend. St. Mike's meet Sarnia Orders while Varsity mix it up with the Western Mustangs.

EDITORIAL HUMILITY

The Orillia Packet and Times published an editorial the other day. The Globe reprinted part of the editorial and The Mail and Empire ran it in  toto under the caption "Radical Professors Run Amok".

The Orillia Packet and Times has a reputation for being one of the few remaining vigorous independent rural publications in the province. Its intelligent comments on the conference at Lake Couchiching, during the summer of 1932, brought it a good deal of publicity. Its present crusading gesture is unfortunate. It is misleading and in places ill-informed.

Referring to the movement for recognition of Canada as an autonomous state, as recognized in the Statute of Westminster, it says, "This whole independent nation agitation is a hot-house movement, inspired by two small groups—first the politicians who want to add to their own importance; and secondly the group of intellectuals in the universities who are enamoured of internationalism, and who see in an intra-Empire development a rival tendency".

We are unaware of any important group of politicians or "intellectuals in the universities" who are advocating secession from the Empire. The Orillia Packet and Times is attempting to beloud the issue by dragging a red herring across the trail. If it is referring to those who have striven for greater autonomy in the Empire, then it must include such political figures as the Hon. Edward Blake, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Sir Robert Borden, the Hon. Newton W. Rowell and the Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King, for each has in some way contributed to the growing power of the Dominion. If such men led "a hot-house movement", they certainly were very astute, because they were not all from the same party and the process of development is as old as the Dominion and culminated in the Statute of Westminster, 1932.

At the Imperial Conference of 1917 Sir Robert Borden moved, and it was passed, that: "... They deem it their duty, however, to place on record their view that any such re-adjustment, while thoroughly preserving all existing powers of self-government and complete control of domestic affairs, should be based upon a full recognition of the dominions as autonomous nations of an imperial commonwealth and of India as an important portion of the same, etc. ..."

Does the editor of the Orillia Packet and Times refer to these men as "Little Canadians (who) are doing their country poor service by allowing the exaggerated egoism of self-importance to stand in the way of Empire consolidation"?

Oh no, no, nothing like that. He most likely means the academic men. "In the case of the internationalists, there is reason to suspect that they are spreading their doctrines among the youth of the country from their point of vantage on the staffs of the universities". Call out the tanks!

The Conference on Relations within the British Commonwealth is the excuse for this outburst. Let us see what one of the delegates to the Conference has to say on the subject of empire. "We need not therefore despair of the unity of the British Empire because Canada and its other constituents as they attain to political manhood claim a political sovereignty of their own, nor, on the other hand, need we think it necessary to construct, in advance of evolution, artificial props such as an imperial cabinet with definite overruling powers. What is best and safest is to strengthen the foundations of the common will, to cultivate the common heritage, to develop the intercourse between the members of the far-flung empire as well as between the responsible ministries of every part, to enhance in a word that sense of unity which the possession of a great and common tradition has built up in our history and in our faith". (Prof. W. P. M. Kennedy, "Constitution of Canada", page 457.)

"Liberty of thought in academic circles is desirable; there are surely limits to the right of active propaganda". Which means that everyone can think what he likes. This is a free country. But if he disagrees with the Orillia Packet and Times, well—that is a different matter.

The editorial goes on in the same arrogant gibberish about "study-lamp theorists, absolutely devoid of experience and without appreciation of the complex problems of administration and diplomacy

All hail, Northwestern! While Toronto's freshmen worry about Latin and labs, and sometimes fret over forlorn Friday evenings spent in the undated solitudes of the home fire-sides, the maids of the Evanston, Illinois university go gaily on, serene in the knowledge that soon they too will have learned the great secret of success at college. No, it's not a new system of cramming—merely a new course on the Art of Make-up.

C—C
The subject must be regarded with all fitting seriousness. After all, on it depends the future of the great Northwestern football stalwarts who provide so many thrills to American fans—and the artistic appreciation of every masculine eye surely is sufficient cause to send upwondered femininity scurrying to the fount of beauty.

C—C
Perhaps the situation was serious. Such a step would surely not be taken inadvisedly. Perhaps it was the result (Continued on Page 4)

University professors seem to be more realistic in their outlook than the "practical" men, if one is to apply a pragmatic test. The Globe, in its editorial comment of the same issue, rejoices over the fact that Australian credit has been restored. Surely it is not unaware of the fact that Australia was brought out of financial chaos by a plan drawn up by university "study-lamp theorists" who were called in to salvage the wreck. Are these editors who are prepared to stir up ill-feeling against the universities aware of the number of academic men in the present administration at Washington. Or that three of the deputy ministers at Ottawa were university faculty members? Or that the first Canadian minister to Washington was on the staff of this University and that a great many of the Canadian diplomatic service were likewise attached to academic life? And that by spreading false propaganda, they, the editors of responsible papers, are doing a great disservice to this country.

By advocating a Royal Commission to investigate the worthwhileness of our universities the Orillia Packet and Times is passing judgment on institutions in this country whose services few men would even collectively undertake to evaluate.

"Are we getting value for our money?" the editor asks. His whole position is exposed. He wants value for his money. That is the crass materialism of the whole thing. The Globe gives him sufficient balm to ease his heart aching for the misled young of this country. "University graduates of mature years laugh over their views held during their student days". Some of them must have laughed themselves into breadlines, because during the reign of "practical" men, March 1933, there were 1,650,000 people on relief in this country. Maybe that is why a professor who is complained of, challenged students to organise and jump into the political arena "with the insight that was denied to their elders". It has almost become fashionable to advocate change under present conditions.

After all, if parents did not consider favourably the "advisability of exposing their sons and daughters to influences totally (?) at variance with their own views" we would probably still be sitting in trees and we should not be able to read, even if it is with regret, editorials in the Orillia Packet and Times.

Outlawing War

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Concerning the subject of pacifism introduced by the "Inconsequence" column of last Wednesday's Varsity, we should like the reporter who did the interviewing to know that the student opinion on this campus is by no means as one-sided as his experience shows. There are many who read the article referred to above with great interest and wholehearted agreement and who have pledged themselves to a pacifism as thoroughgoing and uncompromising as that of which the author of "Inconsequence" writes. The Movement for a Christian Social Order could have shown The Varsity the names of sixty students who have committed themselves to an utter repudiation of any war in which our Government might participate. In doing so we believe we are being loyal to a higher patriotism than that which would for any cause whatever involve (Continued on Page 4)

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

and unjustifiable. Questioned as to whether he thought the medical course needed reorganizing, as was suggested by one of the students of the sixth year, he stated that the only change he would recommend is to reduce the number of students in each class to permit greater individual attention.

Questioned as to the advisability of a student strike as a formal protest against the licentiate examination, G. W. Chapman, 5th Meds, stated "I don't think that the students should strike but should appoint a committee to look into the matter. There is no need of the licentiate examination. I would suggest that the Medical Council examination and the university finals be combined into one."

F. Johnston, 4th Meds, and G. H. Montgomery, although they agreed that the Medical Council examination was costly, thought that the licentiate test was necessary in order to keep up the high standards of the profession.

Professor Ryerson of the Medical School declared, when interviewed, that steps have been made to bring about a combination of examinations between the university and the Medical School in order that students may obtain both degrees and license by one examination. Consideration is already being given the matter by the Medical Council of Canada and various provincial licensing bodies.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

Yesterday at five o'clock the first baseball game of the season was played between third and fourth year Vic in Vic gym when the seniors took the juniors to the tune of 15-3. Billie Fowler in the pitcher's box, sent them over the plate to Ann Scott on the receiving end so that the opposing team had the greatest difficulty in coming near the ball. They look like sure bets for the faculty team of this year, both having played for Vic last season. On first base, Marion Tait, who also played last year, was in evidence, and guarded the bag in her usual watchful manner. S. Longley, another outstanding player, turned in a good game, but may not be seen in inter-faculty competition if the ruling is retained that two major sports are not allowed as B. plays basketball too. We understand, however, that this question is to be settled by the joint athletic clubs.

On Monday at five, first and second year Vic meet in Vic gym to struggle on the baseball diamond also and it is then that all the talent so far tucked out of sight, is expected to blossom forth in full strength. Later in the week the winners will play the victorious fourth year team, after which the college team will be chosen and a coach appointed.

St. Mike's have already held two practices with a gratifying turnout at each of them although more are expected to show up as well as some representatives from St. Joseph's who have not yet put in an appearance. With a good many of last year's team back and Mr. Turley as coach, they are getting right down to business. A freshee, Catherine Mulbille, seems to

By D. J. McGuire

S.P.S. rubbed it into their old rivals, U.C., yesterday when they captured the interfaculty track and field championship by 39 points to U.C.'s 23. Meds were next in line with 19. The meet was an outstanding success from a competition viewpoint but the crowd was rather meagre considering the some of the outstanding athletes in Canada were in action. Several records came tumbling down as the meet got under way. Westheuser bettered the record he set last year in the discus throw by three feet. Hud Stewart made history when he established a new mark of 158' 3" in the javelin throw, which was 12 feet beyond the old record. The mile record was another which fell yesterday, MacGladdery chopping 1 4-5 seconds off the old mark. There were several other outstanding competitors whose display of speed and skill makes a strong intercollegiate track and field team assured.

Things are starting to happen in the gym as the mitt, mat and sword men prepare for another active season. Several individuals, whose chief ambition is to mutilate one another, are already at work heaving up weights and tossing the old medicine ball around in eager anticipation of the opening of hostilities. Just when the open season on these ring men begins has not been announced officially but in the near future anyone who cares to have an eye blacked, a leg twisted or a sword stuck into them will have only to report at the gym and say so.

The popular Jimmy Jackson, whose slogan is "Learn to box in ten easy lessons", will again be coaching the boxing team. He will have a large order on his hands to repeat last year's achievements as his championship boxing team has been badly depleted. Of last year's squad only John Dinnick, the light-heavyweight, will be in action this year. Ned Sinclair and Pat Green are back but are not eligible for competition this season. The wrestling team will also have to depend on new talent as most of the champions of last year have joined the alumni.

Varsity juniors seem to have at last hit their stride. Their decisive 12-1 victory over Malvern Collegiate is their first victory in three starts. Previous to Tuesday's game the best the juniors could get was a draw with both Beaches and Argos. Laing and Don Graham, who are coaching the juniors think that they have a real team in uniform and they certainly turned in a good, if not spectacular game on their last one with Malvern. Saturday the juniors face R.M.C. in the first junior intercollegiate game of the season. This event should provide some exciting football, and will probably be played in the morning.

Lou Carroll's intermediates will be given a real argument on Saturday when they meet Ottawa College in the curtain-raiser to the Varsity-Western game. This squad should start to play real football when they have been together long enough. Certainly they ought to feel better after getting Saturday's game out of their systems. They pulled off enough fumbles in that game to do them the rest of the season. Fortunately for Varsity, Queen's also got the idea that the ball was red-hot and treated it accordingly. Now that that's over we expect to see the intermediates play football like Lou Carroll's teams usually do, which is in most cases a championship brand.

This scrimmage practice with the St. Mike's team is a new idea which should be popular. Both squads are going to get much needed practice and should profit considerably by it. Last night's practice, the first of its kind, was certainly a success and attracted plenty of interest as was evident by the number of spectators. Both squads are strong contenders in their series and there is considerable comment as to which of the teams is really the stronger. In last night's play the Irish certainly overshadowed Varsity by plenty in the forward passing game, but the Blue team were stronger in the line plays. An exhibition game between these two squads would pack the house if it were arranged.

While on the subject of football the activity in the interfaculty teams as they get into condition indicates a successful season of Mulock Cup games. This series opens on Monday, Oct. 16, and a real struggle is inevitable before this historic mug is again situated for another year. Reports of strong teams have been coming in consistently and the strenuous workouts the teams are undergoing should produce real squads.

be a real find in the pitching line and will probably have a chance to try her skill in interfaculty company.

No practice has been held yet by U.C., but the first one is called for Friday night in Vic gym. There is no indication so far as to how many will be interested enough to turn out, but a good crowd of enthusiastic baseball players is expected. At this initial practice announcements will be made concerning the practice nights in future, which are to be two a week in number but which are not definitely arranged.

S.P.S. WIN MEET

Perhaps not so spectacular but equally as thrilling was the performance of Passmore, O.C.E., in the high hurdles. The record in this event of 16 2-5 seconds has stood since L. K. Carruthers of S.P.S. put it up in 1921. It takes a lot of speed and form to come up to a record of twelve years' standing and Passmore had just that.

Another event, the closeness of which was not indicated by the results, was the shot put. Isbister and Westheuser tied for first place in their regular throws and it took Isbister three extra throws to win.

The meet as a whole was keenly contested, particularly in the pole vault and high jump. Both were a fight to the finish with each man giving all he had. The sprint events were also close and brought out some real speed. The only casualty of the meet happened to W. L. MacKay, who won the U.C. meet last week. He sustained a bad strain of the right leg which forced him to drop out of the high jump in which he was competing at the time.

Scoring by faculties was as follows: S.P.S. 39; U.C. 23; Meds 19; Trinity 15; O.C.E. 14; O.C.A. 10; Dents 8; Vic 5; Music 3; Grad. Studies 1. The individual standing was very close with three men piling up ten points to tie for first place. First with ten points, Passmore, O.C.E.; Porter, O.C.E.; MacGladdery, Meds. Second with nine points, Isbister, U.C. Third, eight points, McArthur, S.P.S.; Westheuser, S.P.S. Fourth, six points, Stewart, Knox; Hickey, S.P.S.

Results of the events were as follows:

Discus Throw — Westheuser, Isbister, Vanderlock. Distance 123 ft. 7 3-4 in.
Pole Vault — Stewart, Knox; MacKinnon, Hamilton. Height, 11 ft. 830 yards — Conway, Little, Campbell. Time, 2 min. 4 sec.
High Hurdles — Passmore, Hickey, O'Flynn. Time 16 2-5 sec.
100 yards, final — Porter, Dore, Ashenhurst. Time 10 3-5 sec.
High Jump — Gandier, McArthur, Vennells. Height 5 ft. 5 in.

INCONSEQUENCE

ment knows its business I shall be imprisoned and my life made as miserable as possible. I shall know exactly what to expect, and I shall have my answer ready. And I will not stand alone.

It must be shouted from the housetops that pacifism is not a movement for sentimentalists and shirkers. It is for men and women who can stand the gaff—persons of determined mind and strong conviction—uncompromising and unswerving, who have the moral courage to foresee the stony road which lies before them and to follow it regardless. To suggest that such as these can be led astray by the blare of trumpets is to deny the fundamental power of human will.

It is gratifying to learn that pacifism already has its supporters here. It is pointed out in the letter mentioned above that sixty student members of the Movement for a Christian Social Order have committed themselves in writing to an utter repudiation of war. But that alone is not sufficient. There are many students who for other reasons are not inclined to associate themselves with this organization, or with any other which may include pacifism, merely as a plank in a social platform, yet who might be anxious to declare themselves as opposed to war, and to organize in opposition to the war spirit. As I have stated before, such organization is essential to the development and spread of a dynamic pacifist movement. The time is ripe for the formation of a pacifist group with no extraneous political or religious aims or affiliations, which can include all students who are prepared to register their opposition to war, however divergent their attitudes may be on other questions. With the nucleus of those who have already committed themselves, its success is assured.

The official re-opening ceremonies at which the Hon. George S. Henry will officiate will take place in the theatre of the museum at three o'clock. J. B. O'Brien, chairman of the Board of Trustees, will preside. The speakers will include the Lieutenant-Governor, Hon. Dr. Herbert Bruce, Dr. Charles G. Abbot, of the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, and Dr. H. J. Cody. The museum will be open for general inspection to-night from 7.30 to 10.30 o'clock.

Chief credit for the rapid advancement of the museum into one of the leading institutions of its kind in the world is due the Director of Archaeology, Professor C. T. Curdell, F.S.A. Sir Robert Falconer is authority for the statement that to this one man's genius the character of the archaeological museum—the most outstanding section of the institution—is mainly due. His achievement is especially remarkable in that by far the greater part of the exhibits have been got together within the past thirty or thirty-five years. During the early years of this period the Directors were continually hampered by lack of sufficient funds, but in recent years several generous benefactions have been received. The new wing, and the extensive and varied exhibits housed in it, are the result.

CORRESPONDENCE

us in war again. As for our pacifism "Exploding into thin air at the first blast of the bugle," we reply with all sincerity and humility that we believe we have gone deeper than the "Expeditious pacifism" or the "Pacifism with reservations" which might be dispelled by the onslaughts of military propaganda. War, we believe, must be rejected no matter what the conditions or the cost, individual or corporate, because basically it is wrong. Its attitudes are those of suspicion, hatred and brutishness; its tactics are those of expediency and selfishness; its method is force. However just the cause may be, war is a betrayal of that cause and must always fail as a method or solution because it denies the only principle upon which justice, harmony and fullest life may be achieved.

We fully agree with "Inconsequence" in that we must not wait until war comes to state these convictions. Neither can we hope, merely by expressing our individual convictions, to achieve the end we desire. The Movement to which we belong is ready then to assist in any effort for the spread and expression of true pacifism on the campus.

THE BIG BLUE TEAM OF 1933

HALF A CENTURY OF RUGBY HISTORY PASSES IN REVIEW

Many Alterations Since Game Was First Played at Varsity

ARGOS FIRST OPPONENTS

Goal Lines Over Two Hundred Yards Apart Under Early Rules

By B. J. McGuire

Fifty eight years have elapsed since rugby first came to be recognized as an appropriate pastime for university men. Since that time the game like so many other good old customs, has been so altered as to be scarcely recognized as the sport at which our forefathers laboured.

The first opponents which the university team met were the Toronto Argonauts, who have continued to provide Varsity with plenty of opposition ever since. As no record is available as to the outcome of this initial struggle it is probable that the Big Blue team finished second. Probably the boys got discouraged because the goal lines were over 200 yards apart and the teams called quits at the end of half an hour.

The game at that period in history resembled that which the police and communists play at present in the public parks. There were no limits to the number of players, no definite rules, and everything went, including tripping, charging and making yourself generally disagreeable. As there were no rules it is probable that many games were played of which we have no record because the originators of the game didn't know what it was.

A Message From the President

President Cody

1929 Western came in. These Inter-Collegiate games have been usually marked by a spirit of fine sportsmanship. Better lose than win unfairly. That spirit, I am sure, animates all our University and College Teams to-day. May it always continue!

In the game to-morrow against worthy contestants from the University of Western Ontario great interest will be taken. Encourage our champions by your presence and applause. Show appreciation of good play on both sides. The stirring strains of the Band, resplendent in new coats, will be a cheering accompaniment.

To the members of the team I offer heartiest good wishes for success. Remember the game is not lost or won till the very end of the period.

H. J. CODY,
President.

VARSITY JUNIORS PLAY QUEEN'S HERE

First Junior Intercollegiate
To-morrow
Game of the Season

TEAM HIGHLY RATED

To-morrow morning at ten o'clock on the back campus, Varsity juniors play their first intercollegiate game of football. Their opponents are the juniors of Queen's University, of whom not a great deal is known, except that they are coached by Teddy Reeves, who knows the game of football as most people know the alphabet.

Of the three exhibition games played by the Toronto team, two ended in draws, and the third in a 12-1 victory. The strength of the Varsity footballers is undoubtedly great, from their showing in these games against Balmy Beach and Argo juniors which teams are rated highly around the city.

The coaches, Grady Laing and Don Graham, have selected a team which

JOE CARRUTHERS

Trainer of the team for fifteen years. He knows the game inside out and is a close friend of every man on the team. Joe is gruff and snappy but he has a big heart that keeps things going smoothly and efficiently all the time.

The Board of Strategy

WARREN STEVENS

Director of Athletics and responsible for the intercollegiate title coming to Varsity last year. As mentor of the team he can be depended upon for the best.

LOU CARROLL

Coach of last year's Dominion championship juniors and now of the Varsity intermediates.

LOU HAYMAN

Coach of the Argos, friend of Warren Stevens, and rover coach for the three Blue outfits.

GRADY LAING

A plugging middle of last year's Dominion semi-finalists and now coach of the Varsity juniors.

RUGBY HALL OF FAME Glimpses of Yesterday's Idols

Sports Editor's Note—It is not to be expected that this is a complete list of the men whose prowess on the gridiron made their names by-words on the campus during their undergraduate days and whose names live in the memory of many.

DR. W. BEATTIE NESBITT was one of the earliest stars on the gridiron. He played in 1883-4-5. He died a few years ago. J. S. MacLEAN played with Dr. Nesbitt. He was captain of the team in '85 and '86 and is now on the editorial staff of the Mail and Empire.

JACK GILMOUR was a tower of strength on the rugby squads of 1893 and 1894. To-day he is treasurer of the Toronto Hydro Electric Commission.

REV. JOHN "JOCK" INKSTER, of Knox Presbyterian Church, was the manager of the football team in 1897. The same year JOHN HOBBS was the captain.

ERIC ARMOUR, crown attorney for the city of Toronto and a member of the Board of Governors of the University was a member of the famous 1897 team.

HARRY SENKLER, now dead, was probably the greatest all around athlete who ever attended the University of Toronto. For two consecutive years he won the pentathlon. He was equally proficient at cricket, association soccer, rugby, baseball and rowing. He was considered one of the greatest running halves of all time and played in the early '80's.

JOHNNY COUNSELL was famed for his booting in the days of yore. To-day he is famed for his legal work in Hamilton.

JACK HOBBS, one of the best quarters in the history of the game, is at present connected with the Plate Glass Company. He was captain of the team in 1897, the same year Dr. Inkster was manager.

A. F. "BIDDY" BARR captained Varsity to its first championship in 1895. He continued in office for the next three years and in 1898 the intercollegiate union was organised. JOHN MALLOCK and COURTNEY KINGSTON, newly appointed Justice of the Supreme Court, were other names inseparable with teams of that period.

In 1896, T. F. "THRIFT" BURNSIDE introduced the snap and formed the rules governing its use. They became known as the Burnsides rules and were first tried out in the Mulock Cup series for interfaculty competition.

BIDDIE BARR

He captained the first Varsity football championship team of 1895, and remained in that position for four years.

VARSITY SECONDS TO PLAY OTTAWA

Game at Stadium To-morrow to be Opener in Double Header

TEAM MUCH IMPROVED

Before the opening home game of the senior schedule on Saturday next, the intermediates will array themselves against Ottawa as their portion of the double header.

Last week the intermediate schedule opened when Varsity defeated Queen's by a close 3-0 score owing to a last quarter rouge. But the team that will take the field this week is a vastly improved and far more efficient group of players than when they defeated Queen's. There have been few changes in the line-up, but Lou Carroll, the man who saw the junior team through to a Dominion championship last year, has been drilling the boys every afternoon, giving them all they could take. The game with Queen's was an indefinite proposition, but as they are

YOUTH AND SPORT

To-morrow our steps turn towards the Stadium, where the first home game in the intercollegiate senior rugby football series is to be played. Despite the depression, sport has not lost its appeal. Thousands of people will gather to witness an athletic contest, although they delight in finding fault with other phases of life.

Perhaps sport is popular because youth is on display. Youth brings to the game the spirit that never says die, the spirit that forges forward when defeat seems inevitable, the spirit which smiles in defeat, and is at once proud and modest in victory. The spirit of sport is the spirit of youth.

Observe the spectators as they witness the game, and you will find that all are youthful. Even those who are old in years and stiff in manner, unconsciously become young and eager, friendly and informal. They have entered the spirit of the game.

Observe the players. The group at one end of the green gridiron represents the youngest university in the province, the opposing group the oldest. Yet tradition and time do not matter when rugby football is to be played. The spirit of the moment counts most of all. The smartness and swiftness and clear-headedness of youth are essential to the game.

The spirit of sport is the spirit of youth. Veterans are the exception, rather than the rule. Youth alone is endowed with the qualities which fit one for the playing field. So youth must play the game.

There are those who think that in the game of life the rules have been made more stringent of late, the game more difficult to play. The world needs youth to-day, and its spirit of sportsmanship. It needs the qualities of youth—courage, eagerness, modesty, confidence, alertness, and determination. The world looks to youth to play the game on the playing field of life, as it has done on the playing fields of our universities.

THE ROYAL ONTARIO MUSEUM

"Education is one of the chief purposes of the Royal Ontario Museum," said the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, speaking at the formal opening of the new building last night. For that and other reasons the University of Toronto has always been closely associated with the Museum and its work. Professors and students find it not only intensely interesting, but valuable and helpful as well. The University and the museum have in common the aim of advancing learning, of promoting education and encouraging an interest in the arts and sciences. In each of these the University is an aid to the Museum, and the Museum in turn is of great help to the University. The interest of the University in the Museum may be seen in the fact that all of the Board of Directors of the latter are professors.

On behalf of the University we congratulate the Museum authorities, and especially Dr. Charles T. Currelly, who has laboured so steadily and enthusiastically on the opening of a building of which Canada may well be proud. Such a building located so near to the campus will be appreciated and used by students for generations to come.

ODE

ON A DISTANT PROSPECT OF THE SCHOOL OF PRACTICAL SCIENCE

Ye red brick towers, ye would-be spires,
That squat upon the campus,
Where untamed Science still aspires
To raise an awful rumpus;
What think ye, neath that sooty brow—
Do sophs and freshmen fight now?
As ye their modern scraps survey?
Are spirits still as high as when

The Taddle wandered through the glen
His muddy winding way?

Say, father Taddle, who hast seen
Full many a sprightly race
Disporting on thy margin green,
Initiation's place,
Who foremost now delight to floor
With plant arm the sophomore?
The captive freshman which enthrall?
What idle progeny succeed
To chase the frightened victim's speed,
Or strip him of his all?

Alas, regardless of their doom
The little victims play!
No care have they for ills to come,
Nor sense beyond to-day:
Yet see how all around em wait
The Sophomores, their human fate,
And black Misfortune's baleful train!
Ah, show them where in ambush stand
To seize their prey the murth'rous

Art, Music and Drama

Mossey Hall

The artist at the next Tuesday evening concert at Mossey Hall, on October 17th, will be Jascha Heifetz, Russian violinist. Heifetz, who began his public performances at the age of four and a half years, has gained a great measure of international fame, having played in practically every part of the world. His programme on Tuesday night will include a Sonatina by Schubert, a Sonata for violin and piano, by Strauss, and five dances by various composers, among them Brahms, Heifetz, and Grainger.

St. Thomas' Church

A new series of the well known recitals of Organ and Choral music at St. Thomas' Church on Huron Street, will begin next Sunday evening after Choral evensong. Dr. Healey Willan's "Prelude and Fugue in B minor" will be played, followed by the Choir Boys singing Schubert's "Ave Maria", another group of organ works such as a Choral prelude upon "Abridge" by Charlton Palmer, organist of Gloucester Cathedral and Joseph Bonnet's "Ariele".

The Choir offer Cesar Franck's setting of the 150th Psalm "Laudate Dominum", the recital concluding with a brilliant movement from Felix Borowski's sonata in A minor.

These recitals will in no way interfere with the regular half hour of choral music over CFRB at 5.30 p.m. on Sundays. During this Sunday's broadcast you will hear a modern setting of "The Credo", also a choral gem, "O saving Victim" (Wilson), Master Barry Jones will sing an aria from Mendelssohn's "Elijah"; St. Thomas' Male Chorus will offer a four-part arrangement of Lanier's poem "Into the woods my Master went", the broadcast concluding with an excerpt from a Bach cantata.

WARREN STEVENS

As last seen in action with the Montreal A.A.A. Dominion titleholders of 1931. To his hand goes much of the credit for the progress of the forward passing game since its inception in Canadian rugby.

band!
Why tell them? 'Tis in vain.
These shall the fury Sophomores tear,
The vultures shaped like men;
Disdainful Anger, pallid Fear,
Shall not avail them then.
For castor-oil shall waste their youth,
Or barrel-stave with rankling tooth,
That swiftly pricks the thinly clad,
With faces wan and plastered hair,
Grim-visag'd comfortless Despair
Shall grip each frighten'd lad.

Lo, in the vale of tears beneath
A grisly troupe are seen,
The painful family of Death,
More hideous than their Dean;
This racks the joints, this fires the veins,
That every labouring sinew strains,
Those in the deeper vitals rage:
Lo, still they come to fill the band
That grips the Frosh with icy hand
While seconds seem an age.

To each his sull'ring: all are men,
Condemn'd alike to groan,
The tender for another's pain;
Th' unfeeling for his own.

Varsity Seconds TO PLAY OTTAWA

now much improved both in tackling and passing the outcome of the Ottawa game should be more certain.

Holding down the backfield jobs will be Stewart, Boomer and Isbister. Boomer, who showed up well last week, is expected to show up even better on Saturday. At quarter will be McKee, also one of last year's stars. Herman will be at snap, while Brebner and Gibson will be the insides. Next to them will stand Perry and Holden, while Williams and Edwards will terminate the line in end positions. Edwards is a newcomer to intercollegiate competition. This is the team that Lou Carroll is counting on for their second consecutive victory.

Yet, ah! why should they know their fate?
Since sorrow never comes too late,
And happiness too swiftly flies,
Thought would destroy their paradise.
No more; where ignorance is bliss,
'Tis folly to be wise.

Shrdlu.

CAMBRIDGE TOWN IS ALL DEPENDENT ON THE UNIVERSITY

All Activities of Students Closely Bound Up With Colleges

GEOGRAPHY DIFFICULT

Lack of Identification Plates Makes Finding One's Way Hard

The following article is the second of a series by Miss Sally Lunn, B.A. In the next article Miss Lunn will describe the women's colleges at Cambridge University.

To students of a college in a big city like Toronto, it is difficult to realize that the town of Cambridge exists only as an offshoot of the University. The undergraduates all live in colleges or in college lodgings, and all their activities are connected with the University. So dependent is the town upon the University, that in the vacation many of the shops and the theatres are closed.

There are about twenty colleges in the University—two of them for women. They are nearly all to be found on the two main streets of the town, but this does not make it easy to find the way about; especially as neither colleges nor faculty buildings have brass plates. One of the main streets runs parallel with the river and nine of the colleges lie between the two. One of the chief beauties of Cambridge is the series of bridges belonging to the various colleges.

The colleges are built in courts opening into each other. Between Trinity Street and the river is a maze of these courts and it is possible to wander from one college to another without knowing it. In the middle of each court is a stretch of well kept lawn on which only fellows of the college are allowed to walk. An undergraduate is fined ten shillings if he is caught walking on the grass.

The men's colleges are built on a system very seldom found outside of Oxford and Cambridge. Doorways in the courts lead to staircases, off which suites of rooms open. There has been a considerable amount of new building since the war, but the old system has been followed. It is difficult to choose between living in an old room with five centuries of history, or a new room designed and furnished in

Re Addresses

Every University student is asked to make sure, at once that his correct Toronto address and telephone number are entered upon his registration card in the office of the University Registrar, Simcoe Hall, or of his College Registrar or Faculty Secretary. The University Directory is now being prepared for the press and it is of the greatest importance that all addresses and telephone numbers be correct.

PREVIOUS CENTURY AN AGE OF LYRICISM

Professor J. S. Will Delivers
Lecture on French
Literature

FIRST OF SERIES OF TEN

"The nineteenth century is essentially an age of lyricism. I do not mean it merely produced the lady of lyric verse, I mean its vein is essentially passionate," said Professor J. S. Will at the opening lecture in a series of ten on Nineteenth Century French Literature at University College yesterday afternoon.

It was not a detailed discussion nor a bibliographical account but a significant discussion of the changing vision of nineteenth century, referring to standard authors and works.

In the seventeenth century the restraint has been felt in government, religion and philosophy and this restraint failed to make accommodation for life. Literature alone showed itself capable of coming to an understanding of life's innovations which Professor Will called the romantic element. Art found a way and feelings broke out and relieved the social order. The restraint of seventeenth century did not allow "Sensibility" and it was not until the nineteenth that it became uppermost when emotional feeling predominated the reason.

Rousseau is the father of the nineteenth century and particularly of sensibility which later resulted in enthusiasm which became one of the most important things in nineteenth century. It was a manifestation of divine aspiration in the human race as the result of love. "Enthusiasm begets imagination and imagination recreates the beauties of the world." The enthusiasm is the great lover and "love is not that cunning, lay cupid but the oldest of the gods, son of the tumultuous universe."

PREPARATIONS PROCEED FOR U.C. FALL DANCE

The Varsity was given a statement last evening by Mr. Frank W. Woods, the Social Director of the U.C. Lit. to the effect that the ticket lists for the Fall Dance will be placed in the Junior Common Room of the College next Monday morning, to remain there for three or four days. Separate lists will be provided for each year, and those desiring a ticket will sign the proper sheet. The actual ticket sale will take place in the Lit. office at a date to be later announced.

The Executive is anticipating a lively demand for tickets and advises early signing of the lists. For further information regarding the U. C. Fall Dance, reference should be made to the Coming Events and Bulletin Board columns of this paper.

DEAN OF FORESTRY SHOWS CONFIDENCE

Tells Club He Has No Fear
For the Future of Forestry

FRESHMEN WELCOMED

"I have no fear for the future of forestry." This was the burden of an inspiring address by Dean Howe on "The present situation in forestry" to the Foresters' Club at their first meeting of the year last night. J. R. Sims was in the chair.

After a careful exposition of the causes underlying the present depression in the forest industries, Dean Howe outlined the many fields still open to graduates of the faculty. "The most important goal of forestry," he said, "and the one least understood by the public, is the attainment of higher yields per acre. Even were the forests inexhaustible forestry would justify its existence through increased yields of high quality wood. This has been demonstrated with some plantations just coming into commercial bearing."

"Forestry has always had a hard struggle for acceptance as a public policy. Forestry is for the clear brained and strong hearted. Its rewards lie mostly in the satisfaction of public service, in the feeling that you have made a contribution to laying sound economic foundations for your country's development. On the way there is a good living for you, but never riches. Forest protection is a public service if ever there was one. Helping to guard the forests from their most destructive enemies is the making of an immediate and tangible contribution."

HON. DR. BRUCE SPEAKS

Premier Henry Accepts Golden Key as Province Takes Over Building

The Royal Ontario Museum is open. Officially and entirely open. Yesterday afternoon saw the final and formal consummation of the years of solid, unmitigated work that have gone into the erection of the new wing, the entire reconstruction and fireproofing of the old and the placing of the exhibits. The ceremony marked also the climax of the toil that has gone on under terrific pressure for the last few months, since the opening of the doors of the new building in January, to bring the arrangement and construction to a state of practical completion in time for yesterday's event.

Fifteen minutes before the hour of commencement there was standing room only in the elegant new theatre of the Museum. Folding chairs and camp stools were brought in and filled the aisles, and the parterre and rotunda became packed with standing listeners.

On the platform was one of the most distinguished gatherings that has been seen recently in Toronto. It included Mr. J. B. O'Brien, Chairman of the Museum's Board of Trustees, who presided; Hon. Dr. Herbert Bruce, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario; Hon. George S. Henry, Prime Minister of Ontario; Dr. Charles Greenley Abbot, Executive Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington; Dr. H. J. Colby, President of this University; and Mrs. H. D. Warren, Vice-Chairman of the Board of Trustees.

Around the table of refreshments on the top floor following the ceremony, The Varsity overheard many comments on the unusually high order of the addresses delivered. Following are some highlights from the speeches.

Lieut.-Governor Bruce: "This is not a 'sombre treasure house'. It is a theatre wherein is presented a brilliant pageant. We are at the meeting place of the Past and the Future. The Present is never more than a moment ahead of the Past. Not till the 18th century did the educational value of a state museum begin to be realized. Education is one of the chief purposes of the Royal Ontario Museum. The

EARL LAUTENSLAGER EXPLAINS PROBLEMS

Discuss Political and Social Affairs Abroad and at Home

SPEAKS AT WYMLWOOD

The Current Events Group of the Women's Literary Society of Victoria College held its first meeting yesterday afternoon in Wymilwood. Mr. Earl Lautenslager, a graduate of Victoria who is now studying theology, spoke on political and social problems, ranging from the revolution in Germany to the situation in Stratford.

In speaking on Germany he said that the political freedom of the Republic had disappeared and a dictatorship had taken its place. A form of Fascism is the new regime under Hitler. He touched briefly on the anti-Jewish movement, and admitted the possibility of Germany's re-arming in spite of the League of Nations.

Coming nearer home, Mr. Lautenslager spoke on the situation in Stratford, which he considered the biggest thing which had happened between Capital and Labour in Canada for a long time.

Defeat Government Following Rejection of Prisons
Investigations

VOTE IS 19 TO 15

After suffering a defeat in its Bill to appoint a Royal Commission to make an investigation of conditions in Canadian penal institutions, the Government was turned out of office on a no confidence vote by a count of 19 to 15 at the meeting of the U.C. Parliamentarian Club yesterday afternoon.

After reading the Bill to be considered, Mr. S. M. Hermant, representing the Government, embarked on an explanation of the purposes of penal institutions. He then followed with a denunciation of present prison conditions, charging that "there is no crime of which a person has ever been accused which should be punished by the treatment which is being administered to-day to persons in these penal institutions."

The Prime Minister, Mr. Drynan, made a detailed explanation of the aims of the Bill. He stressed the need for an organization to look after persons just released from prison and to

Correspondence

The Editor,
The Varsity,
Dear Sir:

I have read with considerable interest the letter in your paper of above date concerning the Medical Course of our University and wish to congratulate him in beginning this much needed action. I, too, have suffered under this "Organized Educational System" and would like to air a few of the distasteful factors of our course.

In the first place when a graduate of some years' general practice informs a fourth year man that he is getting the worst possible course in Pharmacology it runs against the grain of most ambitious men. This fact is also borne out by the general inferences which are handed out in the senior years of Medicine when the student is asked to write prescriptions. Obviously the pious observer will say that the student is at fault. However, this may be answered in statistics by observing the number of supplemental examinations in this subject, tried by virtue of their own method of teaching, as compared to other subjects such as Pathology or Surgery, etc. I am strongly of the opinion that this course could be so altered to make it one of the most interesting courses in the curriculum but not until there is more co-operation between the Department and the students.

Let us turn to Fifth Year and note the childish attitude of one department. It is a well known fact that students take surgery and medicine at hospitals at some distance from Sick Children's Hospital and it is impossible to travel the distance in the allotted time of ten minutes. Consequently, when they arrive at Sick Children's Hospital for a lecture about twelve minutes after the hour they find the door locked and are unable to attend the lecture. Now we wish to ask just who is paying the several hundred dollars of hard earned money for these lectures. Surely a fifth year student doesn't have to be treated like a kindergarten pupil. Added to this is the insulting manner in which these lectures are given. Granted that it is impossible for a student to know all about a new sub-

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

MUSEUM AS SCENE OF FORMAL CEREMONY

 Royal Ontario Museum Act makes generous provision for the use of the buildings by scholars and school classes. We can claim to have a museum ranking among the finest of the world."

Premier Henry (accepting the golden key): "I feel that in taking this key, symbolic of the taking over of the building by the province, I am taking possession of the property for people of all realms. The door to knowledge is opened to all who care to come within the portals. One of the outstanding museums of the world. A university in itself. The building stands out as one of the architectural triumphs of our capital city. I take this opportunity to thank the staff of the Museum and the public spirited citizens who have contributed to the collections within these walls. The idea of a provincial museum was first launched 21 years ago. At that time the present west wing was built and opened by the then Governor-General, the Duke of Cornwall. I hope the present building may sometime become inadequate, as did that one."

Chairman O'Brien told of the origin, 95 years ago, of the Smithsonian Institution, the "Mother of Museums" on this continent. It was the gift of an Englishman who had never been to America! Mr. O'Brien introduced Dr. Charles Greenleaf Abbot, the Institution's Executive Secretary, who told of the Smithsonian's boon to the world in organizing the International Exchange Service for the exchange and distribution of material suitable for literary museums such as the Library of Louvain, which the Exchange was instrumental in restocking after the War. He regarded the Service as most important to friendly feeling between nations, and to future scientific research.

Dr. Cody read a letter from Sir Robert Mond, a substantial contributor to the Museum and one of its guiding spirits, who keenly regretted his inability to be present, and paid tribute in his letter to the driving force that had been given in the Museum's conception by the late Sir Edmund Walker and by Dr. Charles T. Curry. "Who," said Dr. Cody, "has practically wrecked his health in the last few months here, so hard and so steady and unrelenting has been the work of organizing."

In closing Dr. Cody mentioned the Ontario marble that had been built into the rotunda and the motto, of Mr. O'Brien's choosing from the Book of Job, which graced the ceiling: "That all men may know His work."

NINETEENTH CENTURY AN AGE OF LYRICISM

The legacy of the eighteenth century to the nineteenth is the music of verse which Professor Will showed by reading extractions from the works of Rousseau and brought out the parallelism of the musical element as compared with that of Wordsworth.

Religion and love are connected in the Romantic Theory. Love, through women and nature leads you to God. The poets are prophet, priest and king of the new world.

the best modern style. The old rooms sometimes have drawbacks in the shape of beams at forehead level, and floors with a decided slope. Whether old or new, the rooms are comfortably furnished with deep arm chairs and couches more conducive to sleep or argument than hard work. On each staircase there are about eight sets of rooms, with two or three servants between them. With all these luxuries a maid finds it difficult to live cheaply at Cambridge. Many complain that they have to live there at a much higher standard than they are used to at home.

GIVE OUR THREE BLUE TEAMS A BIG PUSH TO-MORROW

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By John T. Stubbs

It is with a great deal of pride and pleasure that we present to you this special football issue as an indication of the support and enthusiasm of the staff of The Varsity behind the Big Blue team of 1933. We now enter upon the grand march to victory and another intercollegiate title. Are you with us? We first of all wish to express our most sincere appreciation to the team, its coach, manager, and trainer, for their co-operation. We are indebted also to the secretary of the Athletic Association, the Students' Administrative Council, the band, and the cheer leaders. It is through the untiring efforts of these people and the members of the staff of The Varsity that this issue comes to you in its finished form. To these we say "thank you".

To-morrow afternoon the University of Toronto intercollegiate senior football titleholders make their debut to Toronto fans in the 1933 college series when they entertain the University of Western Ontario, contenders at Varsity Stadium. Since Western upset the dope last Saturday by defeating Queen's 5-3, the leadership of the league will be decided in to-morrow's game. Western has been the hardest outfit for Varsity to beat since they entered the senior college loop in 1929. As Joe Carruthers, the Big Blue team's trainer says, "The Mustangs are never beaten until the final whistle blows". Those same Londoners, it must be remembered, were the only ones able to pull out a win over Varsity in the intercollegiate series last year and in the second game with Western, Varsity only won by two points. The Mustangs are noted for their never-say-die spirit and they never quit fighting until the game and the series is over. That is how Joe Breen and his lads won the title in 1931.

In Jack Sinclair, Varsity has the best kicker in the intercollegiate series so there is no need for comparing abilities in that department of the game. Last Saturday, Westman, McGill's highly-rated booting ace, did not measure up to the fans' expectations and he was named as the greatest opposition in view for Varsity's captain of last year. The Mustangs are supposed to be a dangerous outfit at the forward passing game. McGill was given the same reputation. Yet on thirteen tries, the Blue team completed six passes. Two of them coming from Harold Arnp, made gains of 40 and 35 yards respectively. McGill, once more over-rated, completed one pass in eleven attempts and that was a gain of one yard. Varsity's defence against the forward pass left room for improvement but Warren Stevens has been working at this weakness this week and there should be a lot less danger from that type of attack than before. The line work leaves little to be desired. The Varsity wall, built up last year, still holds well. This part of the team is continually being worked on. Warren Stevens seems never satisfied with the line no matter how good it looks. It held well all through the McGill opener on the defensive. During the first half it was a means of securing big gains but after half time Shag Shaughnessy's Redmen held tight too. "Kewpie" Kennedy has returned to the Mustangs' lineup, which means at lot to the Western aggregation. He will be remembered as the fire-ball that fought like a fiend for the title of 1931.

As plungers, Varsity has Copp on the half line. Johnny works hard all the time and the harder the work that comes his way the harder he fights. In Don McQuigge and Greco at middle, we have two hard-hitting, heavy linemen. If a gain can be made along the line they can make it. Chuck Newton plays regular inside. He ploughed his way through opposing lines last year with the intermediates and he is starting off this year in the same manner. It is unlikely that Albie Booth will be in the fray on Saturday. His knee still needs tender care. Hal Richardson is also an unlikely starter on the half line as is Jack Witzel at middle. These three men have been out to practice for the last few days but due to the slow mending of their knee injuries and their consequent lack of condition generally, they will have to take it easy for another week at least. Bobby Coulter displayed his ability as a field general to the satisfaction of everyone last week. Under heavy fire he carried on in veteran-like, steady manner. The outsidies are deadly accurate already. Henderson never missed last week in Montreal when it came to nailing his man for a score. He has good judgment, speed, and lots of fight. Jack Dawson at flying wing is another veteran and performs his duty well. Bill Bryers at left outside was called upon less for heavy duty last Saturday than he will be at other times since the McGill backs were usually on the other side of the field. Gordie Keith and Allison make up another brace of fast tacklers. The whole team is a unit. It is useless to pick stars. No one player can be a star without the support of a team that fights hard all the way and fights together playing a heady game above all else. Brains will win out over brawn even in this mightiest of all sports. The Big Blue team has just that.

The students at Varsity have every reason to be proud of their team. With Warren Stevens at the helm they have one of the finest men ever to fill a coach's shoes. He is loved and respected, by everyone who knows him, as a gentleman and a true sportsman. Since his coming to the University a new spirit has spread throughout the campus in sport circles. He is ever willing to lend a helping and encouraging hand even to the greenest players in any sport. There never has been, since his coming, a trace of prejudice or unfairness in any department over which he has had supervision. Throughout the Dominion of Canada he is recognized as one of the greatest football strategists in the country. What greater tribute could be paid to him for his untiring efforts than the wholehearted support of every student under the Blue and White colours in the opening home game to-morrow? In this year's team every player is worthy of praise. To know these fellows individually is a pleasure and an inspiration. When a man gives of his time and energy the way they do, when a man is willing to go out on that field and fight hard, give every ounce of his strength, and play the game as best he can, what more can we as students supporting the team, expect? Those chaps are all doing their very best in order that the intercollegiate senior title may remain within the walls of the University of Toronto. That's what they are doing. What are you doing? Are you the kind of a fellow who never knocks the team or any one of its players? Are you the kind of fellow who supports them to the last ditch whether they win or lose a game? If you are, you are increasing their chances to win. If you aren't you are a hindrance to the team and no credit to the university. It's up to you. You are looked upon as true Varsity supporters. Let's go to town. Everybody in the university from the President down is behind the team to the last ditch.

The Varsity juniors will play Queen's to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock and the intermediates will play the first game of the afternoon's double header against Ottawa College. The band will be in attendance attired in their new uniforms and once more they will add colour and dash to the already gala affair. The cheer leaders under the guidance of Grayd Parmenter are in fine fettle to do their best in exhorting the student sections to cheer in unison. The Varsity band by far surpasses any other college band in Canada and in the opinion of some musical critics ranges among the best on the continent. Of that we have real cause for pride and gratitude to Captain Slatter, the instructor.

This whole issue is designed to bring to each student a realization of the wave of school spirit that flows across our campus, to impress each student with what is expected of him or her. It should be of little necessity to attempt to arouse your support and enthusiasm behind the football team. This should merely serve to add a tongue of flame to the already glowing embers. Will you help to heap more enthusiasm on the fire? You can still get students' season ticket books at the S.A.C. Office in Hart House. Freshmen, do you know the "Blue and White"? If not, learn it now. It's in the Handbook.

turn its attention to a greater degree than heretofore. There are still extensive areas on which planting is the only practical method of reforestation. Here is a field of endeavour for those of you who like to handle living, growing things.

"Conditions are now so changed in forestry that the profession must be broadened out. Forestry includes many avenues of public service. All of these must be developed if forestry is to attain the fulfillment of its objects. It may be more difficult for you in the next few years to create a demand for your services. Therefore you must prepare yourselves more thoroughly, you must face the future with the same courage and determination exhibited by the early graduates of the school."

HALL OF FAME IN VARSITY FOOTBALL

Varsity won the intercollegiate title in 1888 and 1889. They again triumphed in 1901. The names of DR. W. B. HENDRY, ERNIE PATTERSON, DR. G. W. ROSS, and DR. J. A. MCCOLLUM were on everybody's lips that year.

The superb kicking of HAROLD BEATTY was greatly responsible for bringing another championship to Toronto two years later. He was captain of the team that year. GEORGE BALDARD, now the crown attorney of Hamilton, was the manager.

"CASEY" BALDWIN and the team of 1905! The team that won the Dominion championship. The secret of Biddy's success on the gridiron was that he was the son-in-law of "Biddy" Barr, the coach of the team. Old-timers still talk of how "Casey" tricked the Hamilton crowd and the Ottawa team at Rosedale field. He was noted for his pluck. He was the first to develop the flying machine and he worked with Alexander Graham Bell in connection with the telephone.

JACK LASH, an eminent lawyer in this city, and DR. SANDY McPHERSON were also members of the 1905 team.

Then came the prosperous football years of 1908 to 1911 when the University of Toronto won four intercollegiate titles and two Dominion championships.

BILL FOULDS, a contractor, HUGH GALL, of Robertson Bros., "RED" DICKSON, a lawyer in Hamilton, "BULL" RITCHIE, of Calgary, who used to drop kick from any angle and always kept the team in good spirits, DR. JACK MAYNARD, of Toronto, SMIRLE LAWSON, the original "big train" of football, JACK NEWTON of Sarnia, WARREN CORYELL, now with the Adams Furniture Co., and GORDON SOUTHAM, who was killed overseas. What names! It was during their stay at George St. All U.C. women cordially invited, especially freshmen.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 25
U.C. Fall Dance. Crystal Ballroom, King Edward Hotel. Luigi Romanelli's Orchestra.

8 p.m.—Hart House debate: "That in the opinion of this house the recovery of Europe is only possible through National Dictatorships."
FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 17
8.30—Hart House Masquerade.

Varsity that football reached unprecedented heights.

CHARLIE GAGE, captained the team in 1914 and he held more honors than anyone else at Varsity. He was fatally injured in a motor accident.

HARRY NICHOLSON, now a rector at Flint, Michigan, played then, as did "GAME" STRATTON. MELBROCK was a big noise on the 1914 team too, and to-day is still making a big noise at Ridley. He was one of the best runners ever to compete under the Blue and White.

The name of WARREN SNYDER, now a doctor and coroner in New Toronto, will ever be remembered in connection with the famous teams of 1920 and 1921 when intercollegiate football reached another high water mark at Varsity. The 1920 team won the Dominion championship. Snyder was the idol of Toronto students for many years and he was still going strong when he captained the 1926 team to another intercollegiate title. He was one of the most spectacular half-backs of all time.

Other names that call to mind those stirring campaigns are JIMMY DOUGLAS, who died some years ago while coaching the Blues, J. R. STIRRETT, JOE BREEN, the captain and now coach of Western Mustangs, "RED" MACKENZIE, a physician in Baltimore, GORD DUNCAN, who was assistant to LES BLACKWELL four years ago, and FRANK SULLIVAN, also a great hockey player.

SANDY SOMMERVILLE, of golf fame, played in 1921 with HARRY HOBBS as quarter.
Of the 1926 collection of stars we have DON CARRICK, HARRY DALES, coach of the second team last year, MURRAY SNYDER, who was also a great goal-keeper.

Also on the 1926 team were LOU CARROLL, coach of the present intermediate team, DR. GEORGE MORGAN, who three years ago coached the University of Alberta, and JACK SINCLAIR, the star of the Varsity team for the last few years. He is one of the best running halves and kickers in the game to-day.

Autonobiles driven by students will not be allowed on the campus of the University of Washington from 7.00 a.m. to 5.00 p.m. on school days and from 7.00 a.m. to 12 noon on Saturdays.

possesses a fast half line and a strong sturdy line. To handle the team at quarterback, Miller, brother of Whitey Miller, last year's senior quarter, has been chosen. The halves who will start on Saturday are Gray, Sweeney and G. Powell. Gray is expected to kick the ball very far. Tom Powell will be at flying wing. The backbone of the line will consist of Bridle, Thomas, Holt and McConnell. The outsiders are Reid and Woods.

The team is well supplied with substitutes, Phillips, Stronach, Cowan, Cockfield, Caldwell, Taft, Storey and Rodway. A crowd of spectators would be a welcome addition to the team's chances of success.

HALF A CENTURY OF RUGBY HISTORY

One of the earliest characteristics to be developed by the game was resourcefulness. In 1879 the University of Toronto met the University of Michigan in a game at Detroit. As the teams lined up neither squad knew just what kind of a game they were going to play. Varsity lined up in their usual way with a regular "serum". However, the American team went one better and pulled a fast one, lining their men up in a single line and snapping the ball to the backs. Even this piece of strategy failed to shake the dauntless Canucks and the first international game ended in a draw. The following year the same two teams met in Toronto and both squads played under the same rules. This time the American team scored the only try of the game.

The Canadian Rugby Union was established in 1880. The code of laws adopted by this body was that of the English rugby game. The rules of this game had at that time reduced the number of players from 20 to 15 and stated that a player when tackled with the ball must place it on the ground. The 15 players divided into two full backs, two halves, two quarters and the rest scrum. This method of formation was used for several years till the open formation used by Harvard began to be popular. It was at this stage in the development that the wings came into being. History doesn't record whether or not they imported players from the American colleges at this time.

A new set of rules were adopted by the C.R.U. in 1891. This opened the play up considerably and assigned different values to each of the scoring systems. Under this code a try was worth 4 points, a goal from try at 2 points, drop kick 5 points, free kick 4, safety touch 2 and rouge 1. It was under this set of rules that Varsity brought home the first dominion championship in 1895.

Subsequent searches for dominion honours were rewarded in 1905, again in 1909, in 1911 and the last time in 1920 under Joe Breen. In the last thirty years Varsity have won 14 intercollegiate titles. In the next thirty years, who knows? Probably Canadian rugby will advance to such a stage that the American teams will find it necessary to give post graduate courses in French to Canadian players who will strengthen their teams while attending American colleges.

SAY LOCAL COURSE IN PHARMACOLOGY GOOD AS ANYWHERE

Allegations that Course is the Weakest in Medicine Denied

PAYS TRIBUTE TO STAFF

Claim Letter Recently Published Personal Attack on Faculty Member

"The course in Pharmacology given at this university is as good as could be given anywhere, and is one in which the students get more personal attention than any other in the curriculum," declared Prof. V. E. Henderson of the Medical College when shown a letter printed in Varsity's correspondence column, stating that this was the weakest course in the medical school. "The department has always been free and only too willing to meet any student at any time and to try to assist him whenever possible," he added.

Dr. Henderson went on to say that the statement about their being a higher percentage of failures in this subject than in others is absolutely false. The percentage fluctuates. Some years it is rather high while in others it is quite low.

When interviewed by The Varsity concerning the charges levelled at the department of Pharmacology, Dr. Ryerson of the Medical School said that the letter was obviously a personal attack against some member of the faculty and was not deserving of any serious consideration. He further stated that very seldom does a good student go down in the subject. In conclusion, he paid a tribute to the ability of Dr. V. E. Henderson, in charge of the department of Pharmacology, who has recently been elected an honorary member of the Leopold Academy of Science in Germany.

STUDENTS EDIT SUMMER PAPER

Unique Employment is Undertaken by Perry Brothers This Summer

AT WASAGA BEACH

One of the most interesting summer jobs The Varsity has come across yet was that of J. H. Perry, III, year Political Science, who, along with brother, W. J. Perry of Humber College, started a weekly newspaper at Wasaga Beach, the popular resort on Georgian Bay. The paper, of which there were eight issues during the months of July and August was a four page sheet and was distributed free to the 8,000 residents of the beach, the revenue from advertising defraying the cost of printing. The editor, J. H. Perry, made it a point to take up the cudgel in advocating much needed local reforms, and had the satisfaction of stirring up the local governing body to a sort of activity on infrequent occasions.

The Perry Brothers expect to be running the Wasaga Beach Weekly, as the paper was called, again next year, and with the hardest work of establishing the paper in the life of the beach accomplished, are hoping to gain experience that will be invaluable in later years.

PROPOSAL TO FORM PACIFIST CLUB IS GIVEN ENTHUSIASTIC SUPPORT

"There is No Reason or Justification for War," Says Mrs. Hutchison

ACTION NECESSARY

Consider War Last Resort but Favour its Complete Abolition

When questioned as to the suitability of forming a Pacifist Club in the university, leaders of organizations around the campus expressed a variety of opinions to The Varsity. Rev. L. A. Dixon of the Student Christian Movement stated that although he was not a thorough-going militarist, neither was he an absolute pacifist. In his opinion there are occasions when arms must be resorted to in order to quell bandit nations. He felt, however, that any movement which aimed at reducing armaments and exposing the futility of war as fought to-day should be supported, and was sure that there were members of the S.C.M. who would be glad to take part in the formation of a club for the discussion of pacifist propaganda.

"There is no reason or justification for war," was the pronouncement of Mrs. J. D. H. Hutchinson, Women's secretary of the S.C.M., when interviewed by The Varsity. "In some cases in history wars have brought out great national and personal qualities of courage and endurance, but in my opinion there is no reason why this could not be done in ways which are more beneficial to mankind at large," she further stated. Mrs. Hutchinson was of the belief that a Pacifist Club in the university could do much good provided that it was "actively" pacifist and issued a real challenge to the forces of war.

The League of Nations Club, according to its president, Miss D. S. Walker, does not make a point of supporting any other organization, and that the League of Nations Club is primarily

WELCOME NEW MEN AT NEWMAN CLUB

Catholic freshmen and freshettes were welcomed to the university on Saturday, at Newman Hall, where a gay tea dance was held in their honour.

In welcoming the newcomers, Father McGarity, Chaplain of the club, especially requested the earnest support of all in their efforts to make the Newman Club's Harvest Festival an outstanding success.

The first general meeting of the club was held on Saturday afternoon when following the addresses by the Chaplain and several student members, tea was served and a social hour enjoyed. Arrangements for coming events were discussed at the meeting and the possibilities of bringing the convention of the Federation of Catholic Clubs to Toronto considered.

Re Addresses

Every University student is asked to make sure, at once that his correct Toronto address and telephone number are entered upon his registration card in the office of the University Registrar, Simcoe Hall, or of his College Registrar or Faculty Secretary. The University Directory is now being prepared for the press and it is of the greatest importance that all addresses and telephone numbers be correct.

ANNOUNCE SCHOLARSHIPS

The following scholarship awards were announced after a meeting of the Senate of the University of Toronto held Friday night.

The George Paxton Young Fellowship (graduate), A. R. Cragg; Bapty Scholarship in the Faculty of Medicine, T. P. ## Fights and Frolics, Band and Gum All Make Varsity Bleachers Hum

By C. L. Coburn

Who's afraid of the Big Bad Mustang?

Our own imagination as to why and wherefore is that the Western team had been up all night and still thought it was Friday the thirteenth.

And it was still Friday the thirteenth for the unfortunate customer who got into an argument with an usher during the Greater Exodus from the south-end bleachers and was very promptly escorted from the grounds.

At that lie had the crowd with him, even though Ross Workman got no response to his impassioned plea for some valiant chevalier to come down from the stands and battle the matter out with him on the field of honour.

At an early hour this morning The Varsity was unable to verify the rumour that the crooner who assisted the band at half-time had been signed up by the Victoria College Music Club.

There have been two attempts this year by the reactionaries elements of Montreal to have Professor King Gordon removed from his chair at the Theological College. ## WESTERN MUSTANGS DEFEATED 21-2 AS BLUE TEAM HUMBLING OPPONENTS TO TAKE INTERCOLLEGIATE LEAD

Spectacular Kicking by Sinclair Combined with Brilliant Offensive, Gives Varsity Early Lead which Remains Unbroken

BOTH TEAMS FEATURE FORWARD PASS

Stevens' Men Complete Four Passes for Big Gains and Intercept Five of the Mustangs' Throws—Arnpup Opens Scoring

By John T. Stubbs

The intercollegiate titleholders left little doubt as to their supremacy over Western when they swamped the latter aggregation 21-2 at the Varsity Stadium on Saturday afternoon to take the group leadership. Joe Breen's contenders for the college rugby title tided badly in the second quarter when a fumble recovered by Arnpup gave Varsity the chance to send Sinclair around the end for a touch and a few minutes later for another. After that Western never threatened the Big Blue team's chances and the verdict was settled.

Sherk, on the backfield for the Mustangs, carried the load of responsibility and punishment, doing the catching, kicking, and some of the forward passing. For Varsity, Sinclair was again the shining light of the game. At the end of the hour he had scored 26 points in the first two contests of the intercollegiate series. Arnpup made the first score of Saturday's game with a placement for three points. Coulter at quarter for Varsity also deserved credit for the aggressive and clever way he handled the winners' plays. Ward, captain and quarter of the Western twelve, earned honourable mention for his performance.

FROSH RIDICULED AT VICTORIA BOB

Evening Proves Huge Success Despite Unpopular Friday 13th

FOUR ACTS PRESENTED

The hoodoo of Friday the thirteenth cast no gloom over the 61st annual Victoria College Bob held in Burwash Hall Friday evening. With a kaleidoscope of coloured lights flashing over the audience, to the melodious music of a large orchestra the freshmen of the college were officially welcomed, as sophomores, professors and guests gathered to celebrate this age-old custom.

Mr. Ted Avison and Mr. Woodside opened the Bob with short speeches, and a four act play ridiculing the frosh year in general and certain members in particular was presented by the Bob committee directed by Marsh Laverty.

The frosh were represented in a common room introducing themselves to one another and wondering at the potentialities of the sophomores. Act two was a facetious presentation of

STUDENT FOUND

James Taylor, second year student at Victoria, was reported found by the Toronto police on Friday last. Taylor was recognized in Brockville and after admitting his identity, apologized for causing trouble and explained he was just "hitch hiking".

The Warren Stevens-coached team outplayed the Londoners in every department of the game. Western proved to be no great threat as expected at the passing game. Toronto completed four out of seven forward passes in the first half for a total gain of 48 yards. Each team tried ten passes. Varsity completed four and Western none. Varsity intercepted five and Western two. The passing game proved a loss for Joe Breen's Purple and White clad men as they not only lost a down on every attempt but lost possession on half of them.

As for making yards, Varsity succeeded seven times in the first half and Western once. In the second half Western succeeded twice and Varsity three times. Totalling, U. of T. moved the yardsticks ten times to Western's three. At the kicking game, Sinclair's advantage was never in doubt and some of his hoists rivalled the best yet seen at the Varsity Stadium. Even when the Varsity punter was facing the wind he sent them sailing farther than his opponent. Dur-

DEAN MITCHELL TO SPEAK TO ENGINEERING SOCIETY

Topic for Opening Meeting is "Canadian Recovery and Engineering"

The opening meeting of the Engineering Society is to be favoured with an address by Brigadier-General C. H. Mitchell, D.S.O., Dean of the faculty of Applied Science. Dean Mitchell is the Chairman of the Toronto Board of Trade, and the past president of the Engineering Institute of Canada. His wealth of experience makes it possible for him to give some up to the minute facts on the timely subject "Canadian Recovery and Engineering".

The meeting will be held in Room C22 of the Mining Building at 4 p.m. to-day, and all members of the Engineering Society are urged to be present on time. "School" songs will precede the address, and freshmen will find it an advantageous time to become better acquainted with their faculty.

WHAT PRICE COLLEGIATE?

The raw-raw collegiate man has gone the way of the moustache cup and the cigar store Indian! To many of our incoming freshmen and even to a few of the more light-headed sophomores, this news will hardly seem credible. For despite the fact that universities are becoming more and more like universities, and less and less like mad-houses, those two great institutions of American education, the moving picture house and the nickel magazine, still persist in picturing our seats of learning as sedate and cloistered buildings overrun with insane students and inane professors.

It is true, that occasionally the city newspapers break out into a rash of sensationalism, and in blaring headlines proclaim that university students have gone on another rampage, while editorially they bemoan the fact that modern youth will send our civilisation toppling to chaos. While these newspaper stories are usually exaggerated, there is undoubtedly an element of truth in all of them. But the fact that a few of the more flighty students take it upon themselves to participate in some silly ritual, should not condemn the whole student body as a group of nincompoops.

Whether the past four years of depression have tended to spread a sobering influence over our colleges, or whether our present condition has evolved purely through a natural process of time, is difficult to decide. It can, however, easily be seen that Canadian and American universities of to-day are a far, far cry from the "flaming youth" institutions of the post-war period. Of course, there are still the odd hair-brained fraternities and other social organisations, who persist in letting the world at large know that they go to college, by imitating with monkey-like dexterity the characters that pompous Hollywood moguls have pictured them.

It may be disconcerting at first to incoming freshmen to find that their senior brothers refuse to regale themselves in wide-bottomed trousers and brazen-coloured sweaters. It may dampen some ardent spirits to see mild tie-clipping taking the place of notorious hazing. And it may prove a little shocking to find that both students and professors refuse to indulge in silly, Groucho Marxian repartee. All these facts may at first disappoint many of our first year men, and may create in their minds a disillusionment that may take some time to eradicate. But it is undoubtedly true that in the end, they will be able to laugh heartily, and with no envy, at these caricatures of college men. They will have replaced raw-rawism with intelligent industrialism and have discarded insipid collegiatism for progressive, clear-thinking do-ism. And they will find it a saner and healthier condition.

A FROSH SPEAKS

The Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

I noticed in the Wednesday issue of The Varsity that some freshmen suffered indignities at the hands of the S.P.S. sophomores on Tuesday. But was there any mention of the fracas on Friday last, when matters were reversed and several sophs were climbing trees and lamp-posts to recover their native garments? There was not! Why? Perhaps because it might lower their prestige, and cause a downfall in their power (or some such silly notion!). But I, representing the S.P.S. frosh, would like to see justice done, and have the scragging of the mighty (?) sophomores get honourable mention, at least, in your noble paper.

Yours truly,

G. G. M. Eastwood.

Oliver Cromwell is said to have broken more windows and Henry the Eighth to have stolen more treasures than anyone in England.

Most Chinese universities are co-educational, but none of the high schools are. Many girls attend the universities, but the only positions open to them after attending these schools are teaching and secretarial work.

SUPPORTS PACIFISM

The Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

As shown by yesterday's Inconsequence and Correspondence columns, there are a number in this University who have an earnest desire to promote the cause of world peace. I, for another, am heartily in favour of the idea of starting a pacifist movement here. It seems to me that the ground is broken now, for some active steps towards the formation of a society. I would be glad if those of us who are interested could get together, if some tentative plan is not already under way.

Yours truly,
K. C. Woodsworth, II Vic.

Art, Music and Drama

M.C. Players' Guild

On Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock the Players' Guild will spring back into life. The meeting will be held as of old in the auditorium of the Women's Union. The Guild will present the second act of John Drinkwater's comedy, Bird in Hand, and the cast will include such eminent players as Miss Betty Guest, Miss Doris Huston, T. Robin Godfrey, Ted Scythes, and some new actors, Jack Jeffries, Bill Stobie and Alan Jarvis. The production of the play in under the direction of Martin Leeb.

The Guild hopes to attract many new members this year and consequently is giving an invitation for all to attend. The purpose of the Players' Guild concerns all the details of play production. Every member will be given the opportunity to act under capable direction and a play will be presented every second Wednesday afternoon. The U.C. Players' Guild has, by its enthusiastic activity, won the reputation of being the major dramatic organization on the campus.

Acting is not the only outlet for the creative powers of the Guild members, for they take great pains to do experimental work in scenery, lighting effects, costume and make-up, and if criticism may be called creative work it might be added that after every performance the members give quite some time to criticizing all the points of the presentation.

The Players' Guild extends a very hearty invitation to all to attend its first meeting on Wednesday afternoon. Perhaps it should be added that tea will be served after the play and mention might also be made of those proverbial words, "no previous stage experience necessary".

COMBINE TWO PROFESSIONS TO FORM DENTAL-MEDICO

Found Necessary to Produce a Combination of Both to be "Liaison Officer"

According to reports from the First District Dental Society of the state of New York recently held, there is a possibility of a profession being developed which will be known as the "dental-medico" profession and the practitioner will be a specialist in both fields but will devote the greater part of his time to dentistry.

Dean M. C. Winternitz of the Yale University School of Medicine, discussing the new profession at the meeting held at the New York Academy of Medicine, declared that modern discoveries have made it necessary to "develop a man who can be called a liaison officer between the two professions. For the last hundred years the dental and medical professions filled their tasks along a set route, but they are moving together, and the forward-looking men of both professions realize this linking must take place."

This movement originated about a year ago at Columbia under the leadership of Dean Owrie. According to an interview given The Varsity by the secretary of the Dean of the faculty of Dentistry, the movement has caused great controversy in the United States and many dental associations have passed resolutions opposed to the idea.

In Canada there has been little response to the suggestion and there is no immediate likelihood of a change in these courses. The place where the medical and dental courses are most alike is in Centu, China, where they are identical for the first four years and only in the last year is there any specialization.

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:-

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

Friday the thirteenth may be a worrying day if you are of a pessimistic nature, but there was no cause for worry on the part of last year's intercollegiate tennis team. On Friday morning the first two rounds of the intercollegiate tournament were played at the Toronto Tennis Club and the four members of last season's team have been successful in winning their sets so far. Pat Callen, Agnes Gardner, Jean Davey and Kay Symons who composed the team, are playing their old games and have a good chance to represent Varsity at Kingston this week-end.

Their opponents on the courts today will be Anne Scott, Ellen Wilson, Madge Shaw and Kit Gisbourne who are wielding their rackets in very effective style and have defeated all comers to date. It looks like a real struggle for top place and some fast games should result.

After the next round is played the four remaining players will make up the team, but the tournament will continue to decide the individual championship. It is expected the tournament will be completed this morning so if you want to see some real tennis hop a Yonge Street car and come up to Price Street, then go one block east.

GOLF TOURNAMENT DRAWS LARGE FIELD

Intercollegiate Team for Montreal to be Announced Shortly

BOECKH LEADS WITH 153

The annual intercollegiate golf tournament was played on Friday afternoon over the difficult Royal York course. Jim Boeckh led home a field of 40 contestants with rounds of 76, 77 for a total of 153. Rod Phelan was next in line with 78, 79, a total of 157, four strokes behind the leader. J. P. McConvey and A. P. McDonald tied for third place with 164. The brand of golf displayed was of a very high calibre in spite of the fact that several players got off to a very poor start.

Montreal, Que.—A Christmas and New Year's cruise to the Caribbean by the Empress of Britain, a round the world cruise by the same liner, a Mediterranean cruise by the Empress of Australia, two Duchess of Bedford cruises to the West Indies, and twenty transatlantic sailings from Canadian ports are scheduled for Canadian Pacific liners for this winter season.

The five cruises will all start from New York, the Empress of Britain will sail December 23, visiting Kingston, Havana and Nassau and returning to New York January 3. The following day the 42,500 ton liner will begin her third tour of the world, lasting 130 days and calling at 33 ports. On January 30, the Empress of Australia leaves for a 69 day tour of the Mediterranean, with 25 ports in 21 different countries to be visited. The two West Indies cruises by the Duchess of Bedford will begin on January 20 and February 21, each lasting 23 days and with 13 ports on the schedule.

The Canadian Pacific season of sailings from Canadian Maritime ports will be opened by the Duchess of Athol, which is due to reach Halifax December 1 and Saint John December 2, and will sail from these ports December 8 and 9 for Glasgow, Belfast and Liverpool.

Four liners, the Duchess of York and the three popular 16,400 ton "Monts", Montcalm, Montrose and Montclair, will make regular voyages to Liverpool throughout the season, which closes April 12 at Saint John and April 13 at Halifax with the departure of the Montclair. The Liverpool service calls also for two sailings by the Duchess of Athol and one each by the Duchess of Bedford and Duchess of Richmond. There will be two sailings to Havre and Southampton. The Montrose, December 9 from Saint John and December 10 from Halifax and the Montcalm from the two ports respectively March 23 and March 24. The Montclair will continue her voyage to Antwerp.

ISBISTER'S FINE PUNTING

Boomer Passes to Stewart in Last Five Minutes for Touchdown

By J. A. Runnells

Downing Ottawa College by a 9-6 score on Saturday afternoon at the stadium, the Varsity intermediates stepped into their second consecutive victory of the season in a fine exhibition of plunging and aerial football.

Up until the final stages of the game the seconds were facing almost certain defeat with the score standing at 6-2 in favour of Ottawa. But strenuous plunging and an exceedingly strong line made headway for the Blue and White with only five minutes to play and they scored their first touchdown.

For the first half of the game the play was fairly even and a fine brand of rugby was exhibited. The spectacular open field running of Lafleur, the Ottawa half, saved the visitors time and again, but Isbister's kicking was more than a match for Barnabe's skill and at half time the score was 2-0 for Varsity. Both points were tallied on rouges.

In the third quarter the plunging of Boomer and Newton who ripped open the Ottawa line with dependable consistency kept the play ranging in Ottawa territory. The visitors' chance came when Isbister knocked Barnabe's kick into touch on the Varsity 40-yard line and Ottawa took possession. Twice the yardsticks were moved as Devine found the weak spots in Varsity's faltering line and from the 10-yard line Devine plunged for a touch, fixing the score at 6-2 for Ottawa.

Once again in the final frame, Varsity, determined to win, carried the play into Ottawa ground and kept it there. The line was a stone wall to crack and Boomer's plunging forced Varsity into a scoring position. A plunge by Boomer left him clear to pass to Stewart on the 10-yard line, who carried it over safely for a converted touch and the score rose to 8-6 for Varsity. The final point came when Isbister hoisted the ball to the deadline with only one minute to play.

Varsity — Flying wing, McMichael; halves, Stewart, Boomer, Isbister; quarter, McKee; snap, Doyle; insides, Boothe, Brebner; middles, Witzel, Holden; outsides, Williams, Edwards; subs, Willis, Newton, Burson, Corrigan, Sweeney, Ruddock, Boardrug, Loughhead.

Ottawa — Flying wing, Kealy; halves, Lafleur, Benoit, McAndrew; quarter, Barnabe; snap, Veal; insides, Desjardins, Phillips; middles, Corriand, Cannon; outsides, Hold, Devine; subs, Brennan, Sweetman, Labelle, La France, Swabey, Gagner.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By John T. Stubbs

After the three football games of Saturday last, there seems to be fair possibilities of three intercollegiate titles coming to the University of Toronto Rugby Club's domain this season. Where are the sages that called McGill first and then Queen's to take the senior honours away from Varsity this year? Personally we feared McGill most and then as usual, we expected almost anything to happen in the games with Western. The Mustangs have always been a thorn in the side of the U. of T. grid team both at home and in London. We have yet to take them in their own home town. This year it will be done for the first time on Nov. 4th. But it won't be done as easily as Varsity found yesterday's game. Joe Breen will see to that. Just before the game the Purple warriors listened to telegrams from several of the old guard of '31 exhorting them to go out there and win. At half time Joe Breen did the same thing but the way he did it would not permit of transmission via the wire.

Now to return to Varsity's most recent victory. As of old, the fans didn't appreciate the tackling methods of the well-known "Kewpie" Kennedy, now returned to Western for a course in post-graduate medicine. His head-locks seemed to be the only way he knows of tackling. However unappreciative the fans were of Kennedy, they couldn't help giving Sherk and Ward a big hand for their efforts. Both of them were good. Burgoyne didn't decrease the effectiveness of Varsity's backfield when he went on either. Coulter made the crowd sit up and take notice too. That boy is as clever a field general as Varsity has had in many a year. Jack Sinclair hates publicity but that can't be helped here. If there is a kicker in Canada right now with the brains of Sinclair he hasn't shown it. And Jack doesn't get the credit he should for it. He scored his 26th point in two games yesterday. His kicks were placed with an uncanny accuracy and he knows when to kick. The whole Western backfield was caught flat-footed several times Saturday. And can he run?

Perhaps now Varsity's defence against the forward pass will receive the most particular notice of the other intercollegiate teams. Western didn't complete one pass in the whole game. Right now the Blue team looks good enough to take the intercollegiate race without a loss and even without the scoring punch of Sinclair. They are better than last year's outfit was at this time last year. And Warren Stevens is plenty of reason why they will improve. So we can safely venture the statement that by the end of the season, barring accidents, they will give the other playoff contenders a stiff run for their money.

Those who saw the Varsity juniors trim Queen's 23-0 will agree that the backfield of the kid squad looks first class. Throwing forwards for touches and converts isn't seen often but they pulled them often. Gray was the standout of the contest, which adds another to U. of T.'s list of future hopes. The reason for tongues protruding from open mouths at the intermediate game was Isbister. His hoists were so mighty it would take a few 100 yard sprint stars to get down under to tackle in time. And he throws a pass like a bullet. With time, tuition, and practice he will make a real successor to Jack Sinclair.

BLUE JUNIORS WIN SWAMP QUEEN'S 23-0

Cam Gray, former Runnymede star, was undoubtedly the outstanding man on the field, and accounted for 12 of Varsity's 23 points. He was ably assisted by Tafts, Storey and Miller.

Queen's were bewildered by the onslaughts of the Blue and White beginners who, after the first quarter was completed, had everything their own way. Accuracy in passing and ability to turn their opponents' mistakes into points were the main reasons for the overwhelming score. Time and again they played for fumbles and combined an open game with this and having superiority in the kicking and passing departments; their Tricolour foes hardly appeared to be a threat.

For the first quarter Queen's dominated the play by an aggressive attack that kept the ball well down on the Blue and White half of the field. Varsity's first point came in the second quarter when Thomas plunged to gain yards twice and Gray kicked to Young who ran into touch behind his own line. Shortly after this Varsity worked their way to the Queen's 25-yard line where Gray attempted a placement. It struck the goal posts and glanced over for one point, giving the Blue and White team their second tally.

In this quarter also Varsity scored an unconverted touchdown, the first, when Gray's kick was fumbled on the Queen's 5-yard line and Cowan recovered to plunge over the line, and the second when Tafts threw a beautiful 40-yard pass to Storey from 25 yards out. Storey snared the ball under the difficulty of having three men around him and running behind the line. The half ended with the score 12-0 for Varsity.

Gray gave Varsity their third touch in the third period after a series of plunges had broken the Tricolour line to within 15 yards of their own posts. Varsity were dominating the play completely.

In the final frame an intercepted pass by Powell gave Varsity possession on the visitors' 25-yard line and Gray kicked to the deadline. Another fumble gave Varsity the ball only 20 yards out and Gray kicked a placement followed by another single to make the score 23-0.

Varsity — Quarter: Miller; snap: Jacobs; insides: Holt, O'Connell; middles: Bridle, Thomas; outsides: Reid, Woods; flying wing: T. Powell; halves: G. Powell, Stronach, Gray; subs: Storey, Tafts, Phillips, McPherson, Caldwell, Rodway, Cowan, Cockfield.

Queen's — Quarter: Sheppard; snap: Devline; insides: Henley, Davond; middles: Park, Smith; outsides: Barry, Bennis; flying wing: Thompson; halves: Turner, Young, Campbell; subs: Nichol, Lewis, Denny, Delve, Guy, Corkill.

Officials — Mungovan, Prendergast, Kress.

a study group, taking no definite stand in controversial subjects. Although undoubtedly there were members of the League of Nations Club who would take an active part in the formation of a Pacifist Club, Miss Walker personally was of the opinion that an accurate definition of pacifism would have to be formulated before progress could be made towards bringing together any considerable group in furthering the cause of peace.

J. W. E. Newberry, who takes an active part in the work of the Movement for a Christian Social Order, was enthusiastic in his support of the proposed Pacifist Club. "If we students are going to do our part in preventing another war we must do it immediately. One of the leading aims of our movement is to prevent war if possible, and we are always willing to co-operate with any organization devoted to the same cause," were his words.

DISCUSS NEW CREED

AT S. C. M. MEETING

students of this college do not wear their religion on their sleeves, and are not allied with denominationalism.

"We of University College really represent the broadest approach to religious questions. The groups of the S.C.M. are the only means by which the student can help himself to integrate his various college activities and co-ordinate them into a unified purpose.

"Much of our religion is static and is put off and on like an old coat. Students must turn their old creed inside out. They must scrap all preconceived notions of religion and from the scrap heap discover something that is their own—it does not matter who else believes it so long as they have faith in it. Once discovered this creed must be put to work. There is dire necessity of reinterpreting life in the light of the new knowledge that the university brings, of discovering new objectives for life and of coming to grips with the problems of the world to-day."

Dr. Taylor went on to say that the creed of nationalism built up since the fall of Rome, was consumed in the flames of the Great War. The advance of civilization in the future depends on how soon those who realize that the world is a whole and single brotherhood gain control. In 1733 and 1833, small groups of students began the movement which revolutionized the prevalent conception of religion. To recapture this adventurous spirit was the challenge Dr. Taylor flung at the feet of the students of 1933.

MUSTANGS DEFEATED BY BLUE SENIORS

ing the first half the Toronto line was functioning much better than the Western partition but during the last two frames of the contest, the Mustangs made big gains through big holes which left the onus of responsibility on the home team's secondary defence.

The Varsity outsidars far excelled the end men of the visiting outfit in speed and tackling. Allison, Henderson, Keith and Bryers all played well on the offensive and also looked strong on the defensive. Boothe, playing for the first time since he was taken out with a knee injury a few weeks ago stayed in the game for the full sixty minutes and added considerably to the winners' line-prominence.

The game was not one which permitted of many fumbles, because those that were made proved very costly for the offenders. The Mustangs showed a general all-round weakness as compared to the Varsity outfit. Sherk was the only outstanding player on the losing lineup. It proved humanly impossible for him to prove effective under the load he was forced to shoulder. Joe Breenn did not display a powerful outfit but the offensive looked like his forte. The way his men uncoiled end runs shifting from left to right and then back again after the ball was in the runner's hands, had everybody guessing. But the Toronto ends did not fade and the end run attacks of the Mustangs did not go far.

Armp scored a placement for Varsity as the only score of the first quarter. Two touches on end runs and a rouge by Jack Sinclair in the second made it 14-0. He scored another point in the third with Dawson nailing Sherk, while in the fourth he made a safety touch to score and four singles for a final score of 21-2 with Sherk scoring on a touch-in-goal and a rouge for Western's two points.

Varsity — Snap, Peacock; insides:

61st VICTORIA BOB RIDICULES FRESHMEN

the freshmen's registration when more inner secrets of certain freshmen were divulged. A frosh first year party was ridiculed when six-foot women slung their five-foot escorts around in a tremendous barn dance.

At intervals during the programme the sophomores and frosh clashed vocally with their respective year songs that made the very dishes rattle in the Burwash pantry. Led by their cheer leaders and their piano players the two years yelled their battle songs and there were many sore throats in Burwash and Wymilwood last week-end.

The Bob quartet gave its presentation of the renowned Bob song and the trio composed of Joliffe, Joliffe and Bates provided some popular harmony. Songs adopted from "You have to be a Football Hero" and "We are in the Money Now" were sung effectively by the male chorus.

With the capacity crowd in the Hall singing the stirring college song accompanied by the orchestra, another class of freshmen entered college life.

HOPE EXPRESSED DEBATING UNION TO BE REVIVED

Co-eds Recognize the Value of Public Speaking in Education

DIVISION A HANDICAP

Absence of U.C. Women's Debating Society Adds to Difficulty

"The Women's Undergraduate Debating Union has to all intents and purposes ceased to exist," said Miss Isabel M. Jordan, who was president of the Union last year, when asked about the absence of the Debating Union in the University Handbook. "The Union has been dying for many years," continued Miss Jordan, "and it gave its last gasp this year. However, we are trying to reorganize it, and we hope to revive it if there is any interest in debating. Miss Margaret Farmer at Trinity is interested in debating and was on the women's team last year that debated against the Maritimes. I have been given to understand that Miss Farmer will attempt to reorganize it this year and I certainly hope that she is successful. It would be a shame if Toronto were forced to withdraw from intercollegiate debating since Queen's, McGill and McMaster are all active, and I have heard that Western wants to enter the Union. Toronto has been handicapped because there are four colleges here and it is difficult to form an association comprising them all and have it run smoothly. Victoria, St. Michael's and Trinity all have private debating societies who should be able to assist, but U.C. has no debating society for women and this makes it harder to find people. In any case the Union is worth reviving for debates against the other universities in Ontario, and also for interfaculty debates. (Continued on Page 4)

ARTIST TRANSLATES OWN EXPERIENCES

Aim is Simplicity Rather Than Complexity in Modern Painting

STUDY TO UNDERSTAND

Asked by the Sketch Committee to review or interpret Gordon Webber's exhibit, Lorne Harris began yesterday noon by explaining how he believes one should look at a painting, or any work of art. It is necessary to come to any work of art as to an experience, being ready to undergo a new experience, dropping our preconceived ideas or theories. In front of his model, whatever may be his subject, the artist goes through an experience, which of course is influenced by his own nature, as well as his ideas of justice, beauty, etc. This experience is akin to the mystical emotion of the religious man, seldom found in a theologian according to Mr. Harris. The artist's job is to translate this personal experience caused by his inner living presence through the medium that is natural to him: words to the poet; sounds to the musician and forms and colours to the painter.

Modern painting may seem hard to understand, yet the artist does not aim at complexity but rather at simplification, from his own point of view of course. In this translation he may use forms, geometric planes, realism even, but the essential is the deepness of his emotion. To the true artist, such as a Cezanne, or a van Gogh, it matters (Continued on Page 4)

OIL UP THE GATS FOR WAR ON CATS

Queen's Medical Students Will Declare Open Season on Felines

Kingston, Ont. (C.I.P.)—It is reported that the feline population of Kingston has had a prolific summer. This news will cause Queen's medical students, imbued with the glorious spirit of the chase, to cackle gleefully as the open season on cats draws near. No license will be required to sally forth on moonless nights to kidnap unsuspecting kitties unless students carry firearms when they are seeking particularly ferocious cats owned by particularly ferocious boarding house cooks.

Aspiring saw-bones will be sure of a good supply of materials and for the first time in years will be able to send home a pussy-cat's duodenum with appropriate comments and remarks showing the folks back in Pott's Corners that little Oscar is studying his anatomy with great assiduity.

ENGINEERING CLUB OPENS

In addressing the opening meeting of the Engineering Society yesterday afternoon Brig-Gen. C. H. Mitchell, D.S.O., chairman of the Toronto Board of Trade, and Dean of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, paid a last tribute to the departing depression, and backed with indisputable facts, heralded the return of sound economic conditions and general good times.

Calling upon the undergraduates to have faith in their chosen profession and the ability of Canada to surmount the present obstacles, Dean Mitchell declared that the depression was terminated, and the prospects for the future were growing brighter day by day. (Continued on Page 4)

TUTORIALS OF U.C. COPY PRINCETON

Privileges of Graduates Are Extended to Fourth Year Students

OXFORD IS INITIATOR

"We hope to give fourth year honours students the main values of M.A. work," said Mr. E. K. Brown, discussing the purpose of the new tutorial system in English in University College.

"We are not as original as many people think," he continued. "We are following a development in certain American universities begun about thirty years ago when Woodrow Wilson was president of Princeton University."

The tutorial system, in which two students meet with an instructor for discussion, is derived from the practice of Oxford and Cambridge, where it is the corner stone of all student work. In the University of Toronto, attendance at lectures will continue to (Continued on Page 4)

CAMBRIDGE WOMEN NOT YET ALLOWED FULL PRIVILEGES

Admitted to Examinations and Lectures but not to Membership

MONASTIC TRADITION

Also Limited to Five Hundred in Number Among Five Thousand Men

By Miss Sally Lunn, B.A. (Contab.)
The two women's colleges at Cambridge, Girton and Newnham, were founded about sixty years ago. The buildings are therefore new and lack the beauty and associations of the other colleges. Moreover, they have not the rich endowments of the men's colleges and fail to give the same opulent impression.

Since the university limits the number of women to five hundred there are nearly ten times as many men as women. Women are still not admitted to membership of the university, which is apparently trying still to keep up its original monastic traditions. This means that women are allowed to attend lectures and take exams but not to vote for the Senate which governs the university. Otherwise women are hardly aware of their anomalous position. In fact they find it rather convenient not to be bound by university rules. They do not have to wear gowns and squares nor can they be punished by the Proctors, the university policemen, whereas the women at Oxford are members of the university and have to suffer these drawbacks.

Women are now allowed to join almost all the university societies with the exception of the Union Society. In recent years the rules as regards relationship between men and women undergraduates have been considerably relaxed. At one time it was considered most improper for a student of Girton to be seen talking to a man unless he was her brother. There was an amusing rule allowing young ladies to go on the river only if they carried (Continued on Page 4)

GERMAN TRAGEDY SEEN IN FAILURE TO SAVE REPUBLIC

Other Powers Helped Destroy it, Says Professor Glazebrook

SITUATION DANGEROUS

Hitler's Stand May be Bluff, but Future is Still Unpredictable

The tragedy of the present German situation, Professor Glazebrook, of the History Department, stated to The Varsity yesterday, is that the other powers have helped to destroy the German republic which they wished above all to save, and that they may now be forced to make concessions to the new reactionary government of Hitler that they refused to make to Stresemann and the republic.

Professor Glazebrook believes that Hitler's present stand may be a bluff by which he hopes to effect a compromise. "Nations," he explained, "have often used this method, and sometimes it succeeds, while at other times the bluff is 'called'. On the other hand, Hitler may be quite determined to carry out his threats. At present we have had no great amount of news on the subject, and it is impossible to see what will happen.

"There can be no doubt that the situation is a very dangerous one, and such as to cause serious concern to every country. We are now back to where we were before 1926, before Germany joined the League of Nations. When Germany finally did join she was bound to the policy of fulfilment, and undertook to co-operate with the other members. To-day, however, Germans feel that they have got nowhere in the pursuance of that policy, and from that conviction the present situation has arisen."

Germany, Professor Glazebrook pointed out cannot actually withdraw from the League of Nations for two years, as that period of notice is required. It may be, moreover, that Hitler intends rather to refuse to (Continued on Page 4)

INCONSEQUENCE

One would naturally expect a journalist—even an amateur—to be the last of all persons to advocate a censorship of the Press, but an exhibition of propaganda—peddling in its most vicious form in one of the Toronto dailies provides an almost overwhelming argument in favour of some form of restraint, to be imposed in cases where editors obviously know not the meaning of the word.

The exhibition in question occupied three solid columns on the front page of one of the local papers yesterday evening. It consisted of four photos, one of a German army scene, one of storm troopers, one of a road-workers' "army" and the fourth of a Steelhelmet gathering. Underneath were the following descriptive cut-lines, respectively:

"Rolling Drums! Familiar Goose-Step kicking up the dust-clouds of strife. Heels spurring hopes of lasting peace as they pound out the rhythm of Prussianism's song of hate. Is this 1914 again?"

"This Looks Like A Market Garden. It is! A huge German hothed of vegetables for the next war! Thousands upon thousands of Nazi 'storm troopers', every man capable of bearing arms and in each the virus of militarism, injected in youth and nurtured through the passing years. Highly trained, they need only the command of the man to whom they are listening at Nuremberg—Hitler—to change them into a machine of war. Remember Belgium!"

"A 'Harmless' Army, This One, but a mesmeric wave from Germany's new 'all highest' would change their road-work shovels into deadly arms overnight. Hitler reviewed these troops at Frankfurt. Remember the Marne!"

"Consolidation For A United Germany—Crown Prince Wilhelm arrives in Hanover Stadium at the union of Steelhelmet and Nazis, a memorable day in German history, as it welded the two leading military organisations of the Fatherland. Seventy thousand army bearers here? Remember the Lusitania?"

I am not concerned here with the truth or falsity of the facts suggested above. I am not concerned with the question of Germany's justification of her stand, it has become a truism that neither Germany nor all Europe would be in the position they occupy to-day but for the Allied Nations' flagrant de facto abrogation of the disarmament terms of the Peace Treaty. What I am concerned with, and deeply concerned, is the emotional reaction which the display was intended to convey. Only one purpose can be read into reference to "Prussianism's song of hate", "the virus of militarism", and (Continued on Page 4)

LEADERSHIP NEEDED FOR RHODES AWARD

Information Regarding Scholarships May be Obtained at Simcoe Hall

SELECTED BY COMMITTEE

Particulars in regard to Rhodes Scholarships from Ontario for 1934 and blank forms of application have been received in the Registrar's office. These Scholarships are probably the most famous Scholarships in the world and entitle the holder to at least two and generally three years' study at Oxford University, England. The Scholarship amounts to £400 per annum and there are two Scholarships awarded annually to Ontario. To be eligible for a Rhodes Scholarship, a candidate must be a British subject with at least five years domicile in Canada and unmarried. He must have passed his nineteenth but not his twenty-fifth birthday on October 1st, 1934, and he must have reached such a stage in his University course that he will have completed at least two years at his University by October 1st, 1934.

Distinction in character, personality and intellect is the most important requirement for a Rhodes Scholarship. Sometimes students, who would have a very good chance of being selected for the Scholarship, have failed to apply for it in the mistaken belief (Continued on Page 4)

TWO PLAYS FEATURE DRAMATIC OPENING

Victoria Society Announces Programme for Season

GROUPS ARRANGED

Victoria College students were invited to attend the first meeting of the Dramatic Club last night in Wyndwood and the response of the dramatically inclined was most gratifying to the executive. It was primarily an organization meeting for the season when plans were laid for the club's activities and those intending to join were requested to sign up for various groups, according to their taste for acting, reading plays, stage managing or make-up. Dr. Robins, the honorary president, briefly emphasized the work of these groups and the president announced that the season's production would be Lewis Beach's play "The Goose Hangs High" coming on the (Continued on Page 4)

KINGDOM OF GOD IN SOCIALIST CREED SAYS KING GORDON

Viewed More Clearly Than by Most of Christians in Last Century

MUTUAL CHALLENGES

Tragedy of Church Found in Failure to Protest System

"The socialist has a better view of the Kingdom of God than have most of the Christians of the last hundred years," was the statement made by Professor King Gordon of the Theological College of McGill University in addressing the Movement for a Christian Social Order in Victoria College last evening. Fred M. Young, president of the Movement, was in the chair.

Professor Gordon in his address presented the challenges of socialism to religion and the challenges of religion to socialism. Socialism challenged religion, he said, in four respects. The first was its analysis of the conditions in our economic society. "I think," said the speaker, "that one of the greatest tragedies of the Christian Church of the last hundred years is that it has never raised any voice of protest against the distressing consequences of the present economic system. More than that, it has accepted the culture of the system."

The second was the challenge of a searching social analysis, calling attention to all the waste in terms of human life. We have tended to neglect the great mass of thwarted people and are too prone to accept the idea that "the poor we have always with us" and to let the matter rest there. "The tradition of Christian philanthropy has made the Church impatient in the matter of social reconstruction. There has been a tendency (Continued on Page 2)

YOUNG TORIES PLAN YEAR'S PROGRAMME

Macdonald-Cartier Club Ambitious to Wield Influence in Elections

PREMIER TO SPEAK

The University will be honoured, this evening, by a political visit from the Prime Minister of Ontario, Hon. George S. Henry, who will speak to the organization meeting of the Macdonald-Cartier Club in the Music Room, Hart House, at 8 p.m.

Although somewhat later in re-organizing than the Liberal Club and the C.C.F. Club, the University Conservative Unit, the Macdonald-Cartier Club has made good use of the interim in arranging a well-balanced programme for the year. Mr. Henry's speech this evening will deal generally with the policies of the Conservative Party in Ontario, and more particularly with the place of the university man in the Party.

In the following week it is anticipated that either Hon. Mr. Price or the Hon. Mr. MacRae will address a luncheon meeting. In the last week of October, a group from Ward 4 Conservatives, led by Mr. Hamilton Cassels, President of that Association, will meet with the members of the club and discuss plans for co-operation in the actual organization of the university and of Ward 4 for the next election. Mr. J. Earl Lawson, M.P., chairman of the Conservative summer school, has consented to address a (Continued on Page 4)

INITIATIONS AGAIN

Several incidents in which students had their clothes completely ruined forced attention to the much discussed problem concerning the advisability of allowing initiation ceremonies and hazing to play such an important part in the life of the first year student. The benefits—if they exist—are very difficult to find; and the arguments advanced in favour of such rituals we choose to ignore as being unworthy of men and women who profess to have somewhat high aspirations and ideals. That anyone should find it amusing to deliberately destroy the property of another student in an attempt to exhibit superiority is nauseating. Possessing the unquestioned advantage of a year at a university such as this should be quite sufficient for even the proudest sophomore. Why then, should he attempt to supplement this by a physical advantage that only occasions an inexcusable display of horse-play and leads eventually to his degradation? Might it be too much to suggest that our "poor frosh" would respect and admire those men who have so recently graduated from their ranks if these same maintained a dignified mein and an air of quiet detachment.

But if boys will be boys and for that matter girls will be girls, and they must find an outlet for their energies, then perhaps this sort of thing must be allowed and clothes and property must be destroyed whether or not the students can afford such an expensive method of giving vent to their exuberance. We have always been led to believe however that the athletic field was intended to serve this purpose—that there one could find the necessary equipment for recreation and learn the true meaning of sportsmanship. Evidently that was a grave mistake. The two do not go hand in hand. It seems necessary for the first and second years to be more primitive and to divorce, as far as is possible, the sporting ideal from their recreational activities.

Then tradition is to be contended with. Tradition, right or wrong, is such a satisfying argument for a certain type of mind. It seems to require a very superior type of intelligence to accept the suggestions of tradition when they offer something valuable and to reject them otherwise. This represents the golden mean and on one hand we hear the voice of those people who will not under any circumstances accept the dictum of the past and on the other those who revere its every word without discrimination. The intelligence of a university student should allow him to do his own thinking and help him to achieve this mean, to realize that in the matter of initiations tradition is definitely wrong and that hazing is a most unsuitable method to use in introducing the newcomer into university life. We recommend rather that he be quietly and completely ignored; realization of his lowliness would come just as surely by this method as any other and an opportunity would be given for adjustments to be made in a normal and sane fashion. Furthermore every detail of the existing procedure is antithetical to the standards set up by a university, standards that have been handed to us by tradition itself and which we attempt to maintain by reason of their intrinsic value.

KINGDOM OF GOD IN SOCIALIST CREED

to uphold the consolation of a future life as a means of transcending the ills which face us. In this sense religion has become an opiate to social reconstruction, although this tendency is perhaps not so pronounced to-day as it has been in the past.

The third challenge was that the socialist was concerned with changing the situation in which he finds himself and the tactics whereby he may accomplish that end. In this connection he said that the Christian who believed that society could be changed only by individuals changing their attitude to life was in error because society is a corporate entity and "can only be changed by making use of organized forces or forces that may be organized to formulate the mass of public opinion to bring about a change in the system."

The fourth challenge of the socialist was that he presents a definite goal of social change and here the Christian, in the realm where he should be supreme, again stands convicted because he has not aimed at a specific goal of a perfect society.

The first challenge of Christianity to socialism is that it has an ultimate faith in victory, a belief that all the great moral forces of the universe are marshalled on the side of a changed social order. The second is that of the belief in a dynamic love overcoming violence can be utilized for social change. The last was the Christian's assertion of the supremacy of the spiritual life over the material life. "The greatest condemnation of our system is that men and women are consigned to be engrossed with material things alone. Because the Christian is so concerned over spiritual life he stands against the whole materialistic system."

Sketch Room

"Gordon Webber is one of the most, if not the most talented Canadian painter," said Lorne Harris, as he opened the new Sketch Room exhibit. Whether this affirmation will prove to be true or not, we must admit that Webber is a most versatile and able artist, working hard to find his own way. And his works show us well his various efforts to seek his best means of expression. His painting is worthwhile studying, and even though the present exhibit is of uneven value there are many points worth noticing. First of all Webber has a wide use of colours that is rather refreshing after having seen so many of the followers of the Group of Seven stick, too often, to a limited choice of colours, painting largely in tones.

Among his portraits some are remarkably expressive; they "hit" us, to use a crude word, and it does not take us long to find the artist's experience in front of his models. His landscapes are frankly impressionistic, with a marked sense of form and structure. Commenting upon his Georgian Bay scenery, Lorne Harris pointed out that, to him, it was not completely expressive, because the treatment of the clouds was inconsistent with his rendering of the rocks and water.

His futuristic, even symbolistic compositions may be regarded as an interesting effort to seek a truly personal expression, and his two tropical colour compositions are interesting because they help us to understand his use of colours in his other paintings. Webber exhibits also a group of water colours, three of which are extremely good, especially his Georgian Bay scene that gives you such a strong impression. To those who are puzzled by his art I advise to read the remarks of Lorne Harris about modern painting, which will be published in this or to-morrow's issue of Varsity; best of all, go and spend some time in the Sketch Room.

With the Theatres

Tivoli.

Theatre-goers this week will be delighted with the performance given by Spencer Tracy in The Power and the Glory playing at the Tivoli just now. He gives a fine portrayal of the man who, inspired by his wife Sally (Colleen Moore), rises rapidly from track-walker to railroad president, loses his wife, marries another and commits suicide. The story is interesting and very real in spite of the above resume. Miss Moore's comeback to the screen is overshadowed by Tracy's performance although her acting is very creditable. A feature of the picture is the "Narrative" (as advertised) method of presentation. The story starts with the death of the railroad president, which provokes his secretary and bosom friend to reminiscing upon his life. Thus the highlights of the life history are presented, interspersed with comments from the teller played by Ralph Morgan, although the lack of chronological sequence in the events is rather disconcerting.

Another episode of the delightfully naive Tarzan serial with Buster Crabbe figures again on the Tivoli screen. Buster gives a very creditable imitation of the fountain in Exhibition Park while indulging in natatory manoeuvres and his complete lack of fear of the big bad baboon is most exhilarating. A mediocre cartoon comedy We're in the Money and a good newsreel complete the programme.

G.H.J.

Shea's—

Shea's are making yards this week with their traditional two-bucks-and-a-kick vaudeville show. Joe Morris and Co., with a hilarious skit, provide the best entertainment that we have seen since Olsen and Johnson. A pair of down tumblers also receive some unusual features, although it is rather amazing how versatile some of these second-run vaudeville actors can be. A mouth-organ cowboy performs some hair-raising feats with a whip, and Mary Marlowe's impersonations are clever, even if over-done.

The picture, as usual, is scarcely worth sitting through, and is saved only by some very fine character work by an old German frau in the comedy role. The newsreel contains no news at all and a slapstick comedy completes the bill.

Loew's.

The Bowers, playing at Loew's this week with Wallace Berry, George Raft and Jacky Cooper, is not a picture for highbrows or those who affect "sensibilities." It is hilarious, rough and tumble portrayal of Bowery life in the nineties, full of good clean fun of the less refined varieties, and only slightly marred by a couple of exhibitions of the "manly pathos" with which Hollywood delights in getting our goat. George Raft is particularly good as Steve Brodie, the man who never refused a dare and jumped off Brooklyn Bridge.

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

INTERFACULTY FOOTBALL AND SOCCER SEASON BEGINS

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

The old weatherman was certainly big-hearted yesterday when he condescended to hold off the rain until late afternoon and kept the sun shining, the breezes blowing, tra-la, tra-la . . . etc., (and etc., we'll skip the part about the dead leaves of autumn) until the third round of the women's tennis tournament had been played. And what a round it proved to be with all of last year's team in action—and incidentally with all of last year's team chalked up at the finish. There is no doubt about it, there are some gals around this campus who have the right idea when it comes to placing a little white ball into the far corner of a tennis court.

The most exciting sets were those played between Kay Symons of last year's team and Midge Shaw—a newcomer to interfaculty circles. Midge played brilliant tennis but was unable to overcome the wonderful staying ability and the greater experience of Kay who, with steady driving shots wore down her opponent.

Agnes Gardner, who won last year's individual championship, encountered little difficulty in winning her games against Kit Gisborne. To-day Agnes meets Kay Symons in the semi-finals—and that ought to be a real battle. After putting on a wicked spurt in the second set, Ellen Wilson was defeated by Jean Davey, and Pat Callen, also of last year's team, met with some heavy going in the struggle which Ann Scott put up against her but was successful in taking two out of three sets.

A Victoria baseball game, between first and second year, was defaulted last night by second year. The first year team will play the seniors—winners of last week's game, to-day in Little Vic gym—the time as yet not definitely decided.

CHALLENGE MATCHES

The Toronto Tennis Club yesterday morning was the scene of the third round in the women's interfaculty tennis tournament. The first two rounds were played last week with teams from University College, Victoria, Trinity, St. Michael's, Meds and Household Science competing. The fate of the intercollegiate team was decided this morning when the eight players who had survived to date met on the courts and the four winners, who will make up the personnel of the team to go to Kingston for intercollegiate competition this week-end, were Agnes Gardner, Kay Symons, Pat Callen and Jean Davey—the same team as last year. Two of them at least will be called upon to defend their position on the team when they play challenge matches this morning. The semi-finals and finals will also be played off to-day at the Toronto Tennis Club, starting at 10 o'clock to decide the individual championship.

The first two rounds of the women's interfaculty tennis tournament were played last Friday morning, October 13, at the Toronto Tennis Club. Teams from University College, Victoria, St. Michael's, Trinity, Meds and Household Science competed for places on the intercollegiate team. The concluding games will be played this morning at 10 o'clock on the Toronto Tennis Club courts. The results of the first round:

Helen Rutnam defeated by Agnes Gardner, Eleanor Sanson by Alma Greenfield, Kay McBride by Kit Gisborne, Phyllis Hamilton by Harriet

FIRST MULOCK CUP GAME OF SEASON

Senior Meds Take Sr. S.P.S. in Close Game with 3-1 Score

TEAMS IN CONDITION

Cloudy skies, sprinkling rain and hard tackling were prevalent features of the opening Mulock Cup game in which Senior School hung up a 3-1 victory over Senior Meds on the back campus last night. For the first game of the season both squads appeared to be in good condition and played a fast game over the entire route.

Senior School had a slightly stronger aggregation and Meds capitalized on a few breaks which was all that kept the School team from running up a larger score.

S.P.S. scored the first point of the season when Farquhar hoofed to the deadline after five minutes of play. Sr. School again registered in the next quarter when they worked into position and tried a placement which went wide for a point. Meds notched their point in this same quarter when Farquhar fumbled a bad snap and Meds recovered 25 yards out. After two bucks at the line Culiner kicked for a point. The scoring was concluded in the third quarter when School hoisted a long one to the deadline.

S.P.S. — Flying wing, Dawson; halves, Farquhar, Waldon, Bridgeland; quarter, Werring; snap, Muchanoff; insides, Hayhurst, McBride; middles, Powsland, Moffatt; outsides, Glover, Walters.

DENTS DOWN KNOX WITH 12-0 SCORE

Both Teams Fumble Frequently but Dents Triumph Near End

SPEARS OUTSTANDING

After a rather hesitant start, Dents decisively beat Knox to the tune of 12-0 in one of the first Mulock Cup games yesterday afternoon on Trinity field. They scored a field goal in the first two minutes of play but almost lost the advantage through several fumbles.

Both teams were very eager with the result that in the first quarter fumbling was frequent. They tightened up in the next period but the Knox line couldn't stand repeated hammering and with two minutes till half time Dents had only six yards to go to a touch. Rey took the ball around the short end for the first touchdown which was unconverted.

Knox had the better kicker in Shortt but his effectiveness was to a great Results of the second round: Alma Burrfield defeated by Agnes Gardner, Harriet Gates by Kit Gisborne, Mary Dignan by Midge Shaw, Billie Fowler by Jean Davey, Sylvia Cohn by Ellen Wilson, Alice Butler by Anne Scott, Helen Micklejohn by Pat Callen.

Results of the third round: Kit Gisborne defeated by Agnes Gardner 6-2, 6-0; Midge Shaw by Kay Symons 6-4, 9-6, 7-5; Ann Scott by Pat Callen 6-0, 3-6, 6-0; Ellen Wilson by Jean Davey 6-2, 8-6.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By J. A. Runnells

Around the campus, in the gymnasiums, on the track and courts and in the swimming pool, activity and preparation reign and Varsity is getting her athletes into condition. To-day the interfaculty soccer and rugby teams, in spite of gloomy weather, drew their first blood. Practices are being held for the swimming team to which all aspirants are invited. Already the water polo squad is being drilled and fashioned. The tennis teams, both men and women, who compete on Saturday at Kingston are swinging their racquets in calculating endeavours and the track team is undergoing a stiff programme of training. The box lacrosse schedule is ready; the volleyball teams are commencing practices and sport in general is waging a keen aggressive.

But over it all shines the beacon light of intercollegiate football with three more wins stored away. The junior game was a whitewash. The intermediates pulled the fat out of the fire in the last few minutes. The seniors—well, you know what happened. The Western Gazette carried an item in its sport editorial last week to the effect that Varsity was still smarting under the sting of last year's 22-8 defeat. It seems to be avenged.

The last quarter of the game was monotonous; of this there can be no doubt. The one criticism that was heard from those who wished to criticize was that Varsity might have opened it up when they had such an overwhelming lead. There were certainly times when chances might have been taken. But those who witnessed the game with the Mustangs last year will recall the terrific battle they waged in the last fifteen minutes. And while the fans may not appreciate a closely guarded and cautious series of plays, they should have learned by this time what to expect from the Blue and White team. Who can remember one of our senior teams that was famous for the chances they took? Rather they have been famous for a safe conservative game (except the Orphans), cultivating a strong defensive and weak offensive which characterizes the game as it is played in Canada. Combined with lack of opposition was the fact that Varsity was playing stellar ball. Coulter didn't miss one catch during the whole game.

Congratulations go to Lou Hayman for the vastly improved intermediate squad that was fielded against Ottawa College. It was a delightful shock. Lou has certainly been doing some fast work with his charges and has been aided by an additional gift of three men from the senior ranks. Still the Ottawa lads were more than a match for them in the greater part of the game. The seconds even yet must eliminate those errors in decision and decrease the number of avoidable fumbles that were evident before they are to become a consistent team. Their plunging and kicking are excellent.

There is one department of sport in the University that receives very little attention from the students, namely the British Rugby team. In an exhibition game on Saturday night they dropped a 5-0 decision to the Toronto Club, who are a much more expert group of players and had all their points scored by one man. The team has been practising hard in preparation for the oncoming game with McGill on Saturday next. The game in itself is fast and exciting and this fixture should not be an exception.

In the first of the Mulock games to-day, Dents defeated Knox 12-0, while Sr. School trimmed Sr. Meds 3-1. The opening soccer game was taken by Victoria in a close 1-0 decision over Sr. S.P.S. Vic were last year's finalists, losing out to Knox in proverbial fashion. The game was a real display in spite of the rain and slippery ground and augers well for some close games in the future. The strength of the Knox team is as yet an uncertain quantity.

extent neutralized by Spears, a former American player, who showed speed and cleverness in running back kicks. In the last period Dents turned on the steam and marched down the field. They made yards four times in succession to end up with their second touch by Cominsky, which was converted. After the kick-off they repeated the same process and ended up on Knox's two-yard line. The next play was fumbled and before Knox could clear the game was over.

This last period was featured by the plunging of Spears, Rey and Cominsky for Dents. For the losers, Shortt at kicking, and Guenette at defensive tackling were the stand-outs. Knox received one penalty, Dents two; both teams attempted two forward passes which were unconverted.

Dents — Flying wing, Squires; halves, Rey, Spears, Cavanagh; outsides, Valiquette, Mueller; middles, Cominsky and Shumacher; insides, Trit and McCartney; quarter, Wood; snap, Garrett; subs, Ryan, Apps, Rockman, Twible, Oswald, Weir, Preston, Wildfong, Hawkins.

Knox — Flying wing, Mutrie; halves, Shortt, Paulin, Cuthbertson; outsides, Clark, Jones; middles, Jack, Lowry; insides, Rosevear, Aitken; quarter, Usher; snap, Davidson; subs, Prouse, MacKay, McLean, Sinclair, Campbell, McEwen, Guenette.

Referees — Lienker, Leachman.

The growth of research work by college men and women in the United States is evidenced by the fact that in the last year at least 1,000 papers on vitamins alone have been published.

University of Oklahoma authorities have banned the drinking and possession of 32 beer in fraternity and the boarding houses, but will allow the students to drink it in shops where it is legally sold.

PHARMACY DEFEATS U.C. SOCCER TEAM

Winners Exhibited Smoother Combination Play Throughout

FINAL SCORE 3-1

In the opening game of the soccer season the Pharmacy eleven overwhelmed the U.C. team on the south campus last night to the tune of 5-1. U.C. was forced to bolster its team by several of their rugby squad and as a result their play lacked the combination shown by the more polished Pharmacy squad.

The winners opened the scoring in the first three minutes with a nicely timed rush on the U.C. goal and the result was never in doubt after that. The Pharmacy goal was threatened at times by individual rushes but only one of these were made good when the U.C. team scored their single point just before the half time whistle went. The half finished with the score 3-1. In the second half Pharmacy kept the ball in their opponents' territory continually and several times just failed to add to their score.

For Pharmacy Briscoe and Hoffman played well while Scott was outstanding for the U.C. squad.

Pharmacy — Goal, Evans; backs, McDougall and Armour; halfbacks, Evans and Eisenback; forwards, Briscoe, Brigitte, Milbourne, Ballantyne and Wilton; sub, Ramsay.

U.C. — Goal, Draper; backs, Smith and McPherson; halfbacks, Thompson, Shiner and Wilson; forwards, Scott, Garrett, Carr, Brown, and Smith.

Referee — Woods.

S.P.S. SOCCERITES LOSE TO VICTORIA SQUAD

In one of the opening games of the interfaculty soccer competition, Vic, one of last year's finalists, gained a 1-0 victory over Sr. S.P.S. Despite the slippery conditions caused by rain which fell during the game, both goals were called on to make several saves of hard drives.

During the first half, play ranged from end to end, but no score resulted. In the last few minutes Vic became dangerous, one of their shots hitting the cross-bar. In the second half Vic continued to press, and although they had play in S.P.S. territory the greater part of the time, the School team broke away several times for threatening rushes.

Finally the Vic attackers were rewarded when, with about five minutes to go, Stuart scored on a pass from Taylor. Shortly after, a second Vic goal was disallowed for offside. School tried hard in the remaining time, but were unable to secure the equalizer.

For Victoria, Stuart, Simpson and Rawlinson were best, while for School Carbone and D. Johnston were the pick. The teams:

Victoria — Goal, Dyke; backs, Metcalfe and Cooper; halves, Woodworth, Simpson and Campbell; forwards, Stuart, Rawlinson, Grills, MacDonald and Taylor; sub, Tibbary.

Sr. S.P.S. — Goal, Mitchell; backs, Bowen and Kearney; halves, Miller, Vrawley and Davey; forwards, Carbone, Jaffe, Shaw, D. Johnston and Maynard; sub, A. Johnston.

DEBATING UNION TO BE REVIVED

which have fallen off somewhat this year.

Miss Margaret Farmer, who will probably be the president of the new Union, hopes the attempt to re-organize it will be successful. She said that this could only be through the active co-operation of every woman in the university who has any interest whatsoever in debating.

"It's about time U.C. women took some interest in public speaking," declared Miss Laura White, an embryo lawyer. "They need it. Women's point of view is too subjective, and debating would help to test the objective viewpoint."

Miss Helen Rutherford, I year E. and H. student at Victoria was all in favour of an undergraduate debating society for women, "because the men have one." But most of the freshettes interviewed too shy to give their names and too shy to debate, politely hoped the Union would be a success, but, "please not to count on them."

"Debating makes you think. It would be simply wonderful to have an inter-collegiate team. I hope to be able to join it next year—now I'm too busy." This was the opinion of Margaret Thompson, I.E. and H. at Victoria. "If the subjects are interesting the women will be interested."

GERMAN TRAGEDY SEEN IN FAILURE

fulfil Germany's obligations as outlined by the Treaty of Versailles. In any case it is a question of what action the other signatories of the Treaty will take. Professor Glazebrook intimated that he himself had heard talk of a "preventative war", a war in which Germany's neighbours would use their present military superiority to ensure her good conduct in the future. Such an action, he pointed out, was too extreme, and quite unlikely. "It is impossible to imagine," he said, "that the governments of the countries involved are not now in constant communication with one another in an effort to secure a peaceful settlement of the whole difficulty, and it is altogether likely that a compromise will be effected. Germany is too far outclassed in both navy and army for an armament race to be possible."

The forthcoming German elections, Professor Glazebrook thinks, will be a farce, and the expression, not of a country but of an "armed camp."

PROSPERITY AHEAD FOR ENGINEERS

day. Engineering, he explained, was a vital point in any country—the Engineers were the last to give in to the depression, and the first to revive, and he strongly urged that all the students should take an intense interest in Canada's national and domestic affairs.

After discussing the causes and the effects of the depression, the speaker pointed out that a decrease of 20 per cent of the unemployment during the past six months was evidenced by the engineering profession, which served as a barometer to forecast good times in the near future. A general increase in business of 34 per cent served to substantiate this.

Dean Mitchell represented the Toronto Board of Trade at the convention of the Canadian Chambers of Commerce which was held at Ottawa recently, and in concluding his remarks made mention of the policy of that organization in their concerted drive against depression generally. The value of Empire trade and balanced budgets were among the foremost points mentioned.

After a hearty vote of thanks had been extended to the Dean, the meeting was closed with a vigorous "Toke Oike".

that only those students who had an outstanding career in athletics stand any chance of being selected. This is entirely incorrect. In that section of his will, in which he defined the general type of scholar he desired, Mr. Rhodes mentioned four groups of qualities, the first two of which he considered the most important, viz:

- (1) Literary and scholastic attainments;
- (2) Qualities of manhood, truth, courage, devotion to duty, sympathy, kindness, unselfishness, and fellowship;
- (3) Exhibition of moral force of character and of instincts to lead and to take an interest in his schoolmates;
- (4) Physical vigour, as shown by interest in outdoor sports or in other ways.

The scholars are selected by a Selection Committee and applications for the Scholarships from Ontario must be in the hands of Mr. Henry Borden, Secretary of the Ontario Committee, Room 1405, 320 Bay Street, Toronto, not later than November 10th.

Forms of application for the Scholarship and further information in regard to it may be obtained from the Registrar's office or from the Secretary of the Committee at the above mentioned address.

The executive feels that there is a distinct place in active politics for university men. The organization of the club this year will, therefore, be directed towards training university men to take an active part in the approaching elections. Members of the Macdonald-Cartier Club took their place on the hustings in 1926, 1929, and 1930 elections, and there is no reason why that should not occur again."

parasols which were to be discreetly used in the neighbourhood of the university bathing sheds. Now men can be entertained in students' rooms in Girtion and women may go in pairs to men's rooms. The rule that a woman could not go alone with a man to the theatre has also been removed. The women's colleges are in many ways more pleasing inside than out. The new library at Girtion is one of the most beautiful rooms in the whole of Cambridge. At Girtion almost every student has two rooms, although at Newnham most of them have bed-sitting rooms. The rooms are very charming and comfortable but definitely more conducive to work than the men's rooms. And on the whole the women do seem to work harder and to rely on hard work rather than originality to get them through exams.

"Germany's new 'all-highest,'" or such rhetorical questions as "Is this 1914 again? Remember Belgium! Remember the Marne! Remember the Lusitania." The important matter is not that the paper in question is virulently attacking Germany at a moment when international tension is high, but that a determined attempt is being made to build up in Canada a wave of feeling comparable to that which has already created the crisis abroad, to stir us up to an emotional pitch where we will be prepared to support without thought or calculation of the cost the most drastic steps which may be taken by the Government. It is not too much to say that the sole effect of such propaganda, if it is successful, will be to drive this country into war at the first opportunity. Further comment seems scarcely necessary.

little what the public thinks of his works; indeed the minute he gives an ear to the public he loses in intensity and sincerity. The more an artist is himself, the better he is, and the easier he'll be understood.

Realistic work may be the result, as we can see clearly in the paintings of Rembrandt, for example. If a painting is hard to understand the best method is to look at it for a long time, and then understanding will come—which would be all right if there were no freak painters, but this matter is left to us to judge!

Macdonald-Cartier Club participated. His attendance at the first meeting of the club shows his interest in the activities of the young men of the party, and the executive is confident that a very large gathering will greet him.

Father Point, Que., Oct. 14—

Equalling her record made earlier in the year between Quebec and Father Point, the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Britain, Captain R. G. Latta, passed here to-night en route to Cherbourg and Southampton just six hours and 30 minutes after leaving the Wolfe's Cove terminal. Pilot of the 2,500 ton liner was J. A. Bernier, of Quebec, who had been on the bridge when the Empress established the record during the summer.

A notable list of passengers was carried from Quebec by the Empress. Among them were Engineer Vice-Admiral Sir Reginald Skelton, C.B., C.B.E., D.S.O., Engineer-in-Chief of the British Navy, and Lady Skelton; Major General the Hon. Sir Newton Moore, K.C., M.C., former premier of Western Australia and president head of Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation, Lady Moore; Eric V. Bowater, president, Bowater Paper Mills Ltd., of England; Sir James Dunn, of London and Bathurst, N.B.; Sir Hugo Cunliffe-Owen, chairman, British-American Tobacco Co.; Mrs. Anthony Jenkinson of London; Sir Joseph and Lady Reed of Seaton Burn, Northumberland; George Wood of Montreal, comptroller, Canadian Pacific Steamships Ltd., Miss Margaret Wood, and many others.

Montreal, Que.—The Canadian Pacific liner Duchess of York, Capt. R. N. Stuart, V.O., D.S.O., R.N.R., is due here Saturday with a large list of passengers from Glasgow, Belfast and Liverpool.

Among those on board are: Will Spens, C.B.E., vice-chancellor of Cambridge University, and Mrs. Spens; J. A. Wilson, controller of aviation, Department of National Defence, Ottawa; Miss A. Hungerford; T. Stahlberg of Montreal; Mrs. V. Cunningham Dunlop; Miss R. Mackintosh; Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Robertson; E. G. Smart; H. Anderson; L. A. Nish and C. Palmer, of Toronto; P. J. Murer of Temiskaming, Ontario; G. McCrae of Chicago; W. Stewart, secretary, Grand Masonic Lodge, Melbourne, Australia; Major Kate Jones, of the Salvation Army, London, and Miss Jones; H. Crighton, of Glasgow, official of the Nigerian Railways, and F. Bussy, of Rochdale, Lancs.

TWO PLAYS FEATURE DRAMATIC OPENING

1st and 2nd of December with a Saturday afternoon matinee. In addition to this one-act play will be presented by each of the play groups every week in Hart House. Speeches by the president, Rudy Eberhard, the publicity manager, Joe O'Kelly, and the director of the play, Mr. Frank Hemmings, were interspersed with two one-act plays. The first of these was entitled "The Rehearsal", given by six girls, and the second, "Where but in America" given by a cast of three.

New members were made welcome in a social half hour that followed when refreshments were served.

ROMAN TRIUMPH REVIVED AGAIN UNDER FASCISTS

First of Series of Articles
by Local Italian
Student

"AVENUE OF TRIUMPH"

Depopulation of Rural Sections Led to Downfall of Rome

The following is the first of a series of general articles on Italy under the Fascist regime, which have been written for The Varsity by Francesco Mario Malinaro, who is now studying at the University of Toronto.

"Rome was great because it was Rural, but when her countryside became depopulated and great estates arose her fate was sealed."

Thus did Benito Mussolini, Dictator of Italy, admonish one hundred and fifty thousand black shirts gathered in Piazza Venezia, for the most part representatives of agricultural syndicates.

Arranged in a monstrous phalanx with the fascist standards in array after the fashion of the Roman legions the vast throng enthusiastically cheered Il Duce, who surrounded by his ministers, prefects, and podestats addressed the vast throng from the balcony of the palace. Below him on a huge drape emblazoned in gold stood the Roman Eagle.

Italian farmers will be the subject of the next Roman Triumph. This institution restored recently by Mussolini in virtually the same form as under Imperial and Republican Rome, was last August accorded to Balbo.

The triumph decreed by the Senate to honour military leaders and their legions after winning a great war, consisted in marching through "Via Triumphant" and Via Sacra as far as the Capitol and in passing under a triumphal arch.

The triumph Mussolini will accord the farmer will be of a different character meant as a reward for a peaceful war.

The "War" started by Mussolini in 1923 has been successful to a superlative degree for Italy's production of wheat, 45 million quintals in 1922, on (Continued on Page 4)

SOCIAL REFORM LEADER

Mr. Graham Spry, one of the leaders of social reform in Canada, has been the choice of the university C. C. F. Club for the speaker at their first meeting on October 24th.

Mr. Spry is at present active in three different fields of endeavour. In the journalistic sphere he is connected with the Weekly Sun, an independent farmers' newspaper in Ontario, which he owns and edits. He has been a persistent advocate of nationalization of the radio in Canada and is at present the president of the Canadian Radio League. In addition to this he is taking an active part in the study and propagation of socialism in Canada. A member of the League for Social Reconstruction, the forerunner of the C. C. F. party, he is on the editorial board of their projected publication, "Reconstruction—A Plan for Canada".

The subject of Mr. Spry's address on this occasion will be "Planning and (Continued on Page 4)

LISMER LECTURES ON ART EXHIBIT

Discusses Merits of Painting of Henri, Davies, and Suko

PAINTINGS AT ART GALLERY

In a lecture remarkable for its clearness and acute powers of perception, Mr. Arthur Lismer unfolded the respective merits of the three American artists, Henri, Davies and Suko, whose paintings are now on exhibition at the Grange Art Gallery.

As a preface to this lecture, Mr. Lismer outlined some of the essential elements of art appreciation. It is necessary, he said, that the critical attitude be avoided, for in order to reach the fundamental idea of a painting, one must concede that the artist has something definite to say, and that he is using one of the greatest means of expression with which to say it.

Mr. Lismer then went on to describe the true greatness of Robert Henri. This painter, he said, had an extraordinary ability for character studies. From this, the question arises—where did he obtain this ability, for every artist moves towards his own tradition, searching the past for something that is in harmony with his own soul. The influence of Hals and the Dutch school is evident in the portrait of a negro girl—a portrait startlingly alive and painted with such sure, deft strokes as to be almost disarming. What a contrast to the cold, intellectual Reynolds! This picture is surely an absolute proof that an artist's greatness does not depend upon his choice of subjects.

The change from the vividly alive Henri to the strange, dreamy Davies is startling. Davies wished to recreate the world in which he lived—a higher, mystic world slightly reminiscent of the early Italians, or the Venetians, or, in a more modern world, Chavannes. Figures float strangely across his canvases—strange colours, strange lines, a curious poetic idealism.

About George Luks, Mr. Lismer had little to say. In comparison with Henri's genius and Davies' mysticism, he was a "jolly good painter"—a painter who would never achieve the ranks of the truly great of all time.

KNOX VOTES CONTINUE PERIOD OF WORSHIP

A motion to abolish the customary period of worship after the evening meal was introduced to the Knox College Undergraduate Association at the first meeting last night, and after heated discussion and a close vote was defeated. The motion came after a lengthy meeting, which opened with the address from the throne by the Governor-General, Rev. Dr. Stuart C. Parker, Professor of Systematic Theology.

The budget for the coming year was introduced to the house when it went into Committee of the Whole, and was passed with the exception of one item. The amount allocated for the Purple and White dance, the major social activity of the year, was not passed by the house, after decided objections were raised.

D. D. Davidson, M.A., of the graduating class in theology, was elected to the honour of being Speaker of the K.C.U.A. for the year.

COLLEGE TRAINING IS COMMENDED IN MOST QUARTERS

DIFFERENT VIEWPOINTS

Topics of Common Interest Seen in Clearer Light by Educated Eyes

More and more university people are mingling with society, charging it with new ideas, different viewpoints and ever-changing theories. Topics of common interest to all classes are seen in a different light through educated eyes. When new appointments are made to younger men they are usually university graduates.

Does this gradually increasing infusion of higher learning into our everyday life tend to raise the ethical standards of society? In other words, is a university education "all that it's cracked up to be?" This question has been raised recently in a Toronto daily.

The opinion of a graduate is capably expressed by Mr. C. C. Holmes, '33 University College, in the following statement:

"Whether you travel an uphill or a downhill road at university is determined largely by the type of group with which you associate, and by the unmistakable good influence of professors and lecturers. If you choose the wrong group it is likely that if you had not attended university you would have chosen the wrong one in any walk of life. Associations like the Student Christian Movement have an uplifting influence. Those who complain that their years of college life have had a detrimental influence on their character probably did not choose to avail themselves of such opportunities.

"As education advances the materialistic side becomes more and more prominent. You take more interest in (Continued on Page 4)

PATENT METHOD FOR UTILISATION OF WASTE GASES

Involves Use of Catalysts for Recovery of Sulphur

COMMERCIALLY FEASIBLE

Process Discovered by Dr.
M. C. Boswell and
C. B. Beal

Patents have recently been taken out on chemical methods for the recovery of sulphur from the sulphur dioxide of waste foundry gases. The methods were developed by two members of the staff in Chemical Engineering of the University of Toronto, Dr. M. C. Boswell, professor of organic chemistry, and G. B. Beal, demonstrator in chemical engineering.

Some idea of the importance of the discovery may be found in the fact that no sulphur is at the present time produced in Canada and we import over $4,000,000 worth of sulphur from the United States every year for use mainly in the pulp industry and in insecticides. Thousands of tons of sulphur dioxide go up the flues of the foundries daily and is not only wasted but does widespread damage to vegetation for miles around.

According to Dr. Boswell, it all began with some purely academic research on the action of the sulphides of iron, nickel and cobalt as catalysts. They were attempting to discover if, and under what conditions, these sulphides would act as catalysts for the reduction of sulphur dioxide to sulphur and at the time they had no idea whatever that this work would lead to any discovery of commercial importance.

This research was very successful, resulting in the discovery of an easy method of reducing sulphur dioxide with hydrogen to sulphur, using sulphide, specially treated, as a catalyst. This led to a realisation of a possible commercial value of the process if a means could be found of separating (Continued on Page 4)

SERIOUSLY INJURED

The condition of J. C. Bowes who was seriously injured when struck by a street car Monday night, was reported unchanged this morning. "There is a possibility of a fractured skull but the patient has recovered consciousness," authorities at the General Hospital stated.

Mr. Bowes is a graduate of the University in the class of 1931, when he was Managing Editor of The Varsity and the President of the University Press Club. A host of friends on The Varsity staff and in the University wish him a speedy recovery.

A further report at 4 o'clock this morning stated that Mr. Bowes was spending a very good night.

WAR PROPAGANDA IS CONDEMNED

May be Followed by Disastrous Results, States C. F.
President

STIRS UP STRIFE

"I believe that propaganda, if well planned, is quite capable of stirring up the untimely members of the public," stated Charles Drury, IV Victoria, and president of the Commerce and Finance Club, with reference to a statement in the "Inconsequence" column in yesterday's Varsity. "If this is achieved the most disastrous results may follow. One way of stopping war is stopping jingoistic propaganda and as long as this sort of rot is published war may come. The feature in Monday's Telegram lowers my very low estimation of that journal."

The general opinion among other students queried by The Varsity seemed to bear out the "Inconsequence" denunciation of the Telegram's recent display of military pictures and the accompanying propaganda.

"However," he further remarked, "I do agree with 'Inconsequence' that a continuance of such propaganda as the photographs in Monday's Telegram would have that effect."

Another student, refusing to be quoted, explained, "My brother works for the Telegram."

ORGANIZATION BEGUN OF ANTI-WAR SOCIETY

Suggested Policies Will be Discussed at Open Meeting

Organisation of a University Anti-War Society was definitely commenced at a meeting held at 49 St. George Street last night. A provisional committee for organisation was formed, including members of the Movement for a Christian Social Order, the S.C.M., the Student League and the University C.C.F. Club, as well as students with no other affiliations. Plans for an organisation meeting were laid and suggested policies discussed.

While definite forms of policy and programme are to be left for the consideration of the organisation meeting, to which all students interested in the anti-war movement will be invited, the committee were unanimous in agreeing that the society must be a separate organisation, independent of all other student groups here, and that its policy, to be effective, must be dynamic and constructive.

Thursday, October 26 was set as a tentative date for the organisation meeting, dependent on the possibility of making satisfactory arrangements. A further announcement will be made later in the week.

ELECTION NEXT SUMMER

Conservative Party Always Called on in Real Crisis

"In every real crisis in the history of Canada the electorate has called on the Conservative party for wise administration and leadership," stated Prime Minister George S. Henry to the MacDonald-Cartier Club last evening at Hart House. In giving his reasons for belonging to the Tory ranks, Mr. Henry briefly traced out the history of the party since the days of Confederation, emphasizing the important role played by Sir John A. MacDonald in the actual union of the provinces and in their development after Confederation.

Since 1878, when MacDonald was returned to power on his national policy, the parties in the Federal field have adopted largely the principles as put forth by the Conservatives of that day. Although the Liberals have generally carried out Conservative policies when in power, on the whole they have not exhibited the faith in the future of the Dominion or the ability to lead the people that has been characteristic of the Tories. Liberals have been prone to talk in a very idealistic way when out of power, but have not done much to justify their idealism when given the chance.

Turning from the federal to the provincial field of politics the premier pointed out that the Conservatives have held the reins in Ontario, with the exception of one break, ever since 1905. During this period great social and economic advances have been made, outstanding among them being the Hydro development, in which the premier stated, the Liberal party has taken no active part, the large responsibility of this work being shouldered by Conservative administrations.

Briefly outlining the financial position of the province, the Prime Minister pointed out that, although the (Continued on Page 4)

STUDENTS MORE SERIOUS

Principal W. H. Fyfe of Queen's University has stated that the present day university students were young men whose chief interests are girls, films and food. This university student body is by no means in unanimous agreement with Principal Fyfe. Out of ten questioned the opinions were weighed in disagreement with the statement.

The Hart House cloakroom attendant who has handled coats and hats of all descriptions as well as a fair number of coonskins, when questioned by The Varsity, replied, "Sure it's true, you never can tell what these college men are going to do." He declined to state what reasons he had for this condemnation.

Mr. Reg Carlyle when disturbed while crossing the campus with a meditative air, eyes lowered to the ground, replied, "I never see a girl, seldom go to the movies, and spend more time and thought on chemistry than (Continued on Page 4)

OUR MORNING SMILE

The following is an editorial from "The Globe" of yesterday, which quotes from an editorial in the "Porcupine Advance".

PRISONS AND EDUCATION

In one of its able editorials the Porcupine Advance of Timmins asks some pointed questions about the sort of training being received at the University of Toronto when the son of a professor is led to call the Attorney-General of Ontario a liar at a meeting of students. The Advance has taken a consistent stand on the question of so-called "free speech", drawing a line between freedom of speech and unbridled license, by reason of its understanding of the effects of too much freedom in many Northern Ontario sections. This time it has included considerable territory, even repeating its denunciation of The Globe for urging an inquiry into conditions in the penitentiaries.

It seems to The Globe there is a difference between the administration of justice and observance of humane principles behind prison walls and the making of wild and irresponsible remarks about public men because of political prejudices or imagined grievances. "At Iroquois Falls at the recent Labor Day celebrations," the Advance comments, "a C.C.F. speaker is said to have referred to Joseph A. Braddette, M.P.P., as a scoundrel, and branded Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King as a murderer. 'Liar' 'Scoundrel' 'Murderer'! Surely these are words that pass all bounds of fair play and decency."

They are malicious, of course. As a rule public men expect criticism, and those of long experience do not become disturbed seriously over personal abuse. This shows they are bigger than their accusers, but by no means justifies the use of "liar," "scoundrel" or "murderer," and does not add any credit to an audience which would listen to such manifest abuse without protest. However if public speakers who know no better resort to such tactics something different is expected from the environs of the provincial university. The Timmins journal believes an inquiry into the university is more urgent than into the penitentiaries. It says:

"At first thought it might be considered that the vapourings of some callow youth at a meeting of students should receive no special notice or consideration. The truth, however, seems to be that the ravings of this untutored lad suggest a condition in the university that needs attention. For some time past there has been a belief in Ontario that all is far from well in the University of Toronto. There is a growing opinion that the rowdiness and tendency to disloyalty evidenced by some of the pupils at the university is the direct result of the teachings and examples of some of the professors. It is said that there are professors who, directly or indirectly instil atheism and traitorism in (Continued on Page 4)

AN ECHO FROM THE NORTH

From the far north comes an echo of the call for an investigation into the universities. As may be seen in an editorial printed elsewhere in this issue, the editor of the Porcupine Advance is dissatisfied with the teachings of the staff and the attitude of the students at our alma mater.

Let us attempt to understand the situation. It should be explained that the Porcupine Advance is a weekly newspaper with a perpetual peeve against Toronto or anything associated with the name Toronto. Except, perhaps, the Mail and Empire, which it quotes frequently and freely. The Advance believes in freedom of speech only in its own columns, it would restrict the rights of all others, and force them to accept its interpretation of what is Good and Moral and Godly. It goes so far as to seek to impose its opinion on others through its news columns, which are supposed to contain news items.

The editor of The Advance is opposed to penitentiary reform, so he turns the attention of his readers to The University of Toronto. He is suspicious of what is going on there, and is sure that it is a hotbed of rowdiness and atheism and discontent. He judges it by reports in the Toronto press, which, strange to say, he delights to ridicule from time to time.

Ah well, we can excuse one who looks upon us from afar on the ground of ignorance. So we turn to the comforting remarks of The Globe: "Two investigations may be needed, but there is no reason to excuse one for the other . . . It may be that the rebellion within the University is a counterpart of that on the outside, and certainly a higher degree of guidance is expected in university halls than in the haunts of the criminally inclined . . . An investigation of the University cannot be a satisfactory substitute for a penitentiary probe, although it might help to show that one of the troubles everywhere is lack of discipline and self-control."

We who are on the spot can only laugh. Perhaps that indicates that we are traitors and atheists, but still we laugh. To think of comparing conditions in the University with conditions in Portsmouth Penitentiary! We trust that those in authority will enlighten the public; we fear that it would be futile to attempt an explanation to the editor of the Porcupine Advance.

Perhaps he will pardon us if we retaliate in a way which he will understand. Our suggestion is that he begin his house-cleaning at home. The town of Timmins assumes the appearance of a city, but it is still a mining camp. It is not noted for its respect for law and order or its uplifting influence upon youth. Blind pigs are numerous and not too well-concealed, so that even children point them out on the street. Gambling is openly encouraged, and Sunday poorly observed. Moral conditions are not of the best, yet The Advance is very tolerant of these things. We can anticipate the reply, "you have to allow for such looseness in a mining camp".

We feel safe in saying that all the citizens of Timmins are not satisfied with conditions as they exist. They feel that their town has much to be proud of, and would wipe out its own disgrace. Begin your uplift campaign at home, Mr. Editor, and you need not go farther than across the street. You will find your best citizens eager to help you, and among the best you will find not a few graduates of this self-same University, men who have somehow escaped untouched from our vile halls.

MEDICAL MATTERS

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

I have just completed reading your correspondence column of Friday and also the attitude taken by one department of the Faculty of Medicine. I regret that this stance has been taken as I am sure that no personal reflections have been intended. I quite appreciate the ability of the head of the department and realize that he is an outstanding man in his field, has received numerous honors all over the continent, presented with an illuminated address recently at a medical conference, and within the last week or so has been mentioned as the discoverer of a new anaesthetic.

Unfortunately the fact is too often overlooked that very few research workers make good teachers, and vice versa. This, I think, is the reason that there is considerable dissension between faculty members and students. In a course which is as crowded as the

Massey Hall

Jascha Heifetz, Russian violinist famed for an imperturbable technique, was the artist at the second of the Massey Hall concerts, last night. His notoriety as a technician is apt to give the impression that he is nothing else; that his recitals are cold and, as has been said, "inscrutable". If this were all, he would hardly call forth the enthusiasm he undoubtedly does call forth; and a recital of his convinces one that such is by no means the case. Many people suffer from a romantic illusion, namely, that a cool, precise technique excludes the more winning musical qualities. The fact is, of course, that the more perfect the technique the better is the chance of all the higher graces. Rubinstein was none the better for his wrong notes, and Heifetz in any analysis is the greater for his technical perfection.

The best part of the programme was, of course, the first half. Very delicate and subtly colourful was the Schubert Sonatina. The Strauss Sonata followed well on the Schubert. In some of Strauss's work there is more than a suggestion of Schubertian style, and this particular composition perhaps illustrates this. At any rate, it is a strong work; the thematic material, particularly in the final movement, was at times deeply moving. It must be admitted that the piano playing in the Strauss was not adequate. Mr. Sandor is a skilful pianist, and an excellent accompanist, but it was inevitable that he be overshadowed in the Sonata by the truly great Heifetz. In spite of this, the Strauss was the most impressive work on the programme.

The Conus Concerto, to say the least was not important; but it was worth staying awake to observe the brilliant acrobacy of the performance. The last group was just what it was recorded as being: a set of five dances, embracing five nationalities! The audience was enthusiastic but alarmingly small. Surely a name like that of Heifetz should attract more attention from Toronto music lovers.

Standard Theatre

Last night at the Standard Theatre, the outstanding Jewish actress, Miss Berta Gersten, appeared as Nora in Henrik Ibsen's great drama "A Doll's House". And it is rather unfortunate that the first stage interpretation of this strongly Scandinavian and therefore very Nordic play that it is my privilege to witness should be performed by a cast of Jewish players who are by nature romantic and emotional.

The play was acted with very little restraint, a thing which one would quite naturally expect of the play, and hence any of the new dramatic qualities which Ibsen desired to produce are lost. Consequently, outside of the apparent dramatic ability of Berta Gersten and, for that matter, the whole of her company, the Jewish production was rather disappointing. My reaction, of course, would not probably be that of the Jewish audience, who would by nature appreciate the emotionalism of Miss Gersten's interpretation.

However, though I rather tremble to do so, I must also criticise the play. To any critic of drama, Ibsen marks that revolutionary period which has since been responsible for all modern dramatic forms. For this reason we have created a shining halo and flung it at his head so that all we can see now is the idealized creature of our imagination. Ibsen revolutionised the drama technique and he also gained a victory for the artist in maintaining the right to criticise and point out the weaknesses of the social fabric. But on seeing the play and re-reading it carefully, I find that, though the frame work and the subject matter are departures from the accepted early nineteenth century sloppy sentimentalism, the actual craftsmanship of the play is mediocre and inferior to much of the stuff poured forth by Hollywood "pot-boilers". Ibsen goes almost out of his way to create situations and atmosphere which are necessary to give any significance to the characterisation of Nora, the woman who gives up her

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

SOCIAL ETIQUETTE FOR VARSITY REPORTERS or
How to Draw Blood from Stones

It has become an annual custom on this paper to bear down hard on the freshman reporter, and burden his (or her) none too powerful intellect with an embarrassing plenitude of advice and instruction. The result has been that for the first few weeks we are continually stumbling over the little creatures in every dark corner, mumbling to themselves of split infinitives, stereotyped "leads" and illegitimate headlines (the technical expression is, we fear, too gross for these chaste columns).

C-C

All this is most distressing to our tender sensibilities. We are shocked, nay, revolted, by this periodic stultification of innocent youth, coming to us in the first flower of its young enthusiasm only to be overwhelmed by a flood of destructive and (alas!) too often caustic criticism of its first un-instructive efforts. Wherefore we present for their edification the following Helpful Hints:

C-C

1. Never give your victim an even break. Remember that you must always control the trend of the interview. He may be eager to air his views on Socialism, Fascism or the Future of Canadian Art, but the minute he begins meandering you must interrupt, gently but firmly, with "Yes, Professor Mossback, but what do you think of Dutch Dates?"

C-C

2. Always get a story. You will find early in your career as a journalist that there are some individuals who don't like to be interviewed, and when you do get them in a corner and fire impertinent queries at them, the unnatural creatures are just as likely as not to go sullen on you and restrict their replies to monosyllabic grunts. The proper procedure in this situation is illustrated as follows:

Reporter: "Professor Throwback, what do you think of the economic situation?"

Subject: "Unh."

Reporter: "Don't you agree that the present crisis is chiefly due to the ruthless oppression by greedy capitalists of the unorganised worker and that the only alternatives before us are a social revolution or fascist repression?"

Subject: "Unh."

News Story: "Interviewed by The Varsity yesterday with regard to the economic situation Professor Throwback stated, 'I am strongly of the opinion that the present unfortunate crisis is entirely due to the ruthless exploitation by greedy capitalists of the unorganised worker. It is clearly obvious that the only alternatives before us are a social revolution or fascist repression of the most reactionary type!'"

C-C

3. When you're fired from the staff and expelled ignominiously from the University, don't on any account blame Shrdlu.

MEDS, TRINITY AND VICTORIA WIN MULOCK CUP GAMES

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

So the weatherman let us down after all. The play in the semi-finals of the tennis tournament was greatly slowed up yesterday by damp courts and a stiff breeze. The calibre of tennis that was exhibited was much inferior to that which was played earlier in the tournament. Agnes Gardner, champion of the university last year, defeated Kay Symons in the morning on the Toronto Tennis Club courts and today will meet Pat Callen, who was also successful yesterday in defeating Jean Davey, the other member of the intercollegiate team.

Challenge matches will have to be played off immediately as the team leaves for Kingston to-morrow. Unless she loses her position on the team in a challenge match with Ann Scott, Jean Davey, who graduated last year in Arts and is now registered in Meds, will act as chaperone. Ellen Wilson, who reached the quarter-finals, was defeated in a challenge match yesterday morning by Mary Gates who has since challenged Kay Symons. There is a chance that the personnel of the team may be changed but the matter will be definitely settled to-day.

A great deal of credit is due to Lolo Bochner, President of the Tennis Club, for the very capable way in which she handled the tournament. The games were run off with a minimum amount of confusion and we congratulate Lolo on her efficient management.

Some interest is being shown in baseball at Victoria but not particularly enthusiastic interest at that, and the other colleges seem to have done little, if anything, about it. Last night in Little Vic gym the seniors of Vic met the freshmen in the final year game. Both lineups were short of players, and the seniors won with a 19-7 score—as far as we could make out, because they had more players.

INTERCOLLEGIATE STARS DOMINATE TENNIS

Women's Tournament Finals to be Played To-Day

The four players of last year's intercollegiate tennis team, Agnes Gardner, Pat Callen, Kay Symons and Jean Davey, battled yesterday in the semi-finals of the intercollegiate tournament. The wind impeded both games and the damp courts did not respond to the play.

In the match between Jean Davey, Meds, and Pat Callen, St. Mike's, Jean seemed to have the edge on Pat in the first set, winning the set 6-4; however, Pat recovered some of her old style and took the next set 6-1 and eventually the match set 6-2.

The match between Agnes Gardner and Kay Symons resulted in a victory for the former 7-5, 6-2. In the first set Kay held Agnes very closely at 7-5 but the steadiness of the latter appeared to be the deciding factor, and she ended the match with the score 6-2. Despite the scores, the players were very well matched and decidedly long rallies marked the game.

To-day the deciding round between Pat Callen and Agnes Gardner for the university title is being played.

Unless the unexpected happens, it looks as if the intercollegiate team will remain unchanged this year and with their increased experience should make a very good showing at Queen's this week-end.

BLACKWELL'S TEAM BEATS FORESTRY

Lone Touchdown is Result of Intercepted Forward Pass

HICKS AND ACORD STAR

In a very well played game despite the cold and rainy weather, the Les Blackwell-coached Trinity team defeated Forestry by the score of 8-1 on Trinity field.

Although outwitted along the line, last year's Mulock Cup finalists clearly displayed their superiority over the Forestry team.

Behind a strong wind, Forestry scored their only point of the game in the first period when Huls kicked to the deadline. In the second period, with the advantage of the wind at their backs, Trinity took the lead, chalking up two singles and holding the Green and White clad Forestry team scoreless. In the third period Acord's mighty boot again was responsible for the third point for Trinity.

The break of the game occurred in the lost period when Osler of Trinity intercepted Hicks' attempt at a pass, and ran 40 yards for a try which was unconverted.

Hicks and Acord were the stars of the game, both carrying the brunt of their team's attack, in the running back of kicks, punting and passing.

Forestry — Flying wing, Carlson; halves, Hicks, Lein, Heggie; quarter, Dyer; snap, Copland; insides, Kantola, McCrac; middles, McConnell, Young; outsides, Cowan, Nokes; subs, Yeomans, Larssen, Hyslop, Taylor.

Trinity — Flying wing, Kirk; quarter, Welch; halves, Brennan, Owen, Acord; snap, Stratton; insides, Millard, R. Wodehouse; middles, G. Wodehouse, Fraser; outsides, Osborne, McLaughlin; subs, Dsler, Lash, Bosley, Marett, Scribner, Parker, Morgan.

Officials — A. Squires, Ship.

TRACK TEAM READY FOR SENIOR MEET

Varsity Squad Will Compete at Kingston on Friday

MCGILL OEFENO TROPHY

On Friday afternoon the Richardson Stadium at Kingston will again be the scene of the senior intercollegiate track meet as athletes from McGill, Queen's and Toronto will vie for the honours. Filled with a do-or-die spirit the U. of T. representatives are determined to end the superiority of the McGill Red team, winners of the McGill trophy for the last three years.

As in the past the meet will be a close fight between Varsity and McGill with Queen's promising to step in and capture some of the events, thus breaking up the Varsity opposition against McGill. In the opinion of head coach Frank Halbus the Blues would beat McGill easily were the Queen's team not to enter the picture at all. A glance at the entry list points to the fact that McGill is weak at some points since Phil Edwards, a middle distance and distance runner has also been entered in the sprints, clearly pointing to a weakness and giving the appearance of a one-man Red team.

Queen's will undoubtedly offer some strong competition this year the Tricolour having three possible winners in Zvonkin, Way and Fritz. Zvonkin appears to have the call in the shot put while Way and Fritz will probably show their heels to the others in the sprints.

Varsity's chances in the meet have been greatly enhanced due to the fact that the passing on of their former stars have left no large gaps in the team, the new men having filled the holes to a degree which has made the U. of T. coaches chuckle with delight. Although cold weather has hampered the training the Blue athletes are in

By B. J. McGuire

Kingston is going to look like the scene of a Varsity reunion this week-end. Five teams wearing the Blue and White will embark for that vicinity in the next few days. The teams will be the intermediate and junior football teams who play a double header with R.M.C.; the senior intercollegiate track team; the men's tennis team and the women's tennis team. This delegation of intellectuals is bound to make a profound impression on the inhabitants of that city and the moral influence will probably be so great that we need expect no more reports of riots proceeding from that direction. Everything points to a big time in the old town all right. Now if we can just get that downtown press to call off their war with Germany, at least till next week, everything would be O.K. It would be rather disappointing if on the day of the football game the soldier boys had to chuck their pants and pads and grab the old rifle off the rack and head for the trenches.

The Mulock Cup season is going at full swing. Last night's battles produced football far superior to the brand usually played in the opening rounds. The junior Meds and junior School tussle produced plenty of the fireworks which are usually displayed when the Toiky Oiky and their next door neighbours engage in a friendly argument. Carl Gould pulled the old Frank Merriwell last night when he galloped 50 yards for the touch that gave Meds their one point victory. Another highlight of last night's struggles was when Osler of Trinity intercepted a Forestry pass and ran half the length of the field to plant the pigskin on the Forestry line for a major. Now if we can get someone to pull one of these in the game on Saturday matters will be simplified for sports writers vainly looking for something to write about.

It looks like the old struggle again between School, Trinity and Victoria for the playoffs. Each of these teams have won their first start. However, Dents will be a power to be reckoned with before the struggle is over. They have a strong team and several outstanding players. Rey, who was with the juniors last season, is a valuable asset to the team, as is Speers, a lad who writes to Carolina when he is short of funds. Junior Meds will also be heard from before the season ends.

Varsity have a royal chance to make a clean sweep on Saturday. Lou Carroll's intermediates are going better than ever and should get down in front. The juniors on the strength of their 23-0 victory over Queen's on Saturday, give promise of again annexing the junior series. The tennis team are strong again this year and even without Shields, the interfaculty champion, they should give a good account of themselves. The track team also have the punch necessary to a championship outfit. All in all it looks like a real chance to grab off some intercollegiate titles.

Varsity will have on their track team some outstanding men in Canadian track and field activities. Westheuser, in the discus throw, and Hud Steward in the javelin, are almost sure point winners. On the strength of their performance in the interfaculty meet, McGladery, Dore, and McGuire will probably be in there with wins for the Blue and White in the running events. The team has been well drilled and has received excellent coaching from Frank Halbus. Halbus has received valuable assistance in this work from Hector Phillips, Eddie Archibald, Johnny Fitzpatrick and Gordon Jermyn. These men have given liberally of their time and efforts to the Varsity track team and the success achieved by the team will in a good measure be due to their efforts.

The McGill track team seems to be composed of Phil Edwards and a bunch of other men. This long geared speed artist is entered in not only the middle distance events but the sprints as well. The Red team's chances of retaining the championship is largely dependent on the Queen's team. Varsity would win in a walk over McGill in a dual meet, but the Montrealers are depending on Queen's to take several events and so split up the points that they will have enough to get by on.

Another intercollegiate title which will be at stake this week-end is the golf championship. Captain Rod Phelan has a strong team under him although he and Boeckh are the only veterans on the team. The team match with McGill, will be played on Friday, when also the individual championship will be decided. Saturday the doubles will be played. The tournament is to be held in Montreal.

good condition and raring to go. Young Bob Isbister will likely cause Zvonkin plenty of worry should he display the form he showed in his high school days. In the discus throw, Westheuser appears to have the edge and the same may be said for H. Stewart in the javelin throw. Due to an injury to Worrall of McGill, Passmore seems to have the inside track to the high hurdles title.

The team which will leave for Kingston on Friday is made up of: 100 yards — Dore, Ashenhurst. 220 yards — Dore, Ashenhurst. Quarter mile — McGuire, Campbell. 880 yards — Little, Campbell.

One mile — McGladery, Hogg. Three mile — McGladery, McKerracher. High Hurdles — Passmore. Low Hurdles — Hickey. Pole Vault — F. Stewart, McArthur. Discus — Westheuser, Isbister. Shot Put — Isbister, Westheuser. High Jump — Gaudier, McArthur, Vennels. Broad Jump — McArthur, Weldon, Jackson. Javelin — H. Stewart, Isbister, Westheuser. Relay — McGuire, Campbell, Little, Hickey, Dore, Stewart.

U.C. BLANKED 9-0 IN MULOCK OPENER

Moffatt Scores Touch After Three Successive Plunges

HALF-TIME SCORE 4-0

Victoria, last year's Mulock Cup winners, defeated U.C. in their opening game yesterday afternoon to the tune of 9-0. The winners were superior in every department and at no time did U.C. appear dangerous. In the first quarter Herb Colmer made a nice run to the U.C. six yard line. Vic were unable to buck it over so Vaughan kicked for a single. After Vic intercepted a pass, Colmer kicked a placement and the half ended 4-0. In the second half U.C. partially blocked a kick, but Vic recovered for a good gain. Moffatt made three successive plunges and was rewarded with a touch. Diehl tried a pass on the convert but it went wide. Cole's running and plunging were the best U.C. had to offer. H. Colmer, Diehl and Vaughan were outstanding for the winners.

Victoria — Flying wing, Moffatt; halves, Pratt, Colmer, Vaughan; quarter, Diehl; snap, Elsiey; insides, Read, Miller; middles, Diekl, Amos; outsides, Dufton, Armstrong; subs, Colmer, Barry, Affler, Turner, Stinson, Walkee, Taylor, Gregory.

University College — Flying wing, Henderson; halves, Thompson, Hamilton, Luckett; quarter, Cole; snap, Bell; insides, Barrett, Pritchard; middles, Walker, Daly; outsides, Roebuck, Murby; subs, Campbell, Skinner, Carrigan, Butler, Murray, Kerr, Thrush.

MEDS BEAT S.P.S. IN BATTLE ROYAL

Last Night's Game on Back Campus Brings 6-5 Win to Medicos in Mulock Series

GREAT RUN BY GOULO

All the old fight which usually marks a clash between S.P.S. and Meds was exhibited last night when these two teams met in the Mulock Cup fixture on the back campus. The Medicos whose senior brethren suffered defeat at the hands of the Senior Schoolmen in the opener, had sweet revenge, coming from behind to grab off a 6-5 win.

It was a hard fought contest which was featured by the great run of Carl Gould to pull the game out of the fire for Meds. Meds were trailing S.P.S. 4-0 in the third quarter when Gould broke clear and King tossed him a perfect 25 yard pass which he grabbed and ran 50 yards for a touch which was not converted.

S.P.S. scored on a placement in the first quarter to take the lead. They added a single in the second and an-

ROMAN TRIUMPHS ARE REVIVED AGAIN

the advent of Mussolini's accession to power now has mounted to 76 million quintals in 1932. The domestic consumption is 81 millions and the deficit has been practically wiped out and will completely disappear in the near future.

The triumphal procession will be led by the originator and winner of the bottle, Mussolini. The paraders will not carry spoils of war, not implements of destruction but tools of peaceful victory—scythes, spades, pitchforks and sickles.

Mussolini has announced that the "Avenue of Triumph" will be inaugurated on the 28th of October, which marks the eleventh anniversary of the march to Rome by Mussolini and his army. This will be a continuation of the "Avenue of the Empire" where stand five superb statues of the Roman Emperors, inaugurated on the same date last year.

Thousands of workmen have been feverishly labouring for some time for the completion of this new artery which stretches from the Coliseum to the archaeological passage.

Rome thus increases from year to year her beauty and grandeur. The district where her modern monuments stand has been transformed in such a manner as to isolate her temples and market places of antiquity, rendering it more consonant with its surroundings and more imposing to the view. This Avenue of Triumph on which the victors of modern Italy are destined to pass will be inaugurated on the recurrence of the eleventh anniversary of the Fascist revolution.

UNIVERSITY TRAINING HIGHLY COMMENDED

that side of life and derive more from it. Ten years from now," Mr. Holmes concluded. "I may be able to tell you more about it."

Miss Eudora Latham, formerly of University College, who has left to enter the business world, stresses the fact that even a short period of college experience gives one the ability essential in business life to meet people with poise and self-confidence.

"A fairly high rating is essential to come to college in the first place," began Miss Isabel Reen, fourth year pass arts, "and in these times the number who come only for pleasure is very small. A person who has come to college to derive everything possible from it surely will be an asset to society after graduation."
Mr. J. K. Jones of third year Applied Science, believes that an uneducated people have a simpler, more steadfast faith, along with stricter moral standards. This must be sacrificed to some degree in the process of raising the intellectual height of mankind.

PREMIER HENRY SPEAKS TO STUDENT GROUP

total public debt was in the neighbourhood of $570,000,000, all but $90,000,000 was either realizable or revenue bearing in some way, being comprised largely of loans to the Ontario farmers, financial assistance given the Hydro electric development and expenditures on highways throughout the province. The soundness of this financial position is exemplified by the faith which the bankers have in the stability of the Treasury, and the ease with which the province can obtain loans at low interest rates.

Listing the items of expenditure which enter the provincial budget the premier pointed out that they indicate very forcibly that in some respects, the province is to-day in actual practice, shouldering many of the burdens which the C.C.F. demands be made part of the state responsibility.

In concluding Mr. Henry urged the young members of the MacDonald-Carter Club to prepare themselves to go to the hustings some time next summer and assure a Conservative victory at the polls. "Personally," he said, "during these times of stress sometimes I would just as soon not be in the government, but I am Irish, and no quitter, and it is my belief that the Conservative party will lead the province on to the great future which awaits it."

The University of Manitoba's first University Day, on which the freshman class was formally welcomed, was a great success.

PATENT PROCESS FOR RECOVERY OF SULPHUR

the dioxide from the other gases escaping from the foundry. It was necessary to find some substance which would form a liquid compound with the dioxide that could be easily broken up to give the desired dioxide in a pure form and the original substance once more so that the latter could be used over and over again to extract the gas. Quinoline and pyridine were both found to satisfy these requirements, but were too expensive. Finally a preparation of aniline and lactic acid, both of which can be cheaply made, was found suitable.

Dr. Boswell states that it is impossible to tell definitely in the laboratory whether these methods will prove commercially feasible on a large scale, but several concerns are interested and the process may soon be given a try. One obstacle is the high cost of the production of hydrogen used in the reduction of the dioxide. This is obtained by decomposition of water and oxygen is produced at the same time. It is thought that if a ready market could be found for this by-product, that the success of the process would be almost assured.

A suggestion full of interesting possibilities is that the oxygen might be used in enriching the smelt of the furnaces. Dr. Boswell goes so far as to say that it might even mean the revolutionizing of the whole smelting industry. Research along this line is being attempted.

Dr. Boswell referred to an opinion which seems to be held by certain outside interests that "all we do up here is take out patents and reap royalties". He emphasized the fact that this discovery had evolved from research in "pure science" without special consideration being given in the first instance to the commercial application. That part was left for commercial concerns.

food."
Mr. Bruce Marshall, after several minutes of thought, replied, "In comparison with English university life, Canadian undergraduates do, no doubt, indulge in more extensive social activities and this is probably what Principal Fyfe had in mind when he made that statement."

Mr. N. C. Phillips, when questioned, responded with a gruff "Nature in the rah-rah is seldom mild."

Mr. W. F. Wales, first year medical student, is greatly disillusioned. He has been, since childhood, the ardent recipient of amazing stories of the escapades of "college boys". But on coming to Varsity, he finds that outside of a little harmless tie-clipping and half-hearted pant-snatching, university life is mostly a rather serious and strenuous programme of study to the large majority of the students.

Several others were of the opinion that the depression had dealt a serious blow to the exuberance of college life and that the majority were of a more serious turn of mind than depicted in current moving pictures.

BOX LACROSSE SERIES TO COMMENCE TO-OAY

O.C.E. Will Defend Dafeoe Cup with Entirely New Team

Another interfaculty sport gets under way to-day with the beginning of the box lacrosse league. The entries are divided into three groups and the winners of these play off at the end of the season for the Dafeoe cup, which was won last year by the College of Education. Their whole team has departed for other fields, and they will have to build anew but nevertheless they will fight hard to retain their trophy and some close games should be the result. In Group I University College, led by Fullerton and Coulter, will battle it out with Junior School and Meds, who were the winners in this section last year. In the other groups O.C.E., and Victoria, one of last year's finalists, look to be the best.

Those in charge of the game at the university have done everything that is possible to eliminate serious injuries. Severe penalties are imposed for slashing and unnecessary body checking close to the walls, and the officials are very strict with regard to these rules.

There are three games scheduled for this week, the first being to-day with University College playing Knox, who are a new entry in the league this year. All games start at 4.15 and are played in the Big Gym.

T.I.C.C.U. TO OPEN BRANCH AT NORMAL SCHOOL

At five o'clock yesterday afternoon the T.I.C.C.U. held the season's second successful meeting in the Wycliffe College common room. It was announced by one of the members that another branch of this union is to be opened at the Normal School. After a little delay consent was given to holding these meetings, the first of which is to be next week.

The meeting was opened by the reading of two hymns followed by a prayer led by the president of the union, after which the subject "Christian Experiences" was discussed by various members in attendance at the meeting. Announcements were made including that of prayer meetings to be held in the Soldiers' Tower for the coming Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

to the minds of the students in their care. The Toronto Globe at present is in an apparent frenzy to induce an investigation into the conditions at the penitentiaries of Canada. Would it not be a greater service to the country to have an inquiry to definitely settle the question as to what injury is being done the youth of the country through the false teaching credited to certain professors at the University of Toronto? Are the youth of Ontario being trained to disloyalty and disaffection? Are they sneered and bullied into a disregard for the religious beliefs held by the vast majority of those who pay for the upkeep of the university? Are smooth phrases about liberty of speech and freedom of conscience being made the cloaks for men in places of trust who would undermine all that the majority hold true? An investigation into the teachings of the university need not depend on the evidence of convicts or political venom."

Two investigations may be needed, but there is no reason to excuse one for the other. By a penitentiary investigation it is sought to introduce methods and measures which will restore a reasonable proportion of the human derelicts to decent citizenship, prevent repetition of offenses after release, and learn, at the same time, what is wrong with a system which breeds so many youthful criminals. It may be that the rebellion within the university is a counterpart of that on the outside, and certainly a higher degree of guidance is expected in university halls than in the haunts of the criminally inclined. A penitentiary investigation might draw needed light far beyond the walls of the prisons and lead to the adoption of more effective preventive measures even in the schoolrooms and homes. An investigation of the university cannot be a satisfactory substitute for a penitentiary probe, although it might help to show that one of the troubles everywhere is lack of discipline and self-control.

medical course, it is impossible for the student to appreciate research work to its fullest extent.

I would like to make the suggestion that the students be earnestly asked to confer with the professors in every subject and try to improve the existing relationships. To this end I ask that a group of these students be picked from each year at the close of the term and asked to criticize constructively each subject. These students (1) should have the course at heart and not any personal grudges, (2) should not be the honour men, but the mediocre man who is trying to get ahead.

Another unfortunate situation existing at the university is that we students as a rule are afraid to suggest any changes in any course for fear of being ploughed at the day of reckoning. Personally I do not think that this should exist and am not aware of its existence, but the students have that feeling and it is to be hoped it may be relieved.

I have taken for granted that those who are interested have read "A Doll's House" and I would be so bold as to advise re-reading it as it is essential to the understanding of the trends of modern drama. To Gentile readers who have any knowledge of German, or to those who know the play, the production at the Standard Theatre in which Berta Gersten does a brilliant interpretation will act as a means to stimulate an understanding of Ibsen and his contribution to the progress of the drama and to art.

Raids on Downtown Theatres Attempted by Noisy Medicals

Meds Soph-Frosh Banquet Ends in Parade Down
Yonge St.

VISIT ROYAL YORK

Attempt Visits to Roxy and Imperial but Are Stopped by Police

The annual Meds Soph-Frosh banquet held at Hart House last night ended, as usual, in a long parade of some 150 future doctors to the downtown business section of the city. After hearing the addresses of Canon Cody and Dean Ryerson, both the first and second year men joined hands and marched noisily down to Bay and Queen Sts., where they were greeted by a large number of policemen who formed a cordon around the Roxy Theatre and after numerous efforts to enter the theatre, they were finally chased away.

They re-assembled on Richmond St. and followed a military parade down to Yonge St. They turned off from the main course of the parade at this time and, marching four abreast, they arrived at the Union Station, where they snake-danced about the waiting room and let loose a number of Varsity and Medical yells.

Finding the tunnel to the Royal York Hotel, they adventurously explored it, and in single file they trooped around the mezzanine of the main lobby at the hotel. About fifty of the more daring spirits began to walk upstairs and finally reached the Roof Garden, where, after a great deal of gentle urging they were persuaded to leave, and boisterously took an elevator down to the main floor where they met the rest of the party. After another vigorous demonstration of school spirit they attempted to reach the Imperial theatre but were prevented by a large number of police. They again tried to get to the Roxy but

S.C.M. Corner

"The Student Christian Movement," said Dr. Taylor, "is something with a 'wiggle' in it." And that, I think, is one of its fundamental characteristics—it's alive, intensely and vitally alive. That's why we call it a Movement—because it is advancing and progressing. That's why it belongs in the twentieth century; it's not static; it's ready to keep in step with you.

The Student Christian Movement is not an ostrich. It doesn't hide its head in the sand and say, "I can't see anything wrong, therefore there is nothing wrong." On the contrary the S.C.M. responds to every issue; it is wide-awake to all these things that are going on in this stormy society of ours. It has a finger of interest in every worth-while pile that's being baked in the world to-day.

Perhaps you've guessed already what those "fingers" are—the S.C.M. groups.

Has college life with its excitement and new ideas shattered the personal faith you've been cherishing? Do you feel the need of discovering and consolidating on a firm foundation something that's going to carry you through?

You'll find the answer in a study group.

Perhaps you feel that this social order of ours leaves much to be desired—and you want to know what can be, and what ought to be done; what there is for you to do.

If so—you too belong in an S.C.M. study group. Has life got you down? Is there a confusion in your mind about what is right and what is wrong? If

TENNIS PLAYERS LEAVE FOR QUEEN'S

Hermant, Piggott, Tomlinson, Crowson and Eaton Are Net Team

SHIELDS INELIGIBLE

The University of Toronto tennis team left for Kingston yesterday morning to compete in the annual intercollegiate tennis championships, which are being held Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. Captain Syd Hermant led his Varsity netters out of town with every hope of wresting the coveted tennis trophy from McGill and returning it to Hart House. The Toronto collegians will be without Sam Shields, interfaculty tennis champion, who is ineligible for intercollegiate competition. However, in W. P. Piggott, A. H. Crowson, A. Eaton and J. W. Tomlinson Capt. Hermant feels that he has worthy and representative contenders. Hermant and Piggott are the only members of last year's team, but it is assured that whatever the other players on the Varsity team lack in intercollegiate experience, they will more than make up for in ability. Queen's and the University of Montreal also have designs on the net title, and a hard fought series is anticipated. Little has been learned of the relative strength of the other three contenders, but it may be assumed that they will worthily uphold the high standard of intercollegiate tennis competition and offer strong opposition.

The tournament will be played on the Queen's University tennis courts. Piggott, Hermant, Eaton and Crowson will play in the singles matches, while Piggott and Crowson, Hermant and Tomlinson will contest the issue in the doubles matches. The singles start Thursday morning, and the doubles on Thursday afternoon. The finals will be played Saturday.

Peace and Quiet.

We've found the greatest place to study on this here campus. The trouble is that if we tell about it, it won't be that way any more, probably. Nevertheless we always did think the Lower Reading Room in the University Library was the most comfortable studying-ground in the vicinity. And now we think so more than ever. From the day the place opened last week we've gone in regularly and stripped to our braces and put our feet on the table and absorbed more principles of economics in a given five minutes than in any fifteen in the chilly dignity of the U.C. East Hall or the faintly oppressive hush of that busy little den in the Economics Building. The distracting crash of industry has gone from the old L.R.R., and no smooched attendant raps on the desk with a pencil-end. But the family atmosphere of the Old Pass Course lingers on. Come on down sometime, and we'll tell your forth'n.

On Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock the English and History Club held its initial meeting for the year at the Women's Union. ### Correspondence

The following letters have been received from students concerning the question raised by the editorials quoted from the "Porcupine Advance" and "The Globe" yesterday—The Editor.

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:
In a speech over the movies a short time ago our President remarked that most of our legal and political leaders had come from the universities situated throughout the dominion. This statement did not cause any outcry and yet when a student ventures to doubt the correctness of our governmental administration and shows his unwillingness to follow it, by suggesting that one of its leaders is mistaken—when in other words he begins to show signs of becoming a leader—at least one paper becomes excited.

The Porcupine Advance, despite its progressive name, displays, in the editorial quoted in yesterday's Varsity, a very pruned, conservative mind.

Being far from Toronto it may be excused for such utterances which those of us who are on the scene know to be false. In its accusation against professors who "directly or indirectly instill atheism . . . into the minds of students" it is raising a very dead issue for which it offers no evidence, and unless some mediaevalist cares to call the present day study of religion atheistic no evidence can be offered.

From 1922-25 Dr. West made a very extensive study of bilingualism and showed that reading was the more important and more easily learned language power. He constructed reading books by a new method of selecting words and word frequencies and introducing them at regular intervals. In this way the student was at first presented with only a limited number of fairly familiar words and phrases. These books

READY RESPONSE FOR FALL DANCE

Large Number Sign Ticket
List for First Big Dance

"The Fall Dance is an excellent opportunity for the freshmen of University College to actively participate in their first big university party," said Mr. F. W. Woods of the U.C. Lit., in a statement to The Varsity last evening. The rapidity with which the ticket lists are being signed by U.C. men is regarded by the Lit. executive as a fairly reliable indication that continued depression will not prevent university men from supporting their social activities as enthusiastically as in former years.

Tickets may still be secured by those wishing to attend the U.C. Fall Dance by signing the lists in the junior common room as soon as possible. Notice of the date of ticket sale will be later announced in this paper.

PAGING PROPRIETY

Mr. McAree complains in the Mail and Empire "Fourth Column" that Canadians are unable to open a conversation without having recourse to inept wisecracks, and pleads for a lectureship at the University of Toronto for The Cultivation of Natural Speech and Normal Behaviour Among Canadians. We have found Mr. McAree's tendency to wisecrack in his own column a trifle tedious and we suggest that the preponderance of wisecrackers among his acquaintances is due to the obvious phenomena of attraction.

His comments upon the deterioration of conversation, however, are timely, but his hope that the university might do something to improve it, is somewhat fond. The university is a breeding ground for the so-called brilliant opening in conversation; and persons who use a smattering of miscellaneous knowledge acquired by an Arts education to adorn their remarks, are, in our opinion at least, a step below the wisecrackers who cull their witticisms from the daily papers and the street corners.

It is possible to list some examples which we favour, together with some which we abhor. There is the person who reads the New Yorker and prefaces his remarks with epigrams culled from its pages. This person is the least objectionable because the epigrams are usually funny and many of us have not time or patience to read the New Yorker for ourselves. The worst type is the person who begins by relating the Morning Smile. Since most of us cannot escape the Morning Smile, but are fatally drawn to it over our coffee because of its propinquity to the weather reports, this person casts an air of gloom by his repetition of the pathetic "chestnuts" that make up the quota of daily humour in this column.

Personally, we honour the person who discourses on Silly Symphonies or Popeye the Sailor since these topics afford ever fresh delights. Such felicities, however, are rare and isolated possessions of our century and there is the more virulent type of wisecracker whom Mr. McAree elects for particular castigation, that is, the person who deliberately mispronounces words. The person who calls Mr. McAree's own medium of expression a "colyum", might be compared to the sect in the university who speak of "erstors" and consider it funny. In this connection, we especially loathe the type who relates anecdotes about literary and artistic celebrities and sneers at the listeners who have not been sufficient en rapport with the elite to have heard them. We would also express a desire that all references to George Bernard Shaw should be placed on the index.

The above are only a few of the well-worn accessories of the university wisecracker, and, being in possession of these particulars, it is now possible to generalise. The whole trouble seems to us to arise from the notion that a "line" is essential to social success. In the Dorothy Dix column, which we read regularly for an insight into popular psychology, we discovered the following piece of sage advice: "Always have some sort of line, avoid the stereotyped forms of conversation. If you are introduced to Mr. Brown, how much more likely are you to make an impression if you say, 'Are you interested in football, too, Mr. Brown?' than if you merely say 'How do you do?'"

The difficulty attending this approach is that you must discover beforehand what Mr. Brown's sympathies are, and should you be forced to start a conversation impromptu, you might discover that he was a Communist with a loathing for such capitalist organisations as some college football associations have become. In this case your arched eyebrow and coy smile accompanying your personal approach would fail to mollify his wrath. Or again, you might strike a suspicious person like ourselves who would resent your knowledge about our interests and suspect you of snooping to obtain your information.

We are of the opinion that the best "line" is the unobtrusive evidence of breeding and taste, and we agree with Mr. McAree that the conventional "How do you do?" can be given individual nuances which reveal greater or less presumptuous interest than the subtler openings. A lectureship at the university for the Cultivation of Natural Speech and Normal Behaviour is a noble thought, but it gives rise to the truism that such things cannot be taught. Indeed, there are thousands of disillusioned parents who have expected their offspring to learn the decencies of manners and morals which they have neglected to inculcate, at the university, and have been bitterly disappointed. Such knowledge is beyond the scope of lectures and comes from the instinctive recognition of the best and the imitation of it.

M.C. Players' Guild

The Players' Guild is still with us. They made themselves very apparent yesterday afternoon, by using John Drinkwater's comedy, Bird in Hand, as their premiere. Unfortunately, not until the director, Martin Loeb, announced that it was comedy, did most of the audience become aware of the fact.

One could not judge whether failure to put this important aspect across to the audience was due to a lack of humour among Guild members, or to the esthetic amusement of the author. The director assures us it was the latter, and we leave it at that.

To begin at the end, the sets and stage effects were really effective, although the stage itself was somewhat small for as large a cast as Bird in Hand required. The two beds with plenty of blankets were convincing, as also was the entrance of Young Hero from a balcony beneath. We still wonder how it was done.

But of the play, we pause. It was a light comedy, but it almost turned into a tragedy. Robin Godfrey, the Cockney, did a delightful character study, a little harsh at times, and jejune, but the only one who played a comedy part in a comedy manner. Thomas, the irate father, was successfully mastered by Jack Jefferies—we say mastered with purpose, because the part called for emotional fervor of no uncertain body, which he managed fairly well to keep up to pitch, only failing when others missed their cues.

The rest of the cast included Betty Guest as the runaway daughter; Bill Stobie as Jerry the malignant seducer did some precious good work. Ironically, his characterisation of a sheepish, adoring big boy who could never have been a Don Juan, deserves credit, especially as his acting was rather overlooked in the criticisms yesterday. Doris Huston did the mother, and Ted Seydies was the young, meddling Beverley. Allan Jarvis was the judge, Godolphin, but rather spoiled his attitudes by unfamiliarity with his lines.

Which brings us to another matter. If the Players' Guild wish success for their developing talents, they should not be so lax about lines as they have been in the past. A new year should see them with desire for improvement, but in this play there was a decided dampness because of this lack of preparation.

FIVE U. OF T. TEAMS COMPETE AT KINGSTON SATURDAY

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

For another year, the tennis championship rests with Agnes Gardner who, yesterday afternoon at the Toronto Tennis Club, was successful in defeating Pat Callen with the score 6-4, 8-10, and 6-1. Agnes was able to maintain her lead in spite of a sore wrist which has weakened her nerve considerably. Jean Davey, in a challenge match yesterday, defeated Anne Scott with a 2-6, 6-3, 6-0 score, so the intercollegiate team is the same as that of last year—Kay Symons, Agnes Gardner, Pat Callen and Jean Davey. They entrain for Kingston at four to day. Here's wishing them the best of luck and a strong right arm.

Queer things are happening around U.C. these days. An enthusiastic and fairly large number of girls signed the baseball list and when practice called—what have we? Merely a handful. The burning question is, what's the matter with U.C. baseball players? A very capable coach has been obtained in the person of Bert Barnes and there is no apparent reason why a strong team could not be developed. To-night there will be a practice in Vic gym at five o'clock but unless there is a larger turnout than previously, U. C. will not be able to enter the ranks for interfaculty competition. How about a little co-operation with your manager and coach, U.C.?

and their silly striving for what they call the "Light of Knowledge" and "The New Day". We have enough knowledge of the beliefs of the various university professors to have many of them shot by the light of a new day.

The largest mistake made by the government (which, of course, represents only those with plenty of jack) is to permit an undemocratic college like University College, which is really the hot-bed of revolt. The other colleges because they tie their staffs and students to certain beliefs are very "safe" for democracy.

Our first step to return to the good old days of prosperity in Canada is to abolish U.C., you see, and offer the heads of the various departments jobs as bookkeepers at $10 a week (which is probably more than what they get now). This move will be to show the world how generous we are and to make certain they think and vote as we want them to. We can give the rest of the staff in U.C. jobs in our factories.

A certain foreigner by the name of Metternich had some fine ideas of running a country properly so that nobody becomes dissatisfied. Let us, therefore, follow that noble fellow. "More soldiers and bigger policemen" should be our motto. That is the only way to keep "law and order" and the happiness of God's children in the sacred land of Canada and to make our contribution to God, humanity and the millions yet unconquered. Ending on so elevated a note we remain,

Yours Sincerely,
Mike Littner, and Ner Littner.

VICTORIA DEFEATS TRINITY AT SOCCER

Taylor, Stuart and Simpson
Were the Best for Victoria

Victoria won their second soccer game yesterday afternoon by defeating Trinity 2-0 on the front campus. It was Trinity's first game of the season and they lacked the combination and effectiveness of the Scarlet and Gold.

In the first half Victoria had the better part of the play. Taylor scored both goals for the winners. The first was on a hard, straight shot and the second, a minute later, on a pass from Cochrane, which slipped through Leggie's hands.

Trinity played a steadier game in Both Devote Considerable

BLUE SECONDARY WEAK

Varsity seniors and St. Michael's O.R.F.U. team held another of their mid-weekly scrimmage practices at Varsity Stadium yesterday afternoon. For the first half hour, St. Michael's assumed the offensive, while Varsity was given an opportunity to improve their system of defense. The Irish unleashed a barrage of forward passes, end runs and fake plays, and met with considerable success. Griffin and Connolly plowed through the end of the Blue line repeatedly. Varsity apparently found the answer to the double blue team's forward passing system, as they intercepted and blocked several throws.

For the remainder of the session, Varsity took the ball, and the Irish the defensive. The Blue team devoted considerable time to their forward passing attack, and Taylor and Bryers completed a few which would have gone for touchdowns, had it been a regular game. Their short passes were clicking with monotonous regularity. Bobby Coulter mixed up his passing and plunging plays very effectively. The Blue charging brigade travelled through centre frequently.

Both coaches pointed out mistakes to their respective charges periodically and although the practice was not intended to be a heavy workout, or a practice game, the two teams undoubtedly benefitted and should be in fine fettle for Saturday's struggles.

FIRST BOXLA GAME TAKEN BY KNOX

Defeat U. C. by 13-9 Score in Fast Lacrosse
Game

Knox College sharpshooters led U.C. by a score of 13-9 in the opening game of the interfaculty box lacrosse season which was played in the big Hart House gymnasium yesterday afternoon. Starting the game with a rush both teams played fast open games all the way through although play slowed very slightly in the middle period.

Led by Cochrane, who netted six goals, and Weir, who turned in a stellar performance in goal, Knox decisively out-rushed and out-passed U. C. to take an 8-2 lead in the first period. The smooth passing of the Presbyterians again and again brought the ball to the mouth of the U.C. goal for certain shots. Caslor and MacEachren for the winners showed some tricky stickhandling and shooting in the last two periods.

Play grew rougher in the two latter sessions, which saw the referee, Jim Kerr, hand out six penalties. The U.C. players made their comeback in the last period when they netted four goals to their opponents' one. Harwood's four counters made him top scorer for the Arts men, while Fullerton's rushes and checking and Smith's goal-shooting were outstanding for the losers.

The game never lagged and both goal-tenders were kept on their toes for several goals were scored on sizzling shots from mid-floor. The ball was usually fed to the forwards without stalling and both lineups kept goal-hunting until the final whistle.

Knox — Weir, Cochrane, Caslor, Davidson, MacEachren; subs, Wilson, Jamieson.

U.C. — Campbell, Fullerton, Harwood, Smith, MacMichael; subs, Bissell, Gallow, Mitchell, Robb.

Referee — J. Kerr.

The last stanza and play ranged fairly even, with both goalies seeing a little action. Taylor, Stuart and Simpson were the best for Victoria, while Allison displayed some fine dribbling for the losers.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By J. A. Runnells

It's the same old drama all over again,—only this time the music should be different. Kingston this week-end will be a gathering point for a real galaxy of athletes, and the nexus of some fine sporting events. Varsity athletes representing three branches of contention will gather with a host of other letter-winners from McGill, University of Montreal, Queen's and R.M.C., but no matter what the outcome, the same old rivals will be tussling for the honours—U. of T. and Old McGill.

When we think of intercollegiate competition, it is most natural to think of it in terms of the rivalry that comes from the Red and White centre. And this week-end, when the senior track and tennis teams engage with the stars of the court and cinder path from the four other contending factions, the story will read the same, but we hope the outcome will be changed. The intermediates and junior football squads meet R.M.C. at the same time and the results in that direction should be easily foretold. The women's senior tennis team also enters the fray and of that we can say nothing—also historic. But what we do know is that McGill is shipping to the Limestone City one of the strongest tennis teams in recent and former competition and a highly favoured track team. All we can say is, "On to Kingston and may the best man—be Varsity."

Three times in the last four years McGill has copped the tennis laurels and U. of T. have not won out since 1928. Last year the super-team that was heralded from Montreal was so nearly downed by our local men that the situation was perilous—and all from sheer over-confidence. This year they carry as their racket-slingers de luxe, Watt and Murray, both from last year and both highly improved. Laird Watt recently defeated Marcel Rainville, the Canadian Davis Cupper to earn the Quebec provincial singles crown. He is to McGill champ by virtue of a victory over Murray. But what of it? What Varsity almost did last year they can completely finish this year. Hermant is much improved, as well, and as captain of the Blue and White team has some fine support. He and his partner last year eliminated the U. of M. players, who in turn had eliminated Watt and his partner, and he is man enough to do the same little thing again.

As far as track is concerned, Varsity is sending out a band of stars to be proud of. This event McGill has won for three years past, mainly due to the efforts of the renowned Phil Edwards. Edwards is entered again this year in four events, lending for stiff competition, but not for any certain outcome. Westheuser, Stewart, Dore, and other men of outstanding calibre should be an equal match for any one-man team the McGill coach may choose. Queen's, here, will no doubt have something to say as to what and why. If it were not for the strength of the tricolour band, the chances for a U. of T. track title would be vastly enhanced. As things stand now, it rests in the lap of the gods. Coaching in track is only equalled in importance by coaching in football. If coaching were the deciding factor the title would be ours already as our team has had the best. Grit, we know, is not lacking; hence all we can say is, "Good luck!"

The aspect of interfaculty soccer has been changed owing to a game that was scheduled between Knox and Meds for last night and which Meds defaulted, apparently for no good reason. Meds have a reason, however, and one that implies a great deal, lending a different slant to the situation. At a late hour last night it was learned that Meds have not yet appointed a manager for their team which consequently does not exist, and hence they were ignorant of the engagement. The position of manager was apparently left open, not through lack of attempting to fill it, but through lack of interest in the game. A sort of fatalistic attitude seems to prevail that Knox may as well have the title first as last as far as Meds are concerned. Meds, as all the other faculties know, who have met them in competition, are not quitters. Last year their soccer showing was very fair and in other sports they are forced to be reckoned with. If they don't want to play soccer there is no reason why they should be forced into it, but now it seems that they will be forced out of it for a while, at least. Perhaps the game is losing interest around the campus, at least, among those faculties that have never achieved much success at it, and perhaps the fact that one faculty has continually managed to walk off with the honours has much to do with it—among the same faculties. In any case Knox is not to blame and even went so far as to express desires to have Meds exonerated. (They waited around for half an hour in uniform.) What faculty wouldn't take all the titles they could grab? The situation has never come to light in such a manner before as in other sports the rivalry is too keen and the outcome too uncertain. It is only human nature to withdraw in favour of a stronger contestant in cases where nothing apparently seems to be gained by contention. If Meds withdraw from lack of interest there is no condemnation involved. What is to be condemned is the manner of withdrawal and the apparent laxity of management in the athletic department.

For such a situation there is a definite ruling. It comes in section 5 of the articles dealing with interfaculty sport and may be found in the athletic handbook. It reads: "The schedule as finally arranged and approved by the Directorate, must be carried out. Any team defaulting a game shall be ruled out of the series for the year and not re-admitted in the following year until approved by the Directorate." ## STUDENTS DEPLORE LACK OF INTEREST body. Such seems to be the opinion of the majority of the medical students interviewed yesterday by The Varsity.

It was the belief of Ben Caplan, 4th Meds, that the Medical Society, the existing connection between the students and the staff, was too formal. He felt that it should be opened up and the barriers let down. He suggested the holding of smokers at which the members of both bodies could become familiar with each other. He thought that the staff had the student interest at heart but the lack of connection made it difficult for the staff to become familiar with the student point of view. He was quite enthusiastic about conditions in Pharmacology in which, he said, a great deal of personal interest was displayed and much individual attention given. He held it up as an example to be striven for in the other courses.

These statements were heartily endorsed by M. G. Drutz, 4th year Meds, who also suggested a rotary system of groups through which the students could meet and converse with the professors. The large classes make this rather difficult however, he pointed out.

A 6th year student who prefers to remain anonymous, felt that the staff was quite open to suggestions from the students. He claimed that criticism levelled against the 6th year course in surgery had resulted in several beneficial changes being made. He endorsed the plan outlined in the correspondence column of yesterday's Varsity and believed that a more intimate connection between students and staff would be well worth while. He thought that the efforts of the faculty to raise the standard in the course may be partly responsible for the belief that professors sometimes discriminate as to who they let through the May Examinations.

R. M. Rodgers, also a 6th year student, felt that in some subjects there was not a sufficiently close connection between the staff and the students but he did not think students were ever ploughed because of prejudice on the part of the professors. He thinks that the controversy that is raging at present is a good thing, especially if it makes the staff a little more "student conscious".

an arbitrary nature. The duty of the government in that case would be as a protector of the interests of consumers, producers and technicians, harmonizing them with those of the nation. "The manufacture of any product in any quantity, should not be permitted without such control. In industry, unlimited liberty is folly. It can but lead to disaster.

"We must," he stated, "definitely suppress the old liberal ideas of capitalism. They are no longer consonant with modern society and modern organization of state.

"For that reason I am reorganizing the industrial and agricultural corporations and subdividing them into categories determined by the commodities they produce."

are now used in almost all countries except those in South America and their vocabularies have been translated into about twenty different languages. Dr. West has lectured in U.S.A., Canada, France, Turkey, Bulgaria, Syria, Palestine and Egypt on this new system of language research.

Dr. West is now beginning some studies on the teaching of French reading which will probably revolutionize the present school system in the province. He was able with this new method to teach eight year old Indian boys to read English inside of three months. Dr. West has chosen about two hundred words that are similar in both French and English and after the student has mastered these he will be able to start reading. He thinks that the boys should be able to start the book after about ten lessons. The book will be of an entirely new type for school work, as he intends to write one of the Tarzan or cowboy type that will hold their interest from the beginning to the end.

ON REVOLUTIONS

Down below the equator bull-fighting has taken a back seat to the new pastime (or is it old) of take-a-pot-shot-at-the-President. In this game you get two points if you kill the president, if you wound him you get one, and if you miss him altogether your opponent gets one. If the president turns around and takes a pot-shot at you, it is declared a foul and you revert back to the score at the end of the third inning.

I think it was back in the winter of '27 when President Oquage of the Republic of San Stevedore invited me down to quell a rebellion. Shulman the Revolution Ruiner they called me at the time, and could I ruin 'em. I once got into sixty revolutions in less than ten minutes, but I got so dizzy my mother had to take me off the merry-go-round. I remember this particular rebellion because of the fact that the rebels kidnapped the president before I got there. Instead of shooting him as the rule book demanded, they cut him up into bits while a jazz band noisily played Cut Yourself a Piece Oquage.

This breach of the rules so exasperated the government forces that they immediately elected me president and for the next few weeks I was so busy dodging bullets that when I got back to civilization I got a job in the Midway evading baseballs in a side-show. I did manage to pacify the insurgents by promising them a new president every week, and if they behaved very, very well, I would see to it that they also got two vice-presidents every second Sunday.

In my experience as a Revolution Ruiner I have had many narrow escapes and one time particularly a rebel fired a blunderbuss at my head. The shot was so fine and the shooter so terrible that they turned my white silk tie into a polka dot oravat.

When the first riots started in Cuba President Machado immediately called upon me. As his aide-de-camp I was supposed to sing Me and Machado every time I was ushered into his presence. It was in this little country that things were so hot that I always carried a telephone book around with me for protection. You see my mother had always warned me that there was safety in numbers. But from the amount of dancers that hung around the Capitol you would figure that the president believed in safety in rhumbas.

You can see how effective I was in Cuba, that no sooner had I arrived than they allowed Machado to go free. If you are a president and want to go back to saving stamps or playing the slot machine don't forget to get in touch with Shulman the Revolution Ruiner (adv't).

My motto is "There is no president like an ex-president."

cussion for the government, with ex-prime minister Drynan speaking first for the opposition.

A number of undergraduates, particularly in the freshman year, seem to be under a misunderstanding as regards membership in the Parliamentary Club of U.C., believing that they can only become members by invitation. This is a misapprehension, as any undergraduate who has paid his fees to the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society automatically becomes a member of the Parliamentary Club with full rights and privileges which include speaking from the floor of the House. As a matter of fact the Speaker will give the backbenchers preference over the frontbenchers in to-day's meeting.

direction of the Canadian Radio Commission was received, and drawn to the attention of the Debates Committee of the S.A.C. It is proposed that Canadian universities from coast to coast co-operate to broadcast debates over the radio. The Canadian Radio Commission has signified its willingness to fall in line with the universities in sponsoring programmes of an educational nature, and plans are already under way for intercollegiate radio debates in Western Canada.

Mr. Bruce Murray, B.A., newly elected president of the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Councils, was in the chair for the first time at the regular meeting held yesterday.

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

paying their own expenses. Often their employment is such that it does not permit them to enter into the regular social life of the college, often they cannot afford the more expensive pleasures. The Free Lances offer them an opportunity to associate with other girls in the same condition.

Although, when the Free Lances came into existence several years ago, the aim was primarily social, the girls soon found it advantageous to exchange and discuss suggestions for employment and thus help one another.

As such the group has proved a boon to many who would otherwise have felt at a loose end at college. The ex-members of the Free Lances keep in touch with the undergraduate group and assist and encourage them in many ways. Several ex-members have distinguished themselves by winning scholarships and fellowships at this and other universities, and some have found permanent positions on the staff.

Mr. Patrick read the financial statement for the year 1932-3 and outlined the programme for the new season. Refreshments were served throughout the hour.

The executive plans to have more frequent meetings this year and to engage various prominent people as the speakers. It is also their intention to make informal discussions of certain interesting topics among the members a larger part of the proceedings of the club than in the past. To make such discussions possible, the membership will be necessarily restricted. Therefore all those who wish to become members are advised to make arrangements at the next meeting, the date of what will be announced in the near future.

DR. CODY ADDRESSES S.A.C.

Refers to Recent Criticisms Directed at Institutions of Learning

"It is not the building or equipment which make the university great, it is the calibre of the men on the staff," said President H. J. Cody, speaking at the dinner which he gave for the Joint Executive of the S.A.C. in the Women's Union last night. "As long as we have men of high character on the staff, and students who are desirous of putting first things first, I have no fear for the future of the university," he continued, in referring to recent criticisms directed at institutions of higher learning. Dr. Cody mentioned that the University of Toronto is the second largest in the Empire, next to the University of London. The Indian universities, he explained, have a larger central registration, but are not universities in our sense of the word.

Members of the Joint Executive were called upon for impromptu speeches by Dr. Cody, and all voiced their appreciation of his interest in student affairs. Dr. Cody thanked the S.A.C. on behalf of the Board of Governors for undertaking the publication of the student directory this year, and sponsoring the graduation garden party last June.

LORD'S DAY ACT CAUSE DEBATED

U. C. Parliament Discusses Ways and Means of Spending Sunday

RELIC OF PURITANISM

Next Sunday you will be able to attend the local theatres. You will be able to play football and enjoy every form of sport. This would be the situation if the U.C. Parliamentary Club could exercise its policy. Last night the government, led by Mr. Patrick, defended the motion to amend the Lord's Day Act to provide for Sunday sports and theatres, etc.

In an eloquent speech of tremendous volume, Stobie defended the government. Claiming that the present legislation concerning Sunday was a clamp on society, he said, "As a radical-socialist government we must take the fetters off humanity and ameliorate the social and religious conditions."

Mr. Drynan, the deposed prime minister, commenced the debate for the opposition. "Sunday is a day set aside for relaxation, a day set aside from the mundane relations of life and from the pursuit of profit. People do not want freedom to attend movies, they want a day primarily for quiet and peace."

Speaking from the backbenches, Mr. Bissel stated that the government desired to release the church from the bondage of the State and to give it an opportunity to show any virility it has. The Lord's Day Act was declared a relic of Puritanism.

Mr. Dufresne, from Trinity, upheld the government cause and related how the noble people of Quebec live in peace and quiet in spite of indulging in sports on the Sabbath.

Mr. Patrick, the prime minister, voiced his opinion at the end of the debate, when he stated that his government desired to restore the good old days of Merrie England when no church curbed the happiness of mankind with oppressive legislation.

Charges Without Foundation

Premier Agrees

WRITER MISINFORMED

University Affairs Merit No
Suspicious Detailed Investigations

By B. L. Smith

That the charges made are without foundation and that the writer must have been grossly misinformed was the opinion expressed by the Hon. G. S. Henry, Prime Minister of Ontario and Minister of Education, when his attention was drawn by The Varsity yesterday to a recent editorial of the Porcupine Advance dealing with conditions at the University of Toronto. An editorial appearing in The Globe of Tuesday last quoted the Advance and was reprinted in The Varsity of Wednesday. The Advance intimates that all may not be well within the university, that the teaching given students is harmful and called for an investigation.

"In these difficult times of heavy taxation amid business depression," Mr. Henry stated, "the public, quite naturally, watch with a critical eye any large expenditure of the public funds." The annual grant to the university, in the neighbourhood of $1,000,000, is drawing critical attention in certain quarters, especially from those who never have and never will benefit directly from anything the grant might accomplish.

Mr. Henry made it clear that the government does not interfere with the Board of Governors of the university and ridiculed the idea of the slightest need for any investigation into affairs at Varsity.

BLUE TEAMS HOPE TO DEFEAT R.M.C.

Intermediates and Juniors
Have Chance to Head
Their Leagues

PLAY AT KINGSTON

With prospects of two victories in the offing the intermediate and junior Blue teams will gather up their ammunition to-day and march into the city of Kingston, there to decide whether Varsity or R.M.C. will head the league in their respective classes. The game is to be a double header at Richardson Stadium, with the junior teams squaring off in the curtain-raiser.

The juniors will be making their first appearance and if they don't get stage fright should set a good example for the intermediates. R.M.C. to date have started once when they lost to Queen's on a 6-5 score. The Blue team after a shaky start this fall got down to business last Saturday and took the Queen's team 23-0. On the strength of this the Varsity squad should meet with little difficulty in hanging up another win at Richardson Stadium.

Lou Carroll's intermediates won their spurs on Saturday when they came from behind to gain a last minute victory. Lou has built up a very formidable team and seems to be in line for an intercollegiate title. Bob Isbister who does the hooking work for the seconds, has been getting great distance in his kicks and is a valuable player for relieving the pressure in the pinches. Bob is also handy at heaving and receiving the pigskin in aerial warfare. Another colourful player is Hud Steward, whose brilliant runs and glaring fumbles have been a feature of every game so far.

U. OF T. CHEER LEADERS

They are introducing to-morrow afternoon a new yell which is simple, snappy, rhythmic, and effective. It is the type of yell used throughout the American universities. Do your part and co-operate to make it go over big for the edification of Queen's supporters. It consists of four lines. There are five words to each of the first three lines which are the same and the same word is used throughout—"Rah". The line looks like this. RAH—RAH—rah-rah-rah. The first two words come with a long interval after rah. Then the last three "rahs" come sharp and quick in fast time. In figures it goes 1-2-1-2-3. Get it? Then the last of the four lines is TEAM—TEAM—TEAM. In the last line the cheer leaders may substitute the name of a player after a smart play or an injury. The whole yell looks like this.

RAH—RAH—rah-rah-rah,
RAH—RAH—rah-rah-rah,
RAH—RAH—rah-rah-rah,
TEAM!—TEAM!—TEAM!!

Hermant Gets Pen-name

While the U.C. Parliamentary Club was in session yesterday afternoon the Speaker, Hon. R. A. Bell, was called to the telephone on a long distance call from the Hon. S. M. Hermant, in Kingston.

"I am phoning you through the courtesy of the Warden of Kingston Penitentiary," said Mr. Hermant. "While I was down here playing tennis I tried to exercise my prerogative as a Member of Parliament to investigate conditions in the Penitentiary, and the Warden has detained me. Please ask the House to take some action at once."

The Speaker announced the news to the House, and a motion was made by Mr. M. B. Gelber, and passed unanimously, that the Warden's salary be doubled.

STUDENTS DISLIKE PRESS PROPAGANDA

Excess of Radicalism in University Circles Is Denied

TORONTO PRESS VICIOUS

Students on the campus denounced the Toronto press for advocating an investigation into conditions at the university, in interviews with The Varsity yesterday.

"The university is the centre of progressive thought," said J. Graham, II Pol. Sc. "We must uphold freedom of thought. If it is suppressed in the university the thought of the nation is suppressed."

"The university should not be victimized by so-called practical men who do not appreciate the necessity for theoretical thought," declared Claude Bissel of U.C. "The university is the spearhead of modern thought. Undoubtedly this is a preamble to the annual tiff between the local press and the university. One cannot forget Mr. Allen of several years ago."

Edward Heller of III S.P.S., stated that the question no doubt applied to Arts students. "There is no spirit of radicalism at School from my observations. An investigation into conditions in Hart House kitchen would be in order after the hash of Thursday noon."

Bruce Marshall, II U.C., denounced the Toronto press for its vicious propaganda of the last few days and was of the opinion that an investigation of these institutions would be more appropriate.

"I am less radically inclined than I ever was after one and a half years here," declared Mr. Stickle of If C.

Both Varsity and Queen's Teams Are Keyed Up For Encounter

Tricolour Seniors Subjected to Heaviest Workouts of Year

SHOW GREAT IMPROVEMENT

More Powerful Opposition
Expected than for McGill
Game

By R. W. Clarke

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 19th.—Realizing that all their title hopes depend upon a victory over Varsity on Saturday, Queen's seniors abandoned their no-scrimmage practice programme and all week have indulged in their heaviest workouts of the year. Coach Ted Reeve has spared no one and has driven the team at top speed all the way. The Tricolour machine has started to click. If the improvement continues it should be a vastly different squad that tackles the Blue and White than that which eked out a narrow victory over McGill.

The backfield will be composed of Davis, Wing and Krag, with the first two sharing the booting duties. Davis, whose field goal defeated the Redmen, has been out of most of the practices this week due to a heavy cold, but will no doubt be ready for Saturday's big game. Johnny Wing and Curly Krag, making their senior debut this year, have proved themselves capable backfielders and both have made good with a vengeance. They should give the Varsity tackles plenty of trouble. McNichol and Bob Ralph will also be available for half line duty if necessary. It is probable that "Dunc" Mcintosh will again direct the team from the pivot position, with Kostulik at snap and Dafeo as relief centre. The Queen's starting inside wings will likely be Weir and Waugh, with Miller and Byrne to replace them as required.

"Abc" Zvonkin and Bud Gorman are sure to start at middle wing. Both learned their football in Hamilton and that means that they know how to plunge. Two other Ambitious City boys, Ralph and Glass, will be the regular ends. Capt. Howard Hamlin has been going well in practice this week and will again play the flying wing position. For general relief duty Coach Reeve has Earle, Peever, Jones and Dargavel.

GOLF TOURNAMENT HELD AT MONTREAL

University of Toronto Competes with McGill Team for Ruttan Cup

ALSO INDIVIDUAL CONTEST

The University of Toronto golf team departed for Montreal, the scene of the intercollegiate golf tournament, last Wednesday afternoon. The Varsity team, composed of Boeckh, Phelan, Knight, Biggs, Stewart and Lathrop, are faced with the task of defending their intercollegiate championship and the Ruttan cup.

The team competition, this year, is between University of Toronto and McGill; number 1 Varsity player meeting number 1 McGill player, number 2 Varsity, meeting number 2 McGill, the total points are added at the conclusion of three matches and the winner is the holder of the Ruttan cup for the next year.

There is also an individual intercollegiate champion declared; contestants from the Universities of Toronto, Montreal, McGill and Queen's will vie for singles honours. The player turning in the lowest 36-hole score will be individual champion. The team and

FORWARD PASS STRESSED

Line Working as Protective Unit for Sinclair's
Kicks

By Harold Taylor

Fortified by another week of solid football work, the Varsity senior football team will endeavour to keep its lead in the intercollegiate race by defeating Queen's University at the Stadium to-morrow afternoon. The members of the squad are in superb condition for the struggle, even the hard-luck fellow, Hal Richardson, is without injury again and will in all probability don his uniform.

The line-up this week will closely resemble the line-up of the Western game, with Sinclair, Arnp and Copp in their usual positions on the half-line. The strong line will once more be supported by Boothe, Warner, McQuigge and Harris. On guard at the ends will appear Bryers, Keith, Hennessy and Allison. Ken Peacock will stop the gaps from his position at secondary defense, where last week he did so great a job. Also, Bobby Coulter, the fast, clever quarterback will again direct the Varsity offensive.

Attention has been given this past week to the blocking off of invaders who would like to smother Sinclair's kicks. The line is now working as a real protective unit. This, and a continued use and practice of the forward pass, have made the aerial matters of the football team a weapon which should prove highly effective against Queen's to-morrow.

TRUE ART ALWAYS POPULAR

"Feeling excited by the beautiful expands the imagination which is then in a position to grasp the infinite which involves enthusiasm," claimed Professor Will in his lecture on Nineteenth Century French Literature in University College yesterday afternoon.

There are people who are not excited by the beautiful. These were type characters of the time and Chateaubriand's Reign is an example of the accused man "a wondering sufferer and a disappointed one," one who suffers from "mal de siècle," a melancholy who cannot love; he is the fatal man.

"The art which penetrates to the

DR. WALLACE DESCRIBES LIBRARIES ASSOCIATION

"It is an honour paid to the university rather than to me, personally," replied Mr. W. S. Wallace, Head Librarian, when approached by The Varsity regarding his reported appointment as chairman of the college and reference section of the American Libraries Association.

The Association, Mr. Wallace informed us, which has more than 12,000 members, and is at present convening in Chicago, represents all manner of libraries both public and academic in the United States and Canada. It meets annually and semi-annually to discuss the members' problems and to further the general progress of libraries on this continent.

WHERE IS THE VOICE OF YOUTH?

They are starting a Pacifist League in the University, but what is the use? They have no voice! We have no voice! We want peace and freedom but no one will listen. Why should they listen? They don't have to live three score years and ten, to face a world of misery and destruction. They don't have to fight with gritted teeth to right a topsy-turvy universe.

Fight? Thunders of war! War seems incredible, positively incredible. "We are at the mercy of any little fooling incident that might blow the lid off hell," says Sir Norman Angel. That people could see it as clearly as some of the youth!

It is not because we are cowards that we are pacifists. It is because of the utter self-destruction that war would mean, utter and complete, except for a few individuals who might escape, and in nomadic patience begin civilisation all over again.

They do not consider the youth, these doddering sons of authority. Without a voice, we are rushed pell-mell into a turbulent chaos, into torture, despoliation, annihilation. And even if there is no war, there is Depression, poverty, starvation, and the slow mental agony of inaction.

And then they abuse us for being radicals, these anarchists who would march us to war with a song, to fight out their stupid follies for them, we hot-bloods who love living, hate death and murder, but stand for justice, high standards, and thorough organisation.

We are helpless and ignored. Young men and women have become neurotic from chagrin and constraint, because we have no voice to make our leaders see. Perhaps they see, and it is just a silly schoolboy trick that makes them wave this war menace about our eyes every so often. Perhaps they have perfect control of affairs and sit in their conferences with laughter and cigars, each telling a bigger scare-menace tale.

Perhaps there are plenty of opportunities. Perhaps there is no Depression. Perhaps the world isn't round.

Yet we are powerless. We have no voice in the fashioning of our future.

CHAMPUS CAT

Hel-lo, Every-body!

C-C

No, dear friends, 'tis only your old friend Chaz. Pardon the imitation of Kate Smith, but we've just been spending a day at the zoo looking at the hippopotamus and it was a bit too much for us.

C-C

We wouldn't be here at all, but we dropped down from Kingston on ticket-of-leave with a couple of brokers, to see the Big Game.

C-C

We're thinking of organising a team at our new alma mater next year, and the Warden asked us to look over the Varsity aggregation for prospects.

C-C

We haven't any money yet for our equipment, but if the C.C.F. win the election next summer we expect a number of wealthy capitalists will be in a position to support us.

C-C

One thing—they won't be able to charge us with luring in American imports just to play rugby.

As a matter of fact, we hadn't intended to make our presence known, but this being Ladies' Night at the Press, Etain (What-a-Mon!) Shred was too busy to waste time with a

He has chosen the better part. If we had known what the freschette crop was going to be like, we might have refrained from murdering the cornet soloist next door (almost justifiable homicide was the charge, and the jury brought in a plea for mercy, but the judge played a jews-harp himself and couldn't see it that way). We could always have gone on in theology, where our talents would be appreciated.

As it is, we're writing the Warden to see if we can't finish our course here.

Extra-murally, so to speak.

LAW CLUB HOLDS MEETING

The Law Club of the university held the inaugural meeting of the year in the U.C. common room last night, having as its guest speaker, a prominent member of the Ontario Bench, Mr. Justice Davies. His Honour, a graduate of Varsity 30 years ago, spoke on "The place of law in university education".

"Law is a real living social science," said Mr. Davies. "Legal education in England and Canada has only recently been included in the curriculum of the university, while in the United States it has been taught for over 100 years."

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

St. Thomas' Church

On Sunday at 5.30 p.m. the Choir will offer another programme of great variety over Station CFRB, opening with the well known hymn "O what the joy", set to a French melody of the early 15th century, followed by an Anthem, "Come Holy Ghost" (Thiman). Master Paul Foskett will offer Galbraith's "Peace I leave with thee". The Male Chorus feature will be an early 15th century motet "Truly, all of our weakness", by Antonio Lotti, the broadcast concluding with a motet by Sir Walford Davies.

After the evening service a Sacred Cantata "The Parables" for Tenor and Baritone soli, Chorus and Organ will be sung.

Eaton Auditorium

The regular Eaton series of concerts opened last night with a recital by Lucrezia Bori, famous soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company. There is no need to multiply words on the subject. Vocal recitals, by their very nature, cannot have profound musical significance. But Miss Bori's singing is, of course, always impressive; and she certainly captivated a large audience on this occasion by her charming stage personality—a factor, in these affairs, of real importance.

Something of a novelty was the Massenet La Vieille, with organ accompaniment, supplied by Mr. Harvey Robb. The best part of the programme was the last half, except for the English group, which was the least satisfactory of the evening. She threw the magnificence of her voice all around these English songs, but was really effective only in the quiet and lovely Cyril Scott number.

The finest work was done in the Aria from Carmen; she was doubtless entirely at home with this, and the singing seemed perfect. Again, in the Des cantiques of Obradors, the sheer splendour of her voice was bound to thrill the listener. And it is only paying a necessary tribute to her concert artistry to remark that the naive little encores she sang added a final touch of joyous delight to a very delightful performance.

CO-EDS REORGANIZE DEBATING UNION

New Features May Include Debates with England in Near Future

An effort is being made to revive interest in debating among the women of the university and for this purpose a meeting was held yesterday in Room 82, University College. Unfortunately few people attended and as Victoria College was not represented at all it was difficult to do anything. An executive of Margaret Farmer of Trinity, as president, Pauline Symon of St. Michael's, as vice-president, and Jean Much of University College as treasurer, were elected. They hope through the co-operation of the other members to make a success of the Debating Union.

Another meeting is being held on Wednesday, October 25, at four o'clock in the Women's Union, at which they want everyone with any interest in debating to be present. Freshies will be especially welcome, and will be given an opportunity to work up in the Union with the hope that they may some day get trips to other universities. There are even rumours that debates will be held between England and Canada in the near future.

Other inducements offered are the chance to debate in interfaculty debates and free admission to all inter-collegiate and interfaculty debates.

Geo. S. Parker's recent announcement of this revolutionary pen has electrified the whole pen world. A self-filling pen with double ink capacity, yet no increase in size!

A pen without a rubber ink sac, but more than that—a sacless pen without piston pump or valves—with nothing to fail and render it useless later on.

Such a pen existed for nearly fifty years in the brains of pen inventors, but nowhere else. They referred to it as a "miracle pen." Each of the thousands of attempts to produce it failed. Then a scientist at a great university invented the Vacuumatic Filler. He selected Parker as the world's pen leader and brought his invention to us to develop and perfect. Today this pen is ready at all good pen counters for you to see and try.

with white gold; or Jet and Burgundy Pearl, trimmed with yellow gold. Parker commissioned a gifted designer to create this wholly new style—the smartest, most distinguished ever seen in a pen. And Parker patents insure you something exclusive—guarded from imitation.

See the great quantity of ink within the pen. Try writing two ways with this one point—A reversible point of precious platinum and gold. Iridium tipped—writing your regular band, fine, medium or broad, etc., with the under side—writing hairline figures or notes with the upper side. Note how flawless, how utterly smooth at any speed.

Give your hand a taste of its graceful, balanced barrel—see how low and unexposed it sets in the pocket. If you're willing to pay $7.50, you'll not be content with any other pen. The Parker Fountain Pen Co., Limited, Toronto, Ontario.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

Four teams will be entered in the baseball league this year instead of the usual three. Meds, Public Health, and S.P.S. are combining and are definitely entering a team in interfaculty competition. The games should be much more interesting this season than other years and the struggle will probably be much keener with the three-cornered league broken up.

A meeting of the baseball club will be held this Saturday at which the schedule will be drawn up. The first game will likely be arranged for November 7 or very near that date. St. Mike's, under the coaching of Hud Turley, are holding very satisfactory practices and are working reasonably hard to get into condition.

Vic displayed a real live-wire outfit at their first practice in Little Vic gym last night with George Seavers coaching. There was a large turnout and now that year games are out of the way, some real interest is being shown in the workouts for the interfaculty team. A more satisfactory practice was held by U.C. last night, so that they have definitely decided to put a team in the interfaculty lists.

VARSITY, MCGILL DISPUTE SOCCER CHAMPIONSHIP

At 10 a.m. Saturday the intercollegiate soccer championship will be at stake when the Big Blue team clashes with its ancient rivals on the front campus, in the premier soccer engagement of the year. For the past month the team has been absorbed in hard workouts in preparation for a stiff schedule and will be in fine shape for its opening game.

Facing McGill will be six of last year's team, Jack, McCulloch, Davidson, Rowlinson, Schuett and Rowland, who will be aided by the as yet untested strength of Aldridge, Bowen, MacPherson, Gowdy and Toone. The new men have succeeded in keeping up with the veteran players of last year's team and will undoubtedly prove to be able competition for any team.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By John T. Stubbs

If Teddy Reeve thinks his Presbyterians are going to pull out a surprise win here to-morrow he is due for a big disappointment. Warren Stevens, on the other hand, isn't forgetting that it will be a tough game to win. To see the Blues in action this last week is evidence enough for us that the boys are taking this game a lot more seriously than the first two. There isn't a trace of over-confidence visible to the observant eye. Ken Peacock was unable to get onto the grid on time the night before last and the Varsity captain took it to heart. He was quite peeved at himself, to say the least. He ran out on the field just in the middle of the scrim with the Irish and on the next play he tackled the Bay St. ball carrier head on with as wicked a jack-knife flip as could be called short of malicious. So the big middle from Hamilton is taking his football seriously without the "maybes".

Queen's won't be displaying any forward pass attack to speak of. Their gaining is done through the line and around the end, if at all. Bud Gorman and Zvonkin will be seen bucking the Varsity line. But Warren Stevens hasn't had the tackling dummies out this week for nothing. To see Jack Dawson hitting them one would think he was intending to take a post-grad course at Notre Dame next year. Speaking of Notre Dame, Knute Rockne's end run play looked mighty smart in the St. Mike's bag of tricks Wednesday. The backs start together and they start like a shot out of a gun! Which means the opposing outsidies have to be on springs and a little bit smarter to stop the runners at all. In that scrimmage Wednesday, Del Hickey pulled the nicest catch of the season on a pass from Marks. It was the kind you see in the sports reels—pulled down at full arm's length from overhead while in full stride down the centre of the field.

Complaints have been quite rampant hereabouts since last Saturday's game because of the lack of something spectacular in the last half when Varsity had a 14 point lead. Warren Stevens doesn't say much but he knows what he is about. If the play had been opened up there would have been a few more casualties on the list for Joe Carruthers' ears. But at present the Varsity squad has the distinction of being the first in years to enter a game at full strength. Every man is ready for the Queen's game and raring to go. Hal Richardson and Tubby Bell have been declared o.k. and they round out a lineup of 20 Blue-clad warriors wholly intact. That is answer enough.

Varsity will have a decided edge in kicking and passing attacks. In comparative judgment the line on the last few games has shown up to better advantage against McGill and Western than the Tricolour has. The old Queen's spirit throughout the team isn't a bit scrapper than the "Varsity Feeling" that stands out on the grim, determined faces you see under Blue helmets. Queen's end run attack will be stopped by the Toronto ends if anybody can stop them. The local outsidies are easily the best in intercollegiate competition. So where does Queen's hold any chance of upsetting the dope? If they are to pull out a win it will be through an advantage in their type of play. They will be taking chances, playing wide open ball, and fighting like demons. On the other hand the Blues will be depending on the steady, hard-hitting, heady style that has carried them so far since the beginning of last year's schedule. It can't be beaten by any ordinary team. Breaks may make the difference. But that's all.

And while the senior Tricolour team is being entertained here, we have five teams in their back yard trying to snaffle a few intercollegiate titles from their back door. Women's tennis, track, tennis, and the Varsity intermediate and junior football teams are on the road to the Limestone City. The golfers are invading Montreal and Captain Roddy Phelan expects that his cohorts and himself will win the team title again this year. Good luck to you, ladies and gentlemen!

JUDGE the Clothes — NOT the Price

You've probably paid more for a suit or an overcoat than $21.00 Tip Top Tailors' one price. But don't think you are going to get less satisfaction when you buy Tip Top tailored-to-measure clothes, although the price is less. Judge the clothes, NOT the price.

You'll find that Tip Top Tailors designers bring to you that distinction in clothes that is found in the freedom and ease of correct style. Each garment is built for you personally. Examine the woollens—you'll find England, Ireland and Scotland have delivered to Tip Top Tailors, rugged tweeds, non-wrinkling worsteds and long distance wearing serges. Note the hand-cut and tailoring that determines durability of shape and style at collar—shoulder—lapel. Tip Top Tailors Clothes are hand-cut and tailored to your individual measurements.

The explanation lies in the fact that Tip Top Tailors do a volume business, built to serve the individual. Tip Top Tailors' growth to the largest one-price custom-tailoring house in the Empire proves once again that concentrating on one job and doing it well, brings results—to us in volume, and to you in clothes value.

Come in now—judge for yourself. We know you will like this friendly price when you get acquainted with Tip Top Tailors.

World Government that rules by the terrible power of the purse which is held by Jewish bankers." The rhetorical questions, "Who is Sir John Simon? Who is Mr. Paul-Boncour? Are they Gentiles?" were asked.

"Mrs. Dunkelman, head of the Zionists, emphatically declares that Sir John is not Jewish." Magistrate Jones, questioned as to the disinterestedness of these statements, declared:

"I have every confidence in the integrity of statesmen such Mr. Paul-Boncour and Sir John Simon that they will not be designedly misled the public."

At Police Headquarters, The Varsity learned that a copy of the pamphlet had been submitted to the Crown Attorney, but what charges would be laid against the distributors if apprehended The Varsity could not learn. The whole project may be dropped after the completion of the investigation into the source. The belief held by the police is that the pamphlets emanate from local, and not foreign sources, as was implied in Thursday morning's papers.

No information has been laid before the police as to the rumour that handbills advocating a Fascist dictatorship have been in circulation within the university.

with the infinite. It tends to ignore and destroy form.

Professor Will questioned the veracity of Chateaubriand's description of nature. To produce colour Chateaubriand composed the picture. The theory was art for art's sake, not to reveal the poetic in nature but to create poetic nature, not to perceive the infinite in nature but to put infinity in poetry.

Melancholy is at the background of poetic feeling and the quotations from various writers brought out this subjective melancholy of the nineteenth century.

VARSITY MEETS MCGILL FOR FIRST RUGGER GAME

The intercollegiate British Rugby schedule will be ushered in on Saturday at 12.45, when the Varsity first team meets McGill at Varsity stadium as a curtain raiser to the Varsity-Queen's football game.

The Blue team is much improved over that of last year, as evidenced by their wonderful showing on Saturday in being able to hold the strong Toronto Club team, generally admitted to be the best in Ontario, to five points, and holding them scoreless in the last half. Crauford, at full back for the Blues, played a big part in the team's defensive, and the work of the scrum was especially gratifying to Coach J. Bowles.

Advance notices from McGill are to the effect that they expect to stretch their string of seven consecutive championships as the work displayed by the team, augurs well for a good season.

Individual matches are played together. Play started yesterday morning and will continue until Saturday, when either two or four ball foursomes will conclude the tournament.

Captain Rod Phelan expressed himself as being more than satisfied with the form displayed by the team to date and thinks the Blue supporters have every reason to be optimistic. The Rutland cup has been held by Varsity for the past two years and the team are unanimous in their belief that the much sought after trophy will again be found in its usual resting place in Hart House.

CAMBRIDGE SOCIETY HAS ACCOMPLISHED MUCH ANTI-WAR WORK

Strong Anti-War Movement Could be Started Here, Says Miss Lunn

MUST FIGHT C.O.T.C.

Also Militarization of the Universities and Empire Day Demonstrations

"The programme of the Student League is practically the same as that of the Cambridge Society, the latter aiming to solve the problems caused by capitalism which confront the student, and to gain complete personal freedom, to strenuously combat the present militarization of students, and to join hands with the workers against an Imperialist war. It leads the fight against authority," said Miss Sally Lunn at a meeting of the Student League last Friday.

"The socialist movement in English universities," continued Miss Lunn, "is dependent upon the depression. Even after the failure of the first Labour government in 1924, revolutionary utterances were still greeted with scepticism, but in 1929 Marxism again arose in the English universities. The Labour Club at Cambridge liquidated into a socialist one, and although a Labour Society still functions at Oxford, the October Club, a socialist body, is infinitely stronger."

"No scabbing" is a plank of the English League's constitution, but, Miss Lunn cried, "To their everlasting shame, it was the students who broke up the general strike of 1926. Practically all the 'puff-puffs' were driven by students without opposition from the socialist students."

The progressive student movement in England has made itself felt, and the usual criticism of "words, not

QUEEN'S WOMEN KEEP TENNIS TITLE

Doreen Kenny Again Singles Champion—Two Queen's Women in Finals

BLUES TRAIL BY 14 POINTS

The intercollegiate tennis tournament held at Kingston this year, resulted in Queen's retaining the title for a second year. The Toronto team fought hard and played well but they were not quite strong enough to down their experienced rivals from Kingston. Doreen Kenny, last year's intercollegiate champion, succeeded in defending her title. She was the big factor in the Queen's success, combining with Ruth Fishleigh to win the doubles final from Pat Callen and Kay Symons. McMaster University submitted a team for the first time.

The final standing in points was: Queen's 13, Varsity 9, McMaster 3, Western 1. Below is a summary of the draws:

Singles—1st round—Doreen Kenny (Q) defeated Kay Stuart (McM) 6-0, 6-1; Pat Callen (V) def. Doris Bodies (McM) 6-1, 6-1; Edith Chodot (Q) def. Mary Kirkpatrick (W) 6-1, 6-3; Jean Davey (V) def. Marguerite Viens (McM) 3-6, 6-3, 7-5; Agnes Gardner (V) def. Greta Abrey (W) 6-0, 6-0; Helen McMillan (McM) def. Julia McManus (W) 6-2, 7-5; Ruth Fishleigh (Q) def. Kay Symons (V) 6-1, 6-4; Helen Cottey (Q) def. Eloise Tennant (W) 8-6, 6-3.

MCGILL CAPTURES TRACK TITLE FOR FOURTH CONSECUTIVE TIME

Redmen Score Total of 73 Points—Varsity Second with 38

THREE RECORDS BROKEN

Phil Edwards Loses 440 Run; Passmore Takes Both Hurdles Events

By J. A. Rennells
Richardson Stadium, Kingston, Oct. 20.—Piling up a margin of 35 points over the University of Toronto, their nearest rivals, the Red and White field and cinder stars from McGill once more walked away with the intercollegiate track title here to-day, for the fourth consecutive time, in a display of strength and speed that their competitors could not hope to counteract. Led by the efforts of Meiklejohn and Edwards, the Redmen annexed a total of 73 points; Varsity came next with 38; Queen's third with 24.

Three more intercollegiate records went tumbling from the heights, as perfect weather conditions and a fairly fast track enabled the athletes to sport to advantage before the good-sized crowd. Two more records were equalled. Meiklejohn of McGill was responsible for two new marks in the discus throw and the shot put, whirling the discus 122 feet and 3-10 inches to exceed the record set by West.

MEN'S TENNIS TITLE RETAINED BY MCGILL

Tournament Unfinished but Redmen Have Clinched Championship

MARIER, WATT IN FINALS

Kingston, Oct. 22.—McGill University have retained the men's intercollegiate tennis championship by virtue of Laird Watt's (McG) win over Edwin Connolly (Queen's) after four gruelling sets, and the McGill doubles team of Murray and Farmer defeated Nadou and Marier of the University of Montreal to advance to the finals.

At a late hour to-day the tournament still remained unfinished due to the interference of rain, but no matter what the outcome of the final games, McGill are winners by total points amassed. With one point given for an ordinary win and two for a final win, the standing at present is: McGill 10; Queen's 6; U. of T. 4; U. of M. 4; R. M. C. 1. Marier (U. of M.) advanced to the finals by defeating Bill Pigott, U. of T.'s ranking one player, and Murray of McGill, and will meet Laird Watt of McGill, present intercollegiate title holder when weather permits. Watt advanced to the finals by defeating Ed Connolly, Queen's left-handed champion, who was favoured to take the match after winning the first set 6-2.

The McGill doubles teams of Murray and Farmer and Watt and Robertson will clash for the doubles title in an all-McGill final. Murray and Farmer defeated Hermant and Thomson of U. of T. in the opening round of the doubles while Pigott and Crowson also fell before Watt and Robertson (McGill).

In the singles tournament Bill Pigott was the last remaining hope for U. of T. but was defeated by Marier of U. of M. in three splendid sets. Sid Hermant defeated Gagnon (R.M.C.) in the second round but Murray (McGill) eliminated him in straight sets. Crowson (T.) also advanced to the third round.

No Award This Year Of Wilder Fellowship

At a meeting of the Senate of the University held on October 13th, the Senate directed that no award of the William E. Wilder Fellowship be made for the session 1934-1935.

HART HOUSE DEBATE TOPIC OPPORTUNE

Dictatorship Question Before House—Debate Under New Rules

EISENDRATH TO ATTEND

Coming at a most opportune time, the Hart House debate, to be held next Wednesday evening, should prove of vital importance to the student body. The subject of the debate, "It is the opinion of this House that the recovery of Europe is only possible under National Dictatorship" would in itself create sufficient interest, but when the present crisis in Europe is considered, with international relationships almost to the breaking point, the timeliness of the debate becomes more apparent.

The discussion, in itself, will centre around the dictatorships and the resultant conditions in Germany, Russia, Italy and Austria, along with reference to the possibility of similar rule being set up in other countries.

The debate will be carried on in the open parliamentary style, under the new constitution drawn up by the De-

NEWMAN HALL DEBATORS DISCUSS OSGOOD HALL

Government Carries Motion that Entrance Requirements Are Too Low

A problem of current importance at Osgoode Hall was subject to debate last evening at Newman Hall, when the Government carried the motion "Resolved that in the opinion of this house the entrance requirements to Osgoode Hall should be raised." The Government was represented by three members of the Newman Law Club, Messrs. Leo Lavey, Joseph Doyle and Peter MacDonald, and the members for the opposition, students in the Osgoode Law Club, were Messrs. W. C. Grant, R. E. Agnew and L. H. Leslie.

The timely remarks of the Speaker, Mr. Edwin Rush, who also acted in the capacity of advisor on parliamentary procedure and the dignity of the Barrister and Solicitor, provided some amusement for the house as well as supplying the students with valuable information. Several members of the house voiced their opinions on the matter and, with a slight interruption by one "Miss MacPhail" and votes of thanks, the meeting was adjourned.

Valuable Collection Of Chinese Writings Acquired by Museum

Forty-one thousand volumes of Chinese writings! This has been one of the latest acquisitions of the Royal Ontario Museum. The Varsity was informed in an interview with one of Dr. Currelly's assistants.

The collection consists chiefly of royal edicts, proclamations, and official papers of the Imperial dynasty from about 1300 A.D.

Bishop White, a prominent missionary, has been largely instrumental in procuring the volumes, and is at present supervising the prodigious task of cataloguing and indexing them. This work has already been in progress for three months, but it is expected that another year will elapse before the Museum will have installed its Chinese library in the special section designed for it. Toronto will then be the fortunate possessor of the largest collection of Chinese writings on this continent, The Varsity learned.

Obtain Special Rates For Symphony Concert

Arrangements have been made whereby men students may obtain special Students' Tickets for the Symphony concert on Tuesday night. These tickets, provided through the courtesy of the Symphony management, may be obtained from Mr. Randolph Crowe, near the Porter's desk, Hart House, between 12 o'clock and 2 today.

The number of these tickets available is necessarily limited. But whether or not the provisions will continue, will depend upon the response on this first occasion. Students will be interested to know that anyone possessing a ticket may obtain admission to the final rehearsal of the concert, as well as to the concert itself. Further information on this point may be had from Mr. Crowe, or from the Massey Hall office.

Freshmen Thoroughly Initiated Contrary to Reports of Downtown Press

SOPHS DIDN'T LOSE PANTS

"One of Best Initiations in Years," Says Coach Martin

Sophomores of the School of Practical Science Saturday morning were with difficulty restrained from parading to the offices of one of the morning papers which published an account which was allegedly erroneous of their welcome of the freshman year at Hart House Friday evening. Large groups read the offending article, and it was with difficulty that the year executive prevented the maddened Schoolmen from attempting to wreck the paper and causing considerable damage in the downtown district.

According to the account of the Mail and Empire the "freshman worm turned", and put the sophomores through the initiation that had been prepared for themselves, in the process of removing the nether garments from 180 of their victims. While enraged sophomores vowed threats of retribution, the freshmen considered the matter to be a tremendous joke, and a slight repayment for their sensitive and somewhat tomato and shoe polish stained skins.

Prior to the initiation Friday evening, the freshmen laid careful plans to assemble in Queen's Park and storm their tormentors in a body. Unfor-

Tricolour Upset Football Dope Handing Varsity 8-2 Defeat

Queen's Demonstrate Superiority in Every Department—Varsity Apparently off Colour and Bad Weather Didn't Help Them Any

INTERCEPTED PASSES GIVE QUEEN'S BIG GAINS

Only Score by U. of T. is Safety Touch Following Fumble by Wing of Queen's—Tricolour Score Placement and Four Singles

By John T. Stubbs

Upsetting all the pre-arranged dope on the intercollegiate series, Queen's handed the U. of T. football favourites an 8-2 defeat before a small crowd at the Varsity Stadium Saturday afternoon. The Tricolour squad deserved all the credit for their win, outplaying the Blue team at every department of the game. The local outfit looked sadly off colour in the face of their first two performances of the series and just didn't seem able to click after the first quarter and a good start with a safety touch.

LAST PERIOD RALLY GIVES SECONDS WIN

Blues Score Fifteen Points in Last Quarter to Beat Cadets

FINAL SCORE 22-13

Richardson Stadium, Kingston, Oct. 21.—In a last quarter rally that netted fifteen points and brought them their third consecutive win in three starts, the Varsity intermediates ripped apart the faltering R. M. C. outfit here, thus afternoon seemingly at will and after trailing for three periods emerged victorious by a 22-13 score.

Repeating their tactics of last week when they defeated Ottawa College by a last-minute touchdown, the seconds put all they had into a final endeavour, and going into the fourth period six points behind the cadets with the score 13-7, they reversed the situation.

VARSITY, MCGILL IN SCORELESS TIE

Neither Team Able to Score in Opening Intercollegiate Game

Varsity and McGill battled to a 0-0 draw in the opening game of the intercollegiate rugby series played at Varsity stadium Saturday afternoon. The early arrivals to the Queen's-Varsity struggle were treated to a game of fast exciting rugby in which the whistle tooter has the least to do of anyone on the field.

Varsity sent out the strongest team they have had in some years. Their weakness if there was any seemed to be in the backfield, a department in which McGill was particularly strong. The Red and White squad were not quite so husky but when it came to the extension runs they clicked for long gains, relieving the pressure more than once.

McGill kicked off in the first half but Varsity carried the play back into their territory where it remained throughout the entire half. The Blue team carried the ball within five yards of a try but each time the Montreal

The weather being disagreeable from a Varsity viewpoint didn't serve to help much either, preventing the utilization of a powerful but forcibly dominant forward passing attack. The several passes that the Tricolour intercepted gave them more gains than any other method employed with some of them lucky but others sensational. A wet ball didn't agree with Jack Sinclair's toe, whilst the booting of Wing, the Queen's half, protected by a much heavier and a more effective line, was a valuable instrument in the securing of their eight points.

Jack Dawson at flying wing for Varsity and Captain Ken Peacock turned in sensational performances on the defensive, tackling and blocking with determined fierceness. McQuigge counted several gains of sizeable value. Krug and Wing on the Tricolour half line were standouts as were Hamlin, Zvonki and Kostuik.

Toronto opened the game with a determined offensive which finally put them in scoring position for Sinclair's kick to Wing who dropped it when tackled by Dawson coming in fast. The ball rolled over the line where it was recovered by Wing who was nailed before he could get out, giving Varsity two points on a safety touch. Coulter turned in two beautiful efforts, running back kicks, and then tossed a completed pass to Copp for six yards. A number of penalties kept the ball moving back and forth until the first quarter was ended. No wind made the advantages even for the kickers throughout the game. In the second Krug's run of 20 yards changed the Queen's outlook and put them on Varsity's 40 yard line and in position for Wing's kick to Coulter for a hard earned rouge with the Varsity quarter fighting hard to get out. Dawson's sensational tackling held the Queen's halves from coming back far with the ball on Sinclair's kicks.

Coulter's catch on the run and a beautiful broken field display followed by a pass to Arnpup, who ran it to Queen's 15 yard line put Varsity in their best position of the game but Sinclair's kick was called back for a Queen's penalty as the halftime whistle blew.

Don McQuigge received the kick-off and ran it 25 yards to the Queen's 40 yard line, which was a big surprise for McQuigge and everyone else. A bad snap to Sinclair in kick formation proved the turning point of the game, after which the Blues never threatened. Queen's were recipients of more breaks than Varsity and they took full advantage of the ones they got, while Varsity failed to capitalize on theirs. Shortly after, the old Tricolour pointer, a placement, put them two up on a 4-2 score. The last quarter added four singles to the Queen's score, with Varsity apparently unable to come out of the slump and turn on an offensive. Dawson was sadly missed when he had to retire for a while with an injured neck but came back later to put up

ARE WE LAGGING BEHIND THE CONTINENT?

Soren Kierkegaard was a Danish litterateur, aesthetic critic, psychologist, moralist, theologian and anticlerical who flourished about the middle of the last century. During his life-time his writings exercised little influence and his name was scarcely known beyond the borders of his own country. It was not until the beginning of the 20th century that his books, one by one, were translated into German. To-day his influence upon European thought is profound, having largely taken the place held by Nietzsche before the war. Ibsen's Brand was undoubtedly written under the influence of Kierkegaard's thought; Unamuno, the Spanish thinker and writer, learned Danish in order to read the master's works in the original; and Heidegger, one of the foremost philosophers in Germany to-day, acknowledges his debt to Denmark's most original mind.

Perhaps Kierkegaard's most notable contribution has been to focus men's thought upon the problem of time. His assertion that time is finite, while by no means novel, has radically challenged the generally accepted tenets of historical, philosophical and theological dogma. His thesis that there is "an infinite qualitative difference between time and eternity" and that an eternity which is thought of as endless time would be a "spurious eternity" has been tremendously provocative, and has created an unprecedented stir in almost every sphere of intellectual activity. Henri Bergson's philosophical excursions in this direction, and Einstein's Theory of Relativity have added momentum to contemporary interest in the problem of time.

Our purpose, however, is not to draw attention to the intellectual ferment in Europe but to deprecate the intellectual stagnation on our own continent. While Germany has discarded an outworn idealism, shelved a superficially optimistic evolutionism and has once more come to grips with reality, we are still in the throes, and are likely to be for many years, of an impossible view of life. Germany continues, scholastically speaking, to be the thinker and teacher of mankind. Unfortunately we are unwilling pupils and far behind.

The existence of this deplorable state of affairs may be attributed to the absurd insularity of our English-speaking universities, and more particularly to those of our own continent. Our universities ought to be places where the student may become familiar with the thought which is germinating in the universities of the other great nations of the world. This is decidedly not the case. Not one word of Kierkegaard's has been translated into the English language! We mention his name because he is a dominant force on the continent while practically unknown to the Anglo-Saxon world.

Have our great minds, our leaders in political, social, economic and religious thought become satisfied with a philosophy of life which emanated from Germany in the first place but which she herself has long ago laughed out of court? Or does the fault lie with the Modern language departments of our universities? Do they exist for the sole purpose of providing a "living" for professors who are preparing others to teach in our High Schools? Could not our linguistic graduates—B.A.'s and M.A.'s—and lecturers and professors justify their existence and the state's expenditure upon their four or more years' stay at a university by keeping our people abreast of the intellectual movements in other countries? Might there not be a greater measure of co-operation on the part of the Modern language departments with the other branches of learning? Or are we to assume that "we are doing very well" and that truth, as the Victorians conceived it, shall make us free?

The scene of the argumentative display is the Debates Room at Hart House on Wednesday, October 25th. Members are requested to be in their seats at 8 p.m. sharp, at which time the speaker enters.

The participants, as follows, are well known and should comprise a good drawing-card:

Speaker of the House — S. M. Hermant, III U.C.
Clerk of the House — R. A. Bell, IV U.C.

For the Affirmative — J. M. Patrick, IV U.C.; A. R. Tilley, III Trinity.
For the Negative — J. S. Woods, III Trinity; J. E. Craig, Osgoode Hall.
Among the distinguished guests who are to be present are Rabbi Maurice Eisendrath, who spent last summer in Europe and consequently has first-hand knowledge of the situation, and J. Earl Lawson, K.C., M.P., for East York.

Art, Music and Drama

Toronto Symphony

The Toronto-Symphony will open its season next Tuesday, October 24, in Massey Hall. The programme will be as follows:

Prelude to Lohengrin ..... Wagner
Siegfried's Journey to the Rhine ..... Wagner
Prelude to The Mastersingers ..... Wagner
Symphony No. 5 in E Minor ..... Tchaikovsky

Symphony Lectures

A series of lectures by Miss Wilma Stevenson and Mr. Allan Sly, on the music to be played at the Toronto Symphony concerts, has been arranged. The first of these, by Miss Stevenson, will be given to-night at 5.15 in Hart House Theatre. This lecture will be free, and all men and women students who are interested are invited to attend. In the future, a nominal charge of ten cents for each lecture will be made. Further announcements will be made to those who are present at the theatre this afternoon.

M.C. Musicale

Reginald Stewart was guest artist in a recital of piano music given by the Women's Undergraduate Association of University College yesterday afternoon.

His first group consisted of selections from Lully, Scarlatti, Rameau, Mozart and Schumann. The second contained pieces by Debussy, Ravel, Scriabin, and Chabrier, while the last was all by Bach.

This musicale was the first of the series held by the Women's Undergraduate Association every year.

Melville Keay

On Saturday evening Melville Keay presented his annual revue, this year under the title of October Gales. There was a large audience and a few laughable and enjoyable skits and a few that won't bear much mention. Last year Mr. Keay called his revue Bits From Hits and with the same idea in mind he featured some episodes from recent London revues, which were faintly amusing. There were a few original skits of which the best was one by A. J. Rostance, which was acted by Frances Rostance.

Even pretty costumes could not make anything enjoyable of the singing of songs like Less than the Dust or The Moon and I. The Pieces de resistance were Schnitzler's play Literature, with Jane Mallet, Andrew Allen and Murray Bonnycastle in the east and Randolph Crowe's impersonation of Mae West. The play, which was done here last year at the Players' Guild, was very well acted and well staged and provided something of artistic importance around which to build the whole revue. The Mae West skit was equally important, as it provided the only real rollicking humour of the evening. The performance, all in all, was enjoyable and the performers were obviously having a good time—which constitutes fifty per cent of success.

DEFENDING STUDENTS

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

I was rather surprised and disgusted to say the least at the idea of a newspaper editor—a supposedly responsible person—going to far as to place (by implication at least) the university—the pride of the north—in the same category as Kingston penitentiary, and even to insinuate that a university investigation is more urgently needed than a Kingston penitentiary investigation.

Well! such a charge just simply seems too foolish and puerile to command serious consideration.

And so far as criticism of constituted authority by university students is concerned, please allow me to suggest that speaking generally university students—making allowance for an irresponsible few—are sufficiently appreciative to give all due honour and respect to all public officials who by their integrity prove themselves worthy of the confidence of the public.

Furthermore while we do not believe in too great a degree of radicalism, the tendency shown by modern students to question existing institutions, to be restless in their discontent with the present very unsatisfactory condition of the world, and optimistically ambitious for sane, determined and effective improvement—as measured in terms of human happiness—is surely one of the most hopeful signs of progress in a seemingly somewhat hopeless time in the history of the world now threatened with suicidal retrogression; and for this spirit of faith in her future and ambition for the advancement of mankind we should surely be most thankful to our Pilot.

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents seuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

While the Tricolour were completely upsetting the football dope right here in our own backyard the women's tennis team were encountering their Waterloo in Kingston. With the same team as last year, they invaded the Queen's stronghold but were unable to pull a lead out of the intercollegiate battle. With Doreen Kenny and Ruth Fishleigh back on the lineup, Queen's withstood all comers and when the final roll was called, answered to the score of thirteen with Varsity trailing with a nine. Somehow or other they were just too good for us—even though the Varsity co-eds put everything they had behind every ball.

An interesting feature is the fact that McMaster University, Hamilton, entered a team for the first time. There is every indication that they will provide some real competition next year, as they were successful in nosing out Western from third place with three points to their credit while Western only had one.

The Varsity team returned home Saturday night with charley horses and aching backs as a result of the cement courts and cold weather. One more year must roll around before we get another chance to make a bid for the title but nevertheless we offer a "better luck next time".

Vancouver, B.C.—First Canadian ship to win the coveted prize, the Canadian Pacific Inter-Emperors of Asia, Captain A. V. R. Lovegrove, D.S.O., has just won the Trevesa Trophy, for which lifeboat crews of ships of all flags race over a four and a half mile course each year at Hong Kong, according to a cable received to-day by Capt. E. Aikman, general superintendent of the Canadian Pacific steamships.

The annual lifeboat classic at Hong Kong commemorates the remarkable daring and seamanship of two lifeboat crews from the British ship Trevesa which sank off the Australian coast 28 years ago. Putting the crew to sea in two boats, one skippered by the captain and the other by the mate, the Trevesa's crew rowed and sailed some 2300 miles to Mauritius Island. Though they soon lost sight of each other after leaving their sinking ship, both boats turned up intact at Mauritius and one of the most outstanding achievements of seamanship was written into the history of the British Mercantile Marine.

Lifeboats crews from Dutch traders who get much experience in open boats by putting constantly into ports in the Far East where there is no depth for big ships, usually have succeeded in winning the Trevesa Cup in the Hong Kong classic, but this year a well-drilled crew from the Empress of Asia provided the upset.

Only regular crews from merchant ships are permitted to take part in the race, rowing and sailing over the four and a half mile course, Capt. Aikman explained. Ships are not allowed to present a "hand picked" boat crew selected from the entire ship's company.

Montreal, Que.—Brig-Gen. Sir Norman Orr-Ewing, D.S.O., distinguished soldier who commanded in the Scots Guards and Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders during the European War, does not believe the present situation in Europe will lead to actual warfare. Interviewed this morning on board the Canadian Pacific liner Duchess of York, in which he sailed after a visit to Canada to see his son at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, Sir Norman expressed the opinion that the world is not yet "ready" for another war such as the last one. "France and Germany will eventually fight out their differences," he said, "but their present situation is grave, I do not think it will lead to immediate warfare. The other nations are pulling too strongly for peace, and then neither country can afford a costly struggle."

BLUES AND REDMEN TIE SOCCER GAME

Opening Intercollegiate Game Results in Deadlock at One-All

GOALKEEPERS SHINE

The intercollegiate soccer season got away to an exciting start on Saturday morning when Varsity and McGill played to a 1-1 deadlock on the front campus.

McGill began pressing right from the whistle, and were rewarded after ten minutes of the first half, when Jones netted the ball after a beautiful exhibition of combination by the McGill forwards. That was the only score in the first half, with both teams having excellent scoring opportunities, but unable to beat the goalkeepers, Ross and Davey, who played outstanding games throughout. Varsity came back strong in the second half and after thirteen minutes of play, Aldridge passed to Davidson in front of the goal mouth, and Davey made no mistake. Varsity were lucky to record a score, when Cooper's shot hit the goal post, Davey, the Varsity goalkeeper being beaten on the shot. The game ended with Varsity pressing hard on the McGill goal.

Harkness and Reece for McGill, and Bowen and Jack for Varsity were outstanding.

CADETS TROUNCED BY BLUE JUNIORS

Varsity Forward Passes Click and R.M.C. Goes Down Under 37-0 Count

SCORE FIVE TOUCHDOWNS

Richardson Stadium, Kingston, Oct. 21.—Lining up against R.M.C. juniors here this afternoon in their third game of the season, Varsity juniors handed out a severe 37-0 defeat to a pitifully weak cadet team and smashed their way through a woeful defence system for five major scores. This win gives the juniors the leadership of their group.

Cam Gray was easily the best man on the field and accounted for 21 of Varsity's points. Thomas, Tafts and Woods were also outstanding for the Blue team which unleashed a system of forward passes that has not been equalled this year in any U. of T. intercollegiate game. Eight times the ball took a toss for long gains and every time the pass was handled to completion. Thomas and Sweeney consistently smashed the college line, while Gray's long hists kept the scene of action continually in the R. M. C. domains. End runs netted the Blues yards time after time with Tafts on the end of nearly all of them, while Miller's passes were garnered in by Woods and Gray.

At the half way mark the U. of T. juniors were leading 12-0 due to three singles, a placement, and a converted touch. Gray was responsible for 11 points in this division. Chubb and Wilson on the R.M.C. back line were not given a showing as the line permitted a horde of Blue tacklers to smother them time and again.

The last quarter was a succession of scores as the Blues more than doubled all they had earned up to that time. R.M.C. were faltering badly in both offensive and defensive departments.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By John T. Stubbs

No alibis. Queen's won 8-2 and they did it on their merits. They did get the majority of the breaks but even at that they made good on them where Varsity didn't. They had a heavier line and their kicker had protection. The U. of T. twelve were not playing the football they are capable of playing usually. Last year Western met them on their off day. This time it was the Tricolour. Probably next year it will be McGill. Who knows? And who cares? Last year the fans and the critics thought Varsity was through after that defeat at the hands of the Mustangs, but the Blue and White supporters were justified by the end of the season. They will be again this year. It is always good to have the off-game behind rather than in front. Saturday's defeat was fortunate in a good many respects. Now there will be no over-confidence. There was before to some extent although it was hard to see. The weather was an advantage for the visitors, not Varsity. Queen's played a bit over their heads as they often do in Toronto. Next Saturday will be a different tale that we bring home from Kingston.

Now the intercollegiate series will hold interest since Queen's won here to tie Varsity for first place with two wins and a loss apiece. McGill's last quarter touch and win over Western ties them for second place with a win and two losses apiece. Next Saturday's game will in all likelihood decide whether Queen's or Varsity will win the intercollegiate as both teams will win their remaining two games after that.

The intermediates and juniors brought home a couple of handy wins over R.M.C. as a result of their two games in Kingston. Both teams went wild in the last quarters, scoring 15 and 19 points respectively. That keeps their records clean without a loss so far.

McGill romped off with the intercollegiate track title again this year as a result of Friday's meet in Kingston. Queen's, under the coaching of Walter Knox, made a very impressive showing in several events. Passmore, for Varsity, won two events in the hurdles competition. McGill copped the tennis title also for their second title of the current season. In the soccer and rugger games played here Saturday Varsity and McGill ended up in a draw in both contests. The soccer game finished with both teams having scored one goal and unable to break the tie. A very remarkable result was that of the British Rugby game. For the first time in seven years Varsity held McGill to a draw. Usually the supply of players at McGill was so large and of so much ability that Varsity could not overcome them. Since Jimmy Boles took over the coaching duties here, he has worked wonders with the Blues and yesterday his toil was rewarded by their showing against the Redmen. The whole game went scoreless, but Varsity are credited with coming closest to breaking into the score sheet at that. They will play Queen's on November 4th.

Our attention was drawn a few days ago to the rumour afloat among the students that there would be no entry from Varsity this year in the Senior O.H.A. group and that the senior hockey team would be confining its activities to the intercollegiate home and home games with McGill plus exhibition games. The rumour has no doubt caused a lot of students to refrain from buying season ticket books, so we thought it expedient to clear this matter now. There will be a team in the Senior O.H.A. group. Just ask Coach Frank Sullivan. His men will be donning the blades very soon now and then taking things seriously as soon as the football schedules are finished for the year.

LAST PERIOD RALLY GIVES SECONDS WIN

ation with a fine display of plunging and passing that left their opponents bewildered and unorganized. Up until this time the Blues had been unable to get under way in spite of the fact that play had centred in R. M. C. territory almost entirely. Numerous fumbles and frequent spasms of very poor football were evident on both sides at all times.

Some fine individual playing featured the second half. Jackson and Edwards stood out well. Boomer and Newton, plunging in alternate order, moved the yardsticks numerous times, and were largely responsible for Varsity's scoring positions. Isbister, in the last quarter, went on a wild rampage and tore through the Red and White line time after time for long gains. He was responsible for 14 of U. of T.'s points and his long hists outdistanced both MacBrien and Savage. He plunged for Varsity's first touch in the third period.

Seven substitutes came on for the Blues as the last division opened. Then for the first time, after eight unsuccessful tries, an Isbister to Stewart forward was completed for 30 yards, followed by another with Isbister on the receiving end and he ran the remaining 35 yards for his second converted touch. Jackson and Peck were carried off the field to add to a long list of injuries. Another major was counted when McKee snared an R.M.C. pass at their 25 yard line and placed the ball behind the posts. Stewart's placement succeeded. An attempted placement failed but gave U. of T. another point and three more singles brought their total up to fifteen points in this quarter, giving them the game and the leadership of their league. Varsity — Flying wing, McNichol; halves, Isbister, Jackson, Stewart; quarter, McKee; snap, Doyle; insides, Gibson, Witzel; middles, Newton, Gregory; outsides, Edwards, Williams; subs, Bodrug, Corrigan, Holden, Wilis, Hornfeld, Perry, Boomer, Rud-duck.

R. M. C. — Flying wing, MacBrien; halves, Philip, Birks, Winslow; quarter, T. E. Sisson; snap, Powell; insides, Barnett, Fysher; middles, H. W. Sisson. Ready outsides, Jacobson, Peck; subs, Savage, Chase-Cagrain, Lagindiere, Oiler, Reynolds, Baskerville, Hyde, Wetherpoon.

Officials — Campbell, Hughes.

team tightened up and carried the play out of danger.

In the second half the Red team took the offensive and drove Varsity back. However, they never had the scoring chances the Blue team had in the first. About midway through the final frame a McGill rush took the play to Varsity's five yard line but Losier dribbled the ball back to mid-field again. Another scoring threat was broken up in the same quarter when Hilliard ran the ball from 15 yards out to the McGill 10 yard line. However, the play was again back in Blue territory when the whistle went to end the play.

For Varsity, Hilliard, Crawford and McLeod played a fine game while Todd and Butterfield starred for the McGill team.

heuser of Toronto last year, by some 3 feet, and putting the shot 39 feet, 2 3-8 inches from the base to break the old record by about an inch. The third precedent was set by Abe Zvonkin, Queen's husky football middle, when he shot the javelin 162 feet and 10 1-2 inches, 3 feet over the old mark.

The most spectacular feature of the afternoon was the 400 yard run and the way Bill Fritz of Queen's won the event. He ran away from Phil Edwards, McGill's Olympic flash and snapped the yarn ten feet in advance, touring the course in the excellent time of 50 4-5 seconds. Fritz, who was formerly of Walkerville, along with Zvonkin, were Queen's noteworthy stars. He also equalled the intercollegiate record in the 220 yard dash when he led Goodfellow of McGill and Eddie Dore of Toronto across the line exactly 22 1-5 seconds after the starting shot. Dore was ceded second place in the 100 yard sprint after much discussion on the part of the four judges as to who had won. It was a blanket race with the six finalists breasting the tape almost in a straight line. Spectators and sprinters alike were uncertain of the outcome until Goodfellow of McGill was finally placed first. Dore, Passmore and Hickey were Varsity's best point-winners. Passmore turned in Varsity's finest individual showing by winning both the 120 yard high and the 220 yard low hurdles, the first in the rare time of 15 4-5 seconds, to equal the standing record. Hickey also placed in both events.

Before the Ball

A picture of a woman student applying the no-glare transparent test to a pair of SO-SHEER stockings before wearing them to the Charity Ball Friday night. She was so satisfied that she also wore SO-SHEER to the Delta Delta Dance Saturday night (lucky lady). SO-SHEER, the sheerest of dull hose cost only $1.00.

No. 5000 is her choice for less formal occasions. She has learned why No. 3000 is Canada's foremost Chiffon Stocking, and the price is an added $1.00 incentive. Just $1.00.

For day wear, whether at lectures, on the campus or at the game, her legs are smoothly sheathed in first quality chiffon or service weight hose. She knows they wear unusually well and appear smart at all times. A very economical hose at 69c.

SOPHS DENY REPORT

tunately the sophomores arrived on the scene of action first, and removing the brilliant green ties of the new men, applied a marker of shoe polish, and allowed them to enter Hart House singly. In the locker room some 200 subdued freshmen substituted old "duds" for their clothing and prepared to meet their fate. One unfortunate sophomore who entered to see a friend was set upon by some thirty or forty freshmen who succeeded in removing his trousers before he was rescued by a half dozen of his own year.

With preparations completed the freshmen were blindfolded and taken through the doorway that leads, via two flights of stairs, to the upper gym. While negotiating the stairs on their hands and knees backwards, the freshmen were treated to liberal applications of water, tomatoes, shoe polish, floor-wax, ammonia and mercurchrome, and reasoned with by varying lengths of rubber hose and a high tension shocking machine.

At the entrance to the gymnasium the newcomers entered a thirty foot sack tunnel where the hose and similar instruments were again applied. Following this, those unfortunates who possessed a moustache were relieved of one half of it by a pair of clippers, and after being rolled about in a gym mat, were blanket tossed amid loud cheers. An inner tube attached to two ropes was used to convey them rapidly along the length of the gym, where they came into violent contact with a large roll of matting. Following a mopping of their backs with perhaps the filthiest mop ever displayed in Hart House the freshmen were made to "Walk the Plank" for a fall of some six inches into the arms of the sophomores who removed their blindfolds and led them to the lower gym, where sing songs and entertainment were provided. Fortunately, flashlight photos of every section of the initiation were taken, and the sophomores are shortly to be in possession of indisputable proof as to the result of the evening.

Freshmen, when questioned, jokingly admitted that the report of the evening's proceedings were grossly exaggerated, but sophomores, with their reputations at stake, were vehement in their denunciations.

"That report is a deliberate attempt of someone to ridicule the well laid plans of the sophomores," said R. B. McIntyre, president of the second year. "The freshmen were properly initiated in spite of their plans to the contrary, and we have pictures to prove it. The report of the Mail and Empire is entirely false."

F. A. Fleming, also of the second year was loud in his protests of the article. "That was one of the best initiations in years," he stated. "If 180 sophomores lost their pants, it must have been freshmen pants they had captured during the evening. Even the frosh admit it was a real old fashioned rip snorting initiation."

"Outrageous," was W. R. Stickney's comments on the article. "The freshmen got what was coming to them and then some. I suggest we get the editor of the Mail and Empire, and put him through the same process just

POLITICAL SCIENCE CLUB HEARS TALK ON EUROPE

"The present situation in Europe," said Professor Mackenzie, in addressing the Political Science Club at Wymilwood recently, "is a cause of grave concern to all of us, and to all interested in future society. Conditions in Germany and the possible consequences of events there are very serious questions."

Blame is to be laid first on the Treaty of Versailles and secondly on the stupidity of former allied and associated powers in dealing with Germany. "If we had recognized the needs of the Germans, we could have avoided many difficulties which have arisen. At present the Nazis are interested in Austria, with whom there is a possibility of union. If Germany and Austria unite, there will be pressure on the Italian border. The possibility of our being involved if war should break out in Europe depends wholly upon Great Britain. If she should feel it essential to live up to the agreement to which she is promised, we will be implicated."

Professor Mackenzie referred to Norman Angel's opinion that the only hope he saw of keeping law and order in Europe was to prevent Germany from re-arming.

to convince him. There is still some hose left to reason with."

Mr. Martin, instructor in physical training, who was present at the initiation also vigorously denied the reports. "It was one of the best initiations in years," he said. "The sophomores were in complete control during the entire evening, and while they were by no means brutal, they gave the freshmen a warm reception."

"The whole thing was planned beforehand and went off with good feeling and co-operation," said Dean C. H. Mitchell. "I was there with the professors to enjoy the fun, and there was nothing unusual or unexpected about it. The freshmen certainly did not turn the tables on the sophomores."

Following the initiation some four hundred Schoolmen, including both freshmen and sophomores, attempted to parade to the downtown section of deeds" cannot be levelled at it. When the government, led by Sir George May, wished to "pause in its policy of expansion as concerns the education of working class children", it was opposed by the united front of the union students, who thereby prevented the cutting down of free places in secondary schools, and the stoppage of the free milk distribution.

SOCIETY ACCOMPLISHES MUCH ANTI-WAR WORK

"Cambridge, which has many Indian students, found little difficulty in agitating against the severe sentences imposed on twelve men for organizing a working class movement in India," declared Miss Lunn. "One man was deported to Fever Island for life— which means about six months. The student movement succeeded in having some of the sentences modified."

"The anti-war work was seriously begun at the Amsterdam conference in August, 1932, which delegates from many universities attended and soon the famous 'scholarships, not battleships' cry echoed through England. The league has its own investigation bureau, produces its own literature, and is addressed by speakers affiliated with many organizations — reformers, labourites, S.C.M. members, etc. The Cambridge society has staged two demonstrations on the streets, in each of which about 150 students took part, led by the slogan of 'Instruction, not Destruction'. At one demonstration, the participants wore gas masks. John Strachy, Herbert Morrison—a reformist speaker who was too clever for us to refute, and George Lansbury, are among the noted men who addressed the league. Mr. Lansbury is deadly afraid of left wing attacks," said Miss Lunn with a smile, "and he pulled the ancient gag 'I am a poor old man who has been working for the Labour government for thirty years', so that when a perfectly innocent member got up to ask a question, Mr. Lansbury, with tears in his eyes, accused him of being a communist."

Miss Lunn declared that a strong anti-war movement could be started the city, but due to the efforts of the presidents of both years, and the University police, the activities were confined to the campus, where the boys serenaded the co-eds of Whitney Hall and Amesley Hall, removed an Austin to the front steps of Trinity College and placed a Ford coupe under the windows of an evening lecture in University College to the tune of vigorous "Toke Oikes". The removal of sundry "No Parking" signs and a turnstile terminated the evening's proceedings.

Grads-to-be Eat Hearts Out in Anticipation of Dread Event

MUST GRIN SWEETLY

Three guesses—what is the most urgent question of the day? Not the German situation, of course, that is merely important. The thing that keeps the seniors awake nights, makes them hollow cheeked and bleary eyed is the worry over Grad pictures. As one man confided to us yesterday it is a great strain. You may go merrily through three years of college with the conceited opinion that your nose is the right length and your eyes dangerous enough for all practical purposes. But on the fateful morning of your "sitting" you awake with a pimple on the tip of your nose. That starts it. From then on your peace of mind is shattered. A horrible blue tinge creeps over you. Your hair is on end and you realize that your profile is not what it might be.

The foreboding of the morning is very bad but all you who have not yet been through it, take warning, the actual experience is worse. And if you wear something that will not tuck in in front you will have to disrobe.

Then comes the point of make-up. This is where you park your gum, rub off the rouge and don the Sweet Girl Graduate Grin. It is nearly over now. In a minute you are sitting bolt upright under the tropic heat of the lamp registering terror and the camera clicks.

here. "It is important to fight against the C.O.T.C., the militarization of the universities, and the demonstration on Empire Day. We must prevent the use of laboratories for the manufacture of war gases, poisons, and ammunition. This is done at Cambridge behind locked doors, subsidized by the Department of National Defence."

Miss Lunn recalled the terror-stricken attitude of the British press at the time of the now-famous "under no circumstances will I fight for King and Country" debate. Randolph Churchill raided the union, and tore the motion from the book. It was written in again, and again he tore it out. "But," Miss Lunn declared, "you cannot destroy such a motion by tearing it from a book."

By Sally Lunn, B.A. (Cantab.)
Perhaps I suffer from insular prejudice. Probably a woman can't be a reliable judge of either case. Anyhow I like English Rugby better than Canadian.

I always did think it unfair to jail a man for "loitering with intent to commit a felony". I've got the same feeling about tackling a man when he hasn't got the ball. This habit is objectionable for another reason. It makes the field so untidy, by causing it to be littered with odd players all over the place. Please don't conclude that they seem to do it all together in one big pile, or just one solitary man does it out on the wing. Much, much tidier.

My tender heart makes me deplore the necessity for so much protective clothing though I know blood-sports are all the rage. All the same it would save time in Canada if they had attendants ready to carry off the corpses instead of allowing other players to do it.

A lot of good green turf seems to be wasted in Canada. Most of the game seems to be in a narrow strip down the centre of the field. Sometimes "kicking into touch" in England, develops into a kick and catch tournament between the two half-backs, but a good full-back will get the ball over the line every time. This opens up the game much more and gives a chance for much longer runs. Therefore, the English game gives the im-

"It is much more important to grasp the fundamental problems of life than to keep abreast of contemporary developments," stated Mr. Lange of the German Department when interviewed by The Varsity last evening. Captain Slater went on to say that the bandstand must be about forty years old, for he had been passing it on the way to business every morning for thirty-five years.

The pillars are rotting away, making it unfit any longer for use. Mr. Chambers of the parks department informs us that there is no money in the estimates of this year set aside for the purpose of demolishing the stand. Captain Slater believes that if an appropriation were prepared for next year it would be a simple matter to include this small project with the others intended to give work to the unemployed.

Bandstand Is Eyesore Says Captain Slater

"It is a crime to have an eyesore like the old Queen's Park bandstand in such a central place and ruining the appearance of an otherwise beautiful park," stated Captain John Slater, leader of the Fifty-Eighth Highlander Band, when interviewed by The Varsity last evening. Captain Slater went on to say that the bandstand must be about forty years old, for he had been passing it on the way to business every morning for thirty-five years.

The pillars are rotting away, making it unfit any longer for use. Mr. Chambers of the parks department informs us that there is no money in the estimates of this year set aside for the purpose of demolishing the stand. Captain Slater believes that if an appropriation were prepared for next year it would be a simple matter to include this small project with the others intended to give work to the unemployed.

Captain Slater concluded by offering his co-operation and stating that as the students have to pass and see the bandstand more than any other group of people, The Varsity would probably do a great deal to further the project by a discussion in its news columns.

LISMER DISCUSSES PORTRAIT PAINTING REFLECTION OF AGE

Purpose of Ancients to Hand Down Substantial

SEARCH FOR SYMBOL

Significance of the Famous Mona Lisa Smile Still Enigma

"A portrait," said Mr. Arthur Lismer in a lecture upon the art of portrait painting, "must be regarded either as a definite arrangement of line, form and colour, or as a reflection of the age in which the artist lived; its significance must not lie merely in the outward aspect of the sitter." He then went on to show that the development of this form of art throughout the ages has been dependent upon the two-fold charge of aim and medium.

The purpose of the ancients, in creating portraits, was to hand down to posterity some record of persons directly connected with the events of their period. In order to preserve these records, they chose the most substantial means possible for them—hence the almost perfect condition of the Greek statues and has reliefs.

The use of portraiture by the Romans as a form of identification and by the Chinese with a view to the preserving of ancestral worship, led up to the Christian search for a symbol revealing the core to the mystery of their faith, and resulted in the creation of the Madonna. This ideal of a portrait representing some divine creation continued until the day of the revolutionary Giotto, who combined it with the painting of living persons—a characteristic also illustrated by his "Death of St. Francis". The Early Italians, chief of whom was Sandro Botticelli, in turn reversed this conception by using secular persons as models for religious symbols.

TRINITY DEBATE ON STERILIZATION, BIRTH CONTROL

Anderson Says Illiterates
Would Still Raise Large Families

DEFINITION IS DIFFICULTY

Thomas Protests Genius Often Results from So-called Uneugenic Union

"Birth control and sterilization are essential for the future improvement of the race," declared J. R. Anderson, speaking for the government on the motion "That this House would favour the sterilization of the unfit", at the third regular meeting of the Trinity College Literary Society at Trinity House last Friday. Mr. Anderson further pointed out that sterilization would be the more effective since birth control methods would be only conscientiously employed by the better class citizens and not by the illiterate and imbecile classes who would continue to raise large families. "The individualistic concept," continued Mr. Anderson, "was a product of the century and could not be advanced as a plea against some form of state control."

Mr. Thomas, speaking for the opposition, based his argument on the question of what type of man was wanted for the future. Feeble-mindedness, which the eugenicists were chiefly attempting to eliminate, had not yet satisfactorily proved to be a Mendelian recessive. He challenged the right of the scientist to interfere with nature when only certain unimportant physical characteristics could be traced as hereditary, while a genius was often the result of a so-called uneugenic marriage.

Mr. Cromarty, of the Government, wanted a definition to distinguish morons, imbeciles, and idiots. "Sterilization means the ennoblement of life by damming up the foul streams of degeneracy and demoralization which are pouring pollution into the nation's life blood," he concluded.

LIBERAL VICTORIES IN BY-ELECTIONS

Michaud carried a wide majority over the Conservative vote in the New Brunswick riding. The election in Quebec was won by Aime Boucher, and in the constituency of Mackenzie, Sask., McMillan was successful.

Bennett declined to make any statement concerning the results.

By appearances the good old bandstand is antique all right, but we always thought it was kept around because it just missed being picturesque. If it is in keeping with the college atmosphere we don't like the college atmosphere—but we do like it.

We are tremendously relieved now, though, for someone just told us that financial difficulties are the whole cause of the trouble. A mere detail. Ele-

Attention has been drawn to the fact that the University of Montreal may have to close because of difficulty with regard to its finances. The University of Montreal is the seat of French-Canadian thought and literature. It is feared in some quarters that if the university is closed it will mean the beginning of the end of the survival of French Canada as a distinct national entity.

M. de Champ of the French Department of U.C., said: "It would indeed be most unfortunate if the University of Montreal were forced to close. The university has grown immensely since its foundation. It is the only French university in Montreal. Every course is carried on in French and it is quite possible for a person to go through the University of Montreal without knowing a word of English. There is, of course, Laval University, but it is not situated in a very convenient place and it might be awkward for a great many of the students to attend."

"The University of Montreal is developed according to French teaching. The curriculum of the secondary schools in Quebec preparatory to the university is shaped after that of (Continued on Page 4)

Anti-War Feeling

Plans for the organisation of the anti-war movement on the campus are proceeding apace, according to information received by The Varsity last night. A room has been reserved at the Women's Union for Friday evening, to which all students interested in the movement will be invited.

"I can't give you anything authoritative as to the movement's policy," said C. L. Coburn, a member of the organisation committee. "That will all have to be decided Friday night. The sole purpose of this meeting will be to get together those who are interested, and further action will be up to them. We're not so much concerned with making speeches as in finding out practical means of awakening students to the dangers of the present situation and giving them an opportunity to use their influence. The first item put before the meeting will presumably be a resolution requesting permission to form an organisation. That done, we can proceed to formulate a definite policy."

"I want to emphasize the fact that there is room in this movement for everybody. Apart from myself, the (Continued on Page 4)

VICTORIA SENIORS HOLD LAST HIKE

Fair weather, a well planned sports programme, sizzling red-hots and dancing were a few of the features which made the final hike of 374 Victoria a bang-up success, something to be remembered and something to be regretted by those who forgot to come. The graduating year of Victoria proved by the way in which it put over the hike that it is "the best year ever seen in Vic." Professor Robbins, Professor and Mrs. Hawcock, chaperoned the hike. They not only added greatly to the enjoyment of the year members but also appeared to be enjoying themselves.

The motion pictures taken of the year were a novel experience for all. With the searching eye of the camera turned upon them 374 men and women suddenly became painfully self-conscious. Some of the somersaults and back-flips performed seemed a trifle overdone. Nevertheless 374 in frolicsome mood will be handed down to posterity.

Not an idle moment was allowed from the moment the crowd arrived until the supper was served. The time-honoured treasure hunt was abandoned (Continued on Page 4)

THINGS DIFFERENT IN 1933

National Situation Changed into One of Universal Significance

Special to "The Varsity"
Edmonton, Alberta (C.I.P.).—University students are too "choosy". They like to pick out the work they want to do, and not take work which is available. There is plenty of work, but they won't take it. They prefer instead to look to the government for assistance.

That's what Premier Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett informed a reporter for the university paper, The Gateway, as he stood on the C.P.R. depot here recently, bidding good-bye to government officials and others. The reporter had suggested that it was hard to impress students with the wonder of the opportunities facing them if they all found it difficult to continue their university course through lack of funds, and if they faced prospects of unemployment when they graduated.

"Why can't they find work? It is because they feel they are entitled to make a choice," said the Premier. "There is plenty of work to be done—but it is not the kind they wish to do. I know a young man who went out with a pick and shovel in order to pay his way back to college this year. How many girls do you know who are willing to go out and do housework? Not many! Everyone would rather look to the government than go about their work as they would in normal times."

To the reporter's suggestion that it was an impossibility for Canada to pay off her debts, and that payment of these debts should be discontinued if it meant that the Canadian people should suffer in order to pay interest charges, the Premier replied. "What! Repudiate our debts! I am ashamed that any Canadian student should think of such a thing." (Continued on Page 4)

In Trinity College library Mr. Wm. Paton of London, England, spoke yesterday to a large audience on "The Political and Social Background" in his series of addresses on Modern India. He explained the growth of nationalism as being a creation of British occupation in India since by giving civilized government and providing the English language as a common medium for speech among all the educated classes it allowed political development. To Indian moderates English liberalism is the ideal to be striven for.

WHY IS A NEWS REEL?

The fact that each person who attends the performance of a moving picture is an observer of whatever the camera man has to offer in the news-reel, is significant in itself and forces attention to the indisputable fact that this method of presenting news is steadily gaining in importance. At the present it offers no serious rivalry to the daily papers; obviously it has not the means at its disposal to be up-to-the-minute with reports. Another disadvantage lies in the fact that the appeal must be very wide in order to justify the expense of filming it. Apart from these difficulties which, incidentally, television will probably remedy, its influence in contemporary affairs is very real.

In the first place the companies concerned have complete control over the type of news that is recorded and the way in which this is presented to the republic. The opportunities for spreading propaganda of every kind are manifold. The very fact that theatre-goers are only passively interested adds to this power, because people sit through the programme, listen to the announcer's glowing words, exercise no discrimination of their own. The press has never had this power. Every man chooses his own newspaper but the news-reel is foisted upon everyone. The fact that governments control the type of entertainment that is offered to their citizens leads to further thought on the influence that it may exert. Jingoism—political propaganda of every kind—can be spread by this means and in the event of a war the damage that could be done by militaristic rulers is not to be reckoned lightly.

The nature of the medium, however, prevents it from presenting an entirely prejudiced picture of events. Even when a self-righteous officer of the law stands up before the camera as one recently did and says in an attempt to justify his attack on strikers, "I done what I thought was best", one is still free to judge in viewing the cameraman's portrayal of the riot, just where the initiative for battle lay and which party was more in the wrong. From this example it becomes evident that the intelligent theatre-goer, when he has exercised his judgment as to the announcer's interpretation of the scene, is able to bring into focus the larger problem of which the shot presents a single phase, and may thereby be led to confirm or revise his opinion on certain problems.

The Canadian Microscope

By Isabel M. Jordan

Canadian. By Wilfred Bovey. Dents, $2.50, paper $1.50.

Wilfred Bovey's stimulating book opens with the following provocative question: "How many people know the French Canadian?" Since I had picked up a good deal of miscellaneous information from a trip to Quebec, the reading of Maria Chapdelaine and the Conquest of New France; supplemented by occasional glances at Dimanche and some evenings listening to radio programmes from Montreal; I bridled at the implication of the question.

The one thing which a reading of the book accomplished for me was to convince me of my ignorance, and since this was the author's aim in writing the book, an aim which he mentions in the preface which I always read last on principle, I should consider that it had been achieved.

On the basis then of ignorance, this review is written and can pretend to do little more than mention some of the points which Mr. Bovey makes in the book. The book, which contains many interesting illustrations, attempts to present in a brief and sympathetic fashion the French-Canadian attitude, and the factors, geographical, historical and political, which have made him what he is to-day. Two factors emerge in the account, the relation of the Canadian to his church, and his deep attachment to the land.

These two fundamental influences have frequently been misunderstood by students of French-Canada who have ceased their reading after the occupation of the English in 1763. And the impression of the Canadian as a cleric ridden backwoods farmer persists, in fact existed in my own mind. Mr. Bovey traces the development of the Canadian from earliest times up to the present; and the picture emerges of the Canadian protected and inspired by the Jesuit and Recollet Missions building his parish church the centre of his village life first of wood then of stone, adding to it bit by bit until he has as the result of his labours a peculiarly Canadian church hallowed with the tradition of centuries of labour. Similarly the church has worked hand in hand with education and has built up finally the system of Classical Colleges peculiar to Quebec, wherein the vocational and material aspect of education has been ignored in favour of the humanities and the philosophy of St. Thomas Aquinas. The tradition is continued by the two French-Canadian Universities of Laval and Montreal. The advantages of this system, in Mr. Bovey's opinion, and I am tempted to agree with him, outweigh the defects. Finally the Canadian's love of the land is shown as

Hart House Theatre

Did anybody know there was a Music Appreciation Hour on the campus? We didn't until about noon yesterday. However, around five-fifteen of the afternoon we esconced ourselves near the front in Hart House Theatre and enjoyed as nice a family musical party as one could wish. The Hour, by the way, is an idea of the Hart House Music Committee and is largely attributed to Mr. Randolph Crowe.

Yesterday's speaker, Miss Wilma Stevenson, set out to discuss and play (phonographically) the Tchaikovsky Fourth Symphony, Siegfried's Journey to the Rhine from Wagner's Götterdämmerung and the Prelude to Die Meistersinger. To us that sounded a little ambitious for an hour, but we said nothing. We were vindicated later, as you shall see.

Miss Stevenson started with a criticism of the Tchaikovsky symphony, to be played to-night at the Symphony Concert. She read from A. H. Sidgwick's The Promenade Ticket, "a criticism of the (London) Promenade Concerts from a layman's point of view" and a thoroughly valuable and worth while little book, according to Miss Stevenson. Says Sidgwick on the first movement, "it is destiny as a dead weight, inhuman, crushing down hope and belief and effort; not destiny as a valiant assailant, hitting you as man to man."

In true Damoschian style, Miss Stevenson sat down then and played the theme of the first movement on the piano—yes, that battered old five-pedalled, trick piano which antedates most of you, dear readers—and made the music so striking that when Mr. Crowe turned to the phonograph we were all keyed up to have our hope and belief crushed by the dead weight. But it failed miserably—the dead weight, we mean—because while the thread of destiny ran unmistakably through the music, we found the crashing crescendo of the development to be rather a glorious surge of inspiration, in spite of the minor theme.

We regretted keenly that by the time the first movement was over the time had vanished—really and truly vanished. There remained enough for only the themes, on the piano, of the remaining movements, for a brief sketch and the playing of the Journey to the Rhine, and for the playing of the Meistersinger prelude for a few who stayed over a minute or so.

Nevertheless, we say come out to the next one. It will be in two weeks, and the speaker Mr. Allan Sly.

It will be well worth while. If this one was anything to go by, that is.

Then there are the great lessons to be learned from History, like the one that "Oliver Cromwell is said to have broken more windows than anyone in England." That is why they called him the Protector.

C—C

We can prove, too, that we are real died-in-the-wool Conservatives because we suspect the following of being insidious communist propaganda: "Many girls attend the (Chinese) universities . . . and positions in teaching and secretarial work are open to them." Since there does not seem to be any such jobs around here we believe this is an attempt by Chinese Reds to lure our co-eds over to China.

C—C

But on the other hand we believe in keeping well informed on the International situation, for example: "Within a little over a year the dog population of Paris has fallen by nearly 4,000." We think it is a dog-gone shame.

We are glad to note that university courses are becoming more utilitarian. We refer to the notice about the new course for bakers: "The object of a new course at Butler University is to teach the proper means of loafing."

With the Theatres

Loew's—

Night Flight, the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture running this week at Loew's Theatre, is one of the most thrilling presentations of modern aviation ever filmed. The picture has drama and suspense enough to satisfy the most rabid fan, and for the most part the camera work is magnificent. Add to this the character portrayals by such stars as Helen Hayes, Clark Gable, John and Lionel Barrymore, Robert Montgomery and Myrna Loy, and you appreciate the idea which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has in putting first rank players into bits.

An interesting travelogue, which also has its moments, a news reel and a war-time comedy complete the bill.

May we mention again, Night Flight is a thoroughly expert picture, done in excellent style.

THE SCHOOL FROSH

To the Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

It is only fair that the freshmen of S.P.S. should receive some laudation for their up to the minute attack on the sophomores in the downtown press of Saturday morning. Altogether, the trick was admirably played, and even if it did capture more than one sophomore goat, it also served to show what excellent men are contained in the first year after they have been properly educated by their seniors. The sophomores should consider it an attribute to their educational ability, when their proteges display such unusual brilliancy. We sincerely believe that next year's freshmen crop will be up against a stiff proposition.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

Procrastination seems to apply to more activities of student life than merely studying. What has happened to all the people who were "simply dying to go swimming again"? Every year the same thing happens—a few days before the faculty meets everyone rushes to the pool and tries in a few hours to get into condition. Impossible, of course, and not nearly as interesting as swimming all season. Mr. Cochran and his daughter Billie, one of whom is always at the pool, are anxious and willing to lend a helping hand to anyone who is desirous of learning to swim or of improving their style.

Training and instruction is given in life-saving and preparation for passing the bronze, silver and gold exams of the Royal Life-Saving Society. We all can't be record breakers or champion divers but we can at least learn how to help out a fellow human being who is in difficulty in the water. That is why such instruction in life-saving is so very worth while for mere ability to swim does not necessarily mean ability to help a drowning person.

It is never too late to learn so don't be bashful about beginning anything in the swimming line. It is a sport you can always enjoy in later life and for that reason has a real value. As Mr. Cochran has stated—"swimming is the most necessary of all forms of physical education."

VICTORIA COLLEGE PARLIAMENT DEBATE WON BY OPPOSITION

Interest Provoked by Norrie Fry's Article in Acta

PASS COURSE CARRIES ON

Humorous Attitude Overcame Possibility of Undue Seriousness

With a decisive victory of 65 to 43, the opposition of the Victoria College Debating Parliament defeated, last evening, the motion, "Resolved that this House favours the total abolition of the Pass Course".

The debate, in itself, was hotly contested, and was heard by an enthusiastic audience—the largest of any heretofore experienced, which speaks well for the popularity of this enterprising club.

This meeting, being the first gathering for this year, was duly opened by the election of a Speaker, after which an impressive speech was given from the throne by Principal W. T. Brown, acting as Lieutenant-Governor. The House heartily agreed with the motion to send its deepest sympathy to Chancellor Wallace, who unfortunately was ill, and hoped for his speedy recovery.

The debate, which immediately followed, was of the same high calibre of former years, and the vein of humour which ran throughout the entire proceedings, overcame any possibility of a too serious attitude being taken over the issue. The period of free speech at the conclusion of the debate proper, was used to a distinct advantage by both sides of the House and provided much amusement for the spectators.

The debate was a direct result of an article on the Pass course by Mr. Norrie Fry, which ran in the last issue of the Acta Victoriana and caused much comment.

Mr. Fry was there in person, acting in the capacity of guest speaker, and furthered his opinions in the concluding address.

The speakers, all of whom took their parts splendidly, are as follows:

S. P. S. CHALK UP SECOND VICTORY

Dents Scoreless in Game for Mulock Cup Quest

SCORED TOUCH AND ROUGE

Yesterday afternoon on the back campus Senior S.P.S. scored their second win in quest of the Mulock Cup by holding Dents scoreless, meanwhile scoring an unconverted touch and a rouge. S.P.S. showed greater steadiness and were able to capitalize on the mistakes of their opponents to break into the scoring column.

In the first half, neither team was in a scoring position until a Waring to McLaughlin pass, good for a gain of 25 yards, put play on Dents' 12 yard line. The Dent line gave only 9 yards on 3 downs, thus giving them possession on their own 3 yard line. After making 2 first downs, Dents fumbled, enabling Waring to gallop for a touch which was not converted. Dents then completed two passes for good gains, but were unable to score.

After half time, a nice end run, Rey to Spiers, relieved the pressure for School, but a Dent misplay gave the Schoolmen possession on the Dent 25 yard line, from which Bridgeland forced Dempster to rouge. In the third quarter, Dents plunged for yards four times in succession. They were successful in the last quarter with forward passes, but School with the aid of Bridgeland's fine booting, were able to stave off the Dent offensive.

For S.P.S., Bridgeland, McLaughlin, Waring and Baker were good, while for Dents Rey, Spiers and Cominsky performed well.

Sr. S.P.S. — Flying wing, Dawson; halves, Bridgeland, Waldon, McLaughlin; quarter, Waring; snap, Munroff; insides, Brigham, Pawland; outsides, Glover, Walters; middles, McBride, Baker; subs, McNicol, Finch, Farquhar, Doughty, Baird, Brown.

Dents — Flying wing, Squires; halves, Woods, Spiers, Rey; quarter, Dempster; snap, Garrett; insides, McCartney, Tritt; middles, Schumacker, Cominsky; outsides, Ryan, Mueller; subs, Potashin, Oswald, Wildfong, Valiquette, Cavanagh, Weir, Twibble, Hawkins.

Officials — Vaughan, Oille, Smith.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By J. A. R.

Taking it all in all, the week-end was not a very satisfactory one for the U. of T. athletes. Two titles that might have come our way were side-tracked at Kingston and ended up with the McGill baggage in Montreal. There was no mistaken label on those titles either—they went to McGill through merit alone. In both the track meet and the tennis tournament the Red and White representatives were much too good for either Queen's or Varsity. In Montreal the golf tournament was a real he-man's fight but McGill managed to squeeze out from under and make off with the honours. And what happened to the Seniors everyone who had to have their clothes pressed can tell you all about it.

But such a tale of woe is hardly justified by the way our men did perform, on foreign soil at least. The track meet was a real race for points until the results of the mile and three mile runs came in and the high jump as well. There were a number of real stars in the meet but none any better than our own Jack Passmore, who scored a double victory for the Blue and White by winning both hurdles events. Hickey and McGladdery were right on their toes and both placed in at least two events. The 1500-yard dash was quite the worst problem of the afternoon for the officials, four in number, who took a good five minutes in trying to decide on a winner when none of them could agree. Two or three of the runners were convinced that they actually won the event and probably will not cede to the judges' decision until the camera films are developed.

The other stars of the meet are limited to about four in number. Two were from McGill and between them they practically won the meet. Phil Edwards won out in the quarter and half mile runs and Meiklejohn set two new records in the discus and the shot put. The other two were from the Queen's team. Abe Zvonkin heaved the javelin farther than any other inter-collegiate competitor has yet shown ability to heave it, while Bill Fritz twice led the field in running events. Fritz had a fine afternoon. In the 220-yard dash the former Walkerville flash equalled the intercollegiate record that has stood since 1909. That's a long time for any record to remain on the lists and the man to equal it or break it is no ordinary mortal. Fritz was running on the outside track in the bargain which is the softest lane in the Queen's course and the hardest to run. Then again he led the redoubtable Phil Edwards in the 440-yard dash by fully ten feet. Edwards had already won the half and the mile, which made an awful difference but Fritz, the man who trains winter and summer, had plenty left on the home stretch.

It looks as if Varsity was to have a new tennis champion. Evidently the athletic board has ruled that Shields, who won out quite handsily, and who could not represent the university at Kingston because of academic standing, or lack of it, cannot hold the title he won. So to-morrow, Hermant and Crowson play off and on Thursday the winner will meet Bill Pigott, ranking one player at present. Shields was badly needed in the intercollegiate. The U. of T. netters were eliminated both in the doubles and the singles, before they had a chance to show their wares, but in most cases it was to seeded players from rival colleges. They met some fierce opposition and the set in which Pigott bowed to Marier from the U. of M. was no discredit to the Blue and White racketeer.

The juniors and the intermediates provided the consolation of the week-end by showing the trim red-and-white-clad cadets just who was the master. Someone evidently must have informed the seconds that they were supposed to be playing a rugby game between the third and the fourth quarters. Up to that time their feeble efforts had practically ceded the game to R.M.C., but whatever the bombshell was it spurred them on to such an extent that they crammed fifteen points into the scoreboard before College could get organized. Lou Carroll, to all evidences, has turned out a replica to the famous "point-a-minute" team of a renowned predecessor. Perhaps the able individual who woke the seconds so quickly had better apply to the S.A.C. office for a free pass to Kingston this week—just to be on hand.

And while on this subject—the S.A.C. announces a special excursion to Queen's over the week-end for the low figure of $3.25 for a return ticket. Are you going?

To-morrow night the juniors meet the Argo juniors at Ulster Stadium at eight o'clock in an exhibition game that will give both teams a good workout. Make this an opportunity to see your first game under the flood-lights. The juniors are one of the best teams in the league right now and the way they trounced R.M.C. last Saturday was pitiful. They have evolved a forward pass attack that none of their opponents have yet been able to surmount. They tossed eight forwards at Kingston and every one was completed. Besides this their tricky backfield are good for major scores at all times.

If you are planning to take a jaunt down to the tri-colour hang-out at the end of the week you might spend a few minutes reading the football article that appeared in a recent issue of the Good Housekeeping. Read it anyway. It is written by Stanford's contribution to the 1926 All America and while it deals with American football it is largely applicable to the Canadian game. The sum and substance of the thing is that to get real enjoyment out of a game and learn how to predict the plays, you must keep your eyes ahead of the ball and watch the linemen. You will learn to become a "grandstand quarterback". Please remember, those who do not read it, that a "grandstand quarterback" is not a bleacher fan who demands a refund at the gate when his team loses.

There were no particular surprises in the results of the interfaculty games played yesterday afternoon. Senior Dents scored a 6-0 win over Senior S.P.S. in their rugby fixture, while S.P.S. and Trinity finished their soccer tilt on even terms at 1-1. Trinity were granted a little edge on the play and scored in the second period on a fine corner shot.

ENGLISH RUGBY IS PREFERRED

pression at least of being much faster. I'm told that every player over here has his job completely mapped out, and must stick to it even if it means missing a chance of doing the thing another way. A good English team just leave their opponents guessing every time. Suppose there's a scrum on the right. The halves will perhaps get it out, pass to the right centre-three-quarter, who passes to the left centre. While the back goes over to mark the left wing the ball comes back along the line to the right wing, and you have a wonderful opening for a try.

I think the cheer leaders were just too cute (you see I am rapidly learning to talk just like a Canadian). But why must a crowd of ardent supporters be told when to cheer? Surely they can judge (or can't they?) when the team needs encouraging or congratulating, or when some victim should be applauded as he limps pluckily back to his place.

I guess you'll think me very insular.

touch with current thought, which is but a reformulation and reevaluation of these same basic problems. I don't say to ignore it entirely, but the thought of people such as Plato is much more important.

Other members of the various staffs in Modern Languages were very reticent and refused to give a statement for publication.

PORTRAIT PAINTING DISCUSSED BY LISMER

"Despite the poets' eternal glorification of the smile of the Mona Lisa," Mr. Lismer continued, "few have realized the true significance of the painting—its turbulent reflection of the chaos going on in the mind of Leonardo—a chaos caused by the apparent opposition between the broadened culture of the Renaissance and the more primitive ideas of the church." The survival of this enlightenment is evident in the work of Titian, in which the secular was entirely separated from the religious and sumptuous, resplendent colour had full play.

Holbein's human documents of his time, Rembrandt's concentration upon the individual, and the aristocratic sitters of David and Gainsborough carried the development through to the moderns. Whistler was mentioned by Mr. Lismer in respect of his unusual subordination of the portrait to the arrangement of silver greys and black in the painting of his mother. He finished the address by a short discussion of the modern tendency exemplified in Derain and Van Gogh, to paint types, dwelling more upon the actual personality than upon any details of dress or background.

In closing, Mr. Lismer said that since modern photography assures an exact replica of form and features, it is the privilege of the portrait painter to go deeper—ever seeking the soul and driving force behind those features.

BENNETT SCORNFUL OF CO-ED ATTITUDE

"In a speech in 1930," said the reporter, "you made the following statement: 'Governments can regulate policies of the country so that the facilities may be provided to give employment,' and in 1933 you said: 'We are not the masters of our fate. We are in the grip of forces over which we have no control.' What are these forces, and must we continue to exercise no control whatever over them?"

"In 1930 we faced a different situation than we now face," said the Premier. "Then we were dealing with a national condition—now we are faced with a situation which is universal. Ten and one-half million people can exercise tremendously little influence over a situation that is universal."

"Many people say that you either do not realize the unemployment situation or refuse to face it. What did you think of the proposal of the unemployed to parade, and what would have been your reaction to it?" he was asked, and replied:

"I knew nothing whatever about it, so there is no use in talking of what might have been."

ANTI-WAR MOVEMENT HAS PRACTICAL AIM

members of the provisional committee are also members of other student groups, who felt that the time was ripe for some definite action, but it was unanimously agreed at our first meeting that the Movement must be entirely independent of other groups. We are naturally looking for strong support from the ranks of those societies which include opposition to war in their policies, but I hope that a large number of undergraduates who for some reason or another have not joined these groups will take advantage of this opportunity. The difficulty of the present situation on the campus is that while there is considerable anti-war feeling, it is either entirely unorganized, or else is represented merely as one item in larger social programmes. Our chief purpose in calling this meeting is to co-ordinate the movement in one association with one object alone, to which all may subscribe.

increased bad feeling. For the next few years Gandhi and Irwin discussed matters during lulls in Gandhi's civil disobedience campaign and he attended the second Indian Conference. Last year at the Third Conference the famous "white paper" was drawn up. By provincial autonomy is granted, provinces and great states to be federated. To safeguard British interests means of defense, powers of financial intervention and international affairs are to remain in the hands of the viceroy. If a bill on these lines is passed moderates believe that India will be pacified if not satisfied. Otherwise terrorism will continue in a greater degree as civil disobedience is now passed.

The economic situation is having a great effect. Pressure on the land is greater due to lowered prices for the crops and higher cost of farm implements. The craftsman are drowned out as Japanese and western manufactured goods drive them out and as spread of learning has let them know how miserable they are.

The thing which has impressed Mr. Paton most is the growth of political consciousness in women. He believes that it will have a beneficial effect on Indian history. He paid tribute to Gandhi's move for the untouchables. Although he has not converted the Hindus he had made them so conscious of this mass that they can never forget them and to the unfortunate he has given a gleam of hope.

MONTREAL UNIVERSITY FEAR FORCED CLOSE

France. The teaching is carried on after the European style. Classics are begun at a much earlier age than in the secondary schools of the other provinces of Canada.

"The entrance to the university provides another problem. General knowledge of various subjects is required before entering the university. I do not think, however, that the University of Montreal will be forced to close. Every French-Canadian would be willing to make a financial contribution in order to maintain the existence of their main seat of learning. The province of Quebec has done a great deal already in helping the university. The Minister of Education in Quebec is a man of great power and it is certain that he will find a way out of the difficulty."

Mr. Finch of the French Department of U.C. said: "The closing of the University of Montreal would be a great tragedy. It is the seat of French learning. French-Canadian authors are better known in Europe than are English-Canadian. They display a great independence of thought and originality of style in all their work."

CANADIAN MICROSCOPE

the root of a nationalism "de la terre" which is profoundly Canadian apart from French or English tradition. The social life of modern Montreal and Quebec reveals the fact that French and English Canadians mix very little, and also that there is much more to the Canadian than the habitant and the love of the land, and there is growing up a new commercial and industrial consciousness among the French-Canadians of the larger cities in Quebec.

In order to save my face I would like to mention the one incident in the book which I was able to verify. Bovey treats not only of the Canadiens in Quebec but of the settlements all over Canada, and he refers to a community in Prince Edward Island who are so closely related that thirty or forty of them all possess the same name. A medical officer of my acquaintance had occasion to examine a detachment from Prince Edward Island and found that some half dozen of the men responded to the name of Joseph Arnault.

Various other incidents in the book keep it from becoming a dry account of facts, particularly the account of the Metis who were one-third French, and who as courriers des bois led an adventurous life in the forests; one of them, says Mr. Bovey, was actually killed and eaten by his employer. Another amusing remark was to the effect that at one time all of North America except Florida belonged to one of Louis the thirteenth's mistresses. These incidents in addition to much sound and sympathetic fact should go far towards making the Canadian better understood by his fellows.

city, a project which must naturally be approved by every student with any rudimentary claims to either humanity or intelligence. The Thursday edition, however, had a notice of a meeting of the University of Toronto Rifle Association, who were to be addressed by a Colonel, and have the proper use of a service rifle explained to them.

For what purpose, I should like to ask? We all know what the C.O.T.C. is. But what is the Rifle Association? Is it an organization run on similar lines, and with similar ideals, or lack of them? Is it financed by the Government? Who runs it, and why? I think a little information on this subject would be appreciated by the student body.

Yours sincerely,

Curious.

After supper a singsong was held around a camp-fire. Professor Robins introduced a number of new or rather old songs. From the dim past was dragged the old favourite song of '13. The dance, with George Simmons' and his Night Hawks providing the music, was a huge success. A Paul Jones and tag dances mixed up the crowd. At 10.30, a crowd of exhausted B.A.'s in embryo wended their way back to the metropolis, and wearied T.T.C. employees with usual repertoire of songs, yells, and cheers.

George Butterworth and Sys Silvers provide excellent secondary comedy, and Harry Langdon, as Cupid sitting on a cloud, is inimitable. Let us have more of Langdon. The scenario and direction are excellent—original, coherent and fast-moving.

The stage show is not the Imperial's best, but we have sat through much worse. There is a really good travelogue of Oxford, which almost caused us to reverse our low opinion of travelogues in general. But the piece de resistance is the return of Walt Disney's most popular Silly Symphony—Three Little Pigs. Judging from the applause it was by all odds the most popular item on the programme. What do you think?

We go skeptical and come away delighted, and a little impressed. Gracie Fields certainly cannot sing, but she can act, and that exceptionally well. It is her genuine spontaneity and her artlessness, plus that biting Lancashire wit, that attract one. The story would amuse the sophisticated; of a lover supposedly killed in the war, and a faithful Sally unto the end. There are some excellent slumming sights, and some of those authentic London street scenes which the English films occasionally hand out. The naughty little youngster who imitates Garbo and steals like a horse thief is decidedly well done. The short is a clever and rather amusing review and the news is British-British navy propaganda. The programme is a good one, and everyone should enjoy Gracie Fields, if only she wouldn't sing!

BENNETT'S VIEWS NOT FAVOURED BY STUDENTS HERE

Students Express Indignation
Concerning Premier's
Remarks

"STUDENTS NOT CHDSY"

Fitted for Something Better Than Pick and Shovel Work

"That's just about what I would expect from the Premier," was the opinion given by Ross English, III Vic, when interviewed by The Varsity on the subject of the interview given by the Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett to The Gateway, undergraduate newspaper of the University of Alberta, which appeared in part in yesterday's issue of The Varsity. This terse statement expresses the opinion of the majority of the undergraduates of our own university interviewed yesterday on the Premier's statements.

"I do not believe that students are particularly 'choosy' about jobs," said J. G. Palmer, II Meds, "but surely they are fitted for something better than pick and shovel work. If they are not then they shouldn't be wasting time getting a university training. At that, there are plenty of labourers out of work."

R. J. Wallace, III Pass, expressed a like opinion: "A university student certainly has some right to have a choice of the type of work he wishes to do."

When asked if he thought that the students were out of work simply because of the type of work they wish to do.

JOURNALISM HARD ASSERTS SPEAKER

Women's Press Club Hears Talk on Newspaper Work
by Miss Sanders

SPEAKS ENCOURAGINGLY

"The first thing you want to remember is, that if you want to get into journalism badly enough, you can," were the encouraging words spoken to the Women's Press Club yesterday by Miss Byrne Hope Sanders, editor of Chateaine. She continued her address by mentioning some of the wrong conceptions people have of a journalistic life. She stated emphatically that it was no easy life. A newspaper man or woman has no time to himself, he must give himself heart and soul to his work.

A continual round of parties, weddings, and theatres may sound very enticing, but in reality it becomes extremely monotonous. Moreover, the work is hard and only those with good health should consider entering the profession.

The best way to learn to write, according to Miss Sanders, is to write all the time for the sheer joy of writing, to have an enquiring mind and to be interested in people.

"Read the dictionary," was another piece of advice. Study of the dictionary provides one with new words and teaches their proper use. It is valuable to make friends and contacts in the journalistic world. Beginning on a small town newspaper is another good way to break in. "Newspaper work is hard and demands a great deal of you but it is the greatest fun on earth," said Miss Sanders in conclusion.

Professor Parkinson Contrasts Merits of C.C.F. with Other Political Bodies

LIBERAL PARTY DIVIDED

Comparing the policies of the three Canadian political parties, Professor Parkinson, addressing the Commerce Club last night, contrasted the habit of the older groups, who only produced a written platform under pressure, with the C.C.F., which had brought forth a clear statement as to its intentions.

"The Conservatives are the representatives of the interests of large manufacturers and as such wish to preserve the status quo. They would, however, be willing to make concessions when hard pressed along the lines of social legislation. But these reforms would make for no change in the existing division between rich and poor. On the whole the policy of this party is to stand pat.

"The Liberal party has been forced by repeated demands of the Progressive group to state its programme. The points enunciated by Mr. King this spring were merely the old policies dressed in new garb.

"The Liberal party is divided into two opposing factions," according to Professor Parkinson. "There is a left wing composed of semi-socialists, who are advocating a Rooseveltian policy embodying the control of industry and some form of economic planning. On the other side the old guard under Mr. King and Mr. Dafoe are opposed to any form of economic planning and wish to smash the external trade by lowering tariffs and internal trade by prosecuting under the Combines Act. Recognizing this split the Liberals are content to do nothing and are waiting for the Conservatives to hang themselves."

Professor Parkinson admitted that he had oversimplified the policies of the two old parties but in contrast with

MODERN INDIA LECTURE

"A Hindu is one who says he is a Hindu and is in caste," declared Mr. Wm. Paton in the second of a series of talks on Modern India in the Trinity College library yesterday afternoon.

As Hinduism constitutes the main religious problem, Mr. Paton confined himself mainly to a discussion of its development and the possible effect of western Christianity on it.

The religion had developed from two different trends of thought and as such has no founder. The one was based on the doctrines of the old books in which there were no definitions by positives, but by negatives, and the other maintained that the ancient books were not true.

Radical-Socialists Sought for Approaching General Election

In the opinion of M. de Champ, of the French Department of University College, the recent defeat of the Dardier cabinet in France amounts to nothing less than a crime against the motherland. "It is absolutely essential that the budget be balanced," he stated to The Varsity, "and the only way this can be done is by cutting the salaries of the civil servants. France today is so heavily taxed that the limit is almost reached; consequently there is no hope of gaining further revenue from this source. On the other hand, the majority of the civil servants are either Communists or Socialists, and the Socialist members of the House of Deputies support them in their demand that government salaries be retained at the present level. If the budget is not balanced, I can see nothing but inflation for France in the next two or three weeks, and the almost immediate withdrawal of the foreign funds now invested there, a result which may be disastrous for French finance."

What the immediate political developments in France will be M. de Champ could not say. He was certain, however, that the Socialists, who at the present time hold 120 of the 600 seats in the House of Deputies, do not represent the opinion of the mass of the French people, 50 per cent of whom are small land peasants whose interests lie in maintaining a balanced budget and a fairly stable level of prices. Wakened from a sound sleep at one a.m. yesterday morning, Miss Anne Gautier, II Architecture, was informed that she had drawn the first number and the Pontiac Straight Eight Sedan in the Newman Club Harvest Festival. The other two prizes had gone to American ticket-holders, and the huge crowd at the Royal York went wild when the third number and first prize actually was drawn by a member of the club. The Varsity found Miss Gautier working industriously over at School to-day, but could not get any information as to what would be done with the car or the $1,200 cash equivalent.

By E. C. Phelan

Fumble, fumble, who's got the pigskin? Victoria College's Mulock Cuppers must have thought they were in Baffin Land when they waded onto the O.A.C. campus at Guelph yesterday. Six inches of the virginal covered the playing field at game time and plenty more arrived during the gathering.

ON TO BUDAPEST

"Skin" Dewar, stellar defence man on the Varsity senior hockey squad for four years until his graduation last June, leaves Toronto next week to take up his duties as hockey coach of the Budapest Skating Club in Hungary. It is understood that while in Hungary Mr. Dewar will attend the University of Budapest, taking post graduate work. To The Varsity's enquiry yesterday, however, Dewar stated that the course of studies he intends to pursue was "not for publication". His coaching duties will include only hockey, although the Varsity grad has also been outstanding in rugby and other sports.

That the appointment of Dewar as coach of the junior Varsity squad for this season was being considered, as suggested in a morning paper yesterday, is denied by local university authorities. "They have probably confused 'Skin' Dewar with Dr. Bill Dewar," explained an official in the Athletic Office, Hart House.

Asked by The Varsity if he could speak Hungarian, Dewar exclaimed, "not yet".

NEWLY ORGANIZED C.C.F. CLUB HEARS SPRY AT FIRST MEETING

Friday Recitals

The first of the series of Hart House Friday afternoon recitals will take place at 5 p.m. on Friday next, October 27, and will be given by Dr. Ernest MacMillan. Dr. MacMillan is admittedly one of the foremost Canadian musicians of the present day and is known not only as the conductor of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra but also as an organist and composer of songs and choral music. He will deal with the place of music in life, and will play the piano.

The second recital, on Friday, November 3, is being given by Dr. Healey Willan, who will deal with the development of Plainsong. The series has been planned by the Music Committee to go through the academic year until March and it is interesting to note that not only have the leading musicians of Toronto definitely undertaken to give recitals but also several undergraduates are taking part in the series.

CIVILIAN ASSOCIATION

Investigation has shown that there is no connection between the C.O.T.C. and the Civilian Rifle Association. The aims of the Rifle Association are in no way involved with war, armies or militarism. It is an association existing purely for the pleasure which students may get from accurately shooting a rifle. When spoken to last evening, Professor Lucas, Captain of the Rifle Association, informed us that there are but two civilian rifle associations in Canada. The U. of T. being one.

After the war several of the professors formed a Rifle Club, deciding later on to make it an undergraduate association. A charter was granted by the government, allowing them the necessary rifles and ammunition—but nothing else. It was run completely by undergraduates up till five years ago, when it was thought advisable to have a member of the staff in charge. Accordingly Professor Lucas was appointed captain and has remained captain ever since. There is a fee of two dollars for members which goes towards prizes. Up till this year there has always been an intercollegiate shoot but this year activities will be restricted to interfaculty competitions.

When interviewed in Hart House, the Sergeant-Major told us that the members of the association clean and look after their rifles themselves. They have officers only in the sense of secretary or treasurer and are under no discipline except to range discipline which is necessary to keep the enthusiasts from blowing off each others' ears and toes.

Rhodes Scholar and Oxford
Grad Has Won Political Renown

The newly organized C.C.F. Club of the University of Toronto was addressed last night at its opening meeting by Mr. Graham Spry. Graduating from the University of Manitoba as a Rhodes Scholar, Mr. Spry spent three years at Oxford. He has won great renown as a student of Canadian politics, and outlined, briefly, before the newly formed organization, the principles upon which the C. C. F. movement is based.

Mr. H. G. Skilling conducted the meeting and introduced the speaker. Acting with Mr. Skilling on the executive are Mr. S. F. Rae, Mr. M. M. Marks and C. P. H. Holmes.

The C.C.F. has, Mr. Spry states, a definite place in university life of to-day. He observed that political discussions and debates are more real and active in Toronto than in other parts where he has visited lately, either at home or abroad.

He touched upon the policies of the C.C.F. as laid down in their Manifesto. Of these, he emphasized the idea of a "planning party"—planning and seeking a classless society. He dwelt briefly on the proposed course of action in attaining this objective.

In referring to the capitalist system, he said in effect, what is contained in the C.C.F. programme, which to quote, reads in part: "We aim to replace the present capitalist system by a social order, from which the domination of the few over the many is removed." (Continued on Page 4)

VETERANS RETURN FOR CAGE WORK

Last Year's Players Provide Bright Prospects for Title

FRESHMEN PLENTIFUL

When Coach McCutcheon starts to build up this year's senior basketball team, he will have at least nine players with senior experience to call upon. Practices have already started and the prospects look brighter for Varsity wrestling the senior title from McGill. This week practices are being held nightly for freshmen who are desirous of making one of the teams. Starting next Monday, candidates for all years will be out and McCutcheon will start sorting out the various squads.

Although Gold and Sniderman are the only players left from last year's senior team, there are several newcomers who have played senior basketball. Bill Bodrug from Central Y.M.C.A., Red Gordon from Riverdale Grads, and Dr. Mo Mitchell, at one time leading scorer of the intercollegiate union, all have played senior basketball in Toronto for several seasons. Davis, from the Maritimes, and several players from the west have also had senior experience.

Willis, who played in the Big Five group last winter, will be out for the centre position as soon as the rugby season is over. Norm Newman and Applebaum from last year's junior and intermediate teams are expected to move up to senior company.

Over fifty freshmen have turned out and judging from the pre-season form, Varsity should field exceptionally strong junior and intermediate teams this year.

OUR SILENT STAFF

For the past three or four years the professors at this university have had a decided aversion to making any statements for the use of the press. In some cases they can hardly be blamed, especially when the topic under discussion happens to be a delicate, controversial subject that might lead them into considerable difficulties despite the stand they take. But lately this attitude has taken on rather ridiculous proportions.

A few days ago there appeared in a local newspaper a vitriolic denunciation against the methods of teaching at this university. Our professors were systematically accused of instilling atheism, high treason and revolution into the gullible minds of immature students. Yet, when this paper attempted to get the opinions of these same professors on the article, when they were asked to defend themselves and the university against accusations that were nothing short of malicious, they hemmed and hawed, beat uselessly around the bush, and finally they declared they had nothing to say.

It seems strange that these men who are in a position to make progressive and intelligent statements, who most assuredly must make these statements both privately and semi-publicly, should become so taciturn when asked to air these opinions to the press. We can perhaps excuse a professor who refuses to give a statement to the down-town newspapers on the grounds that he is liable to be misquoted. Misquotations and sensationalism seem to run hand in hand in most of our city papers. But The Varsity, as the official representative of the student body, should be trusted to be accurate, particularly in view of the fact that this paper in the last few years has made stringent efforts to avoid any glaring or serious errors in its reports, especially when dealing with opinions expressed by members of the faculty.

After all, The Varsity is the organ of the undergraduate body. The professors are being paid, both by the government and the students, to mould the youth of to-day along lines that will enable them to navigate safely the tortuous seas of modern thought. If a lecturer believes he has done his duty by delivering a tedious and arid talk in a dull monotone, regarding the economic situation in eighteenth century France or Milton's influence on Pope's poetry, he has not fulfilled his function. No one is greatly interested in what happened a hundred years ago, except in regard to its significance today. If, however, professors refuse to discuss and compare modern conditions with archaic ones, if they do not think what is happening to-day is of any importance in the light of what took place yesterday, there should be no place for them at any seat of learning.

On the other hand, if a professor is vitally interested in modern problems but is afraid of making a statement concerning a topic of current importance, for fear the Loyal Blue Order of Oshkosh Orangemen will write in a voluble protest, and cause the speaker to lose his position, he is undoubtedly exaggerating the stress laid on nonsensical letters of this kind by the powers-that-be. Furthermore, he is withholding a statement that would be of great interest to a large number of students who are otherwise deprived of an authoritative view, and who have to depend on less reliable sources to assist in formulating their opinions.

It must be stressed again that The Varsity is not trying to trick professors into making statements that will create lurid headlines and blaring copy. All we are attempting to do is to put before the student body as a whole the views of men who have spent the better part of a lifetime studying the conditions concerning which they are interviewed. The student body wants these opinions and has a right to demand them. We cannot stand over our professors with billies and threaten them, as does the police force of the country to the south of us when giving a delinquent their notorious third degree, with the words "So you won't talk, eh?" All we can do is to show our attitude on the question, and hope that henceforth the professors at this university will consider it their duty to co-operate as fully as possible with our reporters.

Toronto Symphony

PROGRAMME

Prelude to "Lohengrin" ..... WAGNER
Siegfried's Rhine Journey ..... WAGNER
Prelude to "Die Meistersinger" ..... WAGNER

Symphony No. 5 in E Minor ..... TCHAIKOVSKY

Last night Dr. Ernest MacMillan conducted the first of the concert series of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, and while there is clearly plenty of room for improvement as the season progresses, I think nearly everybody went away pretty well satisfied.

There are, however, one or two objections to be made. First of all, for those who enthuse over Wagner and Tchaikovsky the programme was almost ideal, but it would not have suffered from a little more variety. And in the first two numbers particularly the playing tended to be painfully ragged; the brasses were at times atrocious. What is more important, they didn't seem to have caught the Wagnerian spirit. There was too much self-consciousness, too much mechanical rendition, and too little of the smoothly-flowing melody without which Wagner can be unbearable. On the other hand there were captivating moments of sheer ethereal beauty in the Prelude to "Lohengrin", and of sweeping, majestic rhythm in "Die Meistersinger" which fully justified the vigorous applause at the close of the first half of the programme.

In any case, the occasional weaknesses in the Wagner selections were more than made up for in the Tchaikovsky symphony. Tchaikovsky is essentially a romantic, and his work is the expression of pure emotional feeling rather than of any great intellectual depth, but after last night's rendition of the Fifth Symphony it is impossible to agree with his own criticism of it (which he later reversed) as containing "something repellent, something patchy, superfluous and insincere, which the public instinctively recognises." If the public did recognise anything of the sort, it concealed its feelings very well indeed. What the audience did recognise, and respond to, was an emotional power of which I had scarcely thought Tchaikovsky capable. The development from an opening mood of foreboding and almost despair to an ecstasy of semi-religious passion and on to the triumphantly magnificent Finale shows the sure, unfaltering hand of a master, and was masterfully interpreted by Dr. MacMillan and the orchestra.

Morris Dancers

We understand that some forty or fifty enthusiasts in the city are making a practice of dancing the English country dances which were published in 1650 by John Playford in his remarkable book "The Dancing Master". This book, we are informed, was compiled from practices of the age in which it was written, many of the dances having had remote origins in primitive tribal festivals and nature worship. The revival of the dances in these days is claimed to be justified by the undying vitality of our own deep-seated racial instincts. It is found that the dances can play their part in the social scheme of to-day and the revival of them is by no means the result of an affected interest in archaic forms for their own sake.

If members of the university should feel curious to know more of this development, the notice on the Bulletin Board will supply the necessary information.

With the Theatres

Shea's—

The beginning of "Golden Harvest", playing at Shea's this week, looks rather like old playhouse stuff. When a lean, hungry looking lawyer hands over the mortgages to be signed, he is easily recognized as Cyrus Skindint, the village mortgage shark. To add to the effect, when the oldest son leaves the homestead and goes to the big city against his father's wishes, the story seems to have settled into a well-worn rut. However, the rest of the story is quite original and the acting is almost perfect. While the stars are billed as Dick Arlen, Genevieve Tobin and Chester Morris, the most pleasing performance is given by Elizabeth Patterson, in a comedy role as the hired girl. By this it is not to be implied that the three stars did not measure up. Julie Haydon, a newcomer to the screen, was very sweet and innocent and calmly gave birth to twins as the little girl who stayed home and got married. There was a very interesting scene in which the operations in the Chicago wheat pit were dealt with in some detail.

The stage show this week is one of the best that has come to Toronto in many moons. Although there is no really outstanding feature, every act comes in for a good round of applause. The ventriloquist is probably the best performer. There are only two acts that could lose much in a trip to the laundry.

At the Theosophical Hall Dr. Alvin B. Kuhn in a lecture the other evening presented a mass of most interesting and important data relating the Platonic Theosophy of the Greeks to the basic principles of Christian theology. His address was illuminated with many parallel citations from the Bible on the one hand and the works of Plato and his later expounders, the Neo-Platonists, showing identical meanings.

Dr. Kuhn has extended his lecture on "The Myth of the Sun God into two parts the first of which will be given this week.

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—
Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.
Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.
Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.
Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

WARREN STEVENS APPOINTED SENIOR HOCKEY COACH

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

At last there seems to be something definitely doing in the basketball field. A meeting of the executive of the Basketball Club was held yesterday afternoon and representatives from every college and faculty entering a team were present. A schedule was drawn up which will be published some time this week—as soon as any minor adjustments have been made. The games will probably start next week.

To date there are nine teams in the league—two from Vic, three from U.C., one from each of St. Mike's, Meds, Public Health and Trinity. Last year O.C.E. put up a team but unfortunately they seem to have found it too difficult as their time is pretty well occupied so this year they are withdrawing from the schedule. Household Science has also decided not to enter a team.

Junior U.C., St. Hilda's, and Senior Vic seem to be the teams to watch. Senior Vic won the championship last year and have quite a few of the old players back. Strong teams are forthcoming from Junior U.C. and St. Hilda's so there ought to be some real battles fought out on the courts this season.

A new difficulty has arisen in basketball circles concerning the question of what class those in second year of the new pass course should be placed in. Last year they played senior but this year chances seem to be that they will be classed as juniors.

Montreal, Oct. 22.—With many returning Canadians and visitors from Great Britain and the continent, on board the Canadian Pacific liner Duchess of Bedford, Captain H. Sibbons, R.N.R., docked here Saturday from Liverpool, Belfast and Glasgow.

Prominent among those arriving were: Gervais Huxley, Chief Commissioner, Ceylon Tea Bureau, and F. E. B. Gourlay, who has been appointed by the Ceylon Government as Resident Commissioner in Canada of the Bureau of Tea. Also Mr. F. J. Bell, Miss G. Bell, N. Booth, J. D. Choppin, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Robertson, Mr. and Mrs. Duncane Robertson, Dr. and Mrs. D. K. O. King Smith, F. Walworth, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. A. Bon, of Aurora, Ont.; W. C. Church, Essex, Ont.; Mrs. F. G. Harris, Agincourt, Ont.; Miss V. M. Harvey, Ottawa; Mrs. B. Kyle, Windsor, Ont.; Captain D. P. White, Petrolia, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Morrow, Oakmount, Ont.

Montreal, Oct. 22.—Strengthening of the bonds of Empire through "the cup that cheers" will be sought in Canada, by the Ceylon Tea Bureau, of which two officials, Gervais Huxley, Chief Commissioner, and F. E. B. Gourlay, appointed as Resident Commissioner in Canada, arrived here Saturday in the Canadian Pacific liner Duchess of Bedford and will tour Canada in the interests of Ceylon's staple product.

"Canada is one of the world's largest consumers of tea, importing approximately 40,000,000 pounds, of which Ceylon at present supplies 8,500,000. The annual per capita consumption in Canada is about four and a half pounds. Every person in Great Britain consumes ten pounds a year. So we feel that there is room and opportunity for expansion of tea-drinking in Canada, and our hope is to increase Ceylon's share of the market." Mr. Huxley stated on arrival. He pointed out that Australians consume about eight pounds each annually.

How accident decided the staple industry of Ceylon and lost to the Empire its only extensive coffee plantations was described by Mr. Huxley, who said that before 1875 the island produced only coffee. Early in the seventies a disease peculiar to the coffee tree swept away the plantations and left ruin behind. In desperation the growers planted tea, and an industry born in despair quickly flourished.

SR. SCHOOL LOSE LACROSSE FIXTURE

Clipperton and Clarke Are Outstanding for Victoria

SCORE 8-5

Vic defeated Senior School 8 to 5 in a hard fought box lacrosse game yesterday afternoon in the Hart House gym.

Young of Vic opened the scoring on a pass from Clark after three minutes of play. These two again combined when Clark scored three minutes later. Clipperton of Vic opened the scoring in the second period by a beautiful lone play. Somerville of School retaliated two minutes later. A beautiful save by the Vic goal keeper robbed School of another tally. Brydon then scored a very lucky shot. Clarke came in alone immediately after to score again. Walters of School scored two beautiful goals without assistance in the third and Dolbear added another. Clipperton, playing a great game for Vic, added their sixth counter. The pace was much faster in the last period. School forced the play trying hard for a win but Vic were a little too much for them. King scored on a pass from Clark, who also scored Vic's last point a few minutes later. Somerville scored for School's last point.

Clipperton and Clark were the outstanding men on the floor. Walters appeared to be the best for the Engineers.

Victoria — English, Dyke, Young, Clipperton, Clark, Harlock, Brydon, King.

School — Kennedy, McLaughlin, Dolbear, Knapp, Somerville, Lilley, McMillan, Walters, Walchell.

Referee — W. G. Keys.

VOLLEYBALL OPENER TAKEN BY VICTORIA

Overcome Big Lead in First Game to Defeat U. C. by Close Score

TWO STRAIGHT WINS

Victoria defeated University College in the opening volleyball game of the season last night in the upper gym. Victoria won in two straight games, the scores being 15-13 and 15-1.

In the first game U.C. looked to be easy winners, leading by the score of 10-3 at one stage of the game but Vic settled down and tied it up at 10-10. From there to the end it was very close and after the score was tied at 13-13 Vic managed to take the necessary two points. In the second game U.C. gave their subs a chance and soon after the game had started Vic had a large lead. U.C. put in the regulars who held the opposition for a while, but finally succumbed to the more powerful opposition. Victoria showed more teamwork and also a superiority in the finer points of the game such as spiking.

Devitt and Hamilton were best for the winners, while Goulding and Thompson stood out for the losers.

Victoria — Devitt, Wallace, Cronin, Irwin, Hezlewood, Kearns, Putnam, McCready, Hossie, Minore, Hamilton. U.C. — Savlow, Weinstein, Thompson, Blanchard, Lipman, MacFarlane, Gardstein, Grand, Goulding.

Referee — Gould.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By John T. Stubbs

The announcement comes from the Athletic Offices that several new departures are in order for the coming season's hockey activities concerning both intercollegiate and interfaculty competition. Warren Stevens, Athletic Director at U. of T., will succeed Frank Sullivan as coach of the Varsity intercollegiate senior hockey team. It was the purpose of the Athletic Directorate when appointing a man to the Athletic Directorate of the University of Toronto, to appoint him first of all, to a position of supervision over all athletics and also to have him take over the coaching duties of the senior rugby and hockey teams. Last year Warren Stevens spent the winter months giving tuition to the senior cage team and their showing in the Big Five series gave evidence of his addition to the tutorial board of strategists in that department of Varsity sport. He has an intimate knowledge of the theory of hockey even though his experience as a player has not been very extensive. In this regard it might be pointed out that some of the greatest hockey coaches have been men who could not even skate. Cecil Hart of the Canadiens is on example. We are sure that the appointment of Stevens to this position will meet with the hearty approval of all the hockey players of the university and will arouse much more interest in the fastest of all games throughout the colleges.

This year there will be no intercollegiate intermediate hockey team representing the University of Toronto. This will no doubt make the senior and junior teams more powerful units in their respective series. Bill Dewar, who coached the intermediates last year, has been appointed as coach of the juniors and a good year has been forecast for them. Registration this year has included the names of several promising players who will be eligible for O.H.A. junior competition.

Contrary to groundless rumours afloat that there will be no O.H.A. senior entry from Varsity this year because of the amateur row this last summer, the U. of T. will play a double schedule with the six other outfits entered in the group. They include Kitchener, Hamilton, Niagara Falls, Port Colborne, University of Toronto, West Toronto Nationals, and Torontos. The West Toronto Nationals is the same team that went under the name of the National Sea Fleas for the last few years. The Torontos is the team which will represent the Toronto and Parkdale Canoe Clubs, who are entering senior competition for the first time. It will be made up of the players for the most part who played with the Marlboros last year, whose franchise was cancelled.

Yale will play here in an exhibition game on December 16th at the Varsity Arena and the student tickets will be allowed as admissions which is a break for the students. The usual Christmas trip has been arranged for the senior hockey team to include three games with the three strongest college teams of the Eastern States. On January 3rd they play Princeton and then they go Boston for the Harvard game on the 6th. On January 8th they play Yale at New Haven and not in New York as they did last year.

This year an attempt is being made to have the interfaculty hockey schedule played indoors at the Varsity Arena so no outdoor cushions will be built as has been the custom in previous years. The schedule will not likely be arranged to take place before the first of February. Even at that it will be sure to take place and not be hanging fire as has been the case for the last two years. And it will be run off and the winner decided just as soon. Mr. T. A. Reed, Financial Secretary of the Athletic Association, intimated that ice surface would be provided, weather permitting, on the rink in the Stadium for practices or the faculties may secure hours at the Arena if they wish. The Arena hours, of course, will have to be paid for by the faculties wishing to practice indoors.

The comments that have been heard since the football upsets of last Saturday have been interesting, to say the least. The Toronto Daily Star gives Varsity officials credit for coming out point-blank and admitting that Queen's won on their merits. Queen's did play the better football. There is no doubt about it and that is why we made no alibis for our defeat at the hands of the Tricolour. Varsity played inferior football but there are a few facts worthy of note. Jack Sinclair did not measure up to his usual performance. No other kicker could either if he were kicked, as Sinclair was kicked in the first quarter. If jumping at the kicker feet-first is a legal means of smothering kicks it's news to us. And perhaps you would be interested to know that four Varsity line men came out of Saturday's game with black eyes and two more with cut lips. The offenders knew that the Blue linenien would not be allowed to hit back. Nice fellows from Kingston's educational centre!

Next Saturday afternoon will be different in this respect. There will be none of that stuff pulled because Joe O'Brien will be the referee. And every football player knows that he can't get away

PARTIES COMPARED AT CLUB MEETING

The C.C.F. he regarded them as "two empty bottles with different labels". Turning to the C.C.F. the speaker emphasized the youth and development of this party. "It sprang from a fusion of labour bodies, United Farmers and the clubs which had sprung up in the towns. These clubs were the means of expression for unattached individuals who had no place among the labour and farm organizations."

Mr. Parkinson read over the headings of the Manifesto and discussed the fourteen points it contains. He paid special attention to the agricultural policy which "is couched in terms to satisfy both the farmers and the socialist doctrinaires. While nationalization of land was not mentioned agriculture would be controlled in a socialistic spirit."

with it when Joe is on the job. Joe was in Montreal for the Western-McGill game and he gave "Kewpie" Kennedy a breathing spell on the penalty bench. Yes, and the column of the Western Gazette will still stand behind Kennedy as one of the cleanest players in the intercollegiate series. That column is headed under the title "Whinnies from the Mustangs' Stalls". In our issue following the Western game the writer of this column made the statement that the fans did not appreciate the tackling methods of Mr. Kennedy here in Toronto. Following that the "Whinny" column took exception to our remark as savouring of sour grapes and made the statement that they would stand behind Kennedy as one of the cleanest players in the intercollegiate. Love is blind.

In a very sarcastic manner a day or two ago, a column on the Sport Page of the Telgram belittled the efforts of Varsity cheer leaders to put across a simple pep yell. Usually that same newspaper finds something to ridicule but the writer of that column must have been hard hit for news when he had to resort to that. Yes and he went so far as to say the bird who swings the curtain pole of the band is useless as well as the cheer leaders. As the writer of a column head "Sport Topics" he might look to his own laurels. It's kind of tough when a sports writer on a daily in the city of Toronto can't find enough sport to talk about without turning to cheer leaders with cutting sarcasm and showing an ignorance of the value of a drum major. For the benefit of that writer, that is what they call the leader of a band. He quotes Teddy Reeve, who also writes for the Telgram, as asking "What time does the next train leave for Kingston?" when asked what he thought of the new yell. The writer stated that Mr. Reeve turned pale and gasped. Maybe after next Saturday's game in Kingston, he will be asking when the next train leaves for Mexico, or maybe Switzerland. The yodelers are looking for a coach of some kind or other over there.

The game between O.A.C. and Vic up in Guelph yesterday turned out to be a real snow fight. Neither team was able to register a score and the only critical moment of the game was when O.A.C. booted over the deadline for what appeared to be a tally but Colner was able to wriggle back into safety.

VIEWS OF BENNETT FOUND UNFAVOURABLE

 cause they felt they were entitled to make a choice, an unnamed C. and F. student employed as an ice man in his holidays stated vehemently: "Absolutely not! The average student will take anything he can get during the summer. All he is looking for is money to pay his way through college. And, naturally, when a student graduates, he will look for work first in the vocation in which he has been trained at university." Ken Voss, I.S.P.S., was of a similar opinion.

H. C. Balber, III Meds, disagreed with the Premier that students are unemployed because they are "choosy". "So far as I can see students accept almost any job under the sun in order to pay their way. I think students have faced up to the depression better than a lot of other classes have."

"The reason students are unemployed, I think, is because there are simply no jobs for them. It is not because they are too 'choosy', as stated by Mr. C. Moorhouse, I Vic.

M. Honey, II S.P.S., said, "I can hardly agree with the Premier. I don't think that there are many positions open. I think that most students will willingly take a job."

 republic, has, as a consequence of the resignation of the cabinet, the right to call a general election in the event that a suitable cabinet is not forthcoming in the next few days. The chances that a cabinet can carry on under the present conditions in the House are not very great, since, in the opinion of M. de Champ, no policy could be adopted that would be in the general good of the country outside that on which Daladier has just been defeated, that is, balancing of the budget. If, in a new election, the Radical-Socialists were returned with a sufficient majority, this could be brought about. If they are returned with less seats than they now have, however, the coming months will see a considerable decrease in the value of the franc, and the immediate result that foreign investors at large will lose confidence in France's financial position and withdraw their funds, just as gold was withdrawn from England in September of 1931.

STUDENTS TO MANAGE ANTI-WAR MEETING

"Everyone seems very interested in the Anti-War Movement now being launched on the campus," said Sally Lunn, in an interview yesterday. "The appeal is even wider than we expected. Many people say that they have been wanting an organization of this kind for a long time, but did not know how to begin. We have decided to have only student speakers at the first meeting and hope that another will be arranged in the near future with some well-known speakers. As this is a meeting primarily for organization we thought the students could do it best themselves, and anyhow we want to make it a movement for action rather than talk."

"We've prepared a tentative programme of aims covering five points only," said Claude de Mestral, Vic 34. "We shall present them at our meeting on Friday and everybody will be free to voice his or her opinion. As a matter of fact we really hope that many valuable suggestions will come from the discussion. We wish to form a student organization in which everyone will take an active part. We rather advise the dilettante and amateur of sensationalism to keep away. It is only those who intend to take this matter seriously who will be of any use in the movement."

TRINITY WINS MULOCK GAME FROM JR. SCHOOL

Trinity Scores Two Rouges and Touchdown to Win 7-0

Yesterday afternoon on a muddy home ground, Trinity scored a decisive victory over Jr. S.P.S. by the score of 7 to 0. While School was unable to get within scoring distance, Trinity piled up two rouges and an unconverted touch to take a one-sided decision. In the first half both teams resorted to a kicking duel until Trinity finally put themselves in position for a rouge on the School 20-yard line. A'Court booted the point to put Trinity in the lead. Shortly before the close of the half another rouge was scored by A'Court and the half ended with the S.P.S. team struggling valiantly to break into the scoring column. After half time the already well

C.C.F. CLUB HEARS SPRY AT INITIAL MEETING

 ination and exploitation of one class by another will be eliminated, in which economic planning will supersede unregulated private enterprise and competition, and in which genuine democratic self-government, based upon economic equality will be possible. The present order is marked by glaring inequalities of wealth and opportunity, by chaotic waste and instability; and in an age of plenty it condemns the great mass of the people to poverty and insecurity."

The C.C.F., said Mr. Spry, is not endeavouring to save such a system, but it is rather attempting to found a new one.

He also brought to the fore such outstanding items of the programme as Socialization of Finance, Social Ownership and Freedom.

A discussion followed the address. This took the form of questions which were answered by Mr. Spry. Copies of the Manifesto were available at the end of the discussion and an opportunity of joining the membership list was afforded.

The weakness of the C.C.F., according to Professor Parkinson, lies in internal dissensions and the fact that at the Regina conference but six of the nine provinces were represented.

The extraordinary thing about the C.C.F. is that it proposes to accomplish its programme by the ordinary domestic channels with no recourse to force.

In closing the speaker emphasized the fact that he was merely giving the report of what he saw at the last conference at Regina and not advocating the policies of any one of the three parties.

PRICES OF BREAKFAST CHANGE IN GREAT HALL

Charge of Five Cents Per Item Gives Diners Wider Choice of Food

"The suggestion came from a number of the students themselves," stated Mr. J. B. Bickersteth, the Warden of Hart House, interviewed by The Varsity yesterday afternoon concerning the new breakfast prices in the Great Hall announced Monday. Instead of fixed prices for breakfasts served in the hall, male students are now being given a wide choice of fruits, cereals and other breakfast dishes at five cents per item.

The new system allows of the greatest range in choice and price, said the Warden. Asked if it would be feasible to apply the same plan to other meals served in Hart House, Mr. Bickersteth said "No. The prices for dinners and suppers are so very reasonable now that to have items individually priced would greatly increase the cost of the meal to the student."

"The attendance is keeping up very well, on the whole. The object of the Great Hall is to provide meals at as reasonable a price as possible and to break even on the attempt. The Hall Committee does not seek to make a profit, but they don't want to incur a deficit either. So far this year they are succeeding in doing so."

muddled field caused many fumbles for both teams, one of which was converted into a touch by Trinity. Morgan, breaking in fast on one of the School end runs, snatched up a poor pass and, without losing his stride, raced straight down the field to score five more points, and sew up the game for Trinity.

For Trinity Morgan, A'Court and Owen were effective, while for School Clark, Sharwood and Hall performed well.

Trinity — Flying wing, Minet; halves, A'Court, Owen, Morgan; quarter, E. Welch; snap, Stratton; insides, Osler, Bosley; outsides, MacLaughlin, Osborne; middles, Woodhouse, Fraser; subs, Millard, R. Woodhouse, Parker, Scrivner, Lash.

Mr. Pepys Peeps

Tuesday, October 24.
 Awoke this morning in a vile mood, which was not helped any by the weather. Rain all day with splattering of snow. Prepared my own lunch, but the potatoes were lumpy and the beef stringy, so I ate very little. Spent the afternoon reading some very dry philosophies and felt exceedingly depressed.

Felt little inclined for food this evening, but decided I must eat something. Wandered over to Bay Street in search of something to tempt my appetite. Was much struck by the cheery appearance of a new Eating-House, designated "The Good Companions" so entered in and inspected the menu. While waiting to be served looked about me and found the place most pleasing. Lights not too bright, and atmosphere cosy and most homelike. Found the dinner excellent, and consumed much more than I had thought I could—mushroom soup, tender steak, salad and a flaky pie like of which I had not tasted since leaving home. Finished off with coffee and a cigarette. Dawdled somewhat over my food, which I relished the more as there was a pile of recent magazines at hand to dip into as I ate.

On leaving presented my compliments to the cook and regretted that I could scarce afford such an epicurean repast more frequently. Was much surprised to learn that food of the same quality was also served at lunch-time, at very special prices. Heard a great hubbub in an adjoining room and on making enquiries was told it was a party of some thirty or more ladies holding a dinner meeting. Complimented mine hostess on her wisdom in giving them a private room to themselves. Learned also of a delightful innovation, to wit, a separate room for gentlemen who wish to dine in the exclusive company of their own sex. Felt assured it would be much appreciated by those who prefer the fragrance of strong tobacco and masculine conversation to the incessant chatter of the decorative sex.

Took my leave in a spirit of utmost contentment and proceeded to Massey Hall where a most excellent concert was performed. Returned finally to my rooms, much better pleased with myself and the world than I had been in some time. And so to bed.

FACULTY REPLY TO CRITICISM WITH ALACRITY

Professors Willing to Talk on Topics of Some Degree of Importance

DISLIKE BEING PESTERED

Students Believe that Some Benefits Could be Derived from Staff Opinions

"Is there any likelihood of a professor being called on the carpet for expressing his views too freely?" The Varsity asked President Cody in connection with yesterday's editorial on "Our Silent Staff".

"There have not been any professors called onto the carpet yet, have there?" the President replied, and went on to explain that what a professor says or does not say depends largely on himself. If a professor does not wish to give his opinion on a matter that may be due to a great many reasons, but the President did not say that fear of losing his job was one of them.

Professor Meek of University College stated that while he sometimes declined to grant interviews to downtown papers he had always tried to oblige The Varsity. "Of course," he went on to explain, "There are issues about which it does no good to give an opinion. For example, some matters are of such little importance that a person giving an opinion would only stir up a hornet's nest by becoming involved, and therefore if nothing of importance is at stake I sometimes decline to give an interview."

Professor Morgan had not read the editorial but when told that it criticized Linked with Politics in India

THIRD IN SERIES

A striking presentation of the problems of Christianity in India, and the causes for hopelessness regarding Christianity's future there, formed the third in a series of lectures by Mr. William Paton, in Trinity College library. In India and Buena there are six and one quarter millions, of which a large proportion belong to the ancient Syrian Church, said to have been founded by St. Thomas. Christianity as a whole is increasing as is no other group, except the Sikhs. The high percentage of literacy among the Christian women and the fact that Christian infant mortality is the lowest are very encouraging developments. Mr. Paton stated that a Hindu on becoming a Christian was obliged to change his political opinions as the elections in India are on the basis of religion. The Church does not wish

CONTEMPORARY OPINION

The following excerpt from the "Orillia Packet and Times" editorial of Oct. 19, is in reply to a letter written by Principal W. L. Grant of Upper Canada College, and printed in the "Mail and Empire" of Oct. 10.—The Editor.

"Turning to the question of the carrying out of political propaganda in the universities, Dr. Grant is mistaken in supposing that we are bent on a heresy hunt among the professors, or that we are opposed to freedom of speech in the colleges. As far as the student body is concerned, we should not be inclined to interfere with the wildest possible expression of views in their debates and gatherings, provided discussion is given free play, so that all sides of the case will be presented, and is not regimented from above. Neither do we object to university professors making their contribution to the discussion of the political and economical problems of Canada and of the world, again provided that it is done at the proper time and in the proper place, and that their manner of expressing their views is in keeping with their profession. But when certain professors undertake to provide the brains for a political party, and when their public deliverances are marked by savage scorn for the country's institutions and public men, common prudence suggests that a sharp lookout should be maintained to ensure that they are not making use of their position in the universities to win recruits for their pet political organization. The suspicion that such a thing might be done blossoms almost into certainty when one runs across such a piece of evidence as was quoted from an Edmonton paper, in which a university student told of having heard a professor challenge his students "to organise ourselves and jump into the political arena with the insight which was denied to our elders." Is it to be wondered at if we imagine that the organization the professor had in mind was the C.C.F. and that his idea of "political insight" was contained in a certain constitution or manifesto provided for that party by a "brain trust" of university professors?

SLANG AGE OLD SAY PROFESSORS

Americans Have Made More Use of Slang Than Others

NO AUTHORITY ON SLANG

The use of slang words and expressions by President Roosevelt in some of his recent speeches has given rise to the question of whether his using them is sufficient authority to say what is correct and what is incorrect in this field of the English language. The Bureau of Education of Washington, an organization which collects new words and traces their origin, has taken note of such words as "chizler" used recently by Roosevelt.

Professor Knox of the Department of English, University College, stated when interviewed by The Varsity that "Nobody has the authority to say whether a slang expression be correct or incorrect. One may be justified in coining words, but in English you cannot legislate about the language." Professor Knox referred to Shakespeare's works as containing plenty of phrases which were not necessarily slang. In distinguishing between the terms coining and slang, Professor Knox stated that, "Coining is not always slang since scientists coin new technical words which are certainly not of the latter class." He felt that slang was "more prevalent in the States on account of the mixture of languages and nationalities, and that all complications of life demand new terms," and added that his opinion was, "not against the coining of new words. If new words are used they may be taken very cautiously. If there is a place for them they will be retained, otherwise, they will be forgotten."

Mr. Endicott, of the staff of English Literature, U.C., pointed out that Shakespeare's works are rich in coinage. He also noted that in the United States the speech of the educated and the uneducated have no fixed standard, which helps create vivid slang.

Professor Smith of the Department of Classics, U.C., replied to The Varsity's inquiry that, "The President's using slang expressions only draws attention and makes their usage more

OPPOSITE OBJECTS IN MONEY POLICY

Monetary Policy of Roosevelt Contains Many Inherent Contradictions

TO RESULT IN INFLATION

"Roosevelt's monetary policy contains inherent contradictions," was the opinion of Professor L. T. Morgan, when interviewed yesterday by The Varsity. "Part of the plan seems to aim at raising prices, whereas it also states that the purchasing power of money will remain constant." Doctor Morgan also stressed the point that even the greatest monetary theorists differ as to the efficacy and desirability of managed currency. "In economic theory a sound case for a managed currency can perhaps be made—whether it is politically possible remains to be seen."

Mr. J. F. Parkinson considered the proposal to fix the American price for gold above the world price to have an inflating flavour. Increases in circulation would be undertaken for the purchase of gold, and theoretically, a smaller weight of gold would become the reserve behind a larger circulation. This would result in a depreciation of the dollar in terms of other gold currencies. Higher prices would mean competition for imports. This would be partially overcome by a depreciated dollar and higher tariffs would do the rest. The higher tariffs would be unfortunate from an international point of view. Although critical of the N.R.A., Mr. Parkinson stated that his criticism must not be inferred as a sneer against it, since nothing could be worse than the political and social situation preceding N.R.A.

Another prominent member of the staff of the Department of Economics, Mr. A. F. W. Plumtree, concurred with Mr. Parkinson on many points. He agreed that it was psychologically necessary for Roosevelt to undertake

U.C. FALL DANCE AGAIN SUCCESSFUL

Last night the university social season opened with the annual University College Fall Dance. One hundred and fifty-five couples danced to the lifting strains of one of Romanelli's orchestras in the Crystal Ballroom of the King Edward Hotel, amid the play of lights deflected from a central beam by the big crystal globe suspended in the centre of the ceiling.

The crowd, while large, was not congested in the spacious room and the livelier tunes were responded to by the youthful dancers with much vim. The resplendent colour of the young ladies' dresses, long and graceful, gave charm and clan to the evening.

The patronesses were Mrs. M. W. Wallace, Miss M. B. Ferguson and Miss I. M. Biss. The committee in charge of the dance was headed by F. W. Woods, who is Social Director and third vice-president of the University College Literary and Athletic Society, and he was assisted by A. S. Lanning, B. W. Ball and H. G. Skillington, president of the Lit.

NEED FOR DICTATORSHIP DENIED AT HART HOUSE DEBATE, 168-47

Carillon Recital

On Sunday next, 29th October, the carillon of the University of Toronto will be played from 4 p.m. to 5 p.m. and on this particular occasion by a ruling of the Board of Stewards members of the public will be permitted to enter Hart House between the hours of 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. and inspect the building. Under ordinary circumstances entrance to Hart House is only possible for those who are introduced by members.

Special to "The Varsity"
Winnipeg, Manitoba, (C.I.P.).—Definite announcement has been made by the University of Manitoba Debating Union here that it will hold a series of three radio debates—one with each of the western Canadian universities. This programme follows a policy inaugurated by the Union last year.

The first debate is to be held with the University of Saskatchewan on November 19, and will be the only one in which the University of Manitoba will participate in 1933.

To open its forensic program for 1934, Manitoba will meet the University of Alberta on January 19. The last controversial discussion over the air yet definitely arranged has been

The Undergraduate, the official University College magazine, is to be brought out early next term. Anyone in any year of University College who is interested in making our magazine a representative and interesting publication is urged to meet the editors at 3 p.m., Wednesday, November 1st, in Room 67, U.C.

There are several positions vacant on the business staff as well as the literary staff, and your support and co-operation are needed. If you cannot be there, leave your name at the U.C. Lit. office or the Women's Varsity office in U.C., in care of The Undergraduate.

Big Majority Rejects Fascism

of Europe

M.P. IS GUEST SPEAKER

Exchange of Words Between Eisendrath and Slater Adds Interest

Last night's Hart House debate, on the motion "That the Recovery of Europe is only possible under national dictatorships" was featured by an exchange of words between two guest speakers, Rabbi Eisendrath and Rev. Dr. Slater, who both voted on the opposition, but for entirely different reasons. The motion was defeated by a vote of 168 to 47.

Rabbi Eisendrath grew heated in his eloquence in describing the subjugation of the German people. "I will never be willing to yield to one man all the capacities that mark me as a human being," he said, "through the democratic method we arrive at the truth." Dr. Slater challenged this statement, citing the post-war election in England and the Versailles treaty as an example of the democratic method and the result at which it arrived. He pointed out that a democratic legislator must keep in mind the attitude of the electors. "I vote on the negative side of the house for every reason opposed to those just put forward by Rabbi Eisendrath," he stated, and openly laughed at the Rabbi's statement that through democracy we reach the truth.

If an ideal dictatorship could be reached, said Dr. Slater, I should vote on the other side. But the national dictators today rely on an appeal to military spirit, and the fear of the people for their existence.

The motion was introduced by J. M. Patrick, who declared that when disagreement occurred on fundamental issues, a dictatorship was necessary to take over the crisis. He cited instances in history of successful dictatorships, and pointed out several instances of modern dictators who, he claimed, had

"I got shoes—you got shoes—all God's chillun got shoes" . . . Yes, we have shoes, you and I, but have we the thing that matters, in the long run infinitely more than shoes—a faith in, and reliance on that something we call God?

Of course—we need shoes—Christ, the Supreme Rationalist, was the first to acknowledge this. "Man shall not live by bread alone," He said; for He realized the difficulty of being spiritual on an empty stomach. . . . We do need bread then for the physical part of us, and we need "white hyacinths for our souls." But what of the spirit? How many of us are spiritually starving? Primarily we need God.

When will the world realize that Christianity is not sickly sentimentalism, not a sedative, not hypocrisy? Christianity is a religion for strong men and for brave women—Christ had the heart of a lion.

Being a Christian today is a privilege—not a duty.

Being a Christian will prove a man for what he's worth.

Being a Christian is not for Sundays, it's for every minute of every day.

Being a Christian is the highest calling a man can have in the twentieth century.

Are you trying to square a kindergarten conception of Christianity with your college philosophy of life? No wonder it's out of date and worse than useless. Find an unsuspected freedom in Christianity . . . You

A COURSE IN INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

University students are taking their politics very seriously, and their interest is not solely in affairs in their own country, if one may judge by the deliberate and weighty addresses delivered in the Debates Room at Hart House last night. Each speaker gave evidence of having made a thorough study of affairs in Europe, and the House seemed willing to listen endlessly to a debate on a subject which a few years ago might have been regarded as dry and tedious by the average student.

Evidently undergraduates are willing and eager to make a study of international relations. The attention which is being focused today on various European powers has stimulated discussion and thought on the topic. We understand that students in the Modern History course are given an opportunity to take a course in international relations in a small and intensive study group. The Department of Extension provides opportunity for a similar study in a course labelled Currents Events. But the average student, the Pass Course student in Arts if you like, is offered no option of this kind. His only choice is to take one of the more specialised courses in the departments of economics or political science.

We would suggest that there should be added to the curriculum a general course in international relations, which would not be highly technical, nor too intensive, and which would give the interested student a chance to study a subject which is becoming increasingly important. Such a course could be made optional, as is the course in Military Studies, or some of the courses listed under the head of Religious Knowledge.

The course would be greatly appreciated by a number of students who are now given no leadership in discussion or stimulus for thought on this subject. It could be made one of the most interesting courses on the curriculum. More than that, it would give those professors who for various reasons object to airing their views on political and international problems publicly a chance to express themselves in the classroom before an appreciative and eager audience.

HOG'S HEAD GLARES EMMANUEL STARES

Pig Head Hangs in Gory State
As Residents Their Fate
Do Wait

MOVE IT WHO DARES!

Enthroned on an upper story window sill, at Second House, Emmanuel College Residence, and basking in the powerful glare of an improvised spotlight, a gory pig's head met the startled gaze of The Varsity's War Correspondent while hurrying across Queen's Park at an early hour this morning. Investigation revealed that the solemn parading, dedicating and christening of the severed swine head had preceded its elevation to the place of prominence. Chief Justice C. C. Calder, official mouthpiece of the House, explained that the heated and continued political strife that has been raging in the residence since the beginning of the term had been in this spectacular manner brought to a head. Cause of the uprising was said to be the much criticized rule of Dean Johnston, but the Government party rose to the support of their leader and succeeded in staying in power by right of might.

"The pig's head will remain on the ledge till Friday of this week," stated the Chief Justice, "and after that we will be glad to consider the best offer of all interested parties." Legal action would follow any attempt to remove the head before Friday it was declared.

Sought out for an interview by The Varsity, Dean Johnston took upon himself professorial privilege and refused brought their countries safely through a time of crisis. "There is no more reason," he said, "to obey a majority than to obey a single man."

J. C. Wood, the leader of the opposition, deplored the situation where people believed the fairy stories about ideal dictators who would lead them out of their difficulties. He pointed out that during prosperity people did not like to think of being controlled by a dictator, but in times of national economic and political collapse, people want to pass the responsibility to a dictatorship.

A. R. Tilley, the second speaker for the government, stated that the machinery of democratic legislation was too slow to handle a crisis. "If policies were adopted," he said, "because of their intrinsic merit rather than for their effect on the minds of the electors, many policies now in force would not exist."

The second speaker of the opposition, J. S. Craig, said, "The philosophy of intolerance refuses to admit the wisdom of any but itself, and seeks to put ruling power into the hands of a certain class or person."

J. E. Lawson, M.P., spoke for a few moments in favour of the opposition. "To admit that those who control the credit also control the government, is to assume that the voters of the country are without morals, to which I cannot agree."

to talk. As if fearing further attacks upon his office, or himself, the Dean was last observed crawling deeper into the depths of the clothes closet, in study number 13.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

Music Appreciation

A series of lectures by F. J. Horwood, Mus. Doc., of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, is being given in Victoria College each Monday and Thursday, commencing October 30 at 4 o'clock. These lectures are for all who have musical interests of any kind, and will be designed to further general appreciation. It is not necessary that those who attend have any practical attainments in the musical field; but if it is found expedient, the class may be divided. The first series will consist of fifteen lectures, lasting till December 18. Another series may then be arranged, if the interest in the lectures seems sufficient to warrant it. Details concerning registration for these lectures may be obtained from Dr. Horwood at the Toronto Conservatory.

FORMATION OF MEN'S GLEE CLUB IMMINENT

A meeting of any men students interested in chorus or glee club work will be held in the west common room, Hart House, on Friday evening at 8 o'clock. Mr. Allan Sly of the Toronto Conservatory of Music will address the meeting on glee club work in other universities. It is expected that there will be discussion on former enterprises of this kind around Toronto, and the possibility of some such undertaking in the near future.

There are no definite plans as yet, and if some organization is evolved its nature will be determined by those who form it. Mr. Sly, who has wide knowledge of this field, has offered to be responsible to any committee which may take up the matter. Whether any project materializes will, of course, depend upon the enthusiasm and suggestions of those who attend this meeting.

DENTS REGISTER SOCCER VICTORY

Rey, Dempster and Valiquette
Score to Give Dents
7 to 0 Win

MANY FUMBLES

Yesterday afternoon the cold front campus saw Dents win by a 2-1 score a hard earned soccer game from Meds. Both teams were willing and tried hard all the time but play was ragged and the ball was often needlessly lost through the lack of smooth combination work.

The dentists had the more powerful attacking machine and time and again worked the ball close enough for a shot. Outerbridge, in the medical goal, was never idle and made some difficult saves and was a main factor in keeping dents to two tallies. Mason opened the scoring for Dents with a clever goal on a corner play, and the second counter was chalked up to Stapleton, who netted the ball on a fine pass from Linkin. The medical students made several near attempts, but were unable to score until MacEwan drilled the ball home on a penalty kick.

Dents — Young, Cowan, Sprott, Mackie, Galbraith, Brown, Linkin, Mason, Stapleton, Boyes, Pon. Sub, MacNeil.

Meds — Outerbridge, Campbell, Robertson, Mulligan, MacEwan, Feldman, Green, Lore, MacKeown, Rosenbaum, Sneed. Subs, Collins, Korman. Referee — D. MacCullough.

INTERMEDIATE TRACK TEAM ANNOUNCED

The university intermediate track team leave today for London where they will participate in the annual intercollegiate intermediate track meet on Friday. McMaster will be the defending champions this year, having won an easy victory last year.

Although only nine men are representing Varsity at London all these men have more than an even chance of being point winners. This is particularly true in the sprints, Smith and O'Leary being capable of covering the century and two hundred yard distances in near record time.
100 yards—Smith, O'Leary.
200 yards—O'Leary, Smith.
440 yards—Walker.
880 yards—Fleming.
One Mile—Thompson.
Three Mile—Thompson.
Discus—Greer.

A great disclosure is imminent—base capitalism is rampant at the provincial seat of learning!

C—C
While students are tearing hither and thither searching for typewriters and pickaxes to bring about the utter demolition of one of the oldest and most venerable landmarks in the adjoining park, the very vitality of the university is slowly sapped by schemes for profit, which eventually will turn this worthy institution into a department store.

C—C
The Cat must sound the tocsin—down with the racketeers!!

C—C
This vain lust for gain originated in the halls of industry—the School of Practical Science, but is spreading like wildfire. It must be stopped.

C—C
When first the news was heard that the Engineers were being assessed the atrocious sum of one cent for a fill of ink, the Cat raised its bewhiskered mug in haughty dignity, and remained aloof, but now that the mania has reached the very core, to wit, University College, the time for action has arisen.

C—C
No longer are the members of the U.C. Lit. permitted the use of the phone at will, this commercialism has crept in, and the almighty cent must again be deposited. Cruel fate, how could it be?

C—C
7,000 students at the university each filling his pen and phoning his mother-in-law would net these profiteers the fabulous sum of $140,000 a day, enough, we contend, to install a heating system in the library, at the end of the fiscal year. Where does this money go? Where does it come from? How does it get there? Who cares anyway? These are questions which must be answered!!

C—C
In the event that this base commercialism continues to rear its unsightly head among the fair youth of our land, there should be still another commission.

C—C
Of course a salary would be preferred by Kugur.

LOW RATE FOR TRIP TO KINGSTON GAME

Round trip tickets for Kingston are now on sale at the S.A.C. office, for Saturday's game. The Varsity was informed today. It is expected that Toronto Varsity will be represented, especially as the rate has been reduced to the extremely low figure of $3.25 return.

A train will leave Toronto Union Station Kingston-bound at 8 Saturday morning, another bearing the rejoicing students back will leave the Kingston depot at 6.45 p.m. It is not essential that the students return by the 6.45 as there will be several others leaving after that time.

The Varsity was informed by the S.A.C. secretary, that as far as she knew no social arrangements had been made for the entertainment of the boys while at Kingston, but that it was to be expected that a dance would be held as on previous years. All who contemplate the trip will be interested to know that the Varsity band is going in full force.

phazise the death element in my own interpretation of Hamlet, who will be represented as essentially an evil character. While the King, who will be portrayed by Mr. Raymond Card, will be represented as a good man."

"But is not this contrary to a long tradition of Hamlet interpretations by celebrated Shakespearean actors, Mr. Knight?" we asked.

"The whole treatment," continued Professor Knight, "hinges on the fact that I consider the play primarily as a death vision and in order to bring out the death element which is voiced by the ghost, Hamlet must be represented as a character under the influence of the ghost, which is fundamentally evil."

The cast includes Josephine Barrington as Ophelia, Dorothy Foster as the Queen, Randolph Crowe as Laertes, Robin Godfrey as Horatio, Lyndon Smith as Polonius, and Professor E. A. Dale as the Ghost.

SPEAKING FRENCH SOLE AIM OF CLUB

Professor Hare, honorary president of the Victoria College French Club at its first meeting in Wymilwood on Wednesday evening, defined the aim of the club as an attempt to hear more French actually spoken and to have it spoken by the students. He advised the students to be bold, and not to creep off into quiet corners to mutter French to themselves. Professor Hare was introduced by the president, Royce Robertson, and after his speech, Basil Penlington was elected as the first year representative.

Later a French play, Leur Jour, was presented by three of the members. This amusing farce was so ably roached by Mademoiselle Reize that every word could be clearly heard. After the play refreshments were served and the meeting broke up about ten-thirty.

MR. PICOBAC CONFERES WITH A BANK "DIRECTOR"

In the course of his investigation into pipe-smoking conditions in Montreal, Mr. Picobac penetrated the sacred precincts of St. James Street, some times referred to as "the financial heart of Canada." Lost within the pillared temple of a great Canadian bank, Mr. Picobac was gazing about him in admiration.

"Can I direct you, sir," said the voice of a uniformed attendant at his elbow.

Mr. Picobac thus accosted, seized the opportunity of verifying his suspicion that the magnates of Montreal know more about the financial situation than they give out for publication. "Tell me, Mr. Director," said he, "where do we go from here?"

"We are going to slip down into the porters' room in the basement and have a mild... cool... sweet smoke," replied the "director." "Pleased to meet you, Mr. Picobac."

Mr. Picobac's genial countenance has become so familiar in the newspapers that he is now recognized on sight.

He finds Picobac tobacco—the pick of Canada's burley crop grown in sunny southern Ontario—a "best seller" wherever he goes. Have YOU tried it?

—and don't forget, you get more tobacco for your money.

Good for making cigarettes, too.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

At a meeting of the baseball club on Saturday a schedule was drawn up for this season's league. The four teams competing are Meds, St. Mike's, U.C. and Vic and all of them have been holding practices—more or less satisfactory. Somehow or other practices never seem to be all they might be but the teams have the happy faculty of gathering up the loose ends and pulling together quite harmoniously when it comes down to the final thing. All the teams so far are showing about the same amount of promise—which should make things interesting.

Meds have not yet been able to make complete arrangements about a gym, with the result that they are not sure when or where their home games will be played. However, St. Mike's have arranged to play their home games in St. Alban's gym and Vic gym will be the scene of both U.C. and Vic home games.

The baseball schedule is as follows:
Nov. 2 St. Mike's vs U.C.
Meds vs Vic
7 Meds vs U.C.
Vic vs St. Mike's
St. Mike's vs Meds
9 U.C. vs Vic
10 U.C. vs St. Mike's
14 St. Mike's vs Vic
U.C. vs Meds
16 Vic vs U.C.
Vic vs Meds
17 Meds vs St. Mike's

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By B. J. McGuire

The intercollegiate football series has reached the halfway mark with each team having played three games and three left in the series. Theoretically speaking, all four teams still have a chance to walk off with the title. At present Queen's and Varsity are tied at the head of the group with two wins and one loss each. McGill and Western are tied with one win and two losses. Now the loser of the Varsity-Queen's game will be tied for second place with the winner of the McGill-Western game with two losses and two wins each. If then Varsity and McGill win on Saturday and Queen's and McGill win their next game and Varsity loses a game a three-cornered tie will result. So what?

The B. W. & F. Club got off to an early start this season. Mr. Walters already has a large fencing class which would indicate that this sport is in for another big season. The boxing and wrestling rooms are beginning to see a little action as the boys interested in the cauliflower business get down to work. Although hostilities have not opened in earnest they are due to begin any day now. The boxing game received a jolt when it was discovered that John Dimnick, classy light heavyweight, had neglected to pass his matriculation. So after three years at Varsity Dimnick has been refused admittance for the present term. This leaves Smith, 126 pounds, the only member of the intercollegiate team of last year to be available for action. However, from observing the talent some of the football players displayed on Saturday along this line, Coach Jackson's job of lining up a new team would not appear so difficult.

Tonight at Ravina Rink the Varsity hockey hopefuls will take their first step in search of laurels. Coach Stevens has a difficult job on his hands. He is faced with the task of assembling practically a new team and going after O.H.A. and intercollegiate hockey honours. Most of the team will be composed of recruits from last season's intermediates. The defense will be a tough spot to work on with last year's seniors all out and Campbell of the intermediates a doubtful starter. This leaves Pete White as the only outstanding defense man available. The forward line will have plenty of candidates, Sweeney, Poupore, Rey and Valiquette of the seconds all look like good prospects. The material for the junior team will be out for inspection on Monday when the first practice will be held at Varsity Arena.

The old Mulock Cup schedule is nearing the halfway mark and it looks like the same teams will be in there again in the playoffs. Les Blackwell's squad of freshmen have completed one round of their schedule without a defeat. Senior School and Vic are also meeting with success in their groups. Dents may also be heard from before the season is over. This squad have plenty of defensive power but as yet have fallen down badly on the attack. Yards have been made through their lines on plunges only once in three games. This is certainly an indication of strength.

Tomorrow the intermediate track title will be decided at London. The Varsity representatives will consist of a nine man team. However, most of these men are granted a good chance to chalk up wins in their events. If this little band can defeat the powerful McMaster and Western teams they will be achieving something worth while.

With a minute to go—and the game in the bag—there are still two more plays for the hoys to make: one to the showers and the other on the nearest telephone to tell the glad tidings to the folks at home. So they smile in pleasant anticipation.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE DEFEATS JR. S.P.S.

Coulter's Brilliant Playing Gives U. C. Their First Lacrosse Victory

WIN 16 TO 9

Everybody out.
Yesterday afternoon in the big gym in Hart House, Junior U.C. won a 16 to 9 victory over the Junior School team in the box lacrosse league. For the first quarter the teams seemed to be fairly evenly matched but beginning with the second quarter, the U.C. team had the advantage. During the second quarter they piled up a good lead and managed to add to it in the remaining half of the game.
Coulter for U.C. played an outstanding game, scoring the greater number of their goals. The U.C. goalie also, although hard pressed in the third quarter, kept his goal well. Jacob and Sharp played well on the School team. Toward the end the game became harder but School were unable to overcome the big lead.
U.C. — Coulter, Harwood, Stobie, Fullerton, Warner; subs, Smith, Robb, Galloway, Bissel.
S.P.S. — Jacob, Taylor, Sharp, Hamilton, Miller; subs, Bruce, Bates, Referee — Allison.

WYCLIFFE COLLEGE LOSE TO PHARMACY

Lucky Goal in the Second Half Gives Drugists 1 to 0 Victory

GAME CLOSE

Scoring a lucky goal in the beginning of the second period, Pharmacy barely nosed out the Wycliffe soccerites, 1-0, in an interfaculty soccer fixture played on the front campus yesterday afternoon.

The goal which decided a hard-fought game came with a very great tinge of luck, when, after the Drugists had succeeded in getting the ball towards their opponents' end, one of the Wycliffe fullbacks, in trying to clear, kicked the ball, which struck McGibbon, another Wycliffe man, and was deflected into the goal.

Both teams fought fairly evenly for the major part of the game, but Wycliffe faded badly when they had Wilson, the Pharmacy goalie at their mercy. After Pharmacy scored their goal, Wycliffe put up a desperate fight, breaking through time and time again only to have Wilson beat their shots.
Simmonds and Wood were the best that Wycliffe could offer in the way of effectiveness, while Wilson was Pharmacy's shining star. Wilson and Milburn were also effective for Pharmacy, both combining for many spectacular plays.

Pharmacy — Goal, Wilson; fullbacks, Armour, McDougall; halves, Evans, Hoffman, Eisenbach; forwards, Ramsey, Bridgette, Milburn, Wilton, Ballantyne.

Wycliffe — Goal, Morrissey; fullbacks, McGibbon, Cranshaw; halves, Gearey, Nickle, Cleverdon; forwards, Phillips, Simmonds, Toone, Prior and Wood.

Referee — D. P. Roland.

DENTS VICTORIOUS OVER KNOX COLLEGE

Both Teams Play Ragged Ball
as Dentists Go Into Lead

SCORE 2 TO 1

Knox College went down to their third defeat in the Mulock Cup series when they clashed with Dents on the back campus last night. The Dentists registered a 7-0 victory and only fumbles at critical moments kept them from running up a much larger score.

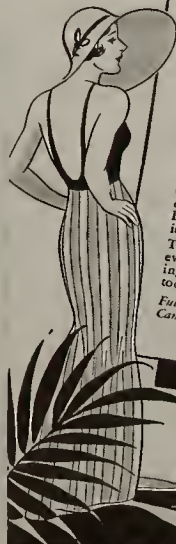

The defeat of Knox practically spells elimination for them as finalists in the interfaculty series. On the other hand the victory for Dents has put them right back in the race. This team has plenty of power defensively and only need to develop a little more punch and they will be a hard team to beat.

Dempster opened the scoring for Dents in the second quarter when he booted to the deadline. Rey added a major to their score with only a minute left to play in this quarter.

No further scoring was done till the final frame when Valiquette attempted a drop kick which went wide for a point. A long kick by Dempster put the play on the Knox ten yard line at the beginning of the last quarter. Dents spent most of the time till the final whistle blew between here and the 25 yard line. Twice they appeared to be ready to add a touch to their total but fumbled. A Rey to Spiers play which carried the ball over the line was called back just as the whistle blew to end the game.

set for February 16, with the University of British Columbia.

The debates will be broadcast by the network of stations comprising the western hook-up of the Canadian Radio Commission.

The subjects for discussion have been selected as yet, but will probably be announced in the near future along with the names of those who will uphold the honour of Manitoba on the platform.

In judging the debates the reception has to be taken into consideration, so that as far as possible the adjudicators will be placed at an intermediate point between the two stations from which the debaters are speaking.

E. Maxwell Cohen, president of the U.M.S.U., also announced that the N.F.C.U.S. was attempting to arrange a debate between Manitoba and McGill University. Although nothing definite has been settled, hopes are being entertained that the engagement may materialize. If it does the debate will in all probability be broadcast by the Canadian Radio Commission.

CONTEMPORARY OPINION

"Free speech has its limitations, for various reasons. Judges, for instance, are not expected to express political views of any kind. Ministers of the gospel are apt to get into trouble if they indulge in politics in the pulpit, and while they are at liberty to do so as citizens, it is a privilege they will find it wise to use sparingly. School teachers would raise a row if they undertook to impress their political preferences on their pupils, and even as citizens usually consider it judicious to moderate in their party enthusiasms. Dr. Grant himself is the head of one of the leading educational institutions of the province. He would not, we venture to say, for a moment tolerate efforts on the part of any of his staff to make Grits or Tories of the pupils of Upper Canada College. University professors are in a somewhat similar position. Theirs is the privilege and opportunity of supplying the youth of the country with the foundation and background for their thinking. To our mind, they go beyond their function if they indulge in political propaganda or endeavour to attach the students to political causes or exhort them to political action. This is one of the points upon which we think there is need for a clear understanding and for definite standards.

Dr. Grant delivers a Parthian shaft, with which he hopes to awaken our fears for the liberty of the Press. "I thank thee, Roderick, for that word." We should have hesitated to refer to the subject ourselves, lest we should appear to be dragging into the argument what might be deemed more or less personal considerations. It is chiefly because we fear for the liberty, not only of the Press, but of the whole citizenry, that we look with misgiving on the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation to which a group of university professors gave form and substance at Regina last spring. We know that they disavow any desire for dictatorial powers. They would scarcely, at this stage, admit such an intention; they may be quite sincere in declaring that they do not harbour any thought of it. But the left wing of the British Socialists, which includes many of its intellectual leaders, has been driven by circumstances or impatience openly to declare that if they attain power they will use it to crush opposition. Already the same tendency has made its appearance in Canada. Only last week the British Columbia section of the C.C.F. adopted a constitution frankly dictatorial in character. A junta of nine members of the party is to have complete control of all members of the legislature, and through them of all the business of the province. The manner on which this is to be accomplished is set forth in the following clause:

"Candidates for election to public bodies must, before being so announced, receive the approval of the provincial executive who shall, if it is deemed necessary, pass upon their qualifications, which shall include a knowledge of the fundamental principles of Socialism."

"Only speakers having the endorsement of the executive will be permitted to speak for the C.C.F. It is proposed that a similar body should have control over the Federal branch of the party. If the C.C.F. should attain office, the rule of parliament would thus pass to an entirely irresponsible group of men, much on the same principle as in Russia. The schools, so we are told, are to be turned into training places for Socialism, and one speaker further affirmed that "we will have control over the public press and will be able to see that the public is not deceived."

"And this is the programme of a branch of a political party the members of whose 'brain trust'—the men who are its real leaders—are entrenched in our universities. Has Dr. Grant no suspicions that the process of training our youth in Socialistic principles may have already begun? Does he wonder that we look upon the situation as fraught with menace, if not with danger, to the traditions of individual freedom and liberty which are the inheritance of British people, and of which the British Empire is almost the sole remaining repository on earth? Or that we suggest that, ere irreparable mischief is done, steps should be taken to restore confidence that our universities are seats of learning and not centres of propaganda? For our part, we have become convinced that this is the point at which to begin the battle in defence both of the liberty of the press and of political freedom."

FACULTY REPLIES

TO EDITORIAL

cized the professors for their unwillingness to grant interviews to student reporters he explained that there were many reasons why a professor might hesitate in granting an interview.

"A person hates to give his view sometimes because it may be construed as that of the whole department," he said, "and that is not always so because we are only human and have arguments among ourselves."

"A paper wants an opinion while the news is hot and an economist cannot give snap judgments," continued Professor Morgan. "He has to have time to consider the various meanings which may be back of the speech, letter or policy on which he has been asked to comment."

Professors are kept busy with their duties, he went on to explain, and it is annoying to be pestered for opinions on every little thing, especially when the subject is not in one's field. Some matters on which opinions are asked are too silly to waste time considering. Such was the case when he was asked for an opinion on an editorial in a northern paper a short time ago. To answer such an attack would seem to attach some importance to it, he thought, and since it was groundless why worry about it.

The students as a whole are not anxious to express their ideas concerning yesterday's editorial in The Varsity. But the ideas that were collected showed a wide divergence. Many believed it would be of real benefit if the professors were in the habit of allowing their opinions on current problems to be quoted. On the other hand a substantial minority held that the space devoted to professorial comment was practically wasted owing to lack of interest among the students.

An encounter with a group of C. and F. students in the halls of the Economics building resulted in the following statements. "The Varsity does a lot of talking about uninteresting matters. It makes a pretence of crusading for perfectly innocuous affairs. You can not blame the professors for not wishing to give a statement on trivialities."

The majority agreed with Sam Eckler, 3rd year U.C., who said that properly handled, opinions from the staff would be of great value. On topics of interest they would provide an authoritative guide to students groping for a stand on current events. But one can easily understand why the professors might hesitate to commit themselves on controversial subjects. Eliot Auger, 3rd year Political Science, did not blame the professors either because he felt they ran too big a chance of being misquoted and so land themselves in hot water.

Several students felt that statements from the staff were unnecessary. The reasons given were that those interested would be able to get information in lectures as a general thing. Moreover, such opinions published in The Varsity were by compulsion too summary to be of real value. Others, again, thought that such articles were not read anyway.

to be considered a political body but is being forced into a communal electorate in spite of itself. Conversion movements en masse are caused by the feeling that the old gods have become ridiculous today, and also the people have a real thirst for Christian teaching, though many converts have mixed motives, no doubt. Gandhi deprecates the missionary spirit of converting all to Christian beliefs, but will raise no legal barriers for the missionaries.

The two great setbacks for the Church there are the attitude towards the divine taught by Hinduism, and the caste system. Mr. Paton concluded his talk by urging the need for a native church, and stressing the international character of Christianity, the latter a view much neglected in the past and today, and which holds great possibilities for time to come.

Both slang and metaphors are considered bad when used too much. I imagine that the Americans have made more use of slang than any other people, but it is found in every language. There is a considerable amount of slang found even in Greek and Latin words of comedy writers, such as Aristophanes, Plautus, and Petronius."

some grandiose scheme to overcome pessimism and lack of confidence and that Roosevelt's object in his foreign exchange and gold policies is to revive prices. Mr. Plumtree thought, however, that "... while the theory of increasing purchasing power in order to revive business is fundamentally sound, much of the good effects which might otherwise accrue are likely to be offset by the Securities Act, which has made the revival of construction a most necessary proceeding, most difficult." Under the scheme the exchange ratio will not be stabilized by linking the currency with gold, until prices have reached a satisfactory level. The plan still has good hope of success, in spite of recent setbacks. If the plan fails, failure will result from a premature change from bullishness to bearishness or from inherent contradictions in the plan, such as the Securities Act.

A psychology test conducted at the University of Western Ontario recently showed that most of the material taught in the public schools is forgotten by the time a student is of university age.

PROFESSOR WILL ADVANCES ART AS PERSPECTIVE

Professor Will Lectures on 19th Century French
Literature

LAMARTINE RELIGIOUS

Not Until Lamartine is Poetry Restored to France in Lyrical Form

"Humanity, developing life, has developed several perspectives along which it is able to grasp life, and art is one of them," said Professor Will in the second of his series of lectures on 19th century French literature, yesterday afternoon.

"From the middle of the 17th century until the end of the 18th French poetry was anything but lyrical," and not until Lamartine was the insensate sterility checked and poetry restored to France in a lyrical form that satisfied the expectations, hopes and despair of the preceding century.

In all his work Lamartine is pre-occupied with the infinite; he is the closest of all French poets to nature and finds even its imperturbability a comfort.

To him "nature is the very temple of the infinite, faith is the ground of life; when faith leaves us we cease to live and the temple is destroyed."

Lamartine through his intense insight into nature is moved to God; "but this receptivity of the poet to nature is only a prelude to that great beauty which comes from the glimpse of the infinite and it is the glimpse you get of pain that gives you the sense of the infinite." Love also leads us to the Supreme, the poet felt, but "the

TRACK STALWARTS LEFT FOR LONDON

Fifteen Events are Carded and Varsity's Team is Expected to Cut Mighty Swath

BOLD BID FOR TITLE

Eleven track stalwarts representing the University of Toronto left for London yesterday to compete in the intermediate intercollegiate track meet today. Fifteen events are carded, and Varsity's small but competent team may be depended upon to cut a mighty swath before the final event is completed. O'Leary and Smith will provide the contention in the two sprint events, while Walkey and Fleming will contest the quarter and half mile respectively. Thompson, Greer, Hamilton and Pergin will undertake the iron-man assignments. The former will compete in the mile and three mile events; Greer is entered in the three weight events, shot, discus and javelin, while Hamilton and Pergin are in the two hurdles and pole vault. McMaster, O.A.C., Western and Varsity will be represented. McMaster, defending the Hon. Hugh Guthrie trophy will, in all probability, be the team to beat; their middle distance men compare quite favourably with any in the country. The Varsity track men are going to put forth their best effort today and promise to make a bold bid for the title.

Cherchez la Femme!

Cherchez la femme! Lost: one nude. The sudden removal yesterday of a nude study in oils from where it had been hanging in the Music Room, Hart House, for the past week, has given rise to much comment and query. After completely investigating the matter, however, The Varsity's War Correspondent regrets to report that there is very little to report.

"I am very sorry, but there is no scandal whatever," Warden Bickersteth explained sympathetically. The picture, loaned to the House for the fall exhibit in the Sketch Room, has merely been returned to the owner, it was learned.

FASCISM REMAINS TOPICAL SUBJECT

Fascism Originated in Italy
Under Mussolini, Says
Stanton Lautenslager

OUTCOME OF WORLD WAR

Mr. Stanton Lautenslager, who has been teaching in a Chinese university, spoke on Fascism to members of the Current Events Group of the Victoria Women's Literary Society at Wymillwood yesterday afternoon. He explained the origin and aims of Fascism and gave in conclusion a brief criticism of the movement.

Fascism, with Mussolini at its head, originated in Italy as a result of disappointment over the outcome of the World War. Since then it has become very powerful and has spread to other countries. Fascism denies the ideas of democracy, socialism, and communism. It subordinates the individual to the state for the benefit of society and future generations. In Italy, Mussolini by means of Fascism has wiped out racial differences and class struggle.

In his criticism, Mr. Lautenslager stated that Fascism may meet the need of nations which are in chaos, and are not yet ready for democracy. When Fascism becomes imperialistic it is then dangerous and deliberate increasing of population is a threat of war.

Mr. Lautenslager defined Fascism as a bitter medicine for a sick state, and he believes that as long as it has a dictatorship as basis, Fascism cannot be permanent.

GLAZEBROOK ADVISES INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

History Department Has Often Considered Such An Option

"It is an interesting idea, and I would like to see it examined," answered Professor Glazebrook of the Department of History when interviewed by The Varsity regarding the advisability of a course in International Relations as a pass option to Religious Knowledge, such as was suggested in the editorial of The Varsity yesterday.

"Has such a course been considered at all by the History Department?" we asked.

"Yes, the whole question of teaching International Relations has been studied a good deal by this department, but not, however, from the standpoint of a Religious Knowledge option. At present, Modern History students of the fourth year have open to them an Honour course in 'International Relations Since the War', but these students possess a background of history, whereas in such a course as is suggested the majority of students would probably have a very slight background, and thus they would have to spend more time on reading for the subject than the importance of the course would warrant.

"It is useless putting on a course

MR. PATRICK AND PARTY DEFEATED IGNOMINIOUSLY

Riot and Disorder Culminated in Conflict at U. C.
Parliamentary Club

CANADA DEFENCELESS

Workers' Party Became for First Time Loyal Opposition

Wild scenes of riot and disorder which culminated in personal conflict between members of the House, featured the unruly meeting of the U.C. Parliamentary Club last night when the government led by Mr. Patrick went down to defeat.

One of the most interesting features of the evening was the fact that the Workers' party, under the leadership of M. Wayman became for the first time in their history His Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

Defeated on the issue "that Canada would withdraw from the Empire in the event of Britain declaring war" and also on the no-confidence issue, Mr. Patrick's government was declared ousted. Mr. Bell, the Speaker, gave the new government official recognition amid the delicious cheers and hoots of the belligerent House.

The debate opened peacefully with the feature speech of the evening delivered by Mr. Keenan. Upholding the severance from a Britain at war, Mr. Keenan declared that Canada must keep aloof from European politics to utilize her great heritage and through

DR. BEST TO LECTURE AT LONDON UNIVERSITY

On behalf of the Senate of the University of London, the Academic Council of that university has extended an invitation to Dr. C. H. Best, Professor of Physiology, University of Toronto, to give a course of three lectures dealing with any subject connected with Physiology that he cares to choose. Dr. Best has also received an invitation from the General Board of Syndics of the University of Cambridge, through Professor Joseph Barcroft, to give three post-graduate lectures in Physiology in Cambridge.

These six lectures are to be given in January, 1934. The subject matter for these lectures will be in large part the results of researches carried out under Dr. Best's direction in the Department of Physiology and the School of Hygiene of this university. The Board of Governors has granted Dr. Best one month's leave of absence in order that he may accept these invitations and he plans to sail for England before the New Year.

Workers' Party Have Caucus To Change Their Name To Communists

At a caucus of the Workers' Party of the U.C. Parliamentary Club last night it was unanimously decided to change its name to the Communist Party.

In an interview with The Varsity M. Wayman, who as leader of the Party is also leader of the Opposition, explained the reason for the change in name. "We realised that the term 'Workers' Party' was not broad enough," he said, "because not only do we stand for the workers, in the sense of the industrial workers, but we also have the best interests of the agricultural and students classes at heart. Ultimately we intend to introduce a system of society where these classes will reign supreme. That is the programme of the Communist International. For that reason we have

ANTI-WAR SOCIETY SUGGESTS ITS AIMS

These Aims Are Merely Provisional Proposals for Consideration

MEETS IN WOMEN'S UNION

The following suggested aims for the Student Anti-War Society, drawn up by the Provisional Committee for consideration at tonight's meeting in the Women's Union were given to The Varsity last night:

1. To awaken all students to the immediate danger of war by organising a strong anti-war movement on the campus.
2. To secure the widest possible publicity of war plans, imperialist oppression of native populations and anti-war activities, through personal propaganda, meetings, contributions to the press and sale of anti-war literature.
3. To work for the stoppage of the manufacture and transport of munitions and all materials of war and to support anybody who takes similar action.
4. To work against official support of the C.O.T.C. through government grants and special privileges, to expose by organised research work and individual investigation militarisation of the universities, reactionary propaganda in the lecture room and by the authorities, and the militarist character of celebrations such as Empire Day, Armistice Day, etc.
5. To work for the extending of the Anti-War Movement to universities throughout Canada.

The Varsity was explicitly informed that these were merely proposals for the consideration of those who attend to-night's meeting. Every point in the programme will be separately considered, and those who join the Society will be invited to suggest whatever additions or deletions may seem desirable. The matter of applying for official permission to form a recognised student society will also be brought before the meeting.

Winner of Queen's-Varsity Game Well Advanced Towards Title

Tricolour Camp Have Grim
Air of Determination to Face This Game

FEVER EXCITEMENT

Not in Years Has a Rugby Match Attracted So Much Attention

By R. W. Clarke
(Special to "The Varsity")
Kingston, Oct. 26th.—On Saturday Queen's seniors hope to duplicate their splendid success of last week and take undisputed leadership in the Canadian Intercollegiate Football Union race. That grim air of determination still pervades the Tricolour camp and with the title within their grasp Ted Reeve's warriors are bent on once more humbling the Blue and White.

It is Re-union Week and a lot of old graduates will be on-hand to swell the crowd of students and city folk who will be at the game. Enthusiasm is at fever pitch and not in years has a rugby contest attracted so much attention. Given an even break in the weather conditions it should turn out to be a thrilling battle and the most outstanding of the whole schedule.

Beginning with a light signal drill on Monday and gradually getting into the heavier work Tuesday and Wednesday the Reevermen were making preparations for their hardest game of the year. Queen's were fortunate in coming through the Varsity battle without any serious casualties and barring accidents this week will be at full strength on Saturday.

The lineup is: flying wing, Hamlin; halves, Wing, Davis, Krug, Ralph McNichol; snap, Kostuk, Daeof; insides, Weir, Waugh, Miller, Byrce; middles, Gorman, Zvonkin, Earle, Jones; outsiders, Glass, Ralph Peever, Dargavel Jones, Earle; quarter, McIntosh, McNichol, Ralph.

TORONTO GRAD EMBARKS FOR EAST

Miss D. Brandon, Toronto, in Search of Thrill, Sails

92-FDOT CRAFT

Will Act as Crew, All Cruisers Leading Regular Sailor Lives

Even in these days of depression there are still some unique experiences left. Miss Dorothy Brandon, Toronto grad of 1926 is definitely in search of one, when she embarks next month from Gloucester, Mass., for Panama in a frail 92-foot craft.

The ship is under the command of Captain Johnson of Springfield, Mass., Besides Miss Brandon all the "crew" are Americans, except the cook, who is German and the only paid member of the expedition. All these people who are to be so closely associated for the next few months are at present practically strangers. There will be fourteen on board, including an illustrator, sculptor, movie man and, most important, a black cat for luck. They will all take turns on watch and have to solve natural problems, sweep the decks, and lead a regular sailor life.

From the Canal they will go to the Easter Islands and the South Sea Island, then to New Guinea, South

Indo China, Siam and thus to Singapore. There Miss Brandon will leave the crew and proceed to Europe by India and the Suez Canal. The rest

Saturday Night Will See the Intercollegiate Race Broken Up

VARSITY READY

Queen's With Strong Line and Real Defensive System
Require Attention

Leadership in the intercollegiate football series will be the prize when Coach Warren Stevens' blue-clad warriors face Teddy Reeves' Tricolour squad at Richardson Stadium on Saturday. Queen's and Varsity have reached the halfway mark in the college struggle in a tie for first place and each team is grimly determined to come through with a win and start back over the last lap leading the parade.

Saturday night will see the intercollegiate race broken up. The winner of the Varsity-Queen's game will be well advanced toward the title. The loser will be tied with the winner of the McGill-Western game for second place, with their chances considerably hampered. With so much at stake the Varsity-Queen's game shapes up as the greatest struggle of the year.

Varsity is ready to play the game of the season. With the exception of Johnny Copp the players are in excellent condition. Copp received a torn ligament in his knee on Saturday and unfortunately will be out for some time. Boomer of the intermediates has been moved up to fill Copp's place and will be a valuable addition to the team. The work of the team in the past week's practice has been such as to inspire plenty of confidence in the Varsity supporters. The team themselves are taking a very optimistic attitude, believing that last Saturday was an off day and that there will be a different story at the conclusion of this all-important game.

Queen's certainly are going to require a lot of attention if they are to be kept out of first place. They have a strong line and a real defensive system. Their kicker, Wing, is good, but not as good as Sinclair. He gets plenty of distance on his kicks but give Coulter and Arnpud solid ground and watch them run those long low kicks back. The S.A.C. has provided a special rate of $3.25 return to the game in Kingston and those who avail themselves of this opportunity will see probably the best battle of the year.

FOOTBALL HEROES ACT AS HOSTS

Intermediate and Junior Football Teams Entertain
R.M.C. Cadets

SEEK REVENGE

Tomorrow at the Varsity Stadium the intermediate and junior football teams will act as hosts to the R.M.C. cadets, whom they met in Kingston last Saturday and who are journeying this way to seek revenge for the double defeat that was handed out to them. In spite of a number of injuries that occurred in the Kingston game, both teams will be at full strength for the contests as none of the casualties were serious. At the present time both teams are heading their respective leagues.

Lou Carroll expressed a high degree of confidence as to the outcome of the intermediate fixture, especially after the way his men pulled together in the second half of last week's game to overcome the College lead of eleven points and clinch their third straight

YOUTH TURNS TO POLITICS

It has been the practice in the past for undergraduates on the whole to remain aloof from the field of practical politics. The great majority have been content with their academic isolation, content to dream and theorize, to sit back and let others play the game.

As the provincial and federal elections loom in the offing a renewed interest is being taken in politics. Early in the term we had evidence that undergraduates are not to be content with being mere observers this year. Plans for re-organization on a larger scale were discussed some weeks ago by the Liberal Club. Premier Henry considered the first meeting of the MacDonald-Cartier Club to be important enough to grace with his presence, and he challenged its members to prepare themselves to rally to the support of the party next summer. A Co-operative Commonwealth Club was recently organized on the campus, and its plans include the publication of a political paper, as well as participation in the club's activities by co-eds. This, by the way, is an innovation which the other political organisations might well adopt, if they hope to obtain the co-operation of the so-called weaker sex.

Youth has always felt the urge to criticize. If we are to be critical of state affairs we must be prepared to offer something constructive in return. An opportunity for expression is offered in the political organisations existent upon the campus, if we are to prepare for future citizenship we must make use of it.

Conditions of today present a challenge which none can ignore, especially to youth who are presumed to be the leaders of tomorrow. If we are to heed the challenge, if we are to consider the future of our country, we must not be content with the role of spectator in the political arena. We may not all be leaders, but neither should we be sheep. The world needs citizens who understand, citizens who are prepared to exercise the right to vote in an intelligent way.

It is significant that so early in the term the emphasis in extra-curricular activities should be upon politics. As the representative of the entire undergraduate body The Varsity must refrain from editorial partisanship. But our pages will be used to encourage and stimulate a practical interest in politics, under the assumption that our readers are interested in every aspect of affairs. Sooner or later each undergraduate must assume the responsibilities of citizenship, and in the meantime we take it for granted that he is desirous of acquainting himself with the doings of every party. Patriotism, in this sense, should not be beyond the grasp of each of us.

Art, Music and Drama

Hart House Theatre

A brilliant cast and a full house were the main factors in the success scored by Professor Wilson Knight's production of Hamlet at Hart House Theatre last evening. One of the pleasing features of the production is the fact that there are a large number of university people in the cast which is so rarely the case in major productions of our university theatre. Professor Knight showed great advances in stage technique over his last year's interpretation of Romeo.

In spite of the somewhat misleading programme note which would denote Hamlet as an evil character, the play was interpreted in a truly Shakespearean atmosphere. Any criticism of Mr. Knight's performance can be found in some of the lines in Hamlet's speech to the players which, to achieve brevity, was unfortunately omitted. The highly stylised sets were effective and the lighting and costumes were at all times harmonious. Occasionally there were blunders in grouping; sadly enough this was most apparent in the last scene. Special mention should be made of Robin Godfrey's feeling for poetic value in his rendition of Horatio, Miss Patricia Murphy's acting in the difficult role of Ophelia, and Lyndon Smith's able portrayal of Polonius.

The enthusiastic manner in which these annual Shakespearean productions under the direction of Professor Knight are received by the public warrant their continuance, as they seem to provide the one means for college students to gain actual stage experience in the theatre.

Conservatory Quartet

Among other things for which the Conservatory Quartet is to be commended in connection with last night's recital was its re-arrangement of the program. The Mozart-Casella-Haydn order at least ensured a most thorough enjoyment of Haydn by all present! The Quartet, of course, played with the fine taste and delicate warmth for which it is getting increasing attention. The least enjoyable playing was done in the Mozart, though in the last movement there were passages anticipating the golden performance of the Haydn. The feature of the evening was the Casella Concerto for String Quartet, which Mr. Leo Smith, exquisite 'cellist and most charming of oral commentators, dealt with in a short but edifying speech.

To say the least, the Casella composition was very striking; but on the first hearing, and in a review of this brevity, one can do little more than raise questions. No one would regard it as an immortal work; on the other hand, it is idle to put it down merely as a burlesque, or as some kind of

CHAMPUS CAT

Some bright day along about 1940, the Editor will turn to us and exclaim, "Take this pass for the Imperial and write up a revue of the show," or maybe it will be for Massey Hall or the Roxy. Until that great day when recognition shall be ours we are not idly waiting,—we are practicing, preparing for it, in a field exclusively our own. We are Toronto's premier critic, the city's supreme authority, on Car Cards.

C—C

Our life work is studying the pretty posters which form a brilliant border about the interior of every trolley. A new face in the Car Cards, the beautiful Calay blonde, smiling over her (bare) shoulder, has brought joy to us recently. Three stars. We admit, however, being prejudiced in favour of the Marchand girl. Her first appearance last season provided such a refreshing shock after years of staring at the ghastly Stacom ladies, that we then awarded her four stars, and she still rates at least Three Plus.

C—C

Then there are the Cards inserted by the dear old TTC themselves, as "Toronto Grows Bananas in Allan Gardens—Take Carlton Cars to Sherbourne". It is true too,—because we once went there and no sooner got in the gate than we slipped on one of the peelings. Premier Henry, at least, has acted upon the suggestion to "Pay a visit in the Parliament Buildings". Maybe his excuse for outstaying his welcome as a guest, is that he has been waiting for a street car,—a "Carlton car at University".

C—C

The other day during one of those heavy rain storms, a steady drip, drip, drip, from a leak in the trailer roof got us square in the back of the neck. As we dodged nimbly aside and then looked up to find the leak, a particularly vivid advertisement caught our attention. It was one of those that propound the value of the Car Cards themselves, and bore the message, "IT'S THE STEADY RAIN THAT SOAKS"

C—C

That Etain, is advertising. The City Slicker.

ONLY ONE OPENING IN SR. GYMNASIUM TEAM

Stiff competition and hard work are ahead for anyone who wants to make the intercollegiate senior gymnastic team this year, according to Mr. Barton, the head coach. The only man of last year's team who will be absent, is Williamson, interfaculty champion, who was in O.C.E.

Heading the list of new material is Stewart MacDonald from St. Andrews College, who was the junior Canadian champion last year. He is a finished performer on all the apparatus and after a few weeks' work on the mats will be ready to argue it out with anyone. Lewis of North Toronto Collegiate, is also a capable performer who will take a lot of beating. Along with some promising men from Western Canada the newcomers will make last year's team work hard to keep their places.

Of the latter the only one who has not turned out yet is Kirk, president

BLUES OFF TO KINGSTON FOR THE BIG GAME TO-MORROW

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

Interfaculty basketball is about to get under way. Elsewhere in this issue the schedule, which has been drawn up by the basketball club, appears. The first game to be played is called for next Wednesday, November 1, at O.C.E. gym, when Senior U.C. and Public Health clash in the season's opener. The time is certainly getting very short and though you may have been practicing regularly, the thing to do now is practice hard.

All the teams seem to have very capable coaches who, if they get some real support will be able to put forth the kind of a forward line and defence combination we all like to see. A great deal depends on getting into condition so if you have been a little lax about practices don't fall down on the job at this critical time.

For those who feel the urge to play and who have not turned out at all as yet, jump into it now and let the coach see what you can do. There is, as has been said thousands of times but nevertheless is still true, always room for you if you have really "got the goods".

With the new ruling this year concerning guarding, the game should be much faster and more nearly resemble men's basketball. No longer is only guarding on a vertical plane permitted and that means a form of play that is much harder on the forwards than the old way. Also only one free throw is to be given for overguarding a forward who is shooting for the basket. The coming season will demonstrate just what effect these rules will have on the game—and the season is practically here!

So get into the game, and let's have you, teams!!!

Sport Notices

Junior Hockey Practice—

Junior hockey team practice on Monday, October 30th at 5 o'clock in the Varsity Arena. Anyone wishing to try out for the team is asked to be present.

Baseball Managers—

Written applications will be received at the Athletic Office for the position of junior basketball manager up to and including Wednesday, November 1st. Applicants must be in their first or second years. Advancement to the position of intermediate and senior manager for the next two years will be made from those selected.

Harriers—

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By John T. Stubbs

Tomorrow afternoon in Kingston, Varsity will shatter the high hopes now entertained by Queen's for leadership in the intercollegiate race. Western will take McGill in London and of course Lew Hayman's Argos are going to give Toronto football fans a treat at the Varsity Stadium by trimming Tigers again. Last week-end was a bad breathing spell for Varsity in sport but the old story of three wins for the Blue and White football teams will be in order this time. The juniors and intermediates entertain R.M.C. here in the morning and afternoon.

The U. of T. grid squad will be minus the services of Johnny Copp who will be out for another week yet but otherwise the team is all set for the trip. We get one break over last week ahead of time. Joe O'Brien will be handling the referee's whistle and that means no dirty work. If the weather man still hands us reports of fair and cold it will be o.k. for Varsity too. As long as the team returns to par form there will be nothing to fear from the Queen's game. And that defeat last week might turn out to be an asset rather than a liability. You'll see the Blues in there fighting this time. It should be the best game of the intercollegiate series this season. Queen's have been known to swamp the Tricolour in Kingston often too. The final game of the 1931 season in Kingston took the title from Queen's and gave it to Western with a 17-0 score. In the opener in Kingston last year it was a 24-8 victory for Varsity. Then in the final game of the season, with the tide already won, Varsity trimmed Queen's 21-2 in Toronto with four men off the backfield lineup. Why should Varsity worry about a mere 8-2 defeat? The treatment that the Blues received here will not make their feelings for the Tricolour linemen very affectionate to say the least. So watch the Big Blue team cinch the title.

The intercollegiate track meet in London today will feature McMaster's attempt to hold the title for this year. Varsity's team of nine men can be counted on for points but they are up against a big handicap in that they are competing against the best track men from the colleges entered. O'Leary and Smith are both fast men entered in the sprints. Vinnels should go far in the high jump, Hamilton and Pergen are good entries in the pole vault and hurdles, and the middle distance men are Fleming, Thompson, and Walker. They have made good times here in the trials and with Greer heaving the discus, the Blue team looks as though they will put up some real battles for points.

"Mac" McCutcheon will have his senior cage contenders assembled for the first time this season, when they turn out Monday afternoon in the Big Gym. The material on hand this year promises to be of the best. We hear that Western has secured the services of Lou Davies as coach. Davies coached Detroit Y.M.C.A. which won the international tournament in Y competition twice under his tuition. "Mac" has an exhibition volleyball game on tap for Tuesday afternoon at 5 p.m. staged by two smart teams from Central Y. It will be an opportunity for men to see just how much science there is to the game when it is played by two outfits that have the finer points of the game in hand.

There should be a crowd of rooters go down to Kingston for the big game tomorrow. $3.25 isn't much for transportation so we hope to see and hear you in the Limestone town. There'll be big doings in the Richardson Stadium no matter what happens to the score board. Be on hand and join in the fun. How many times have the goal posts in Kingston been up-rooted? From the rumours afloat, the Queen's supporters are almost willing to give money away to get wagers. They can't be lucky twice.

VARSITY WINS VICTORY

The Varsity soccer team scored an impressive 5-1 victory over the Greenwood Club in an exhibition game on the back campus last night. The Blue team had much the better of the play and were easily the four goals better than their Greenwood rivals.

Davidson led the scoring for the Blue team, being in on every point scored. Varsity ran in two goals in the first half and three in the second. Greenwood scored their only point in the first half when a shot from a scramble which was deflected off a Varsity man beat Davey in the goal.

McGill University may soon be presented with an up-to-date gymnasium, the president of the McGill Graduates' Society stated recently.

Vic Basketball—

JR. MEDS VICTORIOUS OVER FORESTRY TEAM

Yesterday afternoon on the back campus Junior Meds romped through Forestry for a score of 8 to 0, in their third successive victory of the Mulock Cup series.

Early in the first quarter Meds smashed their way to the Forestry 15 yard line, where Slemmon made a placement kick to open the scoring for the juniors. Later in the second quarter Slemmon kicked to add another point, and the half ended with Forestry unable to break into the scoring column.

It was in the second quarter that Knott, Forestry star, was injured. After making a hard tackle, he arose from the ground in a semi-conscious state, and was removed from the game with apparently a slight concussion of the brain.

Both teams tried forward passes repeatedly in the second half, but none were completed. Meds continued their scoring in the third quarter with a rouge, and in the fourth quarter with a placement kick. Both were booted by Slemmon. Taking advantage of fumbles and penalties, Junior Meds had humbled Forestry completely when the final whistle blew.

Mustard, Snelling and Barron played well for Junior Meds, while for Forestry, Carlson, Kantola and McConnell were effective.

Jr. Meds — Halves, Nielson, Slemmon, King; quarter, Mustard; flying wing, Spence; snap, Allan; middles, Snelling, Barron; insides, Greene, Jung; outsides, McNichol, Howes.

Forestry — Halves, Lein, Haggie, Knott; quarter, Carlson; flying wing, Taylor; snap, Copland; insides, Kantola, Stangaby; outsides, Cowan, Noakes; middles, McConnell, Young.

ALLISON'S FAST PLAY MAKES TRINITY VICTOR

Yesterday afternoon in the big gym, Hart House, Trinity defeated Dents in a Group II boxa contest 13-8. Allison was easily the outstanding man on the floor with his elusive rushes and tricky stickhandling.

The game began with some loose ball handling by both sides, Allison finally going in to score on a nice effort. Dents seemed unable to get an organized attack going and relied on individual efforts. Allison repeated soon after his first goal, giving the goaler no chance to save.

In the second quarter Dents had more of the play, holding Trinity to three goals, while scoring a like number themselves.

After half time, Trinity dominated the play but Dents were able to score 5 goals, largely on individual effort. For Trinity Allison (7), Birchell (5) and Davis were good, while on the Dents team Kingsberry, Lankin (2), and McCutcheon (2) were the pick.

Trinity — Knight, Davis, Allison, Birchell, T. Bell; subs, Grant, McLellan.

of the club, but he will be in action by the end of the week. The rest, including Farrar, Beard, Barber and Sherwood, are all hard at it now. This year the intention is to hold practices three nights a week in the upper gym instead of two nights as in former years. This will put them on an equal footing with McGill who, previous to last year, had held the championship for five years in succession. They take it seriously down there and practice at least three times a week, but with the staff of coaches which Varsity has lined up this year the team is hopeful of giving McGill a real fight if they want to take the title back with them.

Besides Mr. Barton there is Alan Keith, who is back for his third year at coaching, Harold Greenwood, and Hyslop, who was on the team in 1926. These men all know their stuff and should produce a real team. The interfaculty meet is to be held at the end of January and the six top men will comprise the intercollegiate team.

unless the aim attempted is attained. In the case under discussion, the fact that a large amount of reading is essential combined with the students' probable lack of background, makes quite a problem. However, the possibility of such a course, dealing as it would with the machinery and application of International Relations, can not be denied, but the students must be keenly interested and their work will be by no means easy."

"How may such a course be obtained in the near future?" asked The Varsity.

"If a group of sincerely interested students would present the matter to the staff of the History Department, then we could discuss the pros and cons of the proposed course together. The department always welcomes suggestions such as this from the undergraduate body."

victory. The only casualty reported was to Williams, right outside, who is suffering from an injured shoulder and will probably give the game from the bench. Brehner has returned to practices and will likely be seen in action in the game. Apart from this the team will take its stand in full force. For the past week they have been engaging the seniors in heavy scrimmages and have stood the gaff well.

As far as the juniors are concerned no one feels much cause to worry. Grady Laing's boys ran circles around the R.M.C. juniors last week and left the cadets on the lesser end of a 37-0 score. Twenty good men and true will be out to repeat the little drama and the regular lineup is expected to commence fire when the whistle sounds. The juniors also earned their third straight victory down in Kingston.

musical atrocity. Its beauty, in places, is genuine. But with this sort of work, one cannot help wondering whether or not the composer did exactly what he set out to do. Proof of the point is doubtless impossible, and that is a limitation. Impressions will differ; but for my part I found only the last movement really convincing. There, I think, the composer was quite sure what he was about. For the rest—what does the reader think? One other point might be noticed. Mr. Smith remarked that Casella really intended the audience to laugh here and there! But, apart from the fact that the audience probably laughed at the wrong places, it must be observed that one laughed at the bizarre music rather than with it. There is more real humour, as well as good sense, in a Haydn quartet than in half a dozen polytonal compositions of this kind.

The Male Chorus will offer "Sanctus", a little known work by Schubert. The Choir's unaccompanied number will be a Motet "Very Bread, Good Shepherd tend us" by Dr. Willan, the programme concluding with a 17th century Cathedral Anthem, "Thine, O Lord, is the greatness".

Sir Robert Falconer Delivers First Lecture of Royal Institute Series

JAPAN MUST FIND OUTLET

Other Nations Must Sympathize Before Condemning Japan's Militarism

"As long as human nature lasts there will be certain complex problems of society that can only be controlled, not eradicated," stated Sir Robert Falconer, former president of the university, in the first of the regular winter series of Saturday night lectures sponsored by the Royal Canadian Institute and held in Convocation Hall.

"War," he continued, is his illuminating address on "The 'Disquieting Area of the Pacific'," "would only show we have learned nothing in nineteen years. What is the inevitable result? Chaos—victor and loser alike are destroyed."

In describing the Manchurian situation, Sir Robert stressed the fact that Japan, due to her ever-increasing population, must find an outlet. One professor estimated that by 1950 it will have reached the 80,000,000 mark. With all the accompanying problems of food, employment, etc., we other nations must sympathize before condemning.

Political Groups on Campus Reorganizing with New Vigour

C.C.F. TO PUBLISH PAPER

With the possibility of elections in the near future, and with the intense interest being displayed in this field, the political clubs of the university are beginning their reorganization with increasing vigour. The three main associations are now laying definite plans, which will be followed throughout the year.

The MacDonald-Carter Club, according to R. A. Bell, IV U.C., is intending to proceed along three distinct lines. First—Active organization for election purposes, both the university and outside, with the formation of flying squads, under local organizations to travel to the different parts of the province, speaking in the evening and canvassing during the day. Second—The securing of prominent speakers to address the club on topics of present day interest. Some of the speakers are to be: Hon. Mr. Price, Hon. Mr. McCrea, and Hon. R. J. Manion. Negotiations are under way to get Premier R. B. Bennett to speak some time in January. Third—The organization of study groups, to review economic and constitutional subjects under the guidance of experts in each line.

J. A. Harley, IV S.P.S., vice-president of the Liberal club, when interviewed by The Varsity, stated that it was the executive's hope to have some meetings in the near future, which would be of interest to all liberal-minded students and, to that end, had been in touch with some prominent

CENSOR ATTITUDE TAKEN BY FRANCE

Trinity Debaters Pass Motion of Government by Large Majority

ARMAMENT MAKERS RULE

With an overwhelming majority of 20-10, the Government won a decisive victory in a lively debate held at Trinity House last Friday evening on the topic "Resolved that this House censures the attitude of France toward Europe."

Mr. Creswick, speaker for the government, condemned France's attitude toward Germany and the entire world in the "bitterest terms, painting her as a Mars armed to the teeth with the accoutrements of war and thirsting for blood. "Ever since France was humbled by Prussia what has been her cry. What France wants is dominance. The French have been developing ententes to draw all nations into the web and even went to the extent of allying Italy, an enemy of old, on their side. She has an impregnable wall around her, has built up an excellent air force capable of scattering far and wide, death and destruction. She has millions of soldiers far beyond her present needs. France is ruled by armament makers and not love of peace. An example of this is the defeat of a motion in the French house that the armament she produced under the control of the French government. By her attitude, revealed throughout history, France is manoeuvring for war."

Mr. S. Hughes of the Opposition, who found his objection to the presence of a Varsity reporter who was invited by the government, ignored, said in reply to the government that in view of what France has suffered there is

An enthusiastic audience of over a hundred students, including several prominent in undergraduate activities, attended the organization meeting of the Anti-War Society in the Women's Union Friday night. The first motion passed was that the Society seek official recognition as a student organization. At the close of the meeting about fifty signed up as charter members.

In his opening address, C. L. Coburn, the chairman, stressed the need of a group which could include all students interested in the anti-war movement, both those who are already members of organizations which make it a part of their programmes, and those who are as yet unorganised. "Ours must Praise be to Allah—the wire is cut!

Those poor benighted souls who undertook to motor to Kingston over the week-end certainly missed a couple of train rides that had all the brilliant points of a side show, and twice as much music. ## WOMEN WOULD JOIN POLITICAL CLUBS

"We Want the Right to Join Them Even if We Don't Use it," Says Co-ed

C.C.F. OPENS DOOR

There is a general opinion among the women interviewed by The Varsity that they should have the right to belong to the political clubs in the university whether they desired to exercise it or not.

Miss Primrose Sandford spoke for many of her fellow co-eds when she said that, since women have the vote, they should also have the same privileges of political education. "But it does not apply to me personally for I am not interested in politics" at the moment.

Miss Mary Salter suggested that it was time intelligent, well educated people took a more active interest in politics.

One woman who wished to be anonymous, was skeptical of the value of women in these clubs. "Women ought to keep out of it or agree to take a deep, serious interest. Most of those who join political organizations make fools of themselves. Their real interests are in other things. They are only superficially interested in the party programme. They won't study the problems concerned deeply enough to make any valuable contribution. They

VICTORIA, TRINITY ORGANIZE DEBATES

Women's Debating Union Expects Four Colleges to Join

FIRST DEBATE NOVEMBER 8

An interfaculty debate between Victoria and Trinity Colleges is to be held on November the fifteenth, as the first official debate under the auspices of the newly organized Women's Debating Union. This was definitely decided on at the initial meeting on Wednesday afternoon.

There was a great deal of discussion regarding changes in the old constitution which are to make the new society a real force on the campus. The aim is to make it representative of all the four colleges, with a member of each on the executive. Besides the various debates on the interfaculty and inter-collegiate schedules, there will be general meetings, by means of which it is thought that the members will become acquainted with each other's debating powers. So that after this year, it will be unnecessary to have arbitrary try-outs to decide who will be the best and most representative debaters for the intercollegiate teams.

It was decided, however, that try-outs would be necessary for this year, and these will be held about November the eighth. Each college is to choose two or more candidates from which the best four will be chosen.

Varsity Outplays Queen's but Unable to Outscore Desperate Tricolour Team—Blues Made Twelve First Downs to Opponents' Six

QUEEN'S SCORE TOUCH ON SENSATIONAL PASS

By John T. Stubbs

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 28th.—Perfect weather conditions, a capacity crowd, and two great teams, combined to make the Queen's Varsity game at the Richardson Stadium on Saturday afternoon the college football classic of the year when the Tricolour stepped into the lead of the intercollegiate race with a 14-6 win over the University of Toronto, former favourites for the title.

STUDENT OF SEMITISM SPEAKS AT HART HOUSE

Mr. James Parkes, M.A., of Geneva, will speak in the Debates Room, Hart House, today at 1:30 on "The Jewish Student in Europe". Mr. Parkes is an Englishman, a distinguished graduate of Oxford who has devoted himself for some years to the study of the problem of the Jew. His book "The Jew and His Neighbour" which was published in 1930 is recognised as an outstanding contribution to the literature on this subject. He is not a Jew himself, but has been in close touch with Jewish students throughout Europe, and especially with those of Germany. At present he is the Chairman of a Committee of International Student Service for assisting German Emigre students.

He will speak again this evening at 5:10 in the Women's Union on "The Jew in Germany Today".

Where Was Little "Sweepa" When All the Bulls Had Flew?

Friday noon.

It was a nice horse trough, neat of design, and decorated throughout in a deep green. The young gentleman stopped in front of it, suitcase in one hand, a pail in the other. Setting down his load, he carefully removed his overcoat and hung it on the fence. Opening the suitcase he brought forth a cake of soap. Then in the chill November waters of a Bloor Street horse trough, he solemnly began to wash.

There was a towel in the suitcase too, and after this had been used very briskly, the bak was closed up, the coat put back on again. Then filling the pail half full of water he started off down the street with his original burden plus a gallon of water.

Struck dumb with amazement, The Varsity's War Correspondent suddenly saw light, and stepped forward to question the gentleman.

"Did they steal your cows and your bulls and your horse?"

But the would-be fraternity brother strode on with the perfect poker face required for such serious matters.

Then there was the gentleman on the street car. He had to walk up and down muttering his little piece in a dejected way, "Why did I do it? . . . Why did I do it?" A startled woman pointed him out to the police. They tacked Toronto's latest mystery to his credit, and a couple of hours at headquarters were required to prove his innocence and banish.

Boys will be boys.

VULGAR SENTIMENTALISM IN THE PRESS

The tragedy in east Toronto has occasioned an outburst of journalistic vulgarity unequalled since the Lindbergh kidnapping case of last year. The affair is very sad; if there is a crime involved it is also very important. But no amount of pathos, and no degree of importance could justify the sensational emotionalism with which the downtown press has been treating the case. No device, however crude, which might stir up the feelings of the reader, has been spared. Artists and photographers, news-hounds and "sob-story" writers are deluging the public with sentimentalism which is disgusting past belief. We are told in large headlines how the grief-stricken father implored heaven to punish the malefactor. The details of the family exchequer are laid bare. The high water mark of the proceedings, however, is the publication of verses written by the mother about a year ago. In the morning we were given the poem on the front page of a newspaper; in the evening a photograph of the manuscript was provided. Whether or not this achievement will yet be surpassed, we cannot tell; but if it is not, it will not be for lack of trying.

It will be pointed out that newspapers seek to supply the public with what it likes to read. The populace, of course, was never noted for the refinement of its emotions; and the present age is as sentimental as most. Good taste in matters of sentiment is not a common thing, and even ordinary delicacy disappears when incidents like this occur. Public fear has always been easily aroused; panic quickly follows when symptoms of danger are made vivid. Similarly, emotional dislocation results at once when the public discovers great pathos in any spectacular situation. Nothing is so easily lost as general restraint and emotional balance. And the worst of the matter is that the public thoroughly enjoys losing its dignity and good sense.

Even so, there is no excuse for the press. We tire of hearing all kinds of outrages justified on the ground that they are commercially advantageous. Is that, after all, the only standard of journalistic policy? It is worth noting that there are still great and widely read newspapers which do not resort to this most unworthy sensationalism. At any rate, the press certainly has in trust the emotions as well as the opinions of the public. In matters of opinion, newspapers generally try to be influential, not merely deferential. Is there not room for a saner emotional influence? An English writer two or three years ago expressed wonder that comparatively harmless obscenities were banned, when the press was allowed, as he put it, to "play on the jaded nerves" of its readers. Even worse is the playing on the badly tuned heart-strings of its readers. In so doing, it is not only guilty of an indecency which must disgust all people of refinement, but it is doing a great disservice to the constituency which it is so powerful to serve well.

ing their militaristic attitude. Conditions in China, however, can scarcely be called any better. The Chinese have always considered Manchuria as an integral part of their country.

The economic situation in the Orient cannot be blamed on the depression. It is for the most part the result of applied science. Having glimpsed the material luxuries of the Occident, our Eastern neighbours are attempting to raise their own standard of living. Both governments are undertaking new reconstruction measures, but it is a long, arduous and as yet fruitless task.

"Only war, or threat of its imminence, draws the attention of the Western world to the Orient," said Sir Robert. "And yet, this disturbance among the Pacific nations—that great restless movement—whence does it come? From Europe and America... from the ideas they took from the steps taken by the League of Nations to help settle their difficulties will be successful—and they will not be too eager to condemn either nation."

Art, Music and Drama

Friday Afternoon Recital

Dr. Healey Willan was the speaker at the first Friday afternoon recital of the year. It had been announced that Dr. MacMillan would be in charge of this programme, but owing to his sudden illness this was impossible. Dr. Willan, whom we were to have heard at the next recital, on a few hours notice consented to open the series.

Dr. Willan spoke on Plain-song—a subject on which he is the outstanding authority in this part of the world. For many years his work at St. Mary Magdalene Church has attracted the attention of musicians and students in liturgy. And his choral compositions—more widely known than many of us realize—show a profound understanding of ecclesiastical music. On Friday, he explained the elementary points of Plain-song, and illustrated on the piano the more important modes. With him was Mr. Philip Williams, cantor of St. Mary Magdalene choir, who sang examples of parts of the Anglo-Catholic service.

Much religious music has been written since the great ages of Plain-song. A little of the newer religious music is immortal; the rest is transitory indeed. In Plain-song there is something basic and profound, a beauty which, as Dr. Willan says, is "elemental". Religious men seem never to have evolved an artistic medium so perfect and satisfying. Most wonderful of all, later times have nothing to add to it; there it is, and back to it we must go if we are looking for a complete and timeless Church music.

These, it must be noted, are purely aesthetic observations, and have nothing to do with religious opinion! So let us be grateful to Dr. Willan for what he did on Friday afternoon, and, more broadly, for what he is doing all the time. And churchmen and aesthetes alike will be wise in learning more of this old and imperishable artistic achievement.

Eaton Auditorium

Mr. Reginald Stewart gave a Piano-forte recital in Eaton Auditorium on Saturday night, and flooded the place with great waves of piano mastery. No one who has not heard him can imagine with what a forceful grip he seizes his instrument and makes it perform. I wish to go on record at once as never having seen a pianist of such vigorous clarity, of such energetic accuracy!

Now, everyone does not like to hear Mr. Stewart play. He certainly has a style all his own, and plays everything from Mozart to Scriabin in a manner astonishingly consistent. Probably no other pianist who tried it could produce an effect so peculiarly delightful, in its way. A style, of course, cannot be well defended simply on the ground that it is unusual; an intrinsically bad style might conceivably be out of the way. But adverse criticism of Mr. Stewart is apt to resolve itself into the observation that being one kind of a pianist, he is not several other kinds simultaneously. There are musicians who play more delicately; there are some who provide the senses with more luxurious pleasure. One would never go to Mr. Stewart for the subtlest kind of piano playing. But that does not alter the fact that he is a pianist of great skill, and a man of very fine musicianship; and his refined masculinity ought surely to be a source of real joy and refreshment.

With the Theatres

Tivoli—

The Tivoli's feature, King of the Ritz, is an English comedy with Stanley Lupino in the lead, which is enough virtue for any picture. It is not the funniest movie you have ever seen, but it is one of them. Lupino's career, which takes him from hotel porter to duke and back again, offers plenty of opportunities for laughs; and when these English make a comedy they know how to take advantage of the opportunities.

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S. and J. E. F.

And who says the women can't take it?

What's more, take it and like it. We even arrived at the stadium on time and sat with frozen feet and sinking hearts (there's many a smile lades a broken heart) through the whole game—this includes the second half. The Queen's team looked charming in ensembles exhibiting the fashionable tricolour shades of red, blue and yellow with brown accessories. Our local performers were models of sartorial impeccability with blue and white their predominant colour-scheme. It was a source of great satisfaction to all concerned that the weather remained dry and clear so at least their glory was not dimmed by mud and rain. And after all, who could look appealing in a wet fur coat?

Taking it all round, we think it most gratifying to find that Varsity men are better looking, don't you? (Don't smoke, either, for that matter.) The stalwart sons of U. of T. bore up under defeat with real spirit. It is probably just as well that Varsity plays in Kingston only once a year.

More than one co-ed left home and heath and braved the chilling blasts to add her support in cheering on the Big Blue team (maybe not so big but mighty blue). Regardless of our gallant efforts, there seemed to be a lack of sufficient inspiration to get the piskin past the goal posts. By the way, who was playing goal?

And so, boys and girls, we returned home tired and happy—but was he handsome—and did we have fun—in spite of the score!

The return ticket will cost less than half the regular weekend fare, and train departures and arrivals have been conveniently scheduled for those whose time is limited and for others who can plan a long weekend visit. The return fare will cost $2.30, and patrons have from 8.30 a.m. Saturday, November 4th to 5 p.m., Monday, November 6th. Full particulars can be obtained from any Canadian Pacific ticket office.

KNOX DEFEATS MEOS 16-8 IN FAST LACROSSE GAME

Meds' Team, Good Individually, Beaten by Better Trained Players

Knox College defeated Meds 16-8 in a fast lacrosse game played Friday afternoon in the Big Gym.

For Knox, Caslor scored eight goals, McEachern four, Cochrane three and Wilson one. For Meds Keys got five, Graham two and Lithgow one.

Caslor for Knox and Keys for Meds were the outstanding players. As the score indicates Knox team play was far superior to Meds' individual efforts.

Knox — Weir, Davidson, Caslor, McEachern, Cochrane, Wilson, Jamieson.

Meds — Starr, Lithgow, Graham, Keys, McCue, Boyd, Metzler.

Referee — R. English.

VARSITY JUNIORS TRIM CADETS AGAIN

R.M.C. Defeated by Score of 11-0; Gray's Kicking a Feature

BUT ONE PASS COMPLETED

Playing against a highly improved R.M.C. junior football squad, Varsity juniors repeated their previous winning effort by defeating the Cadets 11-0 at the Stadium Saturday morning. Although the score of Saturday's game does not compare with the huge score registered in Kingston the Varsity superiority was never questioned. Gray's kicking had the R.M.C. halves running back to make their catches, all his kicks averaging around fifty-five yards. Chubb, the kicking half of the military academy, was not far behind in the matter of kicking, and supported by Wilson, played good football.

Little use was made of the forward pass, R.M.C., failing to complete four attempts and Varsity finishing one for thirty yards from Gray to Tafts. An unfortunate incident marred a later attempted forward when, in the last moments of the game, Tafts threw a long pass to Gray, who twisted his ankle badly in the effort to catch it.

The first score came early in the first period when Gray kicked a placement from twenty yards out. A touchdown came almost immediately on the heels of an R.M.C. fumble, the loose ball being run to the five yard line by Storey and Powell. From this position Powell carried the ball the rest of the way for five points. In the second quarter, an R.M.C. offensive started by a forty yard run by Wilson was rushed to oblivion when Gray ran the ball out from behind his line. The half ended with the Blue Thirds charging down the field.

The Cadets returned from the intermission with vim and vigour, making yards by plunges and a long forward pass. Once more the reliable Gray kicked out of danger, and the attack was wasted. A few well managed extensions put Gray in a kicking position, from which point, he added three more singles to the score, the game ending 11-0.

R.M.C. — Snap, Packard; insides, McKibbin, Johnson; middles, Tucker, Sharon; outsides, Sterne, McMillan; quarter, Wotherspoon; halves, Wilson, Chubb, Hornibrook; flying wing, Carson; subs, Carson, Stairs, Wickson, Ripley, Ware, Patterson, Oxley, Osler, Slater.

Varsity III — Snap, Jacobs; insides, McEachern, Holt; middles, Thomas, Bridle; outsides, Reid, Woods; quarter, Miller; halves, Gray, G. Powell, Tafts; flying wing, T. Powell; subs, Wiloughby, O'Connell, Caldwell, Cockfield, Ripley, Storey, Sweeney, Buck.

Officials — Plaxton, Wilson, Kress.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By John T. Stubbs

Varsity supporters and yours truly cannot understand why a team that looked like sure winners of the intercollegiate series this year should crumple up before the Tricolour in two successive games. Others will immediately begin to tell us why in no uncertain terms and to a certain extent they are right. Queen's had the necessary fight and scoring punch to win against odds. That is quite plain to see when the Tricolour scored two easy touches, somewhat lucky but nevertheless sensational and brilliant. On the occasion when the Stevens-coached team had possession on Queen's 12 yard line, it marked the fifth time this season that Varsity have had possession inside their opponents' fifteen yard line and failed to score a touch. Why? It might look as though they lacked a scoring play for a touch. They certainly did not have the tenacity and fight that Teddy Reeve's outfit had in the last two games, the battling spirit that shone so brilliantly in the last game Varsity played against Hamilton Tigers last fall. When Coulter called for a forward pass by Arnpup twelve yards out it was a great gamble—completed, a hero; incomplete, criticism. Queen's had just enough power plays to win both games. Hamlin, Zvonkin, Kostuk, Wing and Glass deserve the credit. Holden, McQuigge, Arnpup, Coulter and Peacock deserve a hand too.

Teddy Reeve played a smart game from the bench. He had two quarters coming and going from the play throughout the game. It might almost be said he was calling the signals himself. The play for the first touch was smart and it might Varsity with one man in a position to intercept. The second was a gift more or less, being scored on an intercepted forward pass. The game was clean throughout with only one man on the Queen's line deserving of criticism. Kostuk cooled his heels on the penalty bench for five minutes for putting the "bumptchin" headlock on a Varsity half. That time it was Sinclair.

The title hasn't been won yet but if Queen's plays the heads-up game they played in the last two contests it will take plenty of luck to stop them. McGill staged a comeback when they turned the tables on Western for the second time and that right in London. It hasn't been done by Varsity yet. When a Tricolour plunge is called the linemen doing the work hits the wall like a galloping ghost. Jumping the line is taking an awful chance but Hamlin never comes across any other way. That is just one example of the difference between the teams. Varsity had a better team but they faltered in the pinch. They could march up the field but they couldn't cross the line. Now Queen's supporters have their chance to crow and rub it in. They didn't lose any time after the game and they are still at it.

U.C. AND AGGIES IN 2-2 DEADLOCK

C. C. A. Dominate Whole Game but Checked by Cole

Striving desperately to avert defeat, U.C. gridgers were successful in holding a fighting O.A.C. team to a 2-2 tie in an exciting interfaculty rugby game played on the back campus on Friday afternoon.

Led by Peers, the Aggies dominated play throughout the game, completing forward passes and repeatedly gaining yards through the line, but the fleet feet of Carl Cole were enough to keep U.C. on even terms. Cole's 30 and 40 yard runs were the only things that prevented the Guelph boys from carrying off a well deserved win.

O.A.C. — Graesser, Young, Peers, Pannett, Sexsmith, Currie, Rae, Counsell, Gartshore, Cook, Moffat, Beatty; subs, Graham, Ferraro, Hagey, Duceite, Alexander, Hutton, Charles, Thompson.

U.C. — Henderson, Hass, Malott, Luckett, Cole, Herman, Wadell, Pritchard, Daly, Morrison, Roebuck, J. Mursky, Grand, Thompson, Bell, Corrigan, M. Mursky, Campbell, Kerr, Shiner, Butler, Murray, Barrett.

Officials — Vaughan and McIntyre.

VARSITY JUNIORS TRIM CADETS AGAIN

ing Cadets. This is the fourth straight victory for the seconds and leaves them well out in front in the intermediate intercollegiate series.

The teams were very evenly matched and although Varsity were always in front it was not until the final frame that they were able to give themselves a comfortable margin, and even then only on a lucky break. Bob Isbister turned in his usual fine kicking display and Boomer was always effective when he hit the line. Philip kicked well for R. M. C. and Whitaker and Sissons also turned in good efforts.

Varsity took the lead early in the first quarter when Edwards snared a pass from Stewart and ran it to the 10 yard line. Isbister kicked to the deadline when the two plunges failed to make yards through the line. Two forward passes again placed the ball on the Cadet 10 yard line and this time Gregory smashed through for a major which was converted.

From the kickoff R.M.C. netted 35 yards on a pass. An onside kick was recovered by Knight on the Blue three yard line. On the next play Knight hurdled through the Varsity line for a touch which they failed to convert.

Isbister kicked to Whitaker who was roused, in the second quarter. In the third the Kingston team scored their final point on a loof to the deadline. Varsity scored their second touch in the final frame when they were given possession on the R.M.C. 10 yard line when Whitaker interfered with a pass receiver. Isbister plunged over the line for the major but failed to convert.

Varsity — Flying wing, McMichael; halves, Jackson, Stewart, Isbister; quarter, McKee; snap, Doyle; insides, Newton, Witzell; middles, Perry, Gregory; outsides, Edwards, Bodrug; subs, Brebner, Corrigan, Willis, Gibson, Hornfelt, Burson, Boomer, Ruddock.

R.M.C. — Flying wing, Knight; halves, Philip, Whitaker, Baskerville; quarter, Sisson; snap, Powell; insides, Reynolds, Fyshi; middles, Ready, Sisson; outsides, Peck, Jacobson; subs, Burke, Savage, Chase-Casgrain, Hyde, Osler, Riordan, Chabon, Winslow.

Officials — Cress, Wilson, Plaxton.

S.P.S. DEFEATS TRINITY AT SOCCER BY 1-0

S.P.S. nosed out Trinity in a hard fought soccer game on the back campus Friday by the score of 1-0. This was the second encounter between the two teams, the first resulting in a tie.

McMASTER RETAINS GUTHRIE TROPHY

Hamilton Men with 71 Points Outdistance All Other Teams

U. OF T. TEAM SECONO

McMaster made a clean sweep of the intermediate intercollegiate track meet at London last Friday, amassing a total of 71 points. University of Toronto was next with 23 points, O. A.C. came third with 16 and the home forces of Western were fourth with 15 points. Varsity athletes placed second in seven events and gained third place in three. O'Leary and Smith ran two, three in the 220, Walley ran second to Shaver in the quarter and Flening was second to the McMaster star in the half mile. Thompson took down second and third place in the mile and three mile run respectively. Hamilton of Varsity won the 120 yard high hurdles but was disqualified; however, he was second in the 220 yard low hurdle events. Virels had to be content with a second in the high jump, as did Vanderleek in the discus throw. One meet record went by the boards as Shaver of McMaster finished the 440 in 52 1-5 secs.

The small Varsity team gave a very creditable display considering the fact that the competition was of the highest order and senior in calibre. The weather was anything but conducive to record breaking performances, dull skies and a cold penetrating wind sweeping Little Memorial Stadium.

The field events were closely contested, and some fine form was shown. McMaster retains the Guthrie trophy, emblematic of the intermediate intercollegiate championship for the second year in succession.

Queen's defeated Varsity (Continued from Page 1) ter moved the sticks. Then two extensions by Sinclair and Coulter put Varsity in position for a placement by Arnpup which missed but went to the deadline for a point to make it 12-6. In the third quarter Wing kicked to Coulter for a point. Then with eleven minutes to go and a seven point lead to overcome, the Stevens-coached squad turned it on. McQuigge and Holden moved the yard sticks twice in succession which put Varsity out at centrefield. Then a fumble gave the Queen's team possession on their own forty-six. That relieved the pressure on that Varsity drive. A forward pass on an extension play and an incomplete forward pass play cost Varsity plenty and Queen's had possession 20 yards out again. Playing it safe Wing kicked to Coulter for a point to cinch the game and end the scoring.

On the figures of play Varsity had a decided edge, moving the yard sticks twelve times to Queen's six. Sinclair outkicked Wing as a reversal of last week. There were six kicks that went for more than 60 yards. Jack Sinclair hoisted four of them, Wing one and Davis one. Queen's were penalized nine times to three for Varsity.

Queen's — Snap, Kostuk; insides, Weir, Waugh; middles, Zvonkin, Gorman; outsides, Earle, Glass; flying wing, Hamlin; quarter, McIntosh; halves, Krug, Wing, Ralph; subs, McNichol, Peever, Davis, Miller, Jones, Burn, Dargavel, Dafoe.

Varsity — Snap, Peacock; insides, Boothie, Warner; middles, Greco, Harris; outsides, Keith, Alison; flying wing, Dawson; quarter, Coulter; halves, Sinclair, Arnpup, Burgoyne; subs, Bell, Hennessy, Bryers, Taylor, Holden, McQuigge, Henderson, Richardson.

Officials — O'Brien, Keill, Foster. Linesmen — Dewar, Elliott.

Superior passing kept School out of danger for most of the game, although Trinity looked dangerous at times. The lone score came when the second half was well away, Shaw beating Seggie on a hard shot from two feet out. Seggie and Stone stood out for the losers, while Johnston and Bower were the pick of S.P.S.

WYCLIFFE BEATS U.C. BY 4-0 THROUGH GOOD TEAM WORK

But for Hamilton's Goalkeeping U.C. Soccer Team Would Have Fared Worse

Wycliffe scored a one-sided victory over University College in the soccer game on the front campus Friday night by a score of 4-0. The winners' superior combination put them in position time after time for shots on goal and only the excellent goal-keeping of Hamilton kept the score down. The scorers were Prior, Looe and Phillips.

STUDENTS DISCUSS NEW MUSIC CLUB

Harvard's Glee Club Success Stimulates Local Talent in Vocal Music

TO ORGANIZE THURSOAY

A University Glee Club, was the subject discussed by a fireside circle of university students in the west common room, Hart House, last Friday evening.

The students present exchanged ideas on the possibilities of such a club in the University of Toronto. They were guided by the results of efforts along that line in several other universities, notably Harvard. Mr. Allan Sly, leader of the discussion, drew to the attention of the students the renown of Dr. Davidson's Glee Club in that university.

The evident desire was for a club which would embrace those students from every faculty who, even though lacking in special musical training, had an appreciation of vocal music. It was felt that there were many such, who would glean pleasant and instructive recreation from such an organization.

Having arrived at a common point of view, it was arranged that a meeting would be held in Hart House, on Thursday next, at 5 p.m., when the business of organization would be conducted and a singsong held.

ART, MUSIC AND ORAMA

have play the Schumann Toccata as Mr. Stewart did; the playing was really hard. Yet, there again, it was the pianist's distinctive style, and not a question at all of bad taste. The most beautiful of the modern compositions was the Scriabin Etude in C Sharp Minor. The second half of the programme consisted entirely of Bach. The playing of the Prelude and Fugue in B Flat Minor was superb, and should have delighted everybody—and probably did. A masterful performance of a transcription of the Toccata and Fugue in D Minor—a performance in which an organ work actually sounded satisfying on the piano—and two Bach encores concluded this extraordinary recital by an extraordinary pianist.

Hart House String Quartet

Last night the first of the series of Hart House Sunday evening concerts was given as usual by the Hart House String Quartet. The well balanced programme consisted of Mozart's Quartet in B flat Major and Ravel's Quartet in F Major. There are few finer quartets than Mozart's popular "Hunt Quartet" which is one of the six which the great composer dedicated to his friend and adviser, Haydn. The music of this Quartet is gay and romping and gives great scope to the Hart House String Quartet to display their high degree of musical interpretation as well as technical skill.

The same might also be said of the Ravel Quartet. This composition is one of the early works of the contemporary Frenchman and shows how greatly he was influenced by his more famous friend Debussy. This quartet was Ravel's only attempt at quartet music and it seems he wrote it only to round out his own musical experience. It has become, however, a very popular piece for quartets, mainly because of its grace and scope for musicianship.

This year marks the tenth anniversary of the Hart House String Quartet and it is a great sensation to note the happy glint in their eyes when they tell its story. Toronto in general and the university in particular must feel proud and fortunate to have the frequent opportunities of hearing them. They have already announced an inspiring programme for the year; their next concert will be held in Convocation Hall on Friday next. Attending the world famous Hart House String Quartet concerts is a treat which comparatively few music lovers have the pleasure of experiencing and it surely is to be expected that students will make the most of their good fortune.

A GREAT LIBRARIAN IS PRESENT POPE

Dr. G. H. Locke Tells of Visit to Rome and Vatican to Newman Club

LIBRARY QUITE MOOERN

"Pope Pius XXI, besides being head of the Roman Catholic Church is a librarian at heart," said Dr. George H. Locke, Chief Librarian of Toronto in an address to members of Newman Club recently.

Dr. Locke gave an account of his visit to Rome as president of the American Library Association, to the International Congress of Scientific Research. At this congress there were representatives from various countries of Europe as well as the United States. Dr. Locke spoke of his visit to the Roman Senate where the delegates were received by the governor of the city and addressed by Premier Mussolini, who spoke in Italian, but was able to convey his meaning to persons unfamiliar with his language by emphasizing important words.

As a librarian Dr. Locke was much interested in the Vatican library. Delegates to the convention were received there by His Holiness the Pope, who gave them his blessing. Some of the delegates, among whom was Dr. Locke, made a more extended inspection of the library the following day with the Pope as their guide. This library, which is modern in its equipment and methods of cataloguing, contains many old manuscripts dating back as far as the fifteenth century.

Italy, Dr. Locke said, is being reast and the history of the church is being studied more now than ever before. Between the Pope and Mussolini harmonious relations exist because their objects are the same.

BAND LIFTS ROOF OF IRON STEED

Belleville the yokels were treated to as snaky a snake prance as ever human eye hath seen, barring none.

O—O

Anyone looking for a sight for sore eyes should picture 47 bandmen attempting to remove their nether garments in a clothes closet containing two beds. It is rumoured that there were three saxophone players and a drummer in the same pair of flannels at once, but anyone knowing the size of the said pants will realize that this is an exaggeration. Anyhow, the band was the peppiest band that ever turned out to a game in years, and expressed their appreciation of Varsity's first placement by putting a drum stick through the side of the bass drum . . . anything to give the fans a thrill.

O—O

As if the game wasn't thrilling enough in itself, with all the necking and whatnot, not to mention a number of spectacular runs and etc. Those Blue and White Cheerleaders sure had the Tricolour rooters with their eyes open, and the Varsity cheering section let loose more guff than a carload of intoxicated monkeys. It was a tough game to lose, even if the Queen's team did turn in some royal football.

Among the townsfolk absent from the game were some of the residents of the Big House, but the little squad of Queen's rooters in the midst of the Varsity fans boasted all the symptoms except the striped suits. Cheer up . . . they'll probably be wearing them by next year. Just the same a basketful of ripe tomatoes would have commanded a real market and a real target.

O—O

The evening's activities were too varied and too varied and too varied . . . to mention, but it seems that there were more Varsity fans in evidence than there were police, which accounts for some of the hilarity. Anyhow, modesty forbids, and all that.

O—O

All those interested will be glad to know that the little police mongrel with the blue and white ribbons, who proved to be the best tenor soloist on the train, reached Toronto safely and is now residing in a fraternity on St. George Street. We still maintain this is no place for a lady, but every dog must have its day. Here's to you, pup!

WITH THE THEATRES

the Johnny-on-the-spot to a merry, parlour beauty whom he carries, comprises the theme of "Beauty for Sale" at Loew's theatre. Madge Evans leads the parade as the maid in distress who tunes in on a lot of confidential gossip as she decides whether to get a brand-new husband or a slightly used one. Una Merkel pulls a few amusing wisecracks and the scantily clad Florine McKinney ambling out of a twenty story window because her boy friend turned her down is a scene that you all remember.

Hal Roach in the "Our Gang" comedy, provides a lot of entertainment as a frantic photographer and parents vainly attempt to get him to keep still till he gets his picture "took". The newsreel is a little sarcastic as it shows Varsity being beaten by Queen's.

B. J. M.

ANTI-WAR SOCIETY AIMS AT ACTION

be a programme of action," he continued. "We must not restrict ourselves to making speeches and passing resolutions. We must base our policy upon what an anti-war movement can do. If at times we find ourselves becoming bogged down in argument and sterile discussion, we must snap out of it, and remember that however our points of view may differ, we have one common objective—to oppose war, and insofar as we can, to use our influence toward the stopping of war."

M. Wayman, discussing the political side of the anti-war question, emphasized the fact that opposition to war implies opposition to those in whose interest the activities which lead to war are carried on. Two of the fundamental causes of war he declared to be imperialism and fascism, to both of which the society must be opposed. He also criticised the government for increasing expenditure in the Department of National Defence while university grants were being cut and educational facilities were generally inadequate.

Ed Newbury, of Emmanuel College, representing the large body of students who approached the question from the Christian point of view, repudiated not only war but the spirit of violence which bred war. "Our point of emphasis, however," he said, "must be a practical one. We are all as one in our opposition to war. It may not be all plain sailing; there are bound to be many differences of opinion among us; but we can co-operate on the practical basis of our conviction that war is wrong—our hatred of war and our refusal to participate in it."

Gordon Skilling, of University College, amplified the same point of view. "Some of us have an ethical objection to war," he said. "We are convinced that it is not a satisfactory method of settling international disputes. Others of us stress the economic objections—that war is uneconomic in its results—the loss of life, the waste of money and economic disruption which accompany it. But on the question of action against war, we are agreed."

The tentative aims outlined by the Provisional Committee were then discussed, and passed substantially as they appeared with but few changes in wording. They were based on the policy of the English Students' Anti-War Council. When the question of the C.O.T.C. came up, the feeling was strongly expressed that the society must take a definite stand of opposition to the militaristic influence which it represented. On the other hand, it was agreed that there was no desire to oppose the right of any student to join the C.O.T.C. if he wished, or to use any form of coercion against it. It was felt that the C.O.T.C., as an organisation, had as much right to exist as any other; on the other hand, the granting of special privileges such as exemption from P.T., and financial support through a government grant when funds for the really vital needs of the university had been reduced, were condemned.

Authority on Jewish Students Speaks to Large Audience in Hart House

"Although we associate the university with intellectual freedom, culture and tolerance, it is strange that the European universities have been the centres of anti-Semitic feeling," stated Mr. James Parkes, M.A., of Geneva, speaking at Hart House yesterday afternoon on the subject "The Jewish Student in Europe." Mr. Parkes, who is a non-Jew, is a distinguished graduate of Oxford and has devoted himself for some years to the study of the Jew and his problem. At present he is the chairman of a Committee of International Student Service for assisting German Emigre students.

"If it were not for the universities, the Jewish problem would not have attained the proportions it has in Germany," continued Mr. Parkes. "The Jew is only a recent arrival in Europe and one finds anti-Semitism before one finds the Jew. No matter how much the advent of the National Socialist government of Germany may be due to post-war conditions, the anti-Semitic part of its programme is based on an ideology conceived long before the war itself."

Mr. Parkes then went on to explain why it was that the percentage of Jews in universities was greater than the percentage of Jews in the community. He pointed out that the Jew was essentially a town-dweller, that

SIX SCHOLARSHIPS GIVEN BY N.F.C.U.S.

Canadian University Students Make Annual Exchange
Again

FORMER STUDENTS RETURN

Six Canadian students are this year studying under Exchange Scholarships it is announced by the National Federation of Canadian University Students. The scholarships are awarded annually by the N.F.C.U.S. with the approval of the university authorities of Canada. The holder of an Exchange Scholarship may study for one year at a university other than his "home" university without paying tuition or Students' Council fees. At the end of the scholarship year the Exchange Scholar is required to return to his "home" university to complete his course.

Following are the six who were appointed for the current session:

1. Peter B. Anderson of Alberta, to McGill.
2. Mary Macbeth of Alberta, to Toronto.
3. E. R. Pseudhomme of Manitoba, to Toronto.
4. Jean Hoshal of Saskatchewan to Toronto.
5. Helen Hamilton of Queen's to Dalhousie.
6. Edward Fox of Western Ontario to U.B.C.

At the same time six students who had Exchange Scholarships last session are now back at their "home" universities:

1. Fred Watkins back at Alberta from Toronto.

RIFLE ASSOCIATION HOLDS COMPETITION

Arts Team Win DeLury Shield at Long Branch in Annual Match

S.P.S. RUNNERS-UP

The annual interfaculty match of the University of Toronto Rifle Association was held at Long Branch on Saturday. Colonel Utton, the university rifle coach, and Captain Lucas, president of the association, were in charge, and there was a fine turnout of members. Forty-three came from the various faculties to compete for the individual prizes and for the DeLury Shield, emblematic of the interfaculty championship. This was again taken by Arts, with a score of 405. S.P.S., the runners-up, were just behind with 402. The ordinary service rifle with open sights was used.

The gold medal given by the association for the highest individual score was won by A. T. Griffiths, III Arts, who made 90 out of a possible 100, shooting at two and four hundred yards.

The Arts team which took the DeLury Shield was composed of the following members: Griffiths, McIntyre, Jeffery, Powell and Long.

Silver medals for the highest in each faculty were won by the following: Arts, McIntyre; S.P.S., Thomson; Denis, Weldon; Meds, Bright; Pharmacy, Wilton.

VEILED UNREST SEEN IN INDIA

Not So Quiet as Newspaper Reports Indicate is Opinion

MASSEY SCHOLAR HERE

Believing that the real India is not the India which one reads about in the newspapers, Mr. Addy, the Massey scholar from India now attending the University of Toronto, feels that the people in other parts of the world, especially on this continent, have been led to believe that conditions in India were more quiet than they actually are.

"India is not so quiet as newspaper reports would lead us to believe," Mr. Addy stated. "It may be that the feeling is under the surface and that the government has succeeded in bringing about a calm that is not at all indicative of the general sentiment of the country. There is very little likelihood of serious disturbances in the near future, however. The chief problem at present is that of working out a new constitution; and then there are certain economic problems that must be solved. To maintain the peaceful conditions, sympathetic handling is necessary."

Campus opinion was unanimous in its support of the author of yesterday's editorial in The Varsity. University of Toronto students wholeheartedly deplore conditions which make it possible to exploit for profit the suffering of the mother and father in their catastrophe. One student said "It is our treatment of things like this which makes us wonder whether our civilization is advancing or decaying."

R. A. Ball, IV U.C., "agreed absolutely with the conclusions the editor reached. Such standards of journalistic ethics can only be prompted by the desire to increase circulation," he said. "Such incidents as this make one almost believe that censorship of the press is becoming essential."

Norm Knight, III Vic "thought the editorial was true enough. I don't see what remedy there is as long as newspapers continue to publish for profit," he said. When asked what he thought about censorship of the press as a remedy for the situation, Mr. Knight countered with the question: "Who would impose the censorship?" He didn't think that a board similar to the one which censors films would work properly in censoring the press.

Howard Ross, IV Meds, said that he "didn't think that any great good could come from the way the press played up the story."

Olell, IV Vic, when asked for his opinion of yesterday's editorial said, "We were talking about it today and

BLUES MISS SMILLIE

Last night at Varsity Arena Warren Stevens came to bat for the first time in his new role as coach of the Varsity senior hockey team. Over thirty men flashed up and down the ice for his approval as the new coach began the task of lining up a team which will go somewhere in the series which will open November 13. When the university squad clash with the newly formed Old Dukes, who are now the Toronto club.

Varsity are going to be more than a little shaky on the defense. Of the thirty-old men on skates only five are anxious to stand back and bowl them over as they come down. The five men trying for defense positions are Al Campbell, Pete White, Williamson, all of last year's intermediates; Bruce Charles of the juniors, and Bruce Squires. These men turned in creditable performances for an early work-out but all are rather light for defense work. Frank Ship is back in goal and is likely to remain there.

About two dozen hopeful pucksters are out there trying for a berth on the wing line. They are all of the light, fast skating type who are always dangerous. Hendry, Cunningham and McPherson, all saw service on the

DULLARDS BENEFITED

"If a child has been trained properly both at home and at school, his ability to choose a vocation will come quite naturally," said J. D. Griffin of the Department of Psychology when interviewed by The Varsity regarding vocational guidance. The school period is only one small phase of a child's existence, the first six years of his life being the most important since it is then that his character is moulded which more or less determines the vocation he will follow.

"I would prefer to see a child given a wide range of opportunity and experience so that he may see for himself the advantages and disadvantages of a large number of occupations. Any new and beneficial scheme that might be introduced in the schools would be of an order tending to enlarge this viewpoint. Actually a man talking to a group of students and describing in a few words the various occupations does not help; the pupil must be given the opportunity to investigate for himself."

Mr. Griffin stated that a distinction

U.C. STUDENTS TO HEAR DR. G. F. ROGERS TONIGHT

The U.C. Literary and Athletic Society is holding its next meeting at 8:00 p.m. in the junior common room to-night. The piece de resistance is to be an address by Dr. Geo. F. Rogers, Chief Director of Education for Ontario. He is going to speak on possible and desirable changes in Ontario's Secondary School Education. The members will have an opportunity to discuss such questions as the examination system and the abolition of Latin or the inclusion of economics. There will be refreshments, of course, and Mr. Plumtree, who was absent at the first meeting, will be back in the chair. Also a report will be made on the progress of the Constitutional Committee's work.

FACE A CRISIS OF PLENTY

An International Constitution Must be Created and Soon

"The way to solve the problems of peace lies in the solving of the problem of national defense," said Sir Norman Angell in Convocation Hall last night.

"The old method of defense was to secure a preponderance of power over your rival. At that time all wars were defensive, that is, a defence of the nation's interests and rights, or what people believed to be their rights. In case of a quarrel might was placed behind a denial of right, the two powers deciding for themselves. To avoid this obviously unjust method a third party should be introduced to give an impartial decision."

"Force must be placed in the hands of the law. It is said that we must have armies and navies to act as a police force. But police forces do not fight each other. The old system of alliances must disappear. Defence must become the function of the whole community."

"In my writings thirty years ago I maintained that war would come, but that it could be avoided. My contemporaries declared that man must always fight. 'War,' they said, 'was a struggle for bread.' But we have seen that victory does not solve this problem but rather aggravates it. After conquest there is no transfer of property, no transfer of trade. The only difference is a change in government. Britain hoped by the last war to capture the trade of her rivals. Today, however, her shipping has been decreased by two-thirds."

"The problem of the modern world is not a shortage of material. We are not engaged in seizing the trade

DUNLOP GIVES OUTLINE

"Interest in economics has decidedly increased," remarked Mr. W. J. Dunlop, B.A., B.Ed., Director of the University Extension, in discussing with The Varsity his department's new course, "Economic Diagnoses" which "is designed to help intelligent men and women, who may or may not have had some formal training in economics, towards a fuller understanding of the vital economic issues which confront the world today." The course, which already boasts a large attendance, is to be addressed every Wednesday evening by H. M. Cassidy, B.A., Ph.D., but it is understood that each lecture will be the occasion for warm discussion since the subject-matter deals not only with the problems of the past and of the present, and with the forces that underlie the present economic and social crisis, but also is concerned with the problems which will have to be faced when the depression passes, and with the proposals and programmes of the various extant political organizations. "The Post-War Economic Scene," "The Economic System and Social Life," "The Economics of Social Revolution," and "Russia—A Socialized Economy" are the subjects of four of the twenty lectures.

THE HART HOUSE STRING QUARTET

Ten years ago last Saturday the organisation known as the Hart House String Quartet was brought into being, when Messrs. Ham-bour, Blackstone, Adaskin and de Kresz gathered for their first rehearsal. For ten years the four men have remained together, a thing almost unheard-of in the musical world. In that time the Quartet has travelled to various parts of the globe, gaining fame and recognition as one of the world's most unique and perfect musical organisations.

Throughout its history the Quartet has been favourably received by music lovers everywhere. Capacity audiences have greeted it consistently, and the name Hart House String Quartet is known wherever good music is appreciated.

The Quartet has been gracious enough to give Toronto audiences an opportunity to hear it each year, and university students in particular have been favoured. A series of concerts is presented annually in Convocation Hall at a convenient hour, and the admission charge for undergraduates is quite reasonable. Hundreds of students have in the past availed themselves of this privilege, and few have regretted it.

There should be no need to sing the praises of the Quartet to undergraduates. We only wish to remind them of the opportunity that is theirs. University students should find time in their schedule for attending concerts such as the String Quartet presents. It is the hope of those in charge to sell fifteen hundred tickets to the student body this season, so that the Quartet may be assured of a reasonably large audience.

Those who have heard the Hart House String Quartet in past years or at the first Sunday evening concert will want to hear it again. Those who have never attended a concert by this famous combination of renowned musicians have something yet to add to their musical education. Our appreciation for the Quartet may best be shown by the simple gesture of attending its performances.

The Editor,

The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Many favourable comments have been made on this year's goodly class of Freshmen. But I doubt if you would have been handing out friendly slaps on the back had you attended the Vic 377 class party Friday night. Never in my life have I seen such a stag line adorning the west wall of Annesley with vacant looks on their dumb, expressionless faces!

What I want to know is why they came at all. Was it to gaze in soulful admiration at the long feminine line across the hall? If so, they must have enjoyed the party. My suggestion is that they go to the Art Gallery instead of planting their useless figures in a stationary position on the horizon of a line of Freshettes.

Oh, I won't deny that there wasn't a goodly number of Freshmen there who did their duty nobly and I won't say there wasn't an equal number of Freshettes who enjoyed themselves thoroughly. But what I do complain of is the poor sportsmanship of those who remained in their own little clique and of the thirty or forty men who refused to budge from their self-appointed sentinel posts. Poor shy chaps! The Freshettes are indeed sorry for their sad mental condition!

Remember, all the girls had paid their fees. It is suggested that a refund be made to any Freshette who was sport enough to keep on valiantly smiling when she hadn't the chance of one dance or supper.

Now what are those stick-in-the-mud clams of Freshmen going to do about it? Remember, there is still another class party, and one more chance for them to prove their mettle. Can they do it? One wonders.

An Observer.

VEILED UNREST SEEN IN INDIA

When questioned about the late Mr. Patel, who died recently in Geneva, Mr. Addy had several good things to say about his distinguished countryman. "He was a member of the Congress Party and Lord Irwin felt that when the opportunity presented itself, Mr. Patel should be elected president; he was later elected unanimously. He had quite a successful career, but he aroused much opposition from the official bloc who thought he was not impartial. An outstanding figure and an able leader, he was, however, forced to travel in Europe for his health; but he used the opportunity to canvass the situation and to explain the Indian situation."

Mr. Addy was inclined, however, to dismiss as unimportant the anti-British agitation in India. The anti-British propaganda is nothing very serious," he said. "It is not really anti-British in origin. Where there is emphasis on the use of Indian articles, it is a defence measure to protect the home products rather than to injure British producers."

The Royal Alexandre

Without reservation or qualification, the finest genuine musical comedy to come to Toronto since Gilbert and Sullivan were last done here really professionally is playing at the Royal Alexandre this week in Music in the Air. Beside its such popular favourites as Blossom Time and The Student Prince are mere mawkish drivel.

Its superiority lies chiefly in the fact that it follows much more closely along the lines of an English revue than the traditional American production. The plot is of the simplest, and Oscar Hammerstein has done something I had scarcely thought any author would have the courage to attempt—he has refused to take either his plot or his hero and heroine seriously. Believe it or not, but the inevitable embrace in the finale takes place back-stage, with the ensemble having a high old time all by themselves in the foreground.

The refreshing thing about Music in the Air, in fact, is that everybody has a high old time, without being messed up by the leading couple's continuously intruding with their own sentimental woes. Consequentially, the action is just about twice as fast as it otherwise would have been. And what is more, the general tempo is varied so skilfully that you don't see the transitions till after the show is over.

The lyrics (by Jerome Kern) are very good, one in particular, the popular I've told every little star being the sort that keeps you humming it for days afterward. The lines and staging are superb. One bit in particular stands out—a beautiful burlesque of a slightly indecent operetta. It is years since there has been anything quite so hilarious as the prima donna's simulation of the scene where she is supposed to undress behind a bush, "lighted to show her silhouette supremely in the nude!" as the librettist triumphantly explains—or the process by which the leading man grandly mounts to the top of a table to pose for his big finale.

There is also a lovely scene in the Zoo... but I could rave on this way for columns. What I'm trying to say is that whether you have the time to spare or not, you can't spend three hours of this week in any better way than going slightly insane over Music in the Air. C. L. C.

Nutcracker Suite ..... TCHAIKOVSKY
A large crowd of school children, with a sprinkling of adults, thoroughly enjoyed themselves yesterday afternoon at the first of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra's series of Children's Concerts. Not least enjoyable were the illustrative remarks of Miss Emily Tidd, Musical Supervisor of Schools, who with very few words introduced each number with sufficient explanation to make it clear to the audience what the music was supposed to be about.

Without question the outstanding feature of the programme was the Mendelssohn Concerto, with Jacob Danau, who couldn't have been more than ten years old, taking the solo violin. He performed quite remarkably well, though his sigh of relief at the end of the cadenza was amusingly obvious. One thing: he gave Dr. MacMillan a good deal less trouble with regard to tempo than many an (Continued on Page 4)

As I was on my way to Meds
When all at once I saw a crowd
A host of fearsome, fair co-eds
Beside the desk, in line-up squeeze,
Weeping and pleading on their knees.

Too late, too late, ye cannot enter now!!

No telephone bell will shrill for them,
For them will be no handsome date,
They stretched in never-ending line,
They left their registration late.
Doomed co-eds saw I at a glance
Wiping their eyes at every chance.

Maybe the Registrar and his assistants don't wish this business was over!
What with weeping maidens and difficult youths, quite content to let the Directory go to press minus their names, Hill residents, and Looney, Mooney, Rooney, and Cooney, the staff is tottering on the verge of distraction.

We suggest Chaz as an assistant in disentangling the tangle. The time that cat spends snooping around in dark alleys might be more profitably used in discovering the names and addresses of recalcitrant students. Meow!! And maybe the Directory would be out sooner.

There's one good thing about it co-eds! The name of every man, woman and child in S.P.S. and Meds will be in the Directory. They corral the Engineers in the draughting-room and wrest the dark secret of their cognomen and hang-out from them. Dirty Meds put it down in black and white in the anatomy lecture. Drastic methods, but the case of Directory vs. Student requires it.

Imperial—

This week the Imperial presents the Kennel Murder Case, one of Hollywood's better offerings to public intelligence. The story is Warner Brothers' version of Van Dine's latest best seller, with a couple of extra principles thrown in to show that Mr. Van Dine should have had more characters in the first place. The picture, despite the change, is an improvement on the book.

William Powell assumes the role of master mind, as the crime expert, Philo Vance. Mary Astor and Helen Vinson take the only feminine parts in the picture. The plot is admirably presented and the first-rate acting makes the Kennel Murder Case a talkie which should be tremendously popular with those who like their murder (Continued on Page 3)

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

Everything is about to happen these days in the realm of women's sports although for the last few days nothing has actually taken place. However, both baseball and basketball fixtures are scheduled for this week. Baseball should be all over with about the middle of the month. Inter-faculty basketball is due to be completed before Christmas to make way for the intercollegiate tournament at Western this year near the end of February or the beginning of March.

Regular practices are being held and are fairly well attended in most cases, although reports from U.C. indicate there is not as large a turnout as they would like in both baseball and basketball. In all the faculties and colleges the freshmen seem to be enthusiastic and form quite a large percentage of those who come out to practice.

The four teams that comprise the baseball league clash on Thursday night in their first games of the year when St. Mike's meet U.C. and Meds meet Vic. The struggle will probably take place at Vic gym so if you are interested be on hand at five.

MULOCK FIXTURE GOES TO JR. MEDS

Surprise Plays Feature Game as Forestry is Humbled by 12-0 Score

SLEMON OUTSTANDING

Proving the value of surprises and trick plays, Jr. Meds won over Forestry by a score of 12-0 in a Mulock Cup fixture yesterday. A well executed forward pass and clever handling of the team by quarterback Slemmon were mainly responsible for the large score.

The teams were fairly evenly matched in the first quarter and it was not until the second period that the first touchdown was made. After plunging to within a few yards of the line, the ball went to Snelling, who planted it in the right place. This touch was converted. Shortly afterward, on a fake back through centre, King heaved a beautifully long, wide forward pass. It was caught in the open field and run o the Forestry eight-yard line. Two bucks put it within two yards of the line and on the next play Slemmon took it over for the second touch, which was not converted. He was assisted in this touch by a heavy shove from behind which appeared to be very timely.

In the third period an attempted placement by Slemmon went for a point. Throughout the game the plunging of both teams was effective with Meds having a shade the better of it until the last five minutes when Forestry made yards three times in a row and ripped the Med line to pieces. For Meds the standouts were King and Slemmon. As usual, Knott, on the half line, turned in a stellar game, as did McConnell at middle and Taylor at flying wing.

Jr. Meds — Quarter, Slemmon; snap, Allan; halves, Neilson, Gold, King; flying wing, McCullough; insides, Jung, Greene; middles, Snelling, Barron; outsides, Howes, McNichol; subs, Graham, Hodge, Ryan, Miller.

Forestry — Quarter, Carlson; snap, Copland; halves, Knott, Heggie, Lien; flying wing, Taylor; insides, Kantola, Stangeby; middles, Young, McConnell; outsides, Hyslop, Cowan; subs, Johnston, Larsen, Yeomans.

TRINITY DOWN SCHOOL OF SCIENCE

Junior School's last hope of an inter-faculty football championship faded out last night as the hard fighting engineers failed to stop the league leading Trinity squad who defeated them 7-0. School tried desperately to avert elimination, but the Les Blackwell coached squad were just too good for them.

Trinity went to the front with a

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By J. A. R.

Once again it was the intermediate and junior rugby squads that provided the bright spots in the week-end programme. R.M.C. was the goat again but they certainly deserve credit for the improvement they showed over their first games with Toronto. And the seconds came in for a little hand-shaking too. At the beginning of the present season they looked like the worst bunch of old women that ever asked for a blue outfit—and now. They have won all their games to date which practically gives them their group and on Saturday they provided the fans with a real classic. Their attack was a credit to Lou Carroll's coaching and their own perseverance. Grab your bouquet, Lou. Which all goes to show that you can't tell a football player by the way he trims his moustache.

The juniors—well, of course—the juniors. Three shut-outs in the last three games with a total of 71 points; the leadership of their group; four straight wins; and one of the classiest forward passing combinations in the game. Grady Laing's outfit had their style curbed slightly when Cam Gray wrenched his ankle in a strenuous attempt to grab one of their forward and upended heaves, but they came through just the same.

These, folks, are our coming scioners.

Which same leads to the old topic of "why" and "how come". Were Queen's actually superior to the Blue and White? Here are some figures for your entertainment. Varsity gained yards 12 times, 5 times in the last quarter, and 8 of them on plunges. Queen's got yards 6 times. Sinclair's kicks in the first half averaged 48 yards as compared to Queen's 39. In the second half Wing of the Tricolour had the margin by 45 to 36. Varsity tried 11 forwards, 5 of them in the last quarter, and completed one for a gain of 20 yards. Queen's tried four and completed one for a 47 yard gain (and a touch). This tells a story all of its own, but say we, as long as there's a McGill team there's hope.

All the U. of T. has to do now is to bridle the Mustangs up in London and pray that the gods of the gridiron will plant some Redmen in the right spot at the right time and lend them adequate power. Teddy Reeves is too careful to allow his men any super-abundance of confidence and now they have their big chance.

In the latter part of last week Coach McCutcheon went to the trouble of arranging an exhibition volleyball game between two teams from the Central Y., purely for the purpose of showing all those interested in the sport just how it should be played. The teams were composed of former Ontario and Business Men champions, headed by Doctor Brookes, honorary president of the U. of T. Volleyball Club, and they gave a fine demonstration of how shots should be broken up, with good serving and spiking. Volleyball is a newly-formed interfaculty sport and for this reason has not had a chance to produce any veterans in the series. The men who play the game need all the pointers that they can collect. The attendance was down at the first game and for this reason Coach McCutcheon has planned to have another game played this afternoon in the same place. If you are interested don't forget the time—5 o'clock sharp.

PHARMACY DEFEATS O.C.E. IN LACROSSE

Evans Outstanding Scorer for Druggists with Five Tallies

STRENUOUS CHECKING

In a loosely played box lacrosse game in the big gym, Hart House, yesterday, Pharmacy outplayed and outscored O.C.E., last year's champions. Both teams were short on practice, but Pharmacy showed more experience to secure the verdict.

Pharmacy started off in good style when Evans settled one to the corner of the net. Shortly after the same player scored again and thereafter the O.C.E. team seemed unable to organize any effective attack on the Pharmacy goal. In the second quarter, much loose ball handling was in evidence, O.C.E. managing to get their lone counter when McLean drilled a fast one. The half ended 5-1 for Pharmacy.

Early in the third period Moffatt was forced out of the game by injuries sustained from a high check, weakening the O.C.E. defence. Pharmacy were the recipients of all penalties, five in number, for strenuous checking. Evans, with 5 goals, was the best man on the floor.

single in the first quarter when A'Court hoisted to Jacobs who was roused. The winners then chalked up a major in the third when Davidson dropped one of A'Court's kicks behind his line and Scrivener fell on it. The final score came in the last quarter when Trinity kicked to the deadline.

School tried hard to stop the Red and Black squad particularly in the final frame when they started heaving passes. Trinity, however, were good enough to stop them and A'Court's great kicking kept them out of danger.

VARISITY EXTENSION OFFERS NEW COURSE

Large classes have also been reported for Appreciation of Music, and the course in English Fiction. Toronto-nians are evidently not interested in Horticulture, Esperanto, and the History and Development of Furniture—the three new courses offered by the Extension, as shown by the scanty enrollment. The formation of a class in Archaeology is being contemplated, but no definite steps will be taken unless more applications are forthcoming, according to the Director.

Mr. Dunlop is at present negotiating with the Canadian Broadcasting Commission regarding a series of popular academic talks to be given by our own professors. Investigations carried out by the Extension, Mr. Dunlop further stated, have showed that the public is primarily interested in English, History and Science, and it is expected that the addresses will develop along these lines.

"Our favourite slogan," said Mr. Dunlop, in referring to the radio addresses, "is that they shall be interesting, inspiring and instructing. I hope to have news from the Commission shortly."

KEY PLANS ALUMNI SHOW

Randolph Crowe, that versatile entertainer, will repeat his uproarious impersonation of Mae West in a floor show scheduled for the Triennial Alumni Homecoming Dance to be held in Hart House on Friday, November 10. The floor show is being arranged by Mel Key of the Hart House theatre and while details are not yet available, there is no doubt that Mr. Key will provide excellent entertainment.

The Alumni Federation has engaged for this dance, Murray Griss' famous orchestra, whose growing popularity is proven by the important dances for which they have played, the Creche Ball, the Beaux Arts Ball, and the Hart House Masquerade.

Tickets for the Homecoming Dance are available for undergraduates and may be purchased at the Alumni office, 43 St. George St.

Two-thirds of the students at the University of Paris are Americans.

forward line last year and are out to hold down their old jobs. Another line which worked well last night was Jefferies, McClelland and Rey. Jefferies played with Varsity seniors last year and Rey with the seconds, McClelland played with Nationals last season. Sweeney McConvey and Valiquette also performed together last night with some success.

Almost all of last season's seconds have turned out and many of the juniors. For the junior team 25 were in action last night and there will be more out tonight.

Stevens will have to start from the bottom to develop a hockey team which will be a serious contender in the O.H.A. series. He has an inexhaustible source of material from which to draw. The team this year will be light and fast. They look a little better than last season's team at this time. They will, of course, be without the services of Don Smilie, but even at that they will probably have a better squad than the Blue team which finished in the cellar last season.

must necessarily be made between pupils of different levels of intelligence. The so-called dual student must be given special attention as it is to him that vocational guidance is most beneficial. He added that the Edith L. Groves School was doing excellent work but on the whole very little has been done in our public schools.

In a few weeks a new type of report card for pupils will be submitted to the management committee of the Toronto public schools. This card will stress the developments of characteristics which will be valuable both from the standpoint of work and present life conditions; it will also stress academic progress. A greater attempt is being made to develop the two most important objectives, good character and a high degree of adaptability.

CHARGE OF CRUELTY UPHELD BY JUDGE

During a "mock trial" Powlett, witnesses testified in court, was stripped of his clothing, dragged through dormitory corridors, beaten and subjected to cold showers. When he refused to say that a sophomore was the "highest form of humanity" he had the name of Prime Minister Bennett written on his forehead with indelible ink.

The judgment awarded Armand $50,000 and the two sums of $4,000 and $2,800 to the parent plaintiff. The board of governors and the senate of the university are parties to the suit.

thought it was very good. We were glad to see the stand The Varsity has taken. No, I wouldn't like to be quoted."

Marsh Laverty, IV Vic, said, "The editorial is one of the best I've read this year." He was "heartily in favour with what is said" and thought it was "an insult to any reader's intelligence" to have news played up in such a way. "Journalists displayed a very bad breach of good taste" and the public who demanded these sensational accounts "were reverting to barbarism", he thought.

J. C. Strachan, IV Vic, when asked if he were in favour of the views expressed in the editorial yesterday, said, "Yes, I am in favour of it. That is about all I care to say."

of others. We are occupied in keeping the goods of others out by high tariffs. We face a crisis of plenty. Our problem is to keep traffic moving on the highways of trade. This may be done by making traffic rules and co-operating with other nations; not remaining aloof as Lord Beaverbrook would have us do.

"There are two ways of defence. Each may be his own defender, or we may pool our armaments behind the Law. We cannot defend our own rights without defending the rights of others. In either case we must make known our stand and how our power will be used."

"We must face the risk of creating an International Constitution. Providence has provided a test of intelligence for us, a kind of religious obligation. A decision must be made or we shall drift, if not to war, to a disintegration of civilisation. Our natural instincts of self-preservation must be made subject to a 'second thought' for civilisation."

"Once we make a decision as to some form of human organisation we can proceed successfully. It is a vindication of the biblical quotation: 'Believe and ye shall be saved, doubt and assuredly ye shall perish!'" stories. It is among the best.

On the stage Dave Apollo presents his Surprises of 1933, which prove to be no surprises to those who have seen him and his cast before. Some good Hawaiian guitar music relieves the monotony, however.

Jack Arthur and his orchestra offer a delightful though brief musical programme, and a collegiate comedy is an amusing feature.

Shea's—

If you liked Cavalcade and Berkeley Square you will enjoy Turn Back the Clock, which is a comic reminder of both those pictures, with considerable plot of its own. The plot is not original, but not yet worn out. We always thought Lee Tracy was a master of facial expression, and in this picture he convulses the audience by looking just as we always feel in similar situations. Tracy has the whole show to himself. However, his continual lapses, when he uses modern wisecracks in his pre-war old home town, make the take-off from Berkeley Square a little too obvious.

"Gautier's Hot Dogs", the first vaudeville act, is the best. We never saw anything so cunning. You will also have a few hearty laughs with Harry Rose, comedian.

elder concertist who has appeared with the Orchestra.

Probably the most enjoyable number for the more mature section of the audience was Holst's St. Paul's Suite, with its unusual orchestration. It would provide a very refreshing interlude in one of the more serious Tuesday evening concerts.

I should like to take this opportunity to mention one of the finest pieces the Symphony Orchestra does—the National Anthem. Last year a good deal of fun was poked at the National Anthem, chiefly because we have been forced to hear it hacked to pieces by three-piece theatre orchestras so frequently; but as it is interpreted by Dr. MacMillan and played by the Orchestra, it takes its rightful place as one of the finest anthems written. With the words deleted it forms a piece of music we may well be proud to cherish as peculiarly our own. It is good that Toronto has this opportunity at least of hearing it properly rendered.

Japanese Art Exhibit

Oriental art is very different from our Western art, yet, it is amazing how some of its works can make us partake of the same experience as we get from a painting of Cezanne, Robert Henry, etc. Going through the reopened wing of the Royal Ontario Museum is simply thrilling and worthwhile. To the Japanese, especially, art is not restricted to a few conventional types, such as poetry, painting, architecture, but it penetrates every sphere of life. A lacquer box, a kimono, or a carved bone is as apt to express an aesthetic ideal as a painting from a great master. The R.O.M. enables us to see and judge painting in direct relation to objects of everyday life; one cannot but be struck by the evident unity of such an art.

Just as you enter the Japanese room, on your left, there is a strangely attractive painting of "a ghost", that might well have been done yesterday for its powerful and original rendering. Look at the signature: Okyo, (died in 1795). This makes us realise the long and great past of Oriental art, that was at its highest when Europe was still in the Middle Ages' chaos. Next are some paintings by Shotei and Kwatei, both living artists. They paint nature, birds, fishes, with "un je ne sais quoi" which is simply exquisite, without being sentimental, or weak.

If we look at paintings from earlier periods we shall see distinctly the influence of China upon Japan; China has indeed been often called the Athens of Japan. The Japanese rendering of faces is conventional, just a few lines, as opposed to the very realistic work of Chinese artists. But it is in the study of the background, in the movement of the bodies and clothes that the Japanese express their artistic experience, most expressively, too. Some rough sketches of vagrants, or of "an old man with a child", are as great as many drawings by Rembrandt, or Rodin, while having a distinctive Oriental character.

Among the Chinese paintings, the Ming Period is very well represented, and the right atmosphere is easily provided by the many fine statues, the glazed pottery figures, found in tombs, and the thousand objects through which the Chinese have expressed their art. Space does not allow me to describe more fully some, at least, of those paintings that every student interested in art—or simply in life—should see. The faces especially are very expressive, and between them and the position of the body there is usually a fine harmony. Chinese painting, of the Classical Period, is more realistic than Japanese works of the corresponding time. This too short review would be incomplete if the room, in which hang four fine Chinese portraits, and that contains also a priceless collection of wonderful gowns, was not mentioned.

Hamlet Hits the High Spots Now Bring Your Own Bier--It's a Wow!

By Hugh Canthys Fellowship

Hollywood, Calif.

Dear Mr. Knight,

You will doubtless be surprised to learn that one of our scouts watched your production of Hamlet last week. Well, our agents are everywhere—we are, as you would say, ubiquitous. And from what we learn from our scout we are mighty interested in your play. In fact, we might as well get down to business. We happen to know that Horner Brothers are also after Hamlet as a vehicle for their team of Dick Powell and Ruby Keeler. Well, we must have it at any price for our Robert Montgomery, who we feel will suit the title role at least as well as Dick Powell, so name your figure. And speaking of "title" reminds me that there will have to be a little change there. For one thing, one of our executives is sure he remembers playing called Hamlet being done on Broadway late last century. It was a play of small-town life, though, he thinks, so your plot would not clash with it, but we always change titles anyway, almost, and it's best to be on the safe side.

Now, our first idea when discussing the play in conference was to call it Murder at Eight, and give it every star we've got. But in view of the present popularity of musicals, we have decided to bow to the will of the Public and make it a backstage picture, with the title Gravediggers of 1933. As you may surmise, this, while of course keeping the essential Theme of the play, will necessitate a certain number of minor alterations. For instance, Hamlet (or Jimmy, as we propose to call him, with your consent) will become a poor but gifted young songwriter, whose first chance comes when a big theatrical producer is looking over his girl friend Ophelia (we're keeping that name, thought it's a bit old-fashioned, because one of our tune-smiths has thought up a song for Jimmy to sing to her—"Ophelia, I'd Like to Steal Ya"). Well, Jimmy, seated before an open window on the roof of a Brooklyn penthouse, is playing his piccolo and crooning "To Be or Not to Be Baby" (you see, Mr. Knight, how close we're keeping to your script). At once the producer beckons him over and engages him to write the music for his show, which, in deference to your play, we'll call "Something Rotten on Broadway".

Well, to get on with the plot. Later, by a strangely fortuitous concatenation of circumstances (yes, Mr. Knight, I confess I got one of our authors to write that bit for me), Ophelia is given a chance to play the leading role in the show, and, curiously enough, who should fall ill but the leading man, and no one else knows the songs but Jimmy.

Now right there, Mr. Knight, is where we feel that we would be departing somewhat from your plot. So to make up for it, during the show who should come backstage but the producer, who has learned from Walter Winchell that he is actually Jimmy's stepfather, and Jimmy's mother, who has married again, just like in your play. Well, Jimmy ups and accuses her of prematurely poisoning her former husband, and things look pretty black when Jimmy's cue comes to go on, and fortunately by the time he is off again Polonius (played by Will Rogers) has had a post-mortem examination of the body (played by Phillips Holmes) and has disproved the charge, so everything ends happily—though not too happily, because right there we're going to introduce some sort of a tragic note, so as not to play false to your Theme, Mr. Knight. And that reminds me that we may decide to call the hero Hamlet after all, and have his stepfather and mother go away in their joy and leave him alone and desolate. Then Ophelia, who had to go too for a few minutes, comes back and sings a touching ballad called "My Forgotten Ham", and after a little coaxing he consents to make it up with her.

That's pretty much the outline at present, Mr. Knight. Other musical numbers will be "Pettin' in the Graveyard"; a reminiscent number for Hamlet—or Jimmy—to sing as he gazes at the skull, "Alas Poor Yorick! He Looks Quite Prehistoric! He Was One of that Old Gang of Mine"; "I've Got to Swing a Shovel!" sung by the First Gravedigger (Ned Sparks); and two big spectacle numbers—"We're in the Coffin!" in which all the girls, wrapped in cellophane shrouds, will dance in a mammoth coffin, and "The Shadow Halts", danced by the Halibutina Hasch Ballet, led by the Ghost (played by Charlotte Greenwood). If we decide to keep the name Hamlet we can call them "Hamlet's Happy Hot-cha Honey".

The cast will include Norma Shearer of course, as Ophelia (she can wear a blonde wig), our great comedy team, Wallace Berry and Marie Dressler, as Bertie and Gertrude, the stepfather and mother (we may have a sequence where the Ghost sings to Jimmy—or Hamlet—"You'd Better Watch Your Stepfather!"), Jackie Cooper as Horatio, Edward G. Robinson as Laertes, and Jimmy Durante (who may sing at the end, "What! No Bier?"), and Jack Pearl as Rosencrance and Guildenstern (we're going to keep those names, you bet!).

By the way, Mr. Knight, when we conferred with Will Hays about his story, he passed it, but muttered something about "incest" and "censors". We couldn't figure it out for quite a while, but at last we did, so in one of the ballet scenes we're going to have all the girls swinging censurers of incest. Will that fix that up O.K., do you think?

Yours for success, Mr. Knight, and hoping for an early wire of confirmation,

Yours fraternally,
Getta-Golden-Lyre,
Houis B. Lyre, President.

ANTI-SEMITISM

IN UNIVERSITIES

The Jew has been barred from many middle-class occupations and government positions, and that even the small Jewish store-keeper has been pushed to the wall by the steady increase of large co-operative and powerful chain store and departmental store combines. And it was chiefly because of these reasons that the only chances of the Jews for making a living was by entering the professions, mainly those of law, medicine and journalism.

"The economic depression in the last few years has enormously increased the population of the European universities," continued Mr. Parkes, "and there has been no corresponding increase in the number of professional openings for all these trained men. It was due to this fact that a great deal of the strength of the Brown Shirts has come from German professional graduates who have not been able to find jobs in their chosen line of endeavour. And what is easier than to spread propaganda that every Jew who is employed has stolen his job away from the German?"

"The solution to this problem is not going to be easy," concluded Mr. Parkes, "especially so since the Jews themselves are divided as to the steps that are to be taken towards alleviating the situation. And to accentuate the difficulties is the fact that the Jew in Europe is an extremely good student. The German himself realises this truth. In a discussion with the Dean of a medical faculty in Vienna, I questioned him about this and because he was a liberal-minded old man he regretfully admitted that 'The German Jew is just as good as the Austrian Jew, and the Austrian Jew is better than the Austrians.'"

LESS STUDENTS AT QUEEN'S

A slight decrease in attendance is reported by Queen's University for the current year.

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

PREPARATION IDEA OVER EMPHASIZED IN HIGH SCHOOLS

Aim of Secondary Schools Should be Vocational Education

MORE ENGLISH SUGGESTED

Curriculum Should Test Out Abilities of Pupils
Says Rogers

Speaking last night before an interested audience at a meeting of the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society which supported the speaker in his criticisms of the Ontario secondary school system, Dr. G. F. Rogers, Chief Director of Schools for Ontario, made a critical analysis of the high school curriculum and outlined his suggestions for reform. He was anxious to impress his hearers with the idea that the high school is a unit in itself and that the subjects taught in these secondary schools should be directed towards giving an education for living rather than preparing the students for a university training, when so few students, relatively speaking, actually continue to the university.

"School is not a preparation; it is a stage in life," Dr. Rogers stated. "We are over-emphasizing the idea of preparation in our school life. The school is a unit of life; the secondary school is a place where a boy at a certain stage of life lives and has his interests."

"When I think of the large number of boys for whom the high school is a finishing school, I must put before you the idea of a curriculum suited to the student where he is and not one preparing him for the university. Does not all vocational education simmer down to an education for living? This is the education which the high school should seek to provide. I think that the curriculum should test out the abilities and aptitudes of every boy who attends."

Touching on the relation of the curriculum to the training of the girls, Dr. Rogers wondered if the high schools were fitting the girls for the task of being homemakers and mothers. He requested that girls have a knowledge of household budgeting, nursing, dietetics, "just plain cooking", needlework, decorating, art, music, literature, etc. "I am just old-fashioned enough to believe that the home is the only thing that will save civilization," Dr. Rogers asserted.

Continuing with an examination of the curriculum, the speaker stressed the need for more English and an

S.C.M. Corner

"Our World Today" is the topic of a series of five lectures to be delivered under the sponsorship of the Student Christian Movement during the next five Wednesdays. The first of the series will be delivered at 5.10 p.m. today in the Music Room, Hart House.

This lecture, entitled "The Present World Outlook" is to be given by Professor N. A. Mackenzie of the Law Department, and will form an introduction to the rest of the series. The next three lectures are "Unemployment" by Professor H. M. Cassidy, "Race and Nationality" by Professor G. M. Wrong, and "The Issue of Peace or War" by Professor W. R. Taylor. The fifth and concluding lecture, "The Responsibility of the Individual" by Professor John Line, will sum up the ideas presented in the preceding addresses.

These lectures will end at 6 p.m. and the last ten minutes will be given over to questions and answers.

"Art in Modern Life"

W. G. Constable, M.A., F.S.A., will give a lecture entitled "Art in Modern Life" on Thursday evening, November 2nd, at the Art Gallery of Toronto. Mr. Constable is the director of the Courtauld Institute of Fine Arts, University of London. He was until quite recently associated with Sir Charles Holmes as assistant director of the National Gallery in London, England. Mr. Constable is the author of many contributions to the literature of Art and is a distinguished authority on art and education in art. He comes to the Art Gallery of Toronto under the auspices and by the courtesy of the National Gallery of Canada.

With the coming of the fall months the Art Gallery has reassumed its appearance of activity. The exhibitions on view have been well attended and the commencement of the season's lectures shows great interest.

WOMEN'S DEBATING CLUB IS PROPOSED

Will Send Representatives to Intercollegiate Tournaments

THIRTY MEMBERS NEEDED

All University College women interested in debating are earnestly requested to take part in the formation of a group for that purpose. The aims and hopes of this new venture were set forth at an informal meeting held in the Women's Union yesterday by Miss Jean Mutch.

"Thirty members, at least, are essential for its success," she stated, "from which a certain number of representatives are to be sent to the tournaments for the intercollegiate debate on November 30th. And other representatives to the interfaculty debates which are held in January and March."

Miss M. Galloway was elected junior representative of the union by acclamation. University College representatives, to be sent to the tournaments on November 8th, have not yet been chosen, nor have the subjects been decided by the executive. Each college in the union sends in a subject to the executive which, in turn, sends the four received to all four colleges. Each college designates her first and second choices and returns them to the executive, who choose the most popular one.

University College has never had its own debate, although various individuals have taken part in the intercollegiate debates, and it is hoped that as many as possible interested in this new University College project will give it their aid and support.

ENGINEERS ARE TOLD SOVIET ACHIEVEMENTS

"An Engineer Looks at Russia" was the topic of an enlightening address by Mr. H. Spencer Clark, 214 graduate of S.P.S., recently returned from Soviet Russia, before a well attended meeting of the Engineering Society in the Mining Building yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Clark illustrated his talk with slides and posters brought back by him from Russia. He touched upon the economic situation, Russian schools, prisons and practically every phase of the life of a citizen of the Soviet. The speaker made particular reference to the great engineering feats which have been and are being undertaken by the republic. Slides were shown of many of these.

Mr. Clark spoke at considerable length of the huge project of the Five Year Plan and endeavored to interpret the attitude of the people towards it. He pointed out that the co-ordination of all economic life is leading the way and probably will be followed by other countries.

Series is Believed Barrier

When questioned as to why the student body has not shown greater interest in the Hart House String Quartet, undergraduates expressed a variety of opinions to The Varsity.

G. T. Scott, III Economics stated that, although he was very deeply interested in music, he did not find the chamber music particularly appealing. He was quite aware of the fact that an exceptionally fine offer was being made to the students, but felt that he would rather sacrifice the concerts than other interests.

C. W. Rump, IV Arts, had only heard the Quartet on two occasions, and stated that he had particularly enjoyed the concert at which the old instruments belonging to the Massey Foundation were played. He suggested that a similar concert might be an attraction to many of the students who would not be interested in the regular presentations of the Quartet.

A very practical thought came from A. Gruson, IV U.C. He was of the opinion that more people would buy tickets if they could purchase them singly. Many students find the outlay of a dollar at one time rather an inconvenience but would have no trouble in taking the tickets if it were a matter of spending only 25c.

"I have never heard very much about the concerts, either in the press or through my friends," D. A. McMaster, III Mathematics, told The Varsity. "Perhaps there is a need for more publicity among the students," he added.

J. S. Campbell, II Victoria, was of the opinion that many students are not interested in the particular kind of music supplied by the Quartet. He also suggested that Friday night is the popular time for almost every other sort of an engagement, and that it

FACULTY CONDEMN VICIOUS HAZING WITH VEHEMENCE

Alberta Damage Suit Brings Torrent of Criticism on Initiations

"INANE CHILDISHNESS"

No Similar Accidents Have Occurred Here in Recent Years

The awarding of $56,800 damages to Armand Powlett, for injuries received during initiation at the University of Alberta has produced a great deal of interest on this campus. The former student is now in a Guelph mental hospital as a result of ill-treatment by the sophomores.

"There is no doubt at all that compared to the initiations in the University of Alberta ours are very tame," stated Ruth Pollock, IV Vic, who was one of the Alberta exchange students last year. "Formerly the freshmen were forced to wear carpenter's aprons and other wild types of outfits and sometimes their heads were shaved, but all this is now abolished. After the unfortunate result of the initiation last year the student government abolished all types of initiation for both men and women."

The Varsity then interviewed several members of the faculty in order to find out if there had ever been a similar accident at Toronto. Apparently everyone has survived for the last few years but we could not obtain any information about the good old days. However, several of the staff had very emphatic opinions regarding initiations in general.

Dr. John Satterly—Such inane childishness should be discouraged by all the deans and professors. In Europe no university worthy of the name would allow such nonsense.

Prof. Mackay—All initiations should be abolished. They only serve to increase the differences in the faculty while there should be a greater mingling for richer intellectual development.

Prof. Auld of the Department of Law stated that there was no question as to the possibility of recovering damages for nervous shock occasioned by wrongful assault. The fact

Hart House Songsters

Next Sunday, November 5th, marks the beginning of another series of Hart House Songsters. As in former years, these popular Sunday night features will be under the direction of Mr. Campbell McInnes. The Songsters are held in the Music Room at Hart House at 9 p.m. on those Sundays when there is no concert in the Great Hall.

The Hart House Songsters represent no organization—there is no committee, no officers, and no dues. A songster might be described as a sing-song that grew up. The idea possibly grew from an endeavour of some Schoolman to preserve some of the better known Tavern Songs for posterity. Certainly it must be discouraging, when the happy moment arrives, to find that no one in the group can recall either the words or the tune to "Let There be Wine". There is no excuse for such tragedy occurring as long as Mr. McInnes presents his songsters. He always sees to it that the programme is varied and interesting. Songs of the sea, old songs, that originated no one knows where; drinking songs, and such perennial favourites as "Londonderry Air" and "Flight of the Earls", are mingled into an hour's entertainment that always finds a ready response.

Some one has said that the greatest way to enjoy music is to make it yourself. Here, then, is a real opportunity to put this theory to the test, and find for yourself that lie who merely sits and listens is missing half the fun.

ITALY IS SEEKING TO EXPAND EMPIRE

Much of World Unrest Due to Reluctance of Nations to Share

FRANCE STANDS IN WAY

By Francesco Mario Molinari
In an article entitled "Three Late-Comers in the World", appearing in a recent issue of the North American Review, Richard Von Kuhlman, former German Minister of Foreign Affairs, reviews the recent development of Germany, Japan and Italy and traces much of the unrest in the world to the reluctance of old established nations to share with the new-comers.

"With the traditions of Rome as a living memory," writes Von Kuhlman, "and the picture of the Genoese and Venetian glory before our eyes with a rapidly growing population seeking an outlet, Italy's main political question today is the possibility of expansion overseas. She has over and over again carefully explored all parts of the globe where she could by tradition or geographical possibilities find a fissure in the wall which would allow her to introduce the thin edge of the wedge. But so far she has found no opening which seems likely to develop into promising colonial possessions. She had land in Eritrea, some islands on the south coast of Asia Minor and Libia on the north coast of Africa—a colonial empire large enough if considered by the number of square miles it covers, but entirely unsatisfactory from the point of view of economic value or the possibility of absorbing Italian emigration. The same can be said of the controlling influence which has been acquired across the Adriatic in Albania."

"In the main it is now France who stands in the way of Italy—the France who, after losing a gigantic colonial empire in the fight for sea supremacy against Britain which ended in the battle of Trafalgar, has since the defeats of 1814 and 1871 occupied Tunis, Algiers, and Morocco, the most desirable Mediterranean borderlands. This explains why we find in post-war

AMBIGUITY MARKS ROOSEVELT'S NEW MONETARY POLICY

President Hopes to Control
Domestic and Foreign
Price of Gold

POLICY QUESTIONED

Professor G. E. Jackson Says
President is Badly Advised

President Roosevelt's new monetary policy is, in the opinion of some members of the Economics Department, ambiguous where clear. This latest move towards American recovery means that gold will be bought by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation not at a price influenced by world market conditions but at a price set by the President and the Secretary of the Treasury.

In this manner the President hopes to control the domestic and international price of the dollar. It may affect the price of gold but it is a question whether or not it will affect the paper dollar in any other but an indirect way. In this, Professor G. E. Jackson said: "As far as I can see, the President is being badly advised."

"The President has not made at all evident what he expects of his gold policy," said Professor Plumptre. "But if he expects, as he appears to do, that the mere driving up of the price of American and foreign gold will raise other prices and promote general recovery, I feel sure he is mistaken."

"In executing any such policy he makes it all the harder for foreign debtors to pay their debts in the United States."

PACIFIST WILL DISCUSS FASCISM

Fenner Brockway, Chairman of Labour Party to Speak Here

ARDENT WORKER FOR PEACE

Few persons in public life today have crowded so rich and varied an experience into their lives as Fenner Brockway, who is to speak in Toronto next week. He has been prominent for years in the struggles of workers and in world peace movements. Born in Calcutta and educated in London, where he has worked as a journalist since leaving school. At present he is editor of the leading Labour weekly of England, The New Leader. He is also chairman of the Independent Labour Party of Great Britain and for many years ably represented that party in parliament.

In the years before the war he was actively engaged in working for international peace. During the war he formed the No-Conscription Fellowship, which resulted in his being sentenced to jail. Subsequently he became secretary of the Prison System Inquiry Committee and was joint author with Stephen Hobhouse of "English Prisons of Today", a remarkable book whose influence has led to many reforms in the English prison system.

In Parliament he rapidly established a reputation for effectiveness and ability. His skill in debate, his courage and sincerity and his thorough knowledge of his subjects have won him the respect of all audiences before whom he has spoken.

Fenner Brockway is an acknowledged authority on international affairs and has written a number of

INCONSEQUENCE

In an editorial headed "Advance on The Varsity" The Globe yesterday quoted a reply by the Porcupine Advance to a recent editorial in this paper. Part of the quotation reads, "The Varsity makes no effort to deny that atheism and disloyalty are more or less openly encouraged in the university." To which The Globe adds that "if Varsity would offer proof that atheism and disloyalty are not encouraged in the Provincial university the Advance might begin to express admiration for that institution of learning, and so might other journals which have gained the impression from anxious parents and even more directly that the business of promoting atheism and disloyalty is being ardently prosecuted."

It is also stated that "the Advance has seen too many students of divinity leave the university with faith shattered and needing years outside before the religion of their fathers is their own again." It is here that the Advance betrays its ignorance of the University's educational methods—not merely those of the present day, but those also which have the sanction of the usage of many years. I can call to mind at least two graduates, both of whom are now highly respected members of the clergy of some thirty years' standing, who have declared that at the end of their first year in the University they felt their whole world turned upside-down. All their dearest concepts—their "faith", if you like to call it that—were shattered: they found themselves lost in a wilderness of doubt and distrust. This in the nineties!

Yet somehow they, like many others, seem to have found their way to solid ground. The fact of the matter is, that one of the most valuable functions of the university is to turn students' preconceived

"THE ADVANCE ADMIRE THINGS IN TORONTO"

In yesterday's issue The Globe again quoted from the editorial column of the Porcupine Advance, this time to give the reply of the latter to an editorial appearing in The Varsity. Until we have seen the Advance editorial in its entirety we shall not attempt to argue on the main issue under discussion, namely, the charge that rowdiness, atheism, and disloyalty are taught at the University of Toronto. In the meantime, however, we hope to enlighten The Globe on the attitude of the Advance towards Toronto, a point which The Globe editorial stresses.

The attitude of the Advance towards Toronto, as set forth in the quotation in The Globe, is as follows:

"The Advance, lacking the advantages of University of Toronto training, must say that the columns of this paper prove that Toronto is much admired here. The Advance respects three of Toronto's dailies, The Globe, the Mail and Empire, and the Telegram. The Province has reason to be proud of such newspapers. The Advance admires things in Toronto, and never hesitates to say so—the Toronto Fair, the Toronto police force and its courageous chief, the Toronto spirit of enterprise, and the Toronto brand of generosity to all good causes."

The Globe writer dismisses the question with the statement, "This should absolve the Timmins paper of bias pertaining to the Provincial Capital." We fear that The Globe has been misled. Let us turn back to the issue of the Porcupine Advance for Aug. 31, 1933. We quote an editorial written in the usual inimitable Advance style, setting forth the editor's opinion of Toronto at that date. The entire editorial, including caption, is quoted so that there may be no danger of misunderstanding it.

WHERE TORONTO LEADS

Toronto is the leading city of Ontario. If anyone doubts this, they can be shown the place in any Toronto newspaper any day where the fact is proven by simply saying it is so. It is the one thing upon which all the members of the Toronto police commission would agree—probably the only thing. Toronto people believe it is mentioned somewhere in the Bible, though they may have forgotten the chapter and verse. But anyway, Toronto leads! That much seems certain, even to a certain or uncertain Toronto newspaper.

But where is Toronto leading the rest of the province?

It was the United States comedian, Bill Rogers, who said that all he knew was what he read in the newspapers. If Bill Rogers knew only what he read in the Toronto newspapers, then Bill would have a funny education. Are the people of Ontario any better than Bill Rogers? If not, whither are they being led?

It is only a short time ago that Toronto was leading the rest of the province in the supposition that there is something fine and tolerant in allowing the open preaching of bloodshed and rebellion. Following this lead came the other one that communism should be rooted out, with any cost for the rooting to be borne by the people at large, not by the city. Next came the proposal that the improbable stories of convicted thugs and hardened and persistent criminals should be accepted in preference to the sworn testimony of public servants whose faithfulness had been proven over a long term of years. Even in this matter, however, Toronto had the proviso that in the matter of cost Toronto should be able to shift the burden onto other shoulders. If the rest of the province followed the lead by Toronto somebody else would have to pay for the most of Toronto so-called leadership.

One of the recent leads of Toronto was in the matter of permitting a rowdy section of the public to take the law into its own hands to bulldoze another section of the people. This was followed in turn by prosecution of some youths for taking part in an "unlawful assembly." The magistrate dismissed the charges and discharged the youths from custody and court, characterizing the action of the authorities in the matter as a joke. If all this is leadership, then no wonder someone once wrote a book with the title, "Quo Vadis?"

Then there is the leadership typified by the attitude in Toronto towards the acceptance of tall tales by convicted crooks and ex-criminals rather than the considered denials of men in places of respectability who have no black marks against them except the mud thrown at them by cheap and expensive crooks and assertive jail-birds. This sort of leadership would soon sink Ontario in a dark mess similar to that enjoyed by the leading nation to the south.

Until the last few days the people of Ontario could console themselves with the thought that after all there was one thing in which Toronto gave true and worthy leadership—the great Canadian National Exhibition. Yet what is even this leadership this year? The Exhibition authorities this year are reported to have advertised for men to take part in a stunt that meant the risk of life in a deliberately planned collision between two rapidly driven automobiles in front of the grandstand. Wonderful leadership that, surely! And the excuse suggests even more remarkable leadership. In extension of the idea of the proposed stunt it is argued that the advertisements were simply a matter of publicity and that the dangerous stunt itself was never really entertained. In other words, Toronto was not giving leadership in the senseless risking of human life, but only showing a lead in the way of cheap lies and deception of the public!

Art, Music and Drama

H.C. Players' Guild

This afternoon at four o'clock, the Players' Guild offers its second presentation for this year in the one-act play of Eugene O'Neill, "Where the Cross is Made".

While many of O'Neill's plays verge, if not enroach, on the melodramatic, "Where the Cross is Made" is too real, too probable, to be included in this category. However, even here the emotion is tense throughout the entire play, and rapidly increases in concentration towards the climax which, although possibly predictable through the accumulating psychological probability by an astute impersonal observer, nevertheless holds the audience in a grip of fascination by this same stark inevitability.

O'Neill is notorious for his flagrant disregard for ease in production, and "Where the Cross is Made" is no exception to this habitual practice, since, as always, he strives for the perfect setting for his emotional crystallisation.

Organ Recital

The first organ recital of this year's series was given in Convocation Hall last evening at 5 p.m. by Dr. Healey Willan, organist for the University of Toronto. Dr. Willan, who is an authority on organ music, particularly Bach, gave an excellent programme played with flawless technique in every detail. His interpretation of the numbers varied from the unusual combinations on the Choir and Swell organs to the hard grave stops of the Great. The programme consisted of various composers' works ranging from Bach and Handel to the truly Russian style of Moussorsky.

The first number by Handel, Overture to the Occasional Oratorio, was one of the outstanding features of the programme. The Fugue theme was of delicate and intricate invention. The Andante, a solemn but rich melody, was followed by a passage in march time, the dignity and majestic style of which stirred the listener.

Fugue No. 1, by Robert Schumann, was of unusual interest, since it spelt Bach's name in notes, the theme of which was picked up by the right hand and then the pedals and moulded into a mighty rendition of a truly Schumann tonal thought.

The recital closed with one of the best known of Bach's organ works, Toccata and Fugue in D Minor a selection which was rendered during last year's series. A. W.

Massey Hall

The Don Cossack Russian Male Chorus is so well-known and always so enthusiastically received, that much comment seems superfluous. The reasons for its popularity are obvious enough. Its range of pitch is hard to believe, and its dynamic range equally incredible. The sounds produced are not always pleasing, nor very notable. (Continued on Page 4) ideas upside-down. No one can afford to base his life on the faith of his fathers—religious, political or economic—until it has stood the test of every doubt and criticism which can be raised against it. That is why the University so frequently appears a hot-bed of radicalism, and even atheism. And as far as religious belief, at least, is concerned, I think it is obvious that by and large it stands the test, particularly in the case of theology students who are deeply interested in it. Otherwise, since the process has been going on for some little time, the Church by now would be defunct, and atheism rampant in the land.

INCONSEQUENCE

As far as concerns the charge that "atheism and disloyalty are more or less openly encouraged in the university" and even that "the business of promoting atheism and disloyalty is being ardently prosecuted," I do most vehemently deny, as will any intelligent student, that it has any foundation in fact. What is taught is the necessity of an individual faith, based upon inner conviction, as opposed to apathetic acceptance of other people's beliefs. The business which is being ardently prosecuted is that of forcing students to stand upon their own feet. If the fallacies of theological dogma are laid bare under the pitiless glare of reason, if accepted economic and social theories are torn to pieces, it must not be construed that a university education is one of destructive negation. Constructive thinking is even more emphatically insisted upon. It may be that many students temporarily embrace the most exotic beliefs, the most fanatical of unbeliefs; but this is only a passing phase. Those of us who have passed through the mill, who have been forced to rebuild our beliefs from the ground up, who for four years or more have been assaulted on all sides with strange and conflicting points of view and have been forced to select from the mass the elements of our faith, can assure the editors of The Globe and the Porcupine Advance that we are not atheists, that we are not disloyal, and that we see no cause for their undoubtedly well-meaning perturbation. C. L. C.

There is some justice!

C—C

After years of sweated labour pounding out one chom per diem, rain or shine, for better or (too frequently, alas!) for worse, we find we are suddenly famous. A kind friend mailed us the other day a copy of the Vancouver News-Herald, in which we discovered the following, in a column headed Occasional Observations:

C—C

"I have just been reading a batch of very frivolous columns, so please overlook any more than the ordinary amount of slight indiscretions appearing in O—O today."

"Aforesaid frivolous columns appear in the University of Toronto undergraduate newspaper, Varsity, which is commencing its fifty-third year of publication. You might think that undergraduate columns are naturally frivolous, ipso facto, per se, etcetera. But this does not follow. Some are very deep."

"However, Varsity's isn't. It is called 'Champus Cat', and indulges in epigrams and even—save the mark atrocious puns, and its paragraphs are hardly ever more than three lines long. I like columns like this; for easy reading they compare favourably with the First Reader. But as for easy writing—I wouldn't know about that."

C—C

Presumably we should break in here with a few well-worn remarks about virtue being its own reward, and genius hiding its light under a bushel—but we seem to detect a slightly unpleasant flavour in that remark about the First Reader. We can only hope that it was all meant for the best, and if there was any subtle insinuation—perhaps it referred only to our readers.

If Toronto is really a leading city, to what is it leading? To the tolerance of bloody rebellion? To the defiance of law and order? To the upholding of every plausible criminal and to the scorning of everyone in authority? To the upholding of the idea that every criminal deserves special consideration, and every officer of the law should be hounded and degraded? To the suggestion that rowdiness is a joke, and law and order at the mercy of every malicious agitator? If this be Toronto's leadership, then well may the rest of the province pray not to be led into temptation but to be delivered from the leadership of Toronto! Amen!

Yes, the Advance admires things in Toronto, and never hesitates to say so—the Toronto Fair, the Toronto police force and its courageous chief, the Toronto spirit of enterprise, and the Toronto brand of generosity to all good causes. Our apologies, Mr. Editor, for suggesting that you have a peeve against Toronto!

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

Once more we have disquieting news from U.C. How do they do it? The largest registration of any of the colleges and still they haven't got nine girls to play baseball in the interfaculty league. The point was brought up before but with a game scheduled for tomorrow night the matter demands urgent attention. It seems more than a shame that there are not enough enthusiastic or athletically-inclined coeds to make up one baseball team. Even if the older years find their time too much occupied for sports (which we doubt) there must be a great many freshies who would be interested in making a faculty team.

Unless some more people indicate immediately a desire to play U.C. will be forced to withdraw from baseball this year—a most disappointing—not to say humiliating—step to take. The manager and coach are willing to do anything they possibly can to aid the team but after all one can't make baseball players out of thin air no matter how much you would like to. If you are interested—and for the sake of U.C. and the baseball league we sincerely hope somebody is—get in touch with Jean Atkinson at GL 1389 some time today or tonight.

Reports from the other colleges say they will have teams ready for the fray on Thursday night. Enthusiasm may not be exactly at fever pitch but they at least have teams. Never mind—we're still counting on the fourth team. You wouldn't let us down, would you, U.C.?

Sport Notices

Annual Harrier Race—

On Saturday morning of this week the annual interfaculty harrier race will take place at Upper Canada College. The race will start from the main gate, Upper Canada College, at 10 a.m. sharp, and all competitors are urged to be promptly on time. Managers of teams in various faculties are urged to get the names of their men on the list now available in the Athletic office, and to get the eligibility forms signed and filed at the office.

B. W. and F. Club—

An open meeting of the above club in the Debates Room, Hart House, at 5.30 this afternoon. Everyone turn out, particularly freshmen.

Volleyball Management—

Meeting on Wednesday, November 1st in Mr. McCutcheon's office, Hart House, at 4.45 p.m. sharp.

Water-Polo—

The following men please report at Central Y pool at 8.15 sharp tonight: Middleboro, Learie, Smith, McCatty, Bancroft, Davey and McLeod.

BLUES WIN EXHIBITION SOCCER MATCH 2 TO 0

The university soccer team scored a 2-0 victory over the Greenwoods in an exhibition match on the south campus last night. The play was well divided but the Blue team made better use of their scoring chances.

Varsity went to the front in the first half when Davidson rushed in close to beat the goalie with a shot which just lit the top of the net. No further score resulted till the final half when the Blue team swept in close, Aldridge putting in the scoring shot.

PRACTICE BEGINS FOR SENIOR CAGERS

MOE MITCHELL BACK

Serious practice for the senior basketball squad has not as yet begun. But for the last two weeks the squad has been engaged in conditioning workouts consisting of Danish gymnastic exercises of about twenty-five minute periods, which should put the outfit in fine form for intensive practice which begins November 13th.

Only two of last year's regulars, Phil Gold and Harold Snyderman, captain of last year's team, have reported for duty, but the addition of many new and valuable players is an encouraging feature for the 1933-34 season.

Among the new players, "Lofty" Willis, who is now eligible for intercollegiate work; Harry Newman and Levy, who were subs on last year's squad and will be trying for regular berths this year; Dr. Moe Mitchell, captain of Varsity's championship intercollegiate team in 1929, who is now taking post-graduate work and working out regularly to get into condition.

From the School of Graduate Studies also comes Davies, a former Mount Allison University star, who played with that team when they were Dominion finalists in 1931. "Doc" McCallum, a former Varsity player in 1931 and 1932, after a year's rest, will be out with the team. Bull Bodrug, former Central Y player and coach, was reinstated by the Amateur Athletic Association and will be a valuable addition to the squad after the football season is ended.

KNOX ELIMINATED BY SENIOR SCHOOL

Engineers Take Group Lead by Virtue of Win Over Theologs

SCORE 20 TO 1

The Senior School team registered another victory, when they defeated Knox 20 to 1, in a Mulock Cup fixture on the back campus. This eliminates Knox while S.P.S. leads the group.

There was no score in the first quarter, both teams holding well. In the second period Baker broke through and scored a touch for the Schoolmen which was neatly converted by Bridgland. Just before half time Bridgland scored a field goal with a long drop kick. Knox scored their only point in this quarter when Cuthbertson booted a long punt to the dead-line.

After half time Knox fought gamely but were forced back and Hallet went over for another touch for School, which was also converted. In the final period School again scored with a touch by Ellesworth, which they failed to convert.

S.P.S. — Flying wing, Dawson; halves, Hallet, Bridgland, McNichol; quarter, Warring; snap, Monsoroff; insides, Childs, Hayburt; middles, McBride, Baker; outsides, Glover, Walter; subs, Finch, Bridgen, Eaton, Baird, Dickens, Grosse, Ellesworth.

Knox — Flying wings, Clark, Ginnette; halves, Mutrie, Shortt; quarter, Cuthbertson; snap, Sinclair; insides, McLean, Campbell; middles, Lowery, McEwen; outsides, Jones, Usher; subs, Prouse, Rosevear.

Officials — Oille, Leachman.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By B. J. McGuire

The latest development in the B. W. and F. Club is that Jimmie Jackson will not be coaching the boxing team. Jimmy is in Law and finds he cannot make the time to continue his activities in this line. However, Varsity has been lucky in securing the services of Dr. Les Black, who will have as his assistant Harry Henning, who was with the club last year. Cliff Chilcott is again coaching the wrestling team and Mr. Walters is instructing the fencers. This fencing game has enjoyed a rapid rise in popularity around the campus, for which we may thank Mr. Walters and Mr. Barton.

Despite the fact that the boxing club are going to miss Jimmie Jackson it is certainly pleasing to hear that Jimmie, who is in Law, is too busy to continue as instructor to the team. Hearing of busy lawyers is next to getting a raise, the best sign of prosperity revisited that we have heard. Jimmie has enjoyed a long period of popularity around the boxing club. After winning the intercollegiate lightweight title as a welter, he was at a loss for new worlds to conquer. Then he decided to inflict some of his pugilistic science on other members of the Varsity team with the result that last season Varsity won the intercollegiate title.

The one thing to cheer the heavy hearts at the loss of Jackson is the acquisition of Les Black as coach. Les is a graduate of Varsity, one of the Frank Merriwell type. He was widely connected with athletics around Varsity in his undergraduate days, getting his colours for boxing and for track work. Black, as a middleweight, fought on intercollegiate teams from 1920 to 1925, and in that time they won four intercollegiate titles. In his final year he managed the B. W. and F. Club. One of his greatest achievements was when he scored the only win for Varsity when they invaded West Point in 1925. Topping over the pride of the American army was certainly an achievement. This was his first medical discovery, the cure for insomnia. Since that time he has been studying abroad, probably trying to perfect his cure.

The boxing team as part of their programme will entertain a boxing team from Syracuse here on January 20th. Anyone desirous of making the team are urged to turn out as there are many vacancies. For this purpose a meeting has been called for today. Freshmen particularly are asked to attend. Warren Stevens is certainly seeing plenty of hockey these nights as about thirty men are out there to convince him that they are just what is needed to produce a championship hockey team. One thing, he certainly gets plenty of variety as almost every player has a different coloured sweater, and thirty players would make thirty different coloured sweaters and thirty different coloured sweaters would make our head ache. Speaking of colours we wondered where the white appeared on the Junior School football team. Their colours are blue, gold and white, but careful inspection revealed only blue and gold on the sweaters. Then one of the boys got his jersey torn in a game the other night and now we know where the white appears. Anyway, the Varsity hockey team play their first game tomorrow night at 6.30. The fixture is an exhibition with the Toronto seniors and is slated for Varsity Arena.

VICTORIA SCORES SECOND WIN 8-0

Forestry Are Victims in Box Lacrosse Game Yesterday

FIVE GOALS IN THIRD

Victoria scored their second consecutive win in as many games by defeating Forestry 8-0 in the big gym. Hart House this afternoon in box lacrosse. The game was rather one-sided with Victoria enjoying the better side. They deserved the win, displaying better combination and were more effective around the nets.

Clarke scored the only goal in the first quarter on a hard shot five minutes after the second stanza got under way. Dyke, Victoria's dangerous defence man scored on a lone effort. Young closed the scoring of the first half when he slipped a shot past McConnell.

Victoria went on a scoring bee in the third quarter and added five goals in quick succession. Clipperton and Brydon got two apiece while Clarke scored on a pass from Dyke when he was left unguarded in front of the net.

Clipperton and Dyke played good lacrosse for the winners while Mundy and Greer were the best for Forestry.

Victoria — English, Dyke, Clarke, Clipperton, Young, King, Brydon.

Forestry — McConnell, Greer, Carrique, Mundy, Crossley; subs, Johnson, Larsson, Higgle, Cowan.

'Y' TEAMS EXHIBIT VOLLEYBALL GAME

Display of Science and Speed is Surprise to Spectators

FAST SERVES FEATURE

Yesterday afternoon at five o'clock two teams of experts from Central Y.M.C.A. gave an exhibition of volleyball as it should be played. Some hundred spectators watched the game in the upper Hart House gymnasium, and it is safe to say that all enjoyed the game, and many were surprised at the science and speed displayed. Hard, fast serves, miraculous saves, and sensational spiking followed each other in dazzling rapidity, completely revising the general conception of volleyball.

The players were all business men who have been playing together for some years. As Dr. Brookes, the president of the class, explained, volleyball is a game in which team work and combination plays are essential and these men certainly showed excellent results for their years of practice.

Since the institution of interfaculty volleyball, Dr. Brookes has twice brought these teams to Hart House, and it is hoped that these games will help to stimulate interest in the new interfaculty series.

In yesterday's game hard, overhand serves, delivered with the closed fist, were used by most of the players, and while even the best players sometimes lost a serve, they put all they had behind the ball each time, rather than

MEDS TAKE LEADERSHIP OF VOLLEYBALL GROUP

Defeat Jr. School in Straight Games; Gould and Gold Star

Jr. Meds assumed the leadership of their group in the Interfaculty Volleyball League by defeating Jr. S.P.S. in the upper gym in two straight games by scores of 15-7 and 15-8.

The Schoolmen took the lead in the first game, but this was soon overcome by Jr. Meds and they were never headed. The more experienced Meds team led by Carl Gould and Phil Gold of basketball fame were easy victors in the second game, ably demonstrating their superiority over the Schoolmen, who are new to the game, this being their first year in the competition.

For Meds Gould, Gold and Crocker stood out, while Royle, Self, Sweet and Dambitzki were best for School.

Jr. S.P.S. — Royle, Hoag, Pittes, Ewens, Gooch, Self, Rayner, Northover, Wykes, Sweet, Dambitzki.

Jr. Meds — Gold, Gould, Wise, Crocker, Zarsky, Gates.

ITALIANS ARE STRIVING TO EXPAND THEIR EMPIRE

diplomatic groupings, Italy, the member of the victorious coalition leading the chorus of the dissatisfied, claiming revision of oppressive treaties and forming certainly today within Europe the nucleus of all-powerful forces aiming at a coalition powerful enough to encircle and crush France. But Italy herself is both on land and sea still considerably inferior to France, particularly if the alliance of France with Jugoslavija is taken into account. And even a coalition between Italy, Germany, Austria, Hungary and Bulgaria would leave these states considering the shocking inequality in armament hopelessly inferior to the forces France and the Little Entente could muster.

After reviewing the situation in the three countries, the German writer concludes:

"It seems to be a noble and fruitful goal for a statesmanship seeing world events from a lofty point of view and looking at the distant future, never to lose sight of the fact that there are newcomers in the domain of nations, too, and that a wise and discriminating policy of the strongest powers, particularly England and the United States, can mould the world so that the struggle of the newcomers for their place in the sun will not develop into a permanent peril to the happiness of the world and the future of our ancient civilisations."

climination of the present divisions in the subject. He advocated, also, the integration of such courses as mathematics and history, including with the latter some study of civics and economics. On the subject of foreign languages, Dr. Rogers emphasised that he was not trying to kill Latin, but to save it by removing the compulsion of talking it. The study of French could be improved, he thought, by increasing the reading of French and reducing the grammar work.

Important among the business transacted before the talk by Dr. Rogers was the motion by R. A. Bell that the large expenditures on athletics be curbed in the future; the motion was carried. H. G. Skilling presented a set of proposed amendments to the Constitution; the motion to adopt them as read was carried.

lob it over. As the serve came over the net it was picked up by one of the men in the second line and fed to the front line, that is, hit high in the air with the two hands open, so that the ball fell a few feet short of the net and descended vertically. One of the front line men would again send it straight up, so that it fell within a foot of the net. Another of the front line men jumped high in the air to smash the ball across the net with his closed fist. This is known as spiking. Almost invariably this three-man combination was used and proved very effective.

The players in yesterday's games were: Dr. Brookes, Rev. D. A. Burns, Harry Carson, Tom Pogue, Ed Wackett, Bill Smart, Major Dudley Thomas, Harry Bockneck, Mr. Peters, Harry Cook.

The Canadian Microscope

No Second Spring. Janet Beith (niece of Ian Hay). Winner of the $20,000 International Prize Novel Competition. Fred A. Stokes Co., New York. $2.50.

Rise before us images of Virginia Woolf, Katherine Mansfield, and Mary Webb, all great women writers at their gentlest. Not that Janet Beith has already become a genius and stands glorified, at the head of English women, but there is a quality in this prize novel which reminds one of that intangible force, at once delicate and assured, which give women novelists their permanence.

The character of Alison, fragile wife of a blustering fire-and-brimstone minister in the highlands of Scotland, is the story, and it is so delicately chiselled or drawn, like a fine etching or fine ornament, that the picture remains while the environment fades quickly. Seventeenth, eighteenth or nineteenth centuries could all find a place for her, though she lived at the time of the first Reform Bill.

She lived and bore ten children. She feared God and the dark and her husband. She dreaded death and wondered horribly, when her little daughter died, "What was the Lord to do with Jeanie?" She was weak, so weak; yet she was strong and wise. "In a world of unsubstantial theories and ideals, the children seemed the only proofs of reality."

An artist came to paint, and she loved him as she never dreamed of loving. Of the artist, Miss Beith says simply, "Joy possessed him." But it could not be. "Their happiness was the unhappiness of others." Alison was strong and wise when her simple life was touched with intense crisis. She never saw the artist again, until seventeen years later; but then "she could not speak to him—after all these years she could not speak!"

She had chosen, as is the way of fine women, for her children, and her husband, because "with all his strength he needed her." She put aside her happiness, and lived her small life of tragedy with silent heart.

There is a genuine unself-consciousness about the book which is refreshing. With reserve and charm the author deals with all the phases of a young woman's life. She neither exaggerates nor ignores. Both the style and the noble character she has created are harmonious. She makes no attempt at historical period, and her writing is individual for its pure naturalness and grace.

CHAMPUS CAT

We have often wondered about our readers. . .

C—C

In any case, we are now contemplating sending a few clippings to the Halifax Chronicle, and calling the chalm From Sea to Sea.

C—C

Or if the flow of epigrams continues unabated, we might make it From Sow to Saw.

C—C

In the same issue of the News-Herald we observed a department of "Living Music", in which it was stated that "This department will assist all those who sing." Perhaps they could do something about the leak in our bath-tub.

C—C

Looking over some of the bilge (no offence meant) that was handed in last week in our absence, we find one Kugur (sounds like a patent purgative (n.o.m.)) declaring that "The Cat must sound the tocsin!" Having joined the Anti-War Society, we protest that the Cat's official editorial policy on all occasions will be to sound the anti-toxin.

C—C

We see by the papers that when Franklin N. R. A. Roosevelt, Jr., started in at Harvard this year his mother perpetrated a faux pas by decorating his room with curtains of Yale blue instead of Harvard crimson. At that she's lucky she didn't send him to Queen's.

C—C

We mean she's extra-lucky.

C—C

And again you have heard from Chaz.

worthy. Yet on the whole the tone possesses great splendour, and qualities one would never expect in human voices. The volume can swell to astonishing proportions, and on the other hand the drawn-out morendos show a truly marvellous technique. A word might also be added concerning their showmanship, which is superb!

A few remarks, however, must be made, not with the intention of belittling this remarkable chorus, but to serve as an antidote to blind over-enthusiasm. People with insatiable appetites for things Slavic will probably find nothing more to be desired in a chorus. But a programme of Russian folk and religious music is not the most edifying thing in the world. A male chorus is never a very subtle or flexible musical medium, but a chorus of this nature is particularly limited. Reason for delight and amazement the Don Cossacks certainly provide. But high musical exaltation they cannot give, and one must not look for it. We must simply praise the Don Cossacks for what they are, and not allow ourselves to be hypnotised into taking them too seriously.

One of the finest things on the programme was the Tchesnokoff O God, Save Thy People, in which an unusually magnificent Bass singer carried a solo throughout. The wild splendour of the Old Cossack Song showed the chorus at its best and most characteristic. The encores provided some interesting choral clowning, including an extraordinary number in which three of the singers danced a sort of Slavic version of the Highland Fling.

MANY OPINIONS VOICED RE H.H. STRING QUARTET

might not be convenient for the majority of the students to give up that evening and forego more important events.

"It is mainly a question of indifference on the part of most of the students," was the verdict of C. N. Knight, III Vice. "There is also the financial aspect of the question. Many students probably find that they have enough difficulty meeting their expenses now without indulging in the luxury of high class concerts."

A. McGill, I Arts, was of the opinion that anyone taking music would certainly benefit by attending the concerts. When asked what in his judgment was the reason that students did not attend in larger numbers, he ventured that the most of them might find a theatre bill more entertaining and perhaps more economical, since many of the students live a considerable distance from the university and would have to make a special trip to Convocation Hall, rather than just attend a local theatre.

J. R. Holden, III Victoria, suggested that the case with which good music can be obtained over the radio would probably make students less willing to attend the recitals given by the Quartet. He agreed with H. A. Price, II Pass, who thought that many people may not be aware of the splendid opportunity being offered them to hear one of the finest musical organisations on the continent.

Prof. Lionel of the Department of Neurology refused to express an opinion as he was not acquainted with all the facts of the case but admitted that it was possible for a physical shock to produce such terrible effects.

WE WAIT, GENTLEMEN, FOR YOUR REPLY

Again the attention of the citizens of Ontario, or at least the readers of The Globe, has been drawn to conditions at the University. Again the finger of suspicion is pointed at the University of Toronto, with the suggestion that rowdiness, atheism, and disloyalty are permitted here; yea, are taught and encouraged by the faculty.

We have had our laugh, it is time for the air to be cleared. The Globe has supported the charges made, and The Globe has intimated that an investigation into the universities would be as timely and almost as important as an investigation into the penitentiaries. However absurd, it may be, the charge is a serious one, and should be answered immediately.

As the representative of the undergraduate body The Varsity is prepared to debate the question. We feel, however, that there should be a reply to the charge from an official source. The administrative and faculty heads of this institution can scarcely remain silent during the controversy, when it is openly insinuated that rowdiness, atheism and disloyalty are rampant on the campus.

Representatives of The Varsity will interview members of the Board of Governors and the faculty today. We can assure them that our readers, and the people of Ontario, are awaiting their statements with interest. If the charges are true the authorities must be fully aware of conditions here. If the charges are false and without foundation they should be denied in an official statement.

Are rowdiness, atheism and disloyalty taught at the University of Toronto? We wait, gentlemen, for your reply.

ATHEISM NOT ENCOURAGED AT UNIVERSITIES

be passing out of their own province in which they have first-hand knowledge.

At Wycliffe College Professor Isherwood consented to outline his view of the leaving process in the students' minds. "Temporary unsettlement of faith and conviction is bound to be often generated," he explained, "when a large body of students try to think their way through to satisfactory conclusions on pressing problems. But, provided there is sincerity, and the urge to accept truth whether it be old or new, nothing is to be feared from full and free discussion. Great truths can withstand the light of day. But it is worthwhile remembering that sometimes it is much easier to think and say the smart thing than it is to think and say the true thing."

SIMPSON CRITICISES "PORCUPINE ADVANCE"

In reference to the charge that a certain group can bull-doze another section of the people and not be punished by law, Mr. Simpson pointed out the difficulty of positively identifying anyone involved in a large disturbance; and as British legal practice insists upon guilt being proven, the fact that those few who were apprehended were released is nothing about which the Porcupine Advance need shed tears.

"Even our great Canadian National Exhibition, admittedly one of the finest examples of community leadership in the world, must be brought in as a means of reflecting upon the high standards of our great community," exclaimed Mr. Simpson as he waded through the editorial under discussion. "Despite its great educational objectives there is persistent insistence that thrills be provided to satisfy the love of adventure and daring, so characteristic of the men from the northern areas. Why then, should we be unfairly criticised if we attempt to satisfy the lighter demands of a northern populace?" he wanted to know. "Especially when steps are taken to guarantee that the apparent risk of life and limb would not even be a reality. Surely, the criticisms of the Porcupine Advance should be welcomed by the citizens of Toronto when it gives us such a splendid opportunity of exploding the charge that we lack leadership," he concluded.

S.C.M. CORNER

one cannot proclaim for international peace and class strife in the same breath. Nor can an agitator for peace trust his integrity or the inherent worth of his propaganda if he turns to force peace on a stubborn world. This is logical bewilderment, par excellence. Surely the devotion to peace has superior authority to country or class. Then can absolute pacifism attain its end? At any rate, it is a conviction and practice professed by sane students of this University. Let the tolerance of the S.C.M. not be the stand of its members on this most pertinent issue.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE MASQUERADE TICKETS

This year the number of tickets being issued for the Hart House Masquerade has been greatly reduced, the allotment to University College having suffered along with those of other faculties. To avoid the confusion that took place last year in the issue of tickets for this dance, attention of U.C. men is drawn to the following statement.

Each year will be allotted what the executive considers a fair proportion of our total allotment. Priority in signing the lists, not a draw as in the past,

Art, Music and Drama

Sketch Room

The present exhibit of Eric Gill's woodcuts is of the highest interest, even though some will certainly not find it to their liking. A few words about Eric Gill will probably help to understand his work better. His father was a Congregationalist missionary in the South Sea Islands who, later on, joined the Church of England, after an intermission in a small dissent sect. Born in 1882 in England, Gill has been influenced by exotic nature, and showed soon a strong liking for architecture. Thanks to some friends he was able to proceed with his studies, going through various phases: agnostic up to 1905, he became then a socialist. In 1910, however, he felt the need for a religion which would fit with his artistic ideas, and finding none to his liking, he built up his own, that could be expressed thus: man's purpose on earth is to know, serve and love God; the artist becomes, then, a privileged partner with God in creation. Gill held that absolute values exist and are discoverable. "Beauty," he said, "is perceived intuitively and the knowledge of it is developed by contemplation. What is important is what the workman has in mind, not what some model has in his body."

In the meantime Gill was becoming known for his craftsmanship in type designing—he has invented a new type—his sculptures, too, became appreciated as being a "living embodiment of the primitive feeling for stone". He insists that no one is a sculptor unless he can cut his own stone. While his sculpture shows traces of influences of Gaudier-Brzeska and J. Epstein, in his art he is a leader, not a follower.

In 1912 he became dissatisfied with his religion and faced this dilemma; either he had to defend it by Reason, what he felt impossible to do, or, to discard it, which he did, regretfully, though. A year later, in Belgium, he met a Catholic priest; to his argument that such stories as the Miraculous Birth were symbolic Father Anselm only replied: "pas symbolique".

Gradually the words entered his mind, and some months later he joined the Roman Church, as "giving him the most emphatic and precise statement of Faith." His works reflect these experiences, though most of the woodcuts exhibited, are of the later part of his life. To get the utmost of his woodcuts we should never forget that Eric Gill is above all a sculptor and a decorator, therefore it is useless to object to his anatomy.

His red woodcut of the "Christ on the Cross", the original of which, in marble, is in the Hart House Chapel—is quite unique. So are some of his portraits, or smaller works, as the "man with a sling". His illustrations of the Crucifixion, sketches for his stone panels now at Westminster, are perfect in their composition, their simplicity and delicacy. They are of course influenced by his study of the mediaeval religious artists, but, though they may surprise us, they are absolutely sincere. Some woodcuts show signs of over-preciousness, as an adopted convention almost, yet, anyone looking carefully and sympathetically at this exhibit—the faces, lines of the bodies—will leave the Sketch Room the richer for it.

H.C. Players' Guild

"Where the Cross is Made", a play in one act by Eugene O'Neill, was presented in the Women's Union at 4.15 yesterday afternoon by the University College Players' Guild. This organisation is doing good work and should be better appreciated by the students. The play yesterday was the second of the season and contained a lot of thinking matter. It centred in the Bartlett family, the father, an old sea captain (Dick Fonger), his son Nat (Jack Graham), and Sue, his daughter (Betty Rose). Bob Rigby as Doctor Higgins, Bernard Novack as the ghost of Silas Horne, and Peter Sandford as the ghost of Jimmie Ranacka, completed the cast.

THE DANCE HALL-BUG

(With apologies to Oliver Goldsmith and his "Elegy on the Death of a Mad Dog".)

Good students all, of every year,
Give ear unto this verse;
And if you find it somewhat queer,
Be glad it is not worse.

At Hard House, there once lived a youth
Who had a pious face;
He never lied when he spoke the truth,
And frequently said, "Grace".

He willingly provided men
With shelter from the breeze—
In fact, he did this daily when
He donned his B.V.D.'s.

And there were dance halls in that town
For fox-trot, waltz and jig;
And some were small and tumble-down,
And some were fine and big.

This lad did once decide to try
A dance hall quaint and snug;
He went and he was bitten by
The Deadly Dance-Hall Bug.

The students, hearing he was bit,
Ran down to see the wound;
But when they took a glance at it,
They just grew pale and swooned.

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

Public Health have started off on the right foot in the interfaculty basketball series by taking U.C. Seniors last night with a 19-18 score. As a matter of fact it was anybody's game. The usual early season sloppiness was quite apparent and poor shooting slowed up the game considerably. As far as passing was concerned U.C. had a decided edge over their opponents who showed the lack of co-operation to be expected in an entirely new team. Although their play was unorganised, they displayed undoubted superiority in finding the basket.

Quita Mennell, though not up to her usual form made the whistle blow for seven scores and for the other team M. McEareh rolled in eight baskets. With practice both forward lines will improve a great deal.

U.C. have definitely decided to withdraw from the baseball league, leaving Meds, St. Mike's and Vic in a three-cornered battle. Meds and Vic met in the first game tonight at six o'clock in Vic gym. A new schedule for the group will be drawn up in the near future and will be published as soon as it is arranged.

Regarding the matter of parking cars for the rugby games—it has been noticed that some girls are not giving the support they should. Might we suggest that those on intercollegiate teams who derive the most benefit from the funds thus obtained should not show any reluctance in helping out on Saturdays.

MEDS TIE BOXLA GAME WITH U.C.

U.C. Earn Early Lead but Lose it in the Final Period

SCORE 13-13

Meds and U.C. played to a 13-all tie in the lacrosse game played yesterday afternoon. U.C. earned an early lead but this was overcome by Meds in the last half.

In the first half U.C. had the greater part of the play and outscored Meds 9-4. Fullerton and Coulter led the scoring attack for U.C., while Boyd and Keys got two each for Meds.

Meds were decidedly superior in the second half with Keys netting eight goals and McCue a single. This put Meds one up but Fullerton again led the way for U.C. to tie up the game.

Starr in goal, and Keys, playing home for Meds, were effective, while Coulter and Fullerton, former Minico O.A.L.A. teammates, were the best for U.C.

Meds — Starr, Keys, Boyd, McCue, Graham, Clark, McPhee.

U.C. — Warner, Stobie, Fullerton, Smith, Cramp, Robb, Bissel, Coulter, Martin, Gallow, Sweetman, Mitchell. Referee — Jim Kerr.

KNOX DEFEATS MEDS

Knox College defeated Meds 2 to 1 in an interfaculty soccer match yesterday afternoon on the front campus. The aggressive Knox team kept the fighting Meds pretty well on the defensive for the entire game. Weir and Milroy counted for Knox while Lore scored the lone tally for Meds. All three goals were scored in the second half.

Knox — Goal, Stewart; fullbacks,

BAND TO APPEAR AT WESTERN GAME

Large Crowd Hoped for Owing to Reduction in Train Fares

TEAM NEED SUPPORT

Contrary to rumours that have been circulating about the campus, the band will appear at the Western game on Saturday, according to the statement of Mr. E. A. Macdonald, Secretary-Treasurer of the S.A.C. to The Varsity yesterday.

"We feel that this is a time when the team will need our greatest support," said Mr. Macdonald, "and with the band we sincerely hope there will be a large turnout of Varsity rooters."

A special excursion to London has been arranged by the C.P.R. and full particulars are contained in an advertisement elsewhere in the paper. As is the custom, special coaches have been reserved for Varsity supporters and a substantial reduction in fare should insure a record crowd at the game.

SR. MEDS DEFEATED IN MULOCK GAME

Dents Score Drop in Third Quarter and Hold Meds Scoreless

HARD, TOUGH STRUGGLE

In a very close and hard fought struggle, Dentistry took second place in Group I of the Mulock Cup series by defeating Sr. Meds at Victoria field by a score of 3-0. Dents scored their three points by virtue of Valiquette's well-placed drop from twenty yards out in the third quarter.

The first half was scoreless, with Dents having a slight advantage due to the superior plunging of Tritt, Rey and Shumaker. The highlight of this half was the fifty yard pass completed by Dents, Speers to Mueller.

The second half produced the most thrilling football of the game, although played in semi-darkness. Ernie Rey's twenty yard plunge put Dents into position for Valiquette to kick the pigskin between the uprights, although he was surrounded by Med tacklers. On the following kick-off Speers, speedy Dents half, ran the ball back sixty yards. In the fourth quarter, Meds put on a last minute offensive, and plunged to the Dents' one yard line, where the strong Dents defense held them on five successive plunges.

Dempster, Speers and Rey played star parts in Dents win, while Harold Sniderman, Culiner and Appleford were best for Meds.

Sr. Meds—Flying wing, Sniderman; halves, Culiner, Rosenberg, Robertson; quarter, Appleford; snap, Schute; insides, Hall, Fee; middles, Cameron, Scott; outsides, Hendry, Glibb; subs, Laborsky, McKellar, Scher, Levinson, MacGladdey.

Dentistry—Flying wing, B. Squires; halves, Speers, Woods, Rey; quarter, Dempster; snap, Garret; insides, Tritt, McCartney; middles, Shumaker, Twible; outsides, Ryan, Mueller; subs, Valiquette, Cavanaugh, Oswald, Smith, Apps, Preston, Dore, Wildfong. Officials — A. Squires, Shipp.

Davidson, McCullough; halves, Rowland, Gowdy, Young; forwards, Milroy, Long, Cuthbertson, Taylor, Weir. Meds — Goal, Outerbridge; fullbacks, Robertson, McKeown; halves, Mulligan, Lore, Feldman; forwards, Collis, Bremmer, Green, Rosebaum, Snied.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Paul B. Smith

Warren Stevens will introduce his Varsity senior hockey team to Blue supporters tonight at 8 o'clock at Varsity Arena, when they engage the powerful West Toronto Nationals in an exhibition game. The Blue team have been practising faithfully for the past week and are fast rounding into shape. Dr. McIntyre's starry squad have been showing mid-season form in their recent workouts, and will supply plenty of contention for the Stevens-coached pucksters. The visitors boast a galaxy of stars, among whom is Don Smillie, who needs no introduction to Varsity hockey fans, and whose ability will in all probability act as a boomerang tonight. Coach Stevens has not yet decided on the personnel of his team and he expects to get a more definite line on the ability of the thirty odd candidates in the tussle with the Nats. Students' ticket No. 6 will be taken at the turnstiles.

Hockey fans would be ill advised to miss the benefit hockey game on Monday night, November 6 at Maple Leaf Gardens, when the Maple Leafs make their initial appearance of the year. All the stars of the Leaf team will be in action, and it will be an excellent opportunity to size up the team before they start their long schedule. The cause is a worthy one, the price low, and a real exhibition of hockey is assured, so yet your tickets today, as the Gardens will be packed to the rafters when Mayor Stewart faces the puck. The teams will be divided; one squad, the "Newlyweds", will oppose the "Marlboro Simon-Pures". "King" Clancy will lead the Grooms and "Ace" Bailey the Simon-Pures.

The senior Blue football team are taking every precaution to remain in the running for the intercollegiate title. Little Memorial Stadium casts weird spells over Varsity teams, and it is to be hoped that the "jinx" will be conspicuous by its absence next Saturday. McGill are not out of the running by any means and are quite likely to kick the dope bucket right down to St. Catherine's Street when they engage Queen's in Montreal next week-end. Shag has a habit of pulling the unexpected at the most inopportune times, so here's hoping that Saturday will prove no exception. While on the subject, what say to a little support to Lou Hayman's Argos, those of you who are not going to London? Lou Hayman has done a lot for Varsity football teams and this is an excellent opportunity to show our appreciation. Argos are on the spot; if they lose they pass from the interprovincial football picture, if they win they remain very much in the running. Ottawa are a powerful outfit and will take a lot of beating, particularly in the face of elimination. If the Varsity students give the Double Blue squad a little vocal encouragement, they will be agreeably surprised to see what a favourable reaction it will have. Every Varsity football fan wants to see Argos take the Roughriders into camp in no uncertain manner, and we can be instrumental, in fact, a very important factor in an Argonaut victory by lending our lusty voices and encouragement.

Despite the wintry weather the tennis players have still been finding plenty to do. With Gordon Shields, who won the interfaculty championship, forced to vacate due to insufficient academic standing, Varsity had to declare another interfaculty champion. Crowson, Hermant and Pigott played off in the final round. Hermant was eliminated and on Tuesday Pigott defeated Crowson in three sets out of four, and now stands as the U. of T.'s new tennis champ.

TORONTO MAPLE LEAFS

The face-off will be made by His Worship, Mayor William Stewart, who has sent the following letter to the Kiwanis Clubs:

"In response to your request that I should face the puck at the hockey game on Monday, November 6th, sponsored by the three Kiwanis Clubs of Toronto, may I say that notwithstanding the fact that I am heavily booked for this evening, I will re-arrange my programme to be with you, as a further evidence of appreciation of the splendid service rendered by your Clubs in the welfare of our citizens, and particularly so, in this instance, because it is of paramount importance for the welfare of our city that the needs of others much less fortunate be met. Your splendid contribution that will be produced by this game is greatly needed and highly appreciated by the citizens of Toronto.

"I sincerely hope that you will put forth every effort to let the public know the purpose of the game, and I most heartily and highly commend it to the citizens of Toronto.

"May I also express my appreciation for the thoughtfulness of your clubs in assisting the city to look after the problems that require the help of all to find a solution.

Yours sincerely,

"William J. Stewart."

The "Newlyweds" will be composed of: Blair, Doraty, Cotton, Sands, MacDonald, Kilrea, Day, Clancy, Hollett, Hainsworth. The Marlboro "Simon-Pures" will have: Primeau, Conacher, Jackson, Boll, Thoms, Bailey, Horner, Levinsky, Robertson, Grant.

A resolution in favour of a dictatorship in Canada was passed by the Mock Parliament of McGill University at its first session for the current year.

after two unsuccessful bucks, Mullon kicked the tying point, missing a placement from a difficult angle. In the fourth quarter Vic lost the ball on their own 27 yard line, which resulted in U.C. scoring their second point, with Hass doing the kicking. Vic tried an aerial attack in the dying moments of the game, but lost the ball after three unsuccessful passes. Hass then kicked the last point.

UNCERTAINTY KEY-NOTE OF PRESENT ERA

tion, "Why should Canadian students take an interest in international affairs?"

Central Canada, from the Ontario boundary to the Rockies, is as immune from foreign aggression as any place in the world. However, Canada's existence depends on foreign markets, other than those of countries within the Empire, to a very large extent. Over thirty per cent of her industrial and agricultural products are exported, whereas in the United States the figure is only ten per cent.

This is a practical reason, the speaker concluded, why Canadian students should feel it necessary to take an active interest in world conditions.

In the second half Varsity began to show signs of lack of condition, and began to slow up. Davey netted two goals on individual efforts and McCatty netted one. However, the Central team ran in four in the final half, to clinch the verdict.

McCatty and Davey were the outstanding players for Varsity while Benedict and Asky were the most effective for the winners.

Varsity — Goal, McLeod; forwards, Davey, McCatty, Bancroft; half, Hardy; defence, Middleboro, Smith.

Central Y — Goal, Cornforth; forwards, Brady, Benedict, Ross; half, Asky; defence, Stevens, Light.

WYCLIFFE BOWS TO 2-0 DEFEAT BY PHARMACY

SECONDARY SCHOOL SYSTEM CRITICISED

more qualified to take his place in the world.

"The acquisition of this knowledge would require an exploratory period of perhaps two years before the student enters high school. During this time he would be placed in an entirely different atmosphere where he would gain some knowledge of technical trades, French, Latin, art, music, mathematics, etc. He would be closely observed during this time and his tastes and capacities noted. This is the only basis upon which vocational guidance can be conducted.

"Originally, secondary schools were class schools—catering only to the children of the favoured classes. They naturally were preparatory schools. With the advent of democracy there came a mass of work-a-day students clamouring for admittance. This change in the student personnel changed secondary schools from preparatory schools to finishing schools. The change is by no means complete even yet but we are making progress.

"Illustrations of the advance that has been accomplished are manifest in the rapid development of technical schools since 1900, in the changes that have been made in the high school curriculum, the stress now being placed on modern rather than ancient history, and in the introduction of economics and civics which are definitely on the curriculum although they are not yet named.

"The development of domestic science for girls," said Dean Pakenham, "is another instance of the same trend, although the changing occupational outlook of women makes it imperative that their training be continued along other lines as well."

CHAMBER MUSIC APPEALS TO AVERAGE STUDENT

The cultural value of music is becoming more and more realised by prominent educationalists the world over, he stated. "Last year at Oxford University 75 per cent of the students showed a keen interest in music. Of all the scholarships offered 90 per cent were won by men of this type. This is a very significant fact."

When told by The Varsity that a few of the students objected to the price demanded for these Hart House String Quartet concerts, Mr. Blackstone pointed out that prices charged by really good artists at Massey Hall range from $1.00 to $2.50, whereas the admission for the concerts put on by the Quartet were at the absurdly low figure of $1.00 for the five programmes. This low figure would not be possible if it were not for the assistance of the Massey Foundation.

Radio programmes were not having any effect on the attendance at the Quartet's concerts, Mr. Blackstone stated. "The thought that radio is hurting the attendance is preposterous because those interested in good music listen to all good music broadcast over the air. But the radio is only a poor substitute for living personalities that appear before the public on the platform. This has been proved by our recent tour of the Maritimes, where, in spite of the depression, we played to larger audiences than ever before. The reason for this is that we have appeared before in each of these cities and have built up a following," he concluded.

INDIVIDUALISM IS BARRIER TO PEACE

structed, and under-educated," said Mrs. Zimmerman. She suggested that if more emphasis were placed on humanism education might be improved.

Since 1919 France has made the correct diagnosis of the European situation while England has had the right methods. Both nations are eager for peace, but unfortunately they are too individualistic for full co-operation. If this difficulty could be overcome our biggest problem would be solved.

ART, MUSIC AND ORAMA

Bartlett's cabin room was effective, and neither the setting nor the costume unduly shifted the focus from the characters where it belonged.

Captain Bartlett's treasure ship has been wrecked three years before. The captain believes she will return from the mysterious island freighted with his imagined treasure and watched for her from his cabin by day and his roof by night. His son has called Dr. Higgins to remove his father that evening, for he realises the captain's mental state. The climax comes when the father convinces his half-mad son of the ship's return. The return of Dr. Higgins, the entry previously of the sailor ghosts with the treasure, the subsequent death of Captain Bartlett and finally the legacy of Silas Horne's map to the son (who had previously destroyed his own map to free his soul) pile up a crescendo of emotional excitement for the audience. Sue and the Doctor show a calm practical viewpoint, and are entirely outside the dream world of the others. The actions and feelings of the Bartletts are the symbols used by O'Neill to point out the clinging of the ultimate to man through man's alternate belief and disbelief until finally his tortured soul is overcome.

Hart House String Quartet

The concerts which the Hart House String Quartet have planned for their tenth anniversary season in Convocation Hall, will not only satisfy the taste of the regular music lover, but will entertain those who are less familiar with the melodies of the classic composers, who gave of their greatest inspirations to the literature of string-quartet music. What could be more delightful than the simple but charming music of Pappa Haydn as played by two violins, a viola, and a violoncello? The first programme on Friday night consists of one of these naive works, together with the stormy quartet in E flat by Beethoven, and the soothingly delicious quartet by the French master of modern music, Debussy.

Later in the year, such novelties as the quartet by Vaughan Williams, prominent English composer, and the gigantic quartet by Ernest Bloch, the Swiss-Jewish composer, will be presented. Other attractive features are the sextet for two violins, two violas and two celli by Brahms, some 17th

O.C.E. OROPS VOLLEYBALL GAME TO SENIOR VICTORIA

Senior Vic defeated O.C.E. a team in two straight games, 15-2 and 15-12 yesterday afternoon, to step into the lead of their group in the interfaculty volleyball series. Vic displayed a vastly superior knowledge of the fine points of the game. Aylesworth in particular did some good spiking and the whole team gave evidence of considerable practice.

In the first game O.C.E. offered little opposition, scoring only two points but showed much more style and spirit in the second when they held Vic to the close score of 15-12.

Victoria — Cragg, Harris, Neeb, Vanderleek, Dingman, Aylesworth, Culbert, Auger, Strachan, Dyke, Lang. O.C.E. — Mason, Jones, Todd, McMillan, Real, Stevens, McLeod.

PUBLIC HEALTH WIN CLOSE GAME OVER U.C. SENIORS

Last night in the O.C.E. gym Public Health met U.C. Seniors in the first basketball game of the season. After a very close battle the half time score stood at 7-6. Public Health having the slight margin. The whole game showed evidence of poor combination and wild shooting with penalties for over-guarding frequent. In the second half play was very even and the U.C. passing improved, the forwards breaking through the opposing defense line time after time to shoot for the basket. Public Health were steadier on the shots and succeeded in sinking more of them so that when the final whistle blew the score stood at 19-18 for the Public Health team.

Public Health — E. Parker (f), M. Thom (f), M. McEarchern (f), F. Graham (d), E. Smith (d), F. Sparling (d); utility, L. Horwood, E. MacKinnon, C. Greenwood, E. Franks. U.C. Seniors — I. Menell (f), E. Parr (f), S. Logan (f), E. Wallace (d), B. Spence (d), L. Reid (d). Referee — Ethel Phillips.

The annual Alumni Reunion was held at Queen's University last weekend.

century English music by Matthew Locke and Purcell, and the favoured quartet "Death and the Maiden" by Schubert, whose marvellous melodies have been made popular through the modern play, "Blossom Time".

DYNAMIC SPEAKER DELIGHTS HEARERS BY SOUND SENSE

"The Plain Man Wants Peace Let Disputes Die," Says
Professor Zimmern

KELLOGG PACT PRAISED

World Economic System is Likened to a Vast Jig-Saw Puzzle

"If we get peace, we shall get much after peace, but how shall we get it?" was the question of Professor A. E. Zimmern, speaking in Convocation Hall last evening, concluding his series on Britain's foreign policy. Professor Zimmern demanded "First peace, then justice. It is idle," he went on, "to expect that armed barons, thinking in the terms of war, could legislate. We need a constitutional framework which will overcome the barons, (sovereign states), and keep them from going to war."

Professor Zimmern went on to say that we must not confine ourselves to one part of the world. We do not want to have confidence in one part and not in another, for no area can be self-sufficient. The economic system must embrace all mankind, and the political system must be worldwide. The system must include the U.S.A., because it is the absence of the States which has caused difficulties in the last twelve years.

"There has been," stated the speaker, "a tremendous amount of confusion in the thinking during the past twelve years about international affairs. We are not entering into international government. We are moving away from it. The world is being decentralised. The citizens are being brought nearer the centre of government, and are being given a greater sense of moral responsibility."

"We cannot," he went on to say, "have two utterly different policies going on side by side, and if we are right about our imperial policy we are wrong about what we are doing at Geneva. Geneva is not a seat of government, it is a conference. Eliminate the fear of war and you will get a fair wind blowing once more across Lake Geneva."

"The plain man wants peace, and is much wiser than the international law-makers who write volumes on war. There are many ways of settling disputes and one way is not to settle them. Let them die."

Professor Zimmern praised the Kellogg Pact highly. He said that it puts first things first; is universal and irrevocable. There is no way of getting out of it. You might as well try to unscramble eggs. The world he likened to a jig-saw puzzle, which can be very easily pulled together.

In closing, he stated that we in North (Continued on Page 4)

MEN'S GLEE CLUB IS NOW ORGANISED

A meeting was held yesterday afternoon in Hart House for the purpose of organising a glee club within the university, attracted a turnout of over twenty men. It was decided that the group should be confined to male members, and that it be known as the Hart House Glee Club. The club is intended to appeal to all who are interested in part singing, but who have had little or no musical training.

A temporary committee was appointed to complete details of organisation, its members being L. E. Jones, chairman; D. E. Ryerson, E. R. Barret, F. L. Kay and J. M. Patrick.

The next business meeting and first rehearsal was called for Thursday, Nov. 9, at five p.m. in the Music Room, Hart House.

Admit Over-Emotionalism but

"SPECTATOR" LAUDED

Feelings Should be Respected but Public Interest Must be Maintained

"I heartily agree with Mr. Erskine. I think it very deplorable for the press to intrude into the personal and private lives of afflicted individuals, unless there is something of outstanding public interest to be served; even then, human sympathy and human feeling should cause us to tread as delicately as possible on the emotions that are common to us all," answered Mr. Anderson, managing editor of the Toronto Globe when asked by The Varsity to comment on an editorial in the current issue of the London Spectator entitled "Press Ghouls Denounced" which congratulated Mr. St. John Ervine and his brother members of the Institute of Journalists for castigating "the abhorrent shamelessness of the more sensational newspapers in their determination to secure at any cost 'human' details about the emotions of the bereaved, or the private lives of the notorious."

"Do you not think that the term 'Press Ghoul' can be quite fairly applied to the Toronto Press in its treatment of the Hillier baby case?" we asked.

"In the Hillier case," replied Mr. Anderson, "we tried to avoid Press Ghouliness and yet to bring out the fact that the unfortunate tragedy that befell a babe could create a city-wide interest and concern."

"Sometimes we all err, and as we look over our papers after they are produced we are like men that look upon their lives when the day is over, and we find many things done that ought not to have been done and many things that we ought to have done, (Continued on Page 4)

ART APPRECIATION DEMANDS STUDY

Professor Constable Lately of London Art Gallery
Lectures Here

SUGGESTS MEDITATION

"In studying a piece of art, one should not hastily launch into a criticism of what is not there, but rather try to see what is there," said Professor Constable, speaking in the Sketch Room, Hart House, yesterday at noon. "To properly study a picture, one should have some preliminary knowledge of art," he said, "for one could not hope to read a book in a foreign language without first having a shot at the fundamental points in the language." The speaker was introduced by Mr. Bickersteth, who explained that Professor Constable was lately connected with the London Art Gallery.

The professor suggested standing back and looking at the picture in a receptive contemplative frame of mind to get a general impression. "Then," he said, "note the dominant quality whether it be colour, line, subject and study that first impress you and then at the other qualities. Also look over the picture for inscriptions and signatures which might give some history of the picture or the subject."

"Again and lastly look at the work as a whole, see the significance of the work, try to 'feel' the picture with the emotions, that is, see what the artist is trying to say and remember that the spirit, the emotion of the picture, is its true worth."

CHINA DISCUSSED IN WYMLWOOD

Mr. Lautenslager Gives Opinion of China's Needs from Personal Survey

CURRENT EVENTS GROUP

"China is at the cross roads today," stated Prof. Stanton Lautenslager at a meeting of the Current Events group of the Women's Literary Society yesterday afternoon in Wymilwood.

Mr. Lautenslager, who has spent the last twelve years in China, pointed out that it needs the sympathy and understanding of the western nations. China, he said, is undergoing four revolutions at present; a renaissance of language, a religious revolution as well as political and industrial revolutions.

In discussing the problem of communism in China the speaker remarked that the people were under communist rule only because of their desperate poverty. "Communism will not succeed," he said, "for the Chinese are a very democratic people and like their freedom. China is at the cross roads. It will either be communist or Christian." Mr. Lautenslager declared that if Christian idealism can lift up the hope of China in the next ten years it will give up communism and take Christianity.

"I am a believer in the Gospel of Mark rather than Marx," he stated. "All eyes are turned toward Geneva Jerusalem and Moscow. If Geneva and Jerusalem cannot come together all roads in the next few years will lead to Moscow."

Broadcasts

MR. UNDERHILL WILL SPEAK

Next Sunday will mark the first of a series of radio lectures to be broadcast under the auspices of the League for Social Reconstruction. The series is entitled "The Depression and the Way Out" and will be presented by professors of this university every Sunday from two-thirty until two-forty-five over the Canadian Radio Commission station CRCT. The engagement will terminate on December 31st. As far as could be ascertained by The Varsity the league has met with no difficulties in arranging for the programmes and does not anticipate any.

The opening lecture will be given by Professor F. H. Underhill of the Department of History, speaking on "The Present Crisis" and the schedule for the succeeding lectures is as follows:

Nov. 12th—Recovery—to 1929?—Mr. C. A. Ashley.

Nov. 19th—Is Unemployment Relief Fought?—Dr. H. M. Cassidy. (Continued on Page 4)

OPPOSITION IN POWER

An attempt by the United Front Party to surprise the Communists by a neatly planned political manoeuvre went astray yesterday at a meeting of the U.C. Parliamentary Club. As a result, the Communists, who were placed in power as a part of this strategic plan, successfully opposed a vote of no confidence and remained in power to present their bill for a social insurance plan.

At the opening of the debate on the motion that "This House rejoices in the victories of the Liberal Party in the recent by-elections," Mr. S. Herment, a member of the United Front Party, which comprised Conservatives, Liberals and members of the C.C.F., outlined the reasons why his government (Continued on Page 4)

NO DISLOYALTY EXISTS

"Most emphatically such a charge is untrue. There is absolutely no foundation in fact to be found for such an absurd contention," declared Dr. H. J. Cody, President of the University, in reference to the editorial of The Porcupine Advance, levelling the criticism that atheism, disloyalty and rowdiness were taught at the University of Toronto.

Principal Wallace of University College was equally vigorous. "This kind of wild criticism seems to me to be largely a scheme used as a means of increasing the circulation of the newspaper in question by attracting publicity. To attempt to arouse the province by an article of this type can be nothing else. Furthermore, statements as extreme and unfounded as this could not possibly be made by anyone who had the welfare of the University at heart."

Professor Brett, Dean of the School of Graduate Studies, stated, "It is absurd to attach much importance to this general accusation hurled at the University as a whole. Just as one cannot indict a whole nation indiscriminately, one cannot indict the members of the faculty as a body. If (Continued on Page 4)

Varsity Plays Well

By H. A. Taylor

When West Toronto Nationals, the newly-formed hockey club in the city, defeated Varsity seniors 7-1 at the Arena last night, Coach Warren Stevens discovered that although Dr. McIntyre of the National club has some of the best hockey players in the city, there are plenty of students at the university who can match strides with men of such calibre.

As was expected, Don Smilie of last year's Varsity squad was a dangerous enemy in a National uniform. He scored two of his team's goals and was the smoothest player on the ice. The first line for Varsity last night (Continued on Page 3)

WOMEN'S DEBATING IS REDORGANISED

Intriguing Themes Are Chosen for Future Debates of Union

FRESHIES BARRED

At a meeting of the Women's Debating Union yesterday afternoon, it was decided that first year women would be barred from intercollegiate debates, although they could take an active part in interfaculty competition.

Two nominees will be chosen from each college for each executive position this year it was determined, one to be chosen by the college and one by the Union. Next year all the nominees will be from St. Hilda's and will be voted on by the whole Union.

The junior representatives elected were: Victoria, Jean Ross; U.C., Marion Galloway; St. Michael's, Ray Godfrey; St. Hilda's, Mary Jarvis. Marion Mathews was elected representative for the Women's Undergraduate Association.

Subjects were chosen for future debates, and they should provide some interesting debating. "That Labour Unions are a menace to the working man," "That Austria and Germany should unite," "That our College Years have been wasted," and "That Fascism is the salvation of, and not a threat to the progress of civilisation" are four of the resolutions adopted for future debating. Tryout will be held on Nov. 8 in Victoria College.

COPP IS ONLY CASUALTY

Win for McGill Over Queen's Will Create Three-Cornered
Tie

With the chance of still figuring in the finals of the intercollegiate rugby series still present, Varsity will journey to London on Saturday to meet Joe Breen's Mustangs for the second time this season. Varsity have every confidence in their ability to repeat their victory over Western and continue in the intercollegiate race.

Varsity will be playing with one eye on the scoreboard on Saturday. They will be almost as interested in the outcome of the game at McGill as the one in which they are participating. Their sympathy will be all with the Red team in their struggle with Queen's, as a win for Shaughnessy's squad and a win for Varsity will make a three-cornered tie with McGill, Varsity and Queen's all in there with an even chance of major honours.

The Blue team will with the exception of Copp, be at full strength when they trot out on to the field at London. Even Copp is making the trip but it is doubtful if he will see any action. Holden, who was injured at Queen's last week, will be back in action for his Alma Mammy.

Coach Stevens has been working hard in an effort to eliminate the lack of spark which the Blue team have showed along the line in their last two starts. However, there has been no evidence of this lethargy in recent workouts and we may hope to see no more impromptu cigar store Indian acts for the balance of the season.

The Blue team are far from discouraged over their recent reverses and still entertain hopes of a title. A special excursion is being arranged to London for all who wish to accompany the team. The team are being accompanied by the band who will come in handy in the event that Varsity get down in front and McGill comes through with a win over Queen's.

SPLENDID LECTURE AT ART GALLERY

Professor Constable Outlines History of Landscape Painting

HOLDS POSITION IN LONDON

"Modern landscape painting had its beginning in Turner and Constable," stated Professor W. G. Constable at the Art Gallery last evening. Professor Constable, for many years associated with art galleries and museums in England, is now head of the Department of Art in the University of London. "I shall endeavour to give you a brief outline of the intentions, aims and methods of landscape painters, modern in the sense of the last hundred years."

"Before Constable and Turner there was the Dutch school, whose work showed delicacy and sensitivity in the treatment of light and shade. And in the feeling for locality; and the French school headed by Poussat and Claude Lorraine, who set themselves out to use material produced by nature in a dignified, smooth composition. Both schools bannied the idea of photographic reproduction."

The Barbizon School of Rousseau, Corot and their carried on the work of the two English painters, Turner and Constable by the forceful use of (Continued on Page 4)

BREAK THE WESTERN JINX!

Today the players of the senior rugby team entrain for London, to meet the University of Western Ontario on their home field tomorrow. The Mustangs have never been beaten by a University of Toronto team on their own gridiron. When Western first entered the intercollegiate senior group, Toronto fans were dubious about taking the newcomers seriously, until Joe Breen and his men turned the tables on Varsity at their first home fixture. For four years Blue and White teams have been defeated consistently at London.

It is time that the tables were turned. It is time for the U. of T. team to break the jinx that has dogged it every time the team plays at London.

Three weeks ago Varsity had no trouble in winning from Western by a margin of nineteen points. However much the team has been weakened in strength and morale since then, Western has not improved to that extent. Coach Warren Stevens reports a decided improvement in practice this week. The Mustangs are out of the running, but Joe Breen is not liable to hand anyone a game on a silver platter. To show that it is the better team, Varsity must win tomorrow.

One of the University's friends on the downtown press insists on reviving the rumour that there is something wrong at Varsity. He claims: "The 'T' seniors should make a big parade of the race every time they start. They have the players, but they lack something." The most effective answer to the charge is a demonstration that the team has more than players, it has the "something" that carries a team through to victory. That can be shown tomorrow.

There are some who are still hopeful of the big Blue team taking the intercollegiate championship. There are others who would be content to see a fighting team take the remaining two games. A victory tomorrow would do much to redeem the Varsity seniors in the eyes of most of their disappointed followers.

Let's break the jinx, Blue team!

ANOTHER REPLY TO "OBSERVER"

The Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:
I want to answer the lowbrow sophomore who entered Annesley Hall through the window and made such dirty remarks about the men of 317 Victoria.

I declare the snake's statements to be false.

Every man in 317, with the exception of a few boys who really could not dance, were on the floor all the time. And besides—several of the above-mentioned, non-dancing frosh learned to dance that very evening. Not bad, eh? And yet, "The Observer" claims we were shy, backward and dumb.

It is true—there were several ladies who were not dancing. But why? Because there are about thirty more women than men in the class of 317 Victoria.

If the "Observer" had remembered this, he would not have found fault with our party.

What a man! He crashes the gate, dances with our women, eats our lunch—and then his spirit of gratitude prompts him to malicious slander and libel.

Such a man should be given the fourth degree, and he'll get it if we ever find out who he is!

Hail Hitler!

A Loyal Vic Frosh.

DEFENDS FROSH

The Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

One of those stick-in-the mud claims of freshmen wishes to make reply to an insinuating letter written by one who calls himself an Observer. It is true that at the Vic party on Friday night there were Freshmen lined along the west wall of Annesley and freshmen along the east wall. But the biggest reason for this situation was not that the freshmen were shy and backward. Oh, no! quite the opposite.

The energetic young frosh started out valiantly and gallantly as the Observer would have them do and promptly filled their programmes with freshette names.

But after about the first dance the poor lost lorn lads had completely forgotten who was who and for half the next dance and each succeeding dance there were about fifty frosh looking for as many freshettes.

If one of the "west wall" men wished to relieve the situation the freshette would wake up, smile sweetly and say, "I'm awfully sorry but I have this dance", and lapse back into her so-called sad mental condition.

We admit this was not a perfect arrangement. There is no doubt of the fact that the frosh ought to have drawn a sketch of the young lady beside her name. Oh yes, they had their names pinned on a card. But even a freshman who approached the Observer in bravery and gallantry would feel a peculiar redness creeping

The Montreal Repertory Theatre made its first appearance in Toronto last night in a presentation of Ibsen's Hedda Gabler at Hart House Theatre. And while I disagree fundamentally with their interpretation of Ibsen, particularly with the characterisation of Hedda Gabler herself, it cannot be denied that in spite of this, and in spite of other flaws, they put on a magnificent production. The stage technique and (with a few exceptions) the acting were superb.

As to the matter of interpretation: I think the company were too anxious to be realistic. Ibsen's purpose was to portray the inevitable reactions of certain definite, clear-cut characters in certain circumstances. His characters are not the complex personalities one meets in everyday life, but what you might call concentrated types. They are almost abstractions—the personification of certain aspects of personality which may be found in many living characters, but never in real life forming the complete personality. It is the same sort of thing as Eugene O'Neill has done in Strange Interlude and Mourning Becomes Electra. In fact, you may find a very interesting parallel between Hedda Gabler and Strange Interlude.

I think the fundamental fact of Hedda's character is that she represents the type of woman who, with immense vitality and a dominating ego, has found no opportunity of self-expression, with a consequent warping of character. It is essential that she should be portrayed as driven on by an uncontrollable force within her to seek an outlet by whatever means she could, regardless of consequences, till finally, driven into a corner, she found her only escape in suicide. This was not done last night. Martha Allan's Hedda was simply a cold-blooded, cunning, unscrupulous woman, who was either congenitally evil or else neurotically insane. In consequence, the vital essence of the play, the idea behind it, was lost. A secondary consequence was that the tempo of the first act was much too slow. This act should have presented a contrast between the desperate, gloomy hopelessness of Hedda and the wholesome vitality of the others. Instead, the others were merely dominated by Hedda; they were infected with her spirit, and obviously afraid of her.

BLUE SRS. PLAY IN LONDON AND SECONDS IN OTTAWA

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By J. E. F.

Believe it or not—actually two events in women's sport took place in one night. Last night the Vic senior team played basketball against the U.C. juniors at O.C.E., and in Vic gym the Vic baseball team played Meds. In both games, the Scarlet and Gold came through victorious.

This was the first appearance of a team from the ranks of Medicine, Science and Physiotherapy to enter interfaculty competition. For the first three or four innings they put up a strong opposition to the Vic team and with practice could make a real contest. We will look for a good game when they encounter their next opponents, and with such material available, there is no reason it should not be one. Stick to it, Meds.

Vic have several new players to replace graduating members and from the calibre of play displayed they will bear watching as prospective winners of the interfaculty championship.

The game between the Victoria basketballers and their opponents began with a decided lead for the former. Lack of co-ordination characterised the play on both sides with considerable fouling on the part of U.C. The score at half time stood at 25-5. In the remaining half U.C. put up a much better fight, tightening up their combinations. Jack Brown did some nice basket work, sinking five out of six free shots.

VARSITY SECONDS TO PLAY OTTAWA

Intermediates Journey to Capital in Good Condition

FORWARD PASS SMOOTH

Smarting under the effects of a trimming they received at the hands of the seniors this week, the Varsity intermediate rugby team will step into Ottawa College tomorrow determined to show just what they really can do. They leave for the capital city at four o'clock tonight with practically a full team, the only man on the sick list being Gibson, who is out with a bad ankle. According to Lou Carroll they are playing better than ever and should win with ease on Saturday.

The passing duties will probably be handled by Stewart and McKee, with Isbister doing the booting. These forward passes, by the way, are zipping home with plenty of speed and accuracy and the boys on the receiving end are doing their bit by making very few fumbles.

The probable starting lineup is as follows: Quarter, McKee; flying wing, McMichael; snap, Doyle; halves, Isbister, Jackson and Stewart; insides, Witzel, Perry; middles, Newton, Gregory; outsides, Edwards, Williams. The alternates who hope to have lots of work are Bodrug, Willis, Hornfeldt, Boomer, Ruddock, Burson, Brebner and Corrigan. Wish them all luck because a win will clinch the group.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By John T. Stubbs

Tomorrow afternoon in London the Varsity seniors will try to evade the jinx and repeat their defeat of Western. If they do it will be the first time the Mustangs have been taken in their own stalls. And Varsity needs a win to stay in the intercollegiate race with a scant possibility of the Redmen upsetting the Reevermen from Queen's. The locals have a mathematical chance now but not much more. Shag Shaughnessy will have his best efforts working in Montreal because of the dissatisfaction spreading fast as a result of his rather unsuccessful record at McGill of late seasons. Shag had the reputation of being the best football coach in Canada. Tickets for the game in London are on sale at the Athletic Office in Hart House. Those who intend to go to the game will have to get their tickets before noon today as the surplus will be sent back to Western this afternoon. Student ticket holders are reminded that coupon No. 7 is good for admission to the Argo-Ottawa game here at Varsity Stadium also.

Last night at the Varsity Arena Warren Stevens' hockey charges lost an exhibition game to West Toronto Nationals 7-1. The first goal didn't go in but Nationals still had a good margin of the scoring and play. The new Varsity coach stepped into the shoes of Frank Sullivan at rather an unfortunate stage of Varsity hockey history. The material he has at hand is not on a par with the players in the rosters of the other O.H.A. Sr. outfits but they may turn in a few surprises at that. In the second period with Charles and Williamson relieving on the defence and Valiquette burning up the ice on the forward line they had the former Fleas guessing and it was fast hockey they were playing even though it was a bit ragged. Stevens has not had much time with the boys yet but some of them are in there trying hard and if he can get them into condition so they can back check hard enough they may be able to counteract their disadvantage behind the blue line. Shipp looked good in goal and Fullerton and Hendry turned in a good game. The lone goal was notched by White in a scramble in front of the net. The Blues came close several times but their timing and combination was against them inside the blue line which made the score look rather one-sided. Varsity is up against some tough opposition in both the O.H.A. and the intercollegiate series so they have a real row to hoe this year. We hear that McGill have lost the two Crutchfields but still have Farmer and McGill on the front line. Their team is said to be just about as strong as last year all around. U. of Montreal are an unknown quantity as yet.

Queen's stepped into the English rugby picture last week very definitely when they defeated McGill 6-0. Varsity rugby enthusiasts considered it a great accomplishment when the Blues tied McGill here. Another acid test faces the soccer team when they travel to Kingston to meet R.M.C. on Saturday.

The Varsity intermediates entrain for the Dominion capital today where they will likely clinch their group title with a win over Ottawa College. It isn't a sure bet by any means however because they had a tough time taking the Ottawa team here. The visitors' lead was not depleted until the last quarter when they pulled out a 9-6 victory. They have not had much trouble with Queen's and R.M.C. so this game will count considerably to them. Lew Hayman and Lou Carroll have worked hard with the seconds and they can turn on a powerful offensive when the need arises. As ever they are a strong outfit and like their predecessors always leave a few sensations up their sleeves that make the game interesting.

ANNUAL HARRIER TO BE RUN OFF

Splendid Contest Expected; Over a Hundred Entries; Many Stars

SATURDAY AT 9 O'CLOCK

The annual interfaculty harrier or "cross-country", as it is commonly called, will be run off over the Upper Canada College course on Saturday morning at 9 o'clock instead of at 10 as previously announced.

The run this year is expected to be one of the best ever with over a hundred men entered and among them some of the favourites of former races. Prominent among these is Jack McGladdery, who is favoured to win the race and who will be closely followed by McKerracher and Thompson. These three men are all from Meds. Three more entries from Wycliffe are expected to show up well: Bill Kibblewhite, Gilbert and Heuther. Kibblewhite was a 5,000 metre Olympic runner in 1928 and has been laid up with an injured tendon in his leg. Gilbert, who won the event seven years ago, finished first in the Wycliffe harrier and was closely followed by Heuther.

The U.C.C. course is five and one half miles in length and the first five men to cover this distance will constitute the intercollegiate team to represent Toronto at McGill on Nov. 11th. The second five men will probably make up the intercollegiate junior team.

VARSITY SENIORS LOSE IN HOCKEY

was preserved intact from last year. It consisted of Cunningham, Hendry and McPherson, who did effective work, co-ordinating better than any other Blue combination. The game as a whole was rather ragged, the early start in the hockey season allowing not a great deal of time for conditioning.

It was in the first period that most of the scoring was done. A scant two minutes had elapsed before Smithie pushed the puck past his old teammate Shipp. A loose puck was batted in by Len Huggins of West Toronto. Primeau followed this up by sailing around Campbell on the Varsity defence to score another.

Sweeney showed some good hockey in this session, but did not get far against Good, Maxie Hackett and Huggins.

As the second period rolled on Varsity tightened down to serious business with McClelland and Jeffers fighting the western Sailors at their own end of the rink. Bruce Charles, the sturdy defenseman of the Blue team, made several nice rushes. McClelland of the Nationals scored the only goal of the period.

Peter White brought glory upon himself by averting a whitewash as he shot a goal past Geddes in the later moments of the game. Two goals followed, one by O'Brien and one by Nugent, which closed the festivities for the evening.

The game was rather in the nature of a workout for both teams, yet no effort was spared by either team. The fiery right winger, Maxie Hackett, battled with everyone at every opportunity.

Mr. O. H. Williams in his office at 43, Scott St., Toronto, surrounded by pictures of the various Canadian Pacific captains that he has sailed under.

Seventy-four consecutive crossings of the Atlantic on the same steamship line is the unique record of O. H. Williams, 43 Scott Street, Toronto, well-known importer, who made his most recent trip on the Canadian Pacific liner the Empress of Australia. Mr. Williams made the first voyage on the Pretorian in 1912, the old Allan liner which was being operated by the Canadian Pacific Steamships before being taken over with the rest of that company's ships by the Canadian Pacific. He was seen off by William Webber, former commodore purser of the line. As he stepped off the Empress of Australia on August 25 of this year at Quebec at the conclusion of his 74th voyage, he was greeted by Mr. Webber, now general agent for the Canadian Pacific Steamships for Atlantic ports. In his office Mr. Williams has a framed photo of every captain he has sailed under.

"All my seventy-four trips across the Atlantic have been made on the steamers of the Canadian Pacific," said Mr. Williams, "with the majority on the Montcalm, where I always feel as if I was at home. I have seen many changes since my first voyage. First I would put the general change from the bunk to the bed, the large installation of private bathrooms in the cabins and the substitution of the washing basin with hot and cold running water for the old compactum. In my opinion all these improvements have helped to decrease sea-sickness. On the Empress of Britain seventy per cent of the cabins have private baths. Canadian Pacific steamers have always been famous for their cuisine while no other steamship company disembarks its passengers with greater rapidity or efficiency. Even if we do not reach Quebec until 10.00 a.m., as was the case last time, the Toronto passengers invariably reach their destination the same day."

Mr. Williams is indeed the ideal all-round ambassador of Empire trade. He is widely known personally, socially and in business life to a great number of the finest clothing houses that England boasts and with whom he has done business for nearly a quarter of a century. "The Old Country is not reach lesson to all of us at all times," concluded Mr. Williams, "for whether in prosperity or the reverse she always appears cool and collected."

STAFF REPUDIATES WILCO CRITICISM

The Varsity Advance or The Globe have any real basis for this charge, let the facts be stated definitely; then serious consideration might be given them. While I cannot speak for the faculty as a whole, I am personally convinced that it would be impossible to prove atheistical views were being taught here. The charge of disloyalty is but a confession of their own political partisanship, which we avoid."

Professor Burton, Head of the Department of Physics, was of a similar opinion. "There is absolutely nothing on which to base the charge that such things are taught here. It would be difficult indeed to decide whether students here are more inclined to swerve in their beliefs than are the young workers in a business office. While there are possibly some things that are learned which differ from those beliefs inculcated at home, for example, that the universe was made for men, the very expansion which comes with a broader viewpoint tends to strengthen rather than weaken the religious convictions in a great many. The knowledge that the universe is so vastly beyond man's ability to formulate it tends to humble us. As for disloyalty, it is absurd that all professors should agree with the programme of the party which happens to be in power, or any party."

Professor Flenley, of the Department of History, declared that as the University is a place for the study of all kinds of knowledge, it is necessary to investigate all the different theories to evaluate them correctly. "The use of the word 'disloyalty' is nonsense. There is a spirit of free and open inquiry in our studies, that's all. The academic mind is interested in all knowledge in its various aspects. Our goal is wisdom, the understanding and discrimination of values, and for that we require to study all sides of any problem. We try to encourage the same open-mindedness in the students, and surely that is beneficial," he concluded.

The Varsity attempted to interview members of the Board of Governors, but was unsuccessful. One prominent member who was reached refused to say anything for publication.

MORNING PAPERS SCORE GHOLISH TACTICS

undone. But on the whole, I think the standard of Canadian newspapers is high and I feel that those of us who write and those of us who read, (because the reader has a real responsibility too,) should unite in endeavouring to keep it so."

Mr. Scott, managing editor of the Mail and Empire, expressed a similar opinion, when questioned regarding Press Ghouliness in the Toronto Press.

"In the news columns," he said, "we try to chronicle an event accurately and without bias. The newspaper sells news and when this news is inaccurate the reputation of the paper suffers. I do not think that the Toronto Press in reporting the facts of the Hillier case was sensational, although it is quite true that some were over-emotional. The baby is dead, we believe, as a result of a childish prank and there is inevitably tremendous curiosity as to the principals concerned. As a public servant, we naturally cater to the public curiosity as well as to the public interest, though we are always careful to keep within the bounds of decency. In Canada, we do not recognise scandal-mongering sheets as newspapers. Press Ghoulies, like those among the weeklies abroad, do not exist in this country."

One of the Toronto evening papers, when approached by The Varsity suggested that there was no necessity for any newspaper of this city to comment on Mr. Ervine's indictment because no Toronto papers make a practice of delving into the private lives of individuals unless it is a question of vital importance to the public welfare. Sordid details, it was claimed, are kept out as far as possible.

When asked by The Varsity how far circulation played a part in directing the treatment of news features, this same newspaper claimed that while circulation figures might be in the back of an editor's mind when he directs the way in which a story should be handled, they are by and large a very minor consideration.

COMMUNISTS EVADE SURPRISE ATTACK

ment rejoiced in the Liberal victories. He explained that the results of the elections showed that the C.C.F. cannot buck the two major parties and that the Liberals have greater expectations in the next general elections.

Mr. Wayman, leader of the Oppositionists, who were the Communists or Workers' Party, replied with a vicious denunciation of the Liberal policies. He charged that the reasons for the recent Liberal victories were their shameful demagoguery, lack of finances in the Workers' Party, and the splitting of the united front of the workers by the C.C.F.

A. C. Smith, representing the C.C.F. stated that he rejoiced in the Liberal victories because they showed the C.C.F.'s weak points and its need for a change in personnel. A better organisation would be able then to contend in the next elections.

When, after much further debate, the motion of the House was put to a vote, the speaker declared the motion carried. Then, the surprise was presented when Mr. Singer, the leader of the government, resigned on behalf of his ministry. Mr. Wayman's Oppositionists were put in power and withstood the attempts to oust them before they had presented a bill.

SPLENDID LECTURE AT ART GALLERY

light. The Impressionists developed the idea further. Impressionism in landscape painting means a tendency to treat the scene as a whole, the desire to reproduce a given piece of landscape under a definite set of conditions such as light and weather and the addition of the personal and the intimate.

Cezanne in his own statement points out the thoughts and ideas of the Post-Impressionists. "I want to make Impressionism something durable." With the Post-Impressionists painting became more emotional; an expression of what the painter feels rather than what he sees.

Professor Constable went on to trace the history of landscape painting through the English school to the Canadian school where examples were shown of the traces of the French school which could be found in a painting with a definite Canadian atmosphere.

"Thus," added Professor Constable, "contemporary landscape painting has evolved through a series of stages, each influencing the next and all combining to make up what I have endeavoured to outline tonight—modern landscape painting."

CONCERNING ITALY

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Your contributor, Frank Molinari, in his recent articles on modern Italy speaks enthusiastically about the conditions in that country and pays unstinting tribute to its ruler, Mussolini. While not denying the fact that certain improvements have been made in that country during Mussolini's regime we must bear in mind the high price that the people paid for those improvements, a price that people have to pay under a Fascist dictatorship.

There is another side to Fascism, however, about which I want to speak now. It has been well brought out in Mr. Molinari's last article, "Italy (read Mussolini)" is seeking to expand her empire", having arrived late at the colony grabbing scene, Mussolini wants the other countries, France in particular, to share their colonies with him. Now since France or any other country is not going to relinquish her colonies peacefully the answer is—war. "Italy to count for anything should appear on the threshold of the second half of this century with a population of not less than sixty millions", he told his deputies in 1927. Mussolini is getting ready for the big day.

Lately another belated colony seeker appeared on the scene; he, too, you of Mildred Mitchell as Thea Elvsted. She simply did not bring enough to her part. For a woman who by the strength of her own personality has reformed a dissolute, degenerated man and inspired him to write an epoch-making book, she was unbelievably colourless, shallow and lacking in vitality and strength.

Nevertheless, it was an excellent production. Martha Allan's stage directions showed great finesse, and her acting was superb, as was that of Burt Hall (Ellert Lovborg). Filmore Sadler (George Tesman) and Cyril Hessey-White (Judge Brack) were also extremely good. All in all, the production was magnificent—even if it wasn't Ibsen.

The Royal Alexandra

Discriminating theatre-goers will welcome the arrival of Sidney Howard's very successful play, The Late Christopher Bean, starring Pauline Lord, at the Royal Alexandra next week. It ran for the entire season in New York last year, and is now in its seventh month at St. James Theatre, London, where it was hailed by the press as "the greatest triumph in the theatre for many months," and "a brilliant success from every point of view."

The Late Christopher Bean is pure comedy of the most engaging character, based upon a novel idea, spun out in a genuinely witty and blissfully absurd development to a hilarious conclusion, and with Pauline Lord starring in one of her most popular roles should prove extremely successful here.

By John T. Stubbs

Continuing their unbroken string of victories to cinch the group title, the Varsity seconds trimmed the Ottawa University rugby team 21-3 in Ottawa Saturday afternoon and made sure of their right to continue in the intercollegiate intermediate playoffs.

Two singles from the toe of Isbister in the first quarter were countered by a placement for Ottawa to make it 3-2. In the second Isbister kicked almost to the deadline again but Benoit receiving, tried to kick it out again with the wind. It failed to come out and Gregory for Varsity fell on it for a touch which was not converted, to make it 7-3. Another single by Isbister ended the scoring in the first half at 8 to 3.

A partially blocked Ottawa kick was snuffed by Gregory who ran it to Ottawa's one-yard line. The home-sters held Newton out on the first plunge but he ripped his way over on the second for a touch which Stewart converted, making the count 14-3. A bad snap five yards out by Ottawa was fumbled by Benoit, who recovered behind his own line for a safety touch and two points for Toronto. In desperation the Maroons opened up a brilliant passing attack to bring them within striking distance again but an intercepted pass on an Ottawa extension run by Gregory relieved the pressure. ### FRESHMEN EXPLAIN PARTY STAG LINE

Programmes Found Hindrance to any Spontaneous
Gaiety

NON-DANCERS ANNOYED

"Not enough good looking girls to go around," explained Robert MacDonald, English and History, I Victoria, when questioned about the large stag line at the 317 Vic class party.

Tom Marlette, Latin and French, I Victoria, blamed the executive. He thought there should be some way of breaking the ice and becoming better acquainted with people. In his opinion the programmes contributed to the stiffness and checked the spontaneity of the evening. Several of the gate-crashers, who wished to remain anonymous, also expressed strong disapproval of the programmes.

On the contrary, George Green, I Law, believes that the executive did all in their power, but that there was not enough spirit of give and take on the part of the students themselves.

Some students of the first year who wished their names to be withheld had thought that there would have been more provision made for non-dancers, and were disappointed when they found that the whole evening was to be devoted to dancing.

COMMERCE CLUB TO HEAR MR. E. EHRLMANN-EWART

Through the good offices of Professor G. E. Jackson, the Commerce Club has obtained Mr. E. Ehrmann-Ewart, Doctor of Laws and Doctor of Economic Science of the University of Vienna. He will address an open meeting under the club's auspices at 120 noon in the Hart House Debates Room tomorrow (Tuesday) on the subject, "Austria's Political and Economic Structure in the Flashlight of Nazism in Germany". He will speak for about 25 minutes and will then answer questions, avoiding entirely present day politics.

Dr. Ewart has travelled widely in North and South America, Africa and Russia and has followed the Nazi movement in Germany Austria closely.

The executive informed The Varsity that all members of Hart House are welcome to attend the meeting, but request that they be on time.

Enters Cloakroom by Window in Progress

LITTLE MONEY MISSING

At least ten Vic Freshettes had their purses stolen on Friday evening when a thief gained entrance to the ladies' cloakroom at Wymilwood. A reception given by the faculty of Victoria College to the freshman class was nearing completion when one of the girls discovered that her purse was missing. Investigation revealed the full extent of the robbery.

An immediate search of the grounds about the residence destroyed hope that some of the bags might have been dropped in flight. It is thought that the thief climbed through an open window into the cloakroom, as the front door was locked soon after the majority of the guests arrived.

SENSATIONALISM DECRIED

"The sensationalism in the commercialised press of today is deplorable," said Dean Neville, in delivering an address of welcome to the Canadian Intercollegiate Press convention which met at the University of Western Ontario last Saturday. Dean Neville cited the London Times and the Boston Transcript as examples of newspapers which present their reading public with current news rated and printed in accordance to its true value. The Dean spoke of being in attendance at the University of Toronto when The Varsity had its first real row.

The C.I.P.U. convention was attended by representatives from the University of Manitoba, McMaster, University of Toronto, and Western, McGill, Queen's and the University of British Columbia notified the convention of their inability to attend, and their best wishes for its success. A good part of one session of the convention was given to the discussion of the promotion. (Continued on Page 3)

Thousands of Students Learn
Appreciation of Lands

MUST UTILISE WASTE LAND

"Twenty-two thousand volunteers from the universities, colleges, and schools of Great Britain conducted the recent survey, under the supervision of the Department of Land Utilisation," announced the eminent geographer, Dr. Stamp, in his lecture Saturday evening in Convocation Hall.

The main purpose in having the classification of the land conducted in this manner was to give the younger generation of England a keener appreciation of what they have, and what they can produce in the future by a right use of the land at their disposal.

Great Britain has the least forest land of all European countries and England itself has only 5 per cent wooded land. Also no natural regeneration of land destroyed during the war has been started. Planting trees is not at all popular in England today.

The heaths, meadows and pastures of England, according to Dr. Stamp, should be left for reforestation as they are of no value for agriculture. Thus by using the land to its full advantage. (Continued on Page 4)

SEES PEACE PACT MORE EFFECTIVE THAN THE LEAGUE

U.S. is Party to Kellogg Pact
Not of League, Professor Zimmer Explains

MENACE OF GERMANY

Control of Armament Minerals Necessary to Achieve
Peace

"The League of Nations is not as valuable an instrument for the settlement of international disputes as the Kellogg Peace Pact because the United States is not a member of the League and is not likely to be. Her full participation is necessary to the organisation of peace," declared Prof. Zimmer, asked by The Varsity to support his contention that the Kellogg Pact was more effective than the League of Nations in dealing with international disputes.

For the edification of Varsity readers Prof. Zimmer outlined in brief his argument for controlling armaments by controlling materials for producing them. "Germany is rearming. How can we deal with this menacing situation? There are four possibilities: first, to ignore it. If we did this Germany would make war as soon as she was ready. It would incidentally be a temptation to arm; secondly, we might open negotiations for the limitation of armaments but as Germany is not in the mood for negotiations this alternative is impossible. Thirdly, we could punish the Germans for breaking the treaty of Versailles by marching into Germany. And lastly, we could take protective precautions against Germany. Germany will not be controlled from within. She can only be controlled from outside—by establishing world control of certain indispensable raw materials of armaments. The powers assembled for disarmament should appoint a committee to draw up and select a list of key minerals indispensable for munitions. Amongst those are the materials needed for the hardening of steel which. (Continued on Page 4)

Two Losses Apiece

By B. J. McGuire

Defeating Western at home for the first time in five years 'Warren Stevens' Blue-clad stalwarts romped home victors for the second time of the season over Joe Breen's Western Mustangs when they clashed at London on Saturday. Twenty-two to fourteen was the way Varsity proved to everyone in general and Western in particular that they will have considerable to say regarding who will be senior intercollegiate football champions for the coming year.

The fixture had everything which could be desired by the way of good football. Four touchdowns, one by a spectacular effort, an Armpit to Henderson pass over the line for 25 yards, and another from an equally brilliant 30 yard plunge by Stew Ward, a 45 yard run by Bobby Coulter and exceptionally good kicking by both teams all combined to produce the most attractive intercollegiate contest to be witnessed in some time.

It was a great day for Andy Henderson. After playing heads-up ball all season Andy crashed the spotlight in no uncertain manner on Saturday. (Continued on page 3)

VARSITY'S FIFTEEN WIN RUGGER TITLE

Defeat Tricolour by 6-0 to Take Intercollegiate Championship

FIRST IN SEVEN YEARS

A 6-0 victory over Queen's on Saturday gave Varsity the intercollegiate rugby championship for the first time in seven years. Coach Jimmie Bowles, who is the motivating power behind this club, had his team in perfect condition, and ready to play the game of the season with the result that another championship will rest beneath the Blue and White for the coming season.

Varsity were the aggressors throughout the game and at no time were in very great danger of being scored on. The forwards and backs combined well. Varsity had the edge in line-outs and loose play while their backs passed well and gained ground time after time in fast sweeping runs.

Queen's kicked off to Varsity to open the first half. Varsity ran the ball well into Queen's territory in a series of forward rushes and three-quarter runs. McClatchie went over for a try after about fifteen minutes of play. The kick for extra points failed. The Queen's team tightened up for awhile and drove Varsity back to midfield. However, numerous well-placed kicks by the Varsity backs again kept the play in Queen's territory and just before half time a well executed back-field movement again sent McClatchie across the Queen's line for what seemed a certain try. The referee failed to call the play however, and the Queen's backs recovered, booting the ball into touch on their 25 yard line. (Continued on Page 3)

Who's Afraid of the Big, Bad Wolf, The Big Bad Wolf, The Big Bad Wolf?

By Dr. C. H. R.

Cars streaming over the bridge, sweeping around the spacious, well-kept lawns of the University of Western Ontario... flags floating in the breeze over the beautiful bowl in which is situated Little Stadium... a bright November sun, and the wind carrying just enough suggestion of winter to make perfect football weather... bands playing... programmes and poppies and colours being offered to the milling mob at the gates... what a day for a game!

having an expert broadcast the game play by play, giving explanations as he went along. A good idea, if the play became dull enough to allow one to listen. And that wasn't often.

"Sandy" Sommerville sat silent through it all. Perhaps he was musing on his days in a Blue and White sweater, when he is reputed to have kicked the second-longest punt in intercollegiate records.

The Big Train for Western was Stew Ward, and he deserves a hand. The boil on his neck proved more of an inspiration than a handicap, even if he did have to stop to have it dressed.

Coach Stevens looked angry at half-time... that was before Henderson got bitten by the touchdown bug... after that Johnny Copp almost forgot that he was on the yardsticks... we. (Continued on Page 4)

PACIFISTS AND THEIR METHODS

In view of the imminence of war, the conditions, and perhaps because of the juvenile enthusiasm of anti-war meetings on the campus of this university, we are moved to writing of a practical—though by no means certain—method of curbing the war-spirit, namely, the promotion of sympathetic understanding of that nation which looms up as the most probable aggressor. At present that nation is Germany. An understanding of Germany's attitude may be achieved by a conscientious study of German history for the past hundred years, and more particularly for the last quarter century; by a close investigation of the pressing problems which confront that nation with the circumstances which have given rise to them, and the possible solutions which are open to the German people. While we have no intention of anticipating the results of such a study, we suggest it is not inconceivable that we should conclude that Germany's attitude and actions have been dictated by necessity, and by a commendable sense of international justice.

It is sheer nonsense to set up a standard such as the ethical teachings of Jesus and by that standard condemn Germany, or any nation, when no nation, not excluding our fair Dominion, has ever for a moment submitted itself to that standard. Many who dare to acknowledge Jesus Christ as Lord—and that emphatically does not mean following the ideals of Jesus—are heartily in favour of promoting peace but question the value of preaching idealism in the mask of religion as a means of eradicating war. Our time, and the time of the anti-war societies, will be more profitably spent if, instead of converting our less enlightened and less moral brethren to pacifism, an effort is made to appreciate the fearful predicament in which the German people find themselves on account of the Treaty of Versailles and the failure of the League of Nations. Contrary to the preachments of superficially optimistic, evolutionary teachers of ethics, history teaches us that there has been relatively no moral progress in 2000 years. It is high time we recognised the folly of ethical evangelism as a substitute for religious conversion and became more rational and pragmatic in our discussion and settling of international disorders.

Not only are we convinced of the futility of an idealistic pacifism to prevent war but we are apprehensive of the injury it may inflict upon the cause of peace. For pacifists are notoriously intolerant of those who are not pacifists, as witness the outbursts against the C.O.T.C. and the Memorial Services and Armistice Day, and with a consciousness of their moral and intellectual superiority Pharisaically castigate those outside the fold. Moreover, those newspapers and propagandists who are so loud in their profession of pacifism actually engender ill-feeling toward those nations which are admittedly militaristic. Convince a people that they are pacifists at heart and love peace, and they are ripe for the recruiting stations. An extra dose of hysteria and they will die for peace exactly as our older brothers did.

If it is true that, in spite of the freedom of thought of which our age is also prone to boast itself, the great bulk of our people are members of a certain Christian communion because they were born and brought up in it, it is especially true that the political outlook of a people is largely determined by their geographical situation. We have, therefore, a suspicion that the same people who in Canada are ardent apostles of peace, would be simply thrilled by the Nazi youth movement in Germany had they been reared in that country.

All of which would seem to substantiate our original thesis that a more practical means of promoting peace would be to strive for a sympathetic understanding of belligerent and militaristic nations. In keeping with this policy let us quote from an article published recently in the Toronto Daily Star from the pen of David Lloyd George, a statesman who can scarcely be accused of possessing any outward bias for Germany.

"It is no use, like the worthy and well meaning Gilbert Murray, brandishing your penwiper at caricatures of Herr Hitler. Hitler would never have been there to issue his manifesto in the name of the German nation had it not been for the outrageous breach of faith perpetrated by the nations that ruled the league. He is giving dramatic expression to the indignation of every honest man in Germany at the shameless and elaborate trickery and treachery perpetrated upon his great country. . . .

"I have in front of me now a list prepared by the Commission of Inter-allied Control showing how many tens of thousands of German guns, tanks and machine-guns were broken up, how many millions of rifles were smashed and how many hundreds of millions of shells and cartridges were scrapped, how aeroplanes were smashed, and how the machinery for the production of these lethal weapons was shattered—all finished over ten years ago.

"Here is authentic evidence of the way Germany discharged her obligations under the treaty ten years before Hitler even came into power.

"What about the powers who were to follow her example?"

"While their representatives chattered and committed at Geneva, their governments at home built up each year more and more powerful armaments.

"What else could any self-respecting nation do except what Germany did on October 14?"

Hart House String Quartet

The first concert of the Hart House String Quartet students' series was given in Convocation Hall on Friday evening. The house was comfortably filled, from which fact it is apparent that not a few students realise the unique opportunity that is theirs—that of hearing the highest form of music played by a world famous organisation.

If the response of the audience is of critical value, it is worth noting that enthusiasm crested through each succeeding number. As for ourselves, we should prefer to have heard the Quartet in a more intimate recital, since we feel that a large hall tends to produce forcing, and destroys the more subtle personal appeal of this type of music. Possibly our position in the hall accounted for the slight unpleasant shrillness of the first violin in the first number.

The programme notes were so admirably compiled and informative that detailed criticism seems superfluous. The Beethoven Quartet in E Flat was played in the usual masterful style of the ensemble. A certain delicacy and rapprochement crept into the Haydn, and the duet between first and second violin in the Scherzo was as delightful as the Adagio was satisfying. The Quartet closed with a sly, abrupt presto.

Debussy is quoted as saying that in his one quartet he had said all he had to say in that form. In any case the whole work is pervaded by that indefinable atmospheric beauty so typically Debussy. It is worth noting that tone colour in this quartet is not a matter of a coating applied on the surface, but part of the warp and woof of the music. There is so much that is exquisite in this work that we dare not elaborate. Sufficient it is to mention the Andantino which with its lyrical feeling in the suave melody recalls the Russian Borodin.

F. B. S.

On Saturday night the Hart House Quartet opened their tenth season in Hart House Theatre. The programme given was that presented ten years ago at the Quartet's first concert. Those who are familiar with the work of this ensemble during the first decade of its existence will be able to make many observations of interest. All that may be said here at the present time is a reiteration of an undoubted truth: that the Hart House String Quartet is not only the most justly famous, but the most satisfying and perfect musical institution in Toronto, and probably in Canada.

Saturday night's programme had been played at a students' concert on Friday and has been reviewed above. A few comments on the Beethoven Quartet in E Flat, Op. 74, might be added. This beautiful composition has been said, like another Beethoven work of the same time, to have been written "amidst tears and affliction", in days of great personal trouble and anxiety. And although the first of the last compositions was seven years away, this quartet clearly points the way to the style of the "last period"; in fact, one commentator has found in the Adagio a passage which anticipates the famous Beklemmt motif of the Cavatina in the Quartet in B Flat, Op. 130 (a work of the last period, played by the Hart House Quartet last year). The restless intensity of the first movement is the key to the troubled mood of the whole. Very moving is the Adagio; it has been referred to as sentimental, but its sentimentalism will be admitted to be of a lofty order.

The most remarkable movement is the Scherzo. An anguished struggle goes on in this music; the rhythmic motif made more famous in the opening bars of the fifth symphony, the strange, wild cries of the first violin, the prestissimo theme of the 'cello in the Trio, over which rises a peculiar melody in the viola, the sinister repeated notes in the 'cello at the conclusion—these all give the movement a force which is almost terrible. One thinks of another strange Scherzo, that of the fifth symphony; but in this quartet, apparently less striking, I believe that you find a more affecting conflict, and one more basic to the understanding of the mature Beethoven. The last movement is not important; the significance of this work practically ends with its Scherzo.

Friday Afternoon Recital

At five o'clock, on Friday, Dr. Ernest MacMillan, Principal of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, delivered in the Hart House Music Room an illustrated and enlightening address termed "The Architecture of Music". Dr. MacMillan proved himself an excellent speaker, as well as being an exceptionally talented and learned musician. In his talk, which was coloured with interest and tinged with humour throughout, he dealt with the construction and problems of harmony (Continued on Page 4)

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

Did you know some of the co-eds of this institution of learning have gone mediaeval on us? Yes, sir, with bows and arrows. Archery is now a regular course in third and fourth year Physical Training. It is impossible to teach it in first and second year on account of the larger registration and the lack of adequate facilities. There seems to be something always missing "on account of the lack of adequate facilities". We sincerely hope that much needed and longed for women's Hart House is not in the too far distant future.

Taught personally by Miss Coventry, the course in archery is conducted at Varsity Stadium in the morning. Since there is no indoor range, classes are at the mercy of the weather which frequently upsets the time-table. In fact, the course is very short as there are no classes in it in the spring and cold weather cuts short the fall term. Nevertheless the girls find it a very interesting study and derive real pleasure in adopting the ways of their forefathers. There is certainly no doubt about the benefits to be gained, posture and grace being two important ones, and who would object to mediaeval customs if those are the prices to be won?

Rough Play Frequent as Knox Take Engineers by 15-8 Score

The Knox College lacrosse team continued its winning streak by defeating Junior S.P.S. 15-8 in a stormy game held in the big gymnasium in Hart House on Friday afternoon. The game produced some real lacrosse but was too often marred by rough play. Referee Allison was forced to hand out more than a few penalties to both teams were playing short-handed for most of the time in the last two periods.

Knox swept into the lead with their usual scoring punch. The unselfish passing game of their forwards got the ball to the Engineers' goal time and again for almost certain tallies. MacEachern and Caslor, who scored six and five goals respectively for the winners were the standouts of the game. Weir, in the winning goal, gave his team fine support, stopping several wicked shots. With the start of the second period the eager School men fought hard but were unable to cut down the commanding lead of the Presbyterians.

when he carried the ball over the Western line twice in the first half of the third quarter. His greatest rival for individual honours was Stew Ward, the hard-hitting quarterback of the Mustangs. Just when Varsity looked to be winning in a walk after their second touch, Ward took a pass on Varsity's 17 yard line, plunged for yards on the next play and then he smashed through for a major. Very much in the race with another 30 yard plunge for a touch before the quarter ended, Bobby Coulter also tore off his 45 yard run in this quarter, into which was packed enough football for any entire game.

Varsity's win, coupled with McGill's victory over Queen's opens the intercollegiate race into a three-cornered tie. McGill certainly did Varsity a favour with her 17-1 victory over the Tricolour squad. Had Ted Reeve's charges won Varsity's sparkling effort would have meant little as their chances of a title would be very slim. After this generous contribution of McGill to Varsity's cause Warren Stevens will have a tough job getting his team to show any fight against the McGill Redmen.

Varsity had the wind behind them in the first quarter and Jack Sinclair, kicking, moved the play up to mid-field. After the kickoff from where he booted a long low bounding ball which Sherk fumbled and recovered behind his line putting Varsity two points to the good. Two offside cost Western precious yards and a short pass put the play back to the Mustang 20 yard line, and Arnpup counted three more points on a placement. Still taking advantage of the wind, Sinclair booted to Sherk for the last point of the quarter.

Western fought back hard in the second but Sinclair intercepted a pass and kicked to the 25 yard line. Sinclair made another 25 yards when he ran back Sherk's kick. Western failed to make headway and when they attempted to kick Varsity broke it up and Bill Bryers recovered. Greco moved the play up to the seven yard line but further attempts at the line were smothered and when Arnpup attempted a placement it was broken up and recovered by Western. Midway through this frame Ward intercepted a pass, putting the play in Varsity territory. A Varsity fumble was recovered by Cupie Kennedy and Sherk then kicked a long low bouncer to the deadline to give Western their first point. A Varsity offside and a short kick by Sinclair set the Mustangs up for their second point, Sherk booting a touch in goal.

Varsity kicked off in the third but got possession again when Arnpup intercepted a pass. Greco and Burgoyne made yards and the team lined up for a placement. Arnpup took the snap and tossed a beautiful 25 yard pass to Andy Henderson who fell over the line for a major, Arnpup converted with a placement.

Sinclair returned the ball after the kickoff and a fumble on the first play was gathered up by Henderson, who never paused till he was over the line for the second touch. Arnpup again converted.

Despite their 16 point handicap Western stepped right into the big Blue team, elicited with a forward pass for twenty yards and then moved up to the 15 when Stew Ward sneaked around the short end off a fake kick. On the third attempt Ward went over for a major. Sherk converted with a placement. Four minutes later Ward again was parked behind the Varsity line with the ball for the second touch, which was converted.

Bobby Coulter ran the kick back 45 yards just before the teams changed ends. The wind was with Varsity in the final frame. Western had the bet-

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By John T. Stubbs

It's anybody's title but Western's now. The Blues knocked the jinx all around the London grid along with the ball and the Mustangs and left nothing to be desired. In the twinkling of an eye both McGill's Redmen and Varsity stepped right back into the race with Queen's. Just one upset after another. What happens next? Queen's are likely to get nasty in Kingston next Saturday and wreak revenge on the Mustangs for giving them that beating in the first game of the season in London when Joe Breen's charges won 5-3. That means Queen's will still be in first place but the question is with whom? Will it be Varsity or McGill? While Queen's was busy defeating Varsity two in a row, McGill, all too unnoticed, was doing the same thing with Western and then out of a clear blue sky they landed in first place with the Tricolour and the Blues. What a peeve for Teddy Reeve! And Queen's thought they were well away for a sure title. Now they will have to fight for it. With either Varsity or McGill playing off with the Tricolour it is sure to be one grand battle. Shag Shaughnessy came through with a battling team and performed what looked like the impossible. From the looks of things the Redmen gave Queen's an awful lacing from start to finish. Shag had to do it to justify himself and he did. And don't make any mistake about it, he'll be itching to do the same thing here next Saturday. All eyes will be turned to the game at Varsity Stadium at the same time they will be looking at the score board to see how Hayman and his Argos are getting along at the tea party at the Molson Stadium in Montreal with the Winged Wheelers.

The Varsity intermediates spat into their cold hands and dug in their toes in Ottawa Saturday afternoon too. After a slow start in the first quarter they opened up and ran wild to swamp the threatening Ottawa University squad 21-3. When they get that kind of a notion into their heads watch out. And this year they play off with O.A.C. here in Toronto where they won't be caught napping as they were in Guelph last year when they slipped up in the first round of the playoffs. When the whistle blew the agriculturists trotted out onto the frozen field shod in running shoes. Varsity were equipped with rugby boots and cleats because it was very mild when they left Toronto. The result was sickening. O.A.C. didn't take the trouble to inform the locals of what was going on and they pulled a fast one. This year the game will be played here and it will be a different story probably, although the student farmers are making a strong bid for football honours this season. They haven't left a stone unturned to get a real team together and they have one too. It's very amusing to hear some of the fellows who have left home and city to go back to the land via Guelph this fall.

We suppose that by now almost every pro hockey fan in the university has found or borrowed the two bits necessary to buy a ticket for the benefit hockey match at the Maple Leaf Gardens tonight. Fun and games for everybody is promised in that encounter when the Newlyweds under the guidance of Happy Day and King Clancy doff the soup-and-fish togs to march down the aisle against the Marlboro Simon-Pures ushered by Ace Bailey. It is a worthy cause, being staged by the three Kiwanis Clubs of Toronto in aid of underprivileged children. Mayor Stewart will face the puck and then you will have your first chance to see the Leafs in action this season. Don't miss it.

Varsity's English rugby squad handed the Queen's ruggerites a bowl of lemon juice when they upset the dope and won 6-0. Queen's were supposed to have performed a miracle when they trimmed McGill by the same score. We at Varsity thought it a real accomplishment when the Blue rugger team tied the Redmen scoreless but now they wear a real feather in their caps as a result of their win on Saturday.

And just to be in style with the rest of the teams the Varsity soccer team also found it necessary to come through with a win. This they did in no uncertain manner, trouncing R.M.C. 10-1 at Kingston. This victory over the Cadets certainly gives the soccer situation a cheerful outlook.

VARSITY'S FIFTEEN WIN RUGGER TITLE

Varsity kicked off to start the second half and again pressed strongly. Hilliard crossed the Queen's line for the second try after about 10 minutes of play. The try was not converted. Queen's attacked with renewed vigour and carried the play into Varsity territory. The pressure was relieved by well placed kicks by Syme and McClatchie on the Varsity backfield. The final whistle found Varsity pressing strongly on Queen's 25 yard line.

Every man on the Varsity team played brilliantly. Losier, Whillans, Yule and McClatchie were outstanding. MacDonald, Ponton and Falconer played fine games for Queen's.

Varsity — Fullback, Crawford; three-quarters, Wilson, Syme, McClatchie, Hilliard; halves, Whillans, Losier; forwards, Caverhill (capt.), Thornburn, Elliot, Garner, Prowse, Coughlan, Yule, MacLeod.

Queen's — Fullback, Falconer; three-quarters, Forrest, Corlett, Bowles, Evans; halves, McLaughlin, Ponton; forwards, MacDonald (capt.), Ewel, Fleming, Barrie, Kinloch, Smith, Ralston, Malen.

WYCLIFFE COLLEGE WINS HARRIER MEET

McGladdery of Meds Leads the Field to Finish First

Wycliffe College won the Brotherton Trophy for the interfaculty harrier race on Saturday morning with the lowest number of points, 34. The Meds team came second with 36 points; Trinity third and O.A.C. fourth.

A very fast pace was set from the start by McGladdery of Meds, who was the first runner to finish the course of 5.6 miles, with a time of 30 minutes. Hogg of S.P.S. finished second and Gilbert of Wycliffe third. The Wycliffe runners, as a team, turned in the best effort to win the trophy.

The intercollegiate team which will go to McGill on November 11 will consist of McGladdery, Hogg, Gilbert, Burton (Trinity) and Thompson (Meds).

WOODSMEN DEFEAT THEOLOGIANS TWICE

Forestry announced their entrance into the volleyball league Friday by defeating Wycliffe in two straight games, 15-9 and 15-11.

The winners' combination was superior to that of Wycliffe and this was the deciding factor in the game.

Forestry — Skolks, Garrett, Carrique, Haggin, Crossley, Greer.
Wycliffe — Kibblewhite, Huether, Emmet, Newton-Smith, Fairweather, Good, Morrissey, Peglar.

and gave the Blues possession. With about seven minutes to go in the last quarter Hud Stewart jumped and got his hands on an Ottawa forward pass, and sprinting as only Stewart can, he ran through half the Ottawa team right down the field seventy yards for a touch amid even the cheers of the heartbroken Ottawa fans who until then still had hopes of their own team coming from behind to win. It was a glorious effort. The convert failed and the game ended with the count standing 21-3 for Varsity.

McMichael made a 30 yard run in the second quarter, Isbister's kicking was classical, Gregory's brilliant efforts were laudible and the whole team after a slow start came through with a heads-up game of football to uphold the reputation that the same team earned last year. They moved the sticks three times as often as the losing team and although they did not attempt the forward pass as often as the Ottawa outfit, they had a better average on completions.

Varsity — Doyle, Witzel, Horafelt, Newton, Gregory, Edwards, Bodrug, McMichael, McKee, Isbister, Jackson, Stewart, Williams, Corrigan, Willis, Perry, Boomer, Ruddock, Burson, Brehrer.

Ottawa U. — Barnabe, Benoit, Lafleur, Gagner, Veale, Desjardines, Devine, Cannon, McAndrew, Leclair, Holt, Kealey, Labelle, Corridan, Sylvestre, Cruikshank, Phillips, Sweetman, Marcoux, Swabey, Cameron, Lafrance, Brennan.

KNOX LOSE GOOD CHANCES

Playing under a stiff north wind Friday Senior Meds eked out a 4-3 victory over Knox in a Mulock Cup series game on the back campus. The game was as close as the score indicates and with a little luck and some more fight Knox might have been crowing over Meds. Knox certainly had the better of the play in the second half and made yards more times than Meds in the whole game. It was in the drive at the beginning of the second half that Knox threw away their chance for a win by kicking for a single instead of trying for a placement when they were twenty yards out.

With a queer mixture of real fight and equally real woodenness Knox would at times stop the Meds plungers dead and at others let them through for gains of ten yards or more. It was not unusual to see a Knox lineman fall down in front of a plunger and make no effort to grab him as he stepped over. In spite of this Robertson of Meds had to kick his best to get the four singles that he did. Cuthbertson and Nutric for the Ministers were very good at running back kicks as well as at plunging. Their teammate, Shortt, kicked well for his three points, making two of them against the wind.

After a bad first half in which they were very weak, the Knox line tightened up and when they got possession of the ball went right down the field to within twenty yards of the line. While over at the side of the field they tried two bucks and then kicked for a single instead of an end run and a try for placement. The other scores were the result of good long kicks, one of them to the deadline. Meds scored one in the first and three in the third period.

Senior Meds—Flying wing, McKellar; halves, Robertson, Miller, Shere; quarter, Appleford; snap, Chute; insides, Hall, Fee; middles, Cameron, Scott; outsides, Laborsky, Gibb; sub, Eager.

Knox—Flying wing, Paulin; halves, McKinn, Shortt, Prouse; quarter, Cuthbertson; snap, Sindair; insides, McLean, Aitken; middles, Lowerie, McKewen; outsides, MacKay, Jones; subs, Davidson, Rosevear.

UPHOLD INFLUENCE OF WEST ON EAST

Trinity Lit. Debaters Defeat
Motion Deploing Influence

ADVANTAGES INNUMERABLE

"There are basic differences between the Oriental and Western outlook," said G. H. Johnson, speaking on the motion, "That this House deplores the effect of Western ideas on the Orient" which was overwhelmingly defeated 29-11, at the Trinity Lit. last Friday. He considered that democracy, education along Western lines, and our present cynicism towards religion are the products of a materialistic civilisation and are incompatible with the introduction of the East.

Prof. Ashley, replying for the opposition, stated that the advantages that the Orient had gained from Western civilisation were innumerable. Modern transport had opened up inaccessible areas in China and Japan, while the prevention of child labour and the alleviation of famine conditions, had done much to improve the quality of the yellow races. "Corruption in the West is nothing to that found in the East," he concluded in defence of the criticism that Western contacts had lowered Oriental morality.

Professor Lyndon Smith said that he had found in Orientals none of that incurability or detachment from monetary concerns with which they had been credited by the House, and cited certain laundry transactions he had had in Trinity House as an example of this.

GEORGE S. CHALLIES TO ADDRESS TORIES

Macdonald-Cartier Club Will Hold First of Luncheon Series Today

The Macdonald-Cartier Club will, at noon today, inaugurate the first of a series of luncheons at which leaders of the Conservative Party will deal with problems facing the Federal and Provincial Governments. The Provincial Secretary in the Henry administration, Hon. George H. Challies, will speak today on the reformatory and penitentiary situation.

The Provincial Secretary has charge of Ontario's penal institutions. Consequently, Hon. Mr. Challies will be speaking of the branch of provincial administration with which it is his duty to be familiar. In addition, he has assured the executive of the club that he will express his views on the situation in Kingston penitentiary. At the conclusion of his address, he has promised to answer any questions which may be asked.

The luncheon is at 1 o'clock in the north common room, Hart House, and is open to members of the Macdonald-Cartier Club and their friends. Members of the club are particularly urged to attend this first luncheon, as some important business with respect to the club's activities in organising for the party, will be discussed.

REALITY OF CHANGE
GREAT IN ENGLAND

Social Change is Specially Great Since First of Century

"There has been a greater reality of change, especially social change, in England since the beginning of the twentieth century than in any country west of Russia," declared Mr. S. D. Ratcliffe, in an address given in the museum Friday evening. He excepted, of course, those countries which experienced violent revolution. He went on to give general pictures of these changes, placing them in three classifications—those which have occurred in the industrial sphere, social changes, and changes in the political aspect. Signs of commercial and industrial revival, he says, have become markedly evident in England in the last eight or twelve months. Improvement in industries, increase in road traffic, and a general uprising of the national temper, are the incidents of 1933 which appear most striking to the observer. Something of this may be due to the natural conditions of 1933. The remarkably fine summer led a greater percentage of the population to take part in outdoor life than ever before with undoubted results on the health of the younger generation.

In the four major industries of coal, iron and steel, ship-building, and textiles, Britain led the world in the nineteenth century. She was bound to lose that lead and since the war has had to pass through the great ordeal of competition from the U.S., Germany, France and Belgium. Considering this it is a remarkable fact that Britain shows up so well in 1933. The revival in the wool industry is one of the most startling, partly accounted for by the stimulus to the export trade since Britain went off gold. These changes have put England in a place by herself in the world.

In the nineteenth century industrialism was concentrated in the Midlands and the north of England. That condition has greatly changed since the war and in consequence of this change in industrial balance the new wealth of southern England is a striking fact. The distribution of industry over the whole island has had a number of economic and social results, one of these being the change in towns. The historical city of Oxford which breathes the spirit of the Middle Ages has become a busy, bustling city noted for its large automobile factories.

In social life change is shown in the breaking up of the old unit of the working-class family and the removal of class distinction, which is particularly true of the newly industrialised areas of the south. The feudal atmosphere of rural life no longer persists to the degree it did in the last century. Since the war has come a change in the ownership of land with its great influence on English social life. One of the undeniable results of this change of ownership is the greater sense of independence among the work folk of the English villages. In social service England has justified herself before the world. There has been an awakening of social consciousness due to the continued and self-sacrificing work of men and women in social work. A notable decrease has taken place in the great burden of unemployment during the past year.

In conclusion Mr. Ratcliffe summarised the political situation of Great Britain, declaring that the political party of the future is inevitably the Labour Party. Democratic self-government, he says, is the only system for England, there can be no dictatorships. Britain's road is not the Moscow road. Nor yet the road of Nazi Germany.

vantage and capability Britain could double her output of home-produced goods in a short time. Under present conditions no effort is being made to utilise the land now lying waste. The most primitive type of farming is being carried on in certain districts.

The relative value of farm crops is steadily decreasing but dairy products are increasing. By utilising all her waste lands for sheep pastures, Britain, if a decrease in purchasing power resulted, could successfully supply her own commodities for a time.

Each country ought to produce the commodity most suited to it by nature and as England's climate does not permit of production of crops, she should enter dairy farming.

There is already an over-nationalistic tendency in the world today and by producing only commodities Britain can produce, a true spirit of internationalism would be introduced.

and rhythm and proceeded to improve examples.

The speaker then noted the adaptation of music by composers to counteract the undeveloped state of certain musical instruments of the time, such as the valveless brass sections of orchestras which had only a small and limited number of notes within their range. The ornamental style of Chopin's works were quoted to emphasise the writer's cleverness in overcoming the percussion and fast diminishing tones of sustained notes on the piano.

Dr. MacMillan's lecture gave a brief but complete summary of the history and evolution of music, taking in the various branches of composition and construction. The fact of how counterpoint and harmonic styles are related and in turn their connection with the coherence of rhythm was remarkably well explained. Dr. MacMillan, who possesses a pleasing and natural style at the piano, closed with Prelude in E Major and Fugue by J. S. Bach, and a Mozart Sonata.

NEW IDEAL MARKS MODERN PURPOSE OF REFORMATORIES

To be Reformatory Rather Than Punitive is Object

CHALLIES ADDRESSES CLUB

Crime Wave Reached Peak
During Period of Prosperity

"The average age of persons in our penal institutions is becoming younger every year. The average age, I should say, is about twenty-five and a half," stated the Hon. George E. Challies, Provincial Secretary, addressing the Macdonald-Cartier Club luncheon in Hart House yesterday on the activities of the Provincial Secretary's Department.

"The idea of our penal institutions is to be reformatory and not punitive," said Mr. Challies. "In the old days the whole trend of the sentence was punitive, whereas now offenders are put there in order to get a proper viewpoint of their relations to others." Discipline, pointed out the speaker, is very essential to reformation. "The ideal institution is that which gives proper discipline to the inmates; that is, when a man is told to do a thing, he must go and do it. We have fail and just dealings with them all as human beings, but we feel that an idle man can't be reformed." The Secretary suggested that good hard

INFORMAL DISCUSSION

"The real difficulty for students of the world situation is to know what to do about it," Professor MacKenzie said in addressing the English and History Club on current history. "Since the economic collapse," he said, "confidence in democratic principles has weakened. There are today four areas of interest, namely, Russia, United States, Japan and Germany."

In speaking of Germany, Professor MacKenzie stated that Hitler has definitely closed the door to co-operation and disarmament. He was of the opinion that the other nations felt that there was no doubt of Germany's re-arming herself, and had no way of prohibiting it while in the meantime

Whiskers Gain in Popularity As Contest Commences at U.B.C.

Special to "The Varsity"
Vancouver, B.C. (C.I.P.).—A beard growing contest is being sponsored here by the Ubyessy, undergraduate newspaper of the University of British Columbia. This contest is a direct challenge to certain remarks made about the men of U.B.C. by a Mr. O. P. Demerara, hirsute Vancouver clubman.

"U.B.C. men have gone pansy," he stated, with fire in his eye. "I visit the campus, and what do I observe? Callow youths whose god is the razor, smooth-shaven chins whose utter nakedness is in itself an obscenity. Where are the fine, firm, luxuriant, bushy beards that stamp a man as, well, as a man? Why, I remember when

Toronto Chemical Association Meeting

The first Industrial Meeting of the Toronto Chemical Association will be held on Thursday, November 9th at 8 p.m. in the large lecture room of the Chemistry Building, University of Toronto, on the subject "The Practical Application of Hydrogen Ion Measurements in Industry". Following a short paper on "The Theory of Hydrogen Ion Measurements" presented by a member of the staff in Chemistry, several members of the Association who are engaged in plant control will discuss and demonstrate the apparatus in their plants. These speakers will endeavour to show the advantage of such measurements over the estimations of titratable acidity.

Students in Chemistry or Chemical Engineering are invited to attend this meeting.

THREE THOUSAND ATTEND

By B. J. McGuire

"It is better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all," is the philosophy expounded by Happy Day and King Clancy, popular Maple Leaf hockey players. They should know. They did both last night. These two recent additions to the great fraternity of the ball and chain, together with a number of similarly situated brethren, representing the Newlyweds of the Maple Leaf Hockey Club clashed last night with the Marlboro Alumni of the same club, and the Newlyweds lost. Six to four was the balance in favour of Ace Bailey's Marlboro Grads when the final whistle went last night.

Thirteen thousand paid admissions to see the Leafs in action for the first time, and that thirteen thousand admissions represents the difference between comfort and misery to countless underprivileged children and needy families who are facing the winter in a destitute condition. And for all this the Kiwanis Club is responsible. This club is an organisation of professional and business men who give generously of their time and means to improve conditions of needy and underprivileged children. Through their efforts many boys have been given a new lease on life, an education, a job, and all that it means. This club received splendid support in their work from the Maple Leaf Gardens, the Maple Leaf Hockey Club and the paying public.

In contributing to this worthy cause the patrons let themselves in for a pleasant evening of entertainment. The

FLENLEY GIVES OPINION

War not Considered Imminent in Europe by Professor

"In my opinion, Germany could have accomplished her objective more easily by remaining in the League," Professor Flenley stated yesterday when interviewed by The Varsity. "Especially at a time when she was beginning to receive a more sympathetic attitude from the other nations. However, time alone will tell whether Germany will be able to accomplish the same result by this more defiant and antagonistic method."

Mr. Flenley was of the opinion that Hitler's internal policy has affected the international question and produced an adverse attitude amongst the other European nations, especially in France where the fear of war has affected her attitude. In regard to the Hitler revolution, Mr. Flenley was in sympathy with Germany's pre-revolutionary condition and with the apparent improvement Hitler has made in the unemployment condition, but was disappointed that he had clouded the issue by his extreme terrorising methods.

"The Treaty of Versailles has come in for more criticism than it deserves," Mr. Flenley thought. "The map of Europe is decidedly better than it was in 1914. The Treaty, being formed by human hands at a time of upset and general tension, with various in-

Inconsequence

There has been for years a certain amount of talk about the lack of interest of students in the Hart House Theatre. That there is a lack of interest is rather obvious and to anyone who has had any acquaintance with the enthusiasm for the drama in other colleges, especially the American colleges, the situation here needs some analysis.

In the first place I must say that I can see very little fault on the part of the students. It is my opinion that it is not the lack of interest of the student in Hart House Theatre but the blatant lack of interest of Hart House Theatre in the student. At the inception of the Theatre it was the rule to produce at least six plays a year and in these plays students constituted a great part of the cast (and for that matter the audience). It was found, however, that students could not keep up their scholastic work and at the same time spend so much of their energy in the theatre. Consequently a number of outside amateurs were called in. That was ten years ago. A great many of these outside amateurs still make up the company, and many of them are no longer amateurs.

Instead of six or eight plays annually there are now approximately three and, worst of all, there are very, very few new people who appear, and college students are rarely, if ever, considered members of the Hart House Theatre Company.

Another point of objection is the quality of the plays produced. Shakespeare, of course, seems to be a tradition, and tradition is beyond the pale of criticism. But what else is being presented? It is to smile to point out that a so-called progressive theatre is performing Bernard Shaw's Arms and

LEGAL OPINION FAVOURS CHANGE IN DIVORCE LAWS

REFORMS NOT IMMINENT

Subject too Controversial to Admit of Immediate Changes

"Legal opinion generally," stated Professor Auld of the Law Department to The Varsity yesterday, "would favour relaxation of Canadian divorce laws. At the same time it must be remembered that the extreme facility with which divorce may be obtained in some jurisdictions outside this country has resulted in a decided relaxation of the moral standard."

Progress along these lines has already been made. Any lawyer who has had anything to do with the previous system in Ontario, that of divorce by act of parliament, would agree that the present method has been a change for the better. Nothing, however, would be gained and much could be lost by any sudden revolutionary reform.

Any steps that might be taken here, should be made very cautiously. However, he felt that it was not too much to ask that the divorce laws should be made equal in their moral attitudes with the opinions of an enlightened community.

"The interests of religion, morality and the law are best served by keeping, in legislation, their individual fields separate and distinct," Professor Auld remarked.

Professor MacKenzie was very doubtful of the imminence of any change in Canadian divorce laws. Reform is not a topical question and public opinion must be aroused before any action can be taken. He thought that the present divorce laws of the

U.C. Freshmen Hold Year Party

The first U.C. 317 year party held last night at the Women's Union was attended by about 300 gay freshmen and freshmen. Music was supplied by Alice Roberts' Red Peppers and Jack Ryan's Collegians and the dancers filled two large rooms. The cosmopolitan nature of the party was evidenced by several vigorous S. P. S. and Meds yells, during the intervals. Mr. and Mrs. Cochrane, Mr. and Mrs. McAndrew and Miss Ferguson were patrons of the successful dance.

P.T. Class Gives Chase to Doggie But Finds Itself a Trifle Groggy

By Jack Harris

Professor Martin (of the wrestling room, not Baldwin House), had a visitor to his P.T. class recently in the form of a small, brown, miscellaneous dog, who came in by the south west door, as all visitors should, but not being met by Mr. Bickersteth, he proceeded to the dressing room via the squash courts, and after a couple of sniffs at the tote-box wicket, trotted up to the gym. Mr. Martin was instructing the freshmen in P.T. in the approved chain-gang manner, of which the dog was an interested spectator. He showed a decided liking for the Forestry students, of whom he expects great things some day.

When the class proceeded to the track the little brown dog started out to show them how to run. To a chorus of "Git along little doggy" he gal-

FRESHIES ELIGIBLE ON DEBATING TEAMS

Have Been Debarred by Tradition
But Not by Regulation

INTERFACULTY EXECUTIVE

The executive of the Women's Debating Union does not wish it assumed that freshmen are debarred from intercollegiate debating. This is not a new ruling, but a tradition of long standing. The freshmen will be given an opportunity in the interfaculty debates and this experience will prepare them to take part in future intercollegiate competitions.

It was incorrectly stated in Friday's Varsity that next year all the nominees for the executive will be from St. Hilda's. On the contrary the Union itself will elect one officer from each of the four colleges, and in addition each college will elect its own junior representative.

In the same article, four subjects were announced as having been chosen for future debates here. This statement was also incorrect. The subjects mentioned are those under consideration of the large Intercollegiate Debating Union, consisting of McGill, Queen's, McMaster and Varsity, for the intercollegiate debate late in November. The tryouts for the big Varsity team will be held at the Women's Union at 4 p.m. on November 8. The first interfaculty debate, between Victoria and Trinity, will take place on the evening of November 15, at Victoria College.

Another noteworthy campus publication makes its appearance on the stands today when the recently formed C.C.F. Club of the University of Toronto issues its vigorous organ "Change". The issue culminates several weeks of work by the club, which already has over fifty members. The paper, although intended to further the interests of the C.C.F. is simultaneously an indirect attempt to stimulate thought among the students regarding present economic and political conditions.

"Apathy seems to be one of the marked characteristics of students at the University of Toronto," according to the editorial. "Politics, like student government, has interested only a small minority. Abstract theorizing about present wrongs does not seem to wake many to the need for practical thought and the militant voicing of their views. Our present government, polluted as it is by incompetence, exploitation and seeming indifference, has proven its inability to meet modern changes with modern scientific technique."

ENGLISH PUBLIC SCHOOLS OUTLINED

Greatest Defect is Probably That They Are Selective

DR. FYFE LECTURES

"A public school in England is a school whose headmaster is a member of the headmaster's company," stated Dr. Fyfe in his lecture on the Public Schools of England in Convocation Hall last night. The word school itself means leisure as it is mainly utilised by those who have time to spare.

Then he proceeded to trace the development of public schools. The first of these, with the essential characteristics of the present day public school was founded in Winchester in 1382. It was comprised of two masters and seventy-four pupils, eighteen of whom were prefects. In 1440 the famous school, Eton, was founded by King Henry VI. Education at this time was confined chiefly to the study of classic languages and the translation of the Bible.

The increase in importance of public schools came in the nineteenth century with the improvement of roads. It was at this time, too, that the custom of sending boys away to school was prevalent.

There was a tendency towards athletic rather than academic ability but this is now gradually disappearing. Many of the essential characteristics of the older schools still prevail in the England of today.

Most boys leave school feeling a deep affection for the surroundings and their fellow students, but not without a certain regret for the opportunities they have missed during their all too short school life.

Perhaps the greatest defect of the English public school is that it is selective rather than inclusive.

HART HOUSE THEATRE

A thought-provoking article on the Hart House Theatre appears in the "Inconsequence" column of this issue. We are glad that it has been submitted, for various persons have approached us of late and objected to the policy and purpose of the Theatre as it is at present conducted.

It is regrettable that there is no university organisation on this campus which encourages dramatic work among the undergraduates. It is true that a few of the faculties have their own dramatic organisations, the University College Players' Guild being perhaps the most vigorous. Students in faculties such as medicine, science and dentistry, however, are given no medium for expression in this field, and no opportunity for development. A university dramatic society to include all the faculties would be a tremendous undertaking, but should prove really worth-while. After all, the University should be a place for the acquirement of other than an academic education.

Undergraduates are proud of Hart House Theatre, but many are wondering why it has not a more important place in student activities. Is it that leadership and executive ability are lacking? Or is it that undergraduates in general are not interested in amateur theatricals?

A university dramatic society, or an undergraduate theatre company, would do much to attract students interested in the theatre to Hart House, both as actors and spectators. We hope that the time is not far distant when such an organisation will be made possible.

With the Theatres

Loew's—

Jean Harlow forsakes her usual torrid role and becomes a good girl in her latest release, Bombshell, playing at Loew's this week. She plays the part of a film actress, Lola Burns, known from coast to coast through the activities of her publicity agent, who is played by Lee Tracy. The film is practically one wrangle from start to finish between the two of them, Lola periodically taking a fancy for marquis, sheep-dogs, peace and babies, to the strong disapproval of her publicity man. Miss Harlow's performance is nothing to get excited about; perhaps she should stick to the type of characterisation to which she has become accustomed. We are here to state, however, that Lee Tracy is extraordinarily good, as ever, and fills his part to perfection. His ingenious machinations to get Lola's name spread sensationally over the front page (which she allegedly does not care for) give rise to a number of very amusing situations, usually resulting in his being hired and fired with disconcerting rapidity.

There is a Ted Healey short in technicolour which presents some lovely stage settings for the delectation of the eye. The comedy in it is terrible, though. A mediocre Metro-tone news reel completes the programme.

Imperial—

Those who like light entertainment of the Maurice Chevalier variety will enjoy the picture The Way to Love, at the Imperial this week. Maurice plays the role of an aspiring guide in the fascinating city of Paris, "the noblest profession in the world." Starring with him is beautiful Ann Dvorak, who runs away to escape from her knife-throwing guardians. Those who like Maurice Chevalier will like The Way to Love.

Correspondence

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

THE CLASS PARTY

To the Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:
To date three letters have been printed in the correspondence column dealing with the 377 class party. The first, signed "Observer", criticised the party. The second and third, signed "A Loyal Vic Frosh", and "A Frosh" respectively, criticised the "Observer". I have been accused, in turn, of having written the first, second, third and even all three of the letters. Now, why would I do that? If I had felt a sudden urge to break down and tell you all I thought about the party, I certainly would have written in much the same vein as did Observer, although I do think I could have found a more original alias to hide behind. That stag line did look bad, and some of the girls were not even escorted in to supper.

But please tell all your gentle readers that I didn't write any of the previous letters, and that my correspondence is already too heavy to include you in it with such frequency.

Jerry Anglin, Vic 377.
A Loyal and Observant Frosh.

The stage show, Harmony in Rhythm is above the ordinary. One of the best juggling acts we have seen is on the bill, as well as some excellent pantomime clowning. By way of diversion there is an act of effective adagio work, and some real harmony from a feminine trio of crooners. The vaudeville is really enjoyable.

The news reel shows Varsity being defeated by Queen's, if you care for that sort of thing.

Art, Music and Drama

The Royal Alexandra

Sidney Howard's The Late Christopher Bean, starring Pauline Lord at the Royal Alexandra, is a comedy of the finest type. From the opening lines of the first act to the hilarious finale it kept the audience last night continually alert and responsive. There were not the sudden outbursts of semi-hysterical laughter which marks the success of the ordinary farce comedy, but there was instead a feeling that the audience was drinking in every detail of the play's rather subtle humour.

As a matter of fact, New York and London critics to the contrary notwithstanding I don't think you can call The Late Christopher Bean a farce at all. Farce depends on the precipitation of characters, who are usually caricatures of real life, into one absurd situation after another. Its appeal is just one step above slapstick. We at farce in the same spirit as we laugh at farce in the same spirit as we the street, or slipping on a banana-peel.

In this play there is nothing of that element. The plot is entirely coherent, and reasonably simple. In fact, the details of plot play a distinctly minor role. The play's success—and it is a very real success—depends on the development of its characters, and the events which befall them are relatively unimportant.

It may seem far-fetched to make the comparison, but I do think Sidney Howard has caught something of the same appreciation of genuine humour that is exhibited at its best in Shakespeare. While such plays as The Merry Wives of Windsor are undoubtedly farcical, there is something more definite behind the farce. Throughout Shakespeare's plays you are made to realise that true humour is based on character. Falstaff, for instance, is immortal not because he occasionally got himself into absurd predicaments, but because he is simply Falstaff; his character colours every situation.

In a less degree, of course, the same thing is true of The Late Christopher Bean. As an inevitable result, the play gives much better opportunities for character portrayal than any farce, and makes much heavier demands on the actors. Fortunately, the cast are more than equal to the occasion. Pauline Lord, as Abby, has created a role which will be remembered. It is more than a merely humorous interpretation, it is a supremely sympathetic interpretation. There is genuine pathos in Miss Lord's Abby which brings out the humour of the part in definite relief. The same spirit has also transmitted itself to Walter Kingsford, who portrays Dr. Hoggett. I should advise you by all means to see The Late Christopher Bean. There is an element of human understanding in it which rises above the plot to make it a piece of worth-while drama. And there is also a large element of unadulterated humour. It is both stimulating and refreshing—and I doubt whether you will ever see it presented by a more capable cast than that which is presenting it this week.

Art Gallery

The new exhibition at the Art Gallery shows us a new tendency in Canadian painting. So far the group of Seven have limited themselves mostly to landscapes, and now the Group of Canadian Painters comes out to remind us that this country is inhabited by human beings. While this group by no means confines itself to portraits, it gives us many impressionistic, and symbolic paintings that show a decided movement towards a more personal and sincere work than the long-used formula of the Group of Seven.

Among the portrait painters some are realistic, as R. S. Hewton, whose two "nice" portraits remind one of Campbell Forbes, while many more are frankly modern, and the works of the latter group gives us hope that this new tendency will achieve some positive results. Mrs. Paraskeva Clark's "Woman in Black" is probably the most living portrait, while her "Lone Pine" has real qualities. L. T. Newton has also some most interesting portraits that have character. On the same level—if such an expression can be used in art—are A. Biele's portrait of a farmer, Gordon Webber's two heads, previously shown in the Sketch Room, and Miss H. M. Way's portrait of a woman, which is very powerful. The rather bad, huge, "Girl in a Bathing Suit" and an apathetic little girl in a pink dress, of P. Heward, are really not worth looking at, but then, one can't review the good paintings only. There are two nudes—I wonder why the Canadian painters are afraid to show the beauty of a human body?—one of which, by E. Moltz, who exhibits also some good landscapes, is worth studying. T. Alfson shows us another nude, painted in a very Rubens like manner, that lacks simplicity, while

ESSAY ON WOMEN

In the hope that they read it, and derive much profit thereby.

I have observed an essay written on men, which savours mostly of the cackling hen.

Who, rising from her nest, must always beg.

Attention for her masterpiece, the egg. This egg I fear had fingered in the nest.

And so, forsooth, was scarcely of the best.

Pretentious creatures, when will you get used.

To seeing males, the rulers of the roost.

Must I arouse my deepest power of scorn.

To chide, to chastise or to merely warn. The female sex, that their requisite station.

Is one of calm, but thoughtless decoration.

Must I berate the hapless ones who think.

But sadder yet, commit their thoughts to ink.

And dare to criticize, and make much ill.

Of men—and then indeed must sugar-coat the pill.

And offer it with crocodilean tears. Proclaiming men at heart are rather dears.

Oh, shameless ones, 'twas not cosmetic's art. That made you two-faced from the very start.

PLAY OF GRADUATE TO BE PUBLISHED

W. D. Jones, of University of Manitoba Studying Here

"PLAIN JANE" IS TITLE

The conflict of tradition and modernism is humorously depicted in the highly promising three-act play, Plain Jane, by William D. Jones, B.A., a 1933 graduate of the University of Manitoba in French and English, who is at present studying at O.C.E. Mr. Jones' play is being considered by the Samuel French Publishing Co., for publication.

Mr. Jones has written short stories for his own pleasure, but turned to play writing when he found that they tended to dialogue. Plain Jane, original (Continued on Page 4)

There is an insistent demand for the plays of Mr. Bernard Shaw, his earlier works taking precedence over more recent efforts as they seem to have a more enduring quality of entertainment in the opinion of the public.

For its one hundredth and thirteenth production, Hart House Theatre has chosen his play, Arms and the Man, which the author calls "an anti-romantic comedy in three acts". Arms and the Man was first performed at the Avenue Theatre, London, on the 21st of April, 1894 and for forty years has justified its creation by bringing large returns in royalty fees to the author from all parts of the world.

Its forthcoming production in Toronto will be one of moment. The following cast has been chosen by the director, Mr. Edgar Stone; Jane Mallett, Stewart Reburn, Brendon Mulholland, H. E. Hitchman, Francis Peddie, Alison Ewart, and Lorna Rumball. New and elaborate settings will be used, designed by Edna Thompson.

Mr. Picobac Attends a Montreal Cabaret

The head waiter led the way to a table at the edge of the shiny dance floor, heaving to the Master of Ceremonies as he did so. Coming over, the latter greeted Mr. Picobac with a hearty handshake and led him out on the floor, where the chorus immediately engulfed him. "Ladies and gentlemen," announced he, "we are honored in having with us this evening our old friend Mr. Picobac, the Burley philosopher of Essex County, Ontario, who will now say a few words."

Caught thus entirely by surprise, and embarrassed by the proximity of so many beautiful girls, Mr. Picobac was for the moment at a loss. "I did not expect—nor do I intend at this time—to make a speech," he began amidst applause. "I just want to call your attention to one thing." "Picobac," suggested an enthusiastic listener. A twinkling came into Mr. Picobac's eye. "It's a mild... cool... sweet smoke," admitted he, taking his seat.

U.C. RUGBY TEAM TAKES LEADERSHIP OF MULOCK GROUP

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

O.C.E. gym was the scene last night of three interfaculty basketball games, all refereed by Phil Griffiths. In the first game at six o'clock, Vic Juniors displayed some real ability in ball handling. There is no doubt about it, when they settle down and overcome the wildness of shooting always apparent in early games, they will have a team that will be a strong menace in interfaculty basketball circles. U.C. Juniors held them down to a tie score till half time but in the last period were quite powerful to stop the shifty Scarlet and Gold forward line even with their five-man defence system.

Somehow or other, U.C. freshmen just could not seem to connect on their plays, with the result that St. Hilda's built up an overpowering lead in the first half of the game. The freshmen held together a great deal better in the second half and showed that they have some fine material which will work up into a fast team as soon as they get some co-operation.

Living up to expectations, Vic Juniors took their second game in the series last night from Meds with a decisive score. Combination play by both teams was fairly good but there is room for improvement in the shooting line.

Tonight St. Mike's encounter Vic in a baseball game in Vic gym at 6 o'clock. Turn out and support your team—they want your support and it looks like a good game.

U.C. GAIN GROUP II LEAD BY 4-1 WIN OVER O.A.C.

Winners Had Only Slight Edge in Season's Toughest Game

University College now rest at the head of Group II of the interfaculty football series as a result of their 4-1 win over O.A.C. in Guelph yesterday. The game was one of the toughest of the season with the winners having a slight edge in the play.

The smart work of Harold Cole at quarter, together with the good kicking of Hass were the chief reasons for the U.C. victory. Hass hoofed a single in the opened. They were held scoreless in the second but in the third scored a safety. Hass booted the winners' final point in the fourth. The Aggies also registered on a hoof to the deadline for their single point in the final frame.

PHARMACY OWNED BY JUNIOR MEOS

Superior Volleyball Tells in Struggle Victory

Yesterday afternoon in the little gym, Junior Meds defeated Pharmacy in straight games in the volleyball league, 15-4 and 16-14. Meds' better combination enabled them to run up the score on their opponents, who were unable to cope with the flashy serving of Floren and Wise.

The second game saw Pharmacy get off to another bad start, trailing 7-2. Here they staged a brilliant rally which completely disorganised the Med defence. With the score at 8-7 for Meds, the lead see-sawed back and forth until the score stood at 14-14. Meds were finally able to run out the game.

Floren, Wise and Crockower stood out for Meds, while Milburn starred for the losers.

Jr. Meds — Zarsky, W. Crockower, Shulman, Gold, Floren, Wise, Krakauer, Green, Newman, C. Crockower. Pharmacy — Gardner, Milburn, Ballantyne, Budgett, Maplebeck, Hoffman, Wilson, Bender, McDougall, Evans. Referee — Devitt.

Mulock Cup Chances Fade as Teams Battle to a Tie

MEOS' PLUNGING SUPERIOR

Jr. Meds' hopes for a Mulock Cup championship faded last night when they battled to a scoreless tie with Jr. S.P.S. on the back campus.

The game was ragged throughout, with fumbles playing a major part. At times there were signs of football displayed, but these spasms were few and far between.

On the play, Meds' plunging was far superior to anything that School had to offer, and only fumbles at critical stages robbed them of at least one major score. School had a royal opportunity to mark up a score in the first half when they blocked a kick on the Meds thirteen yard line, and after getting yards on three plunges, failed to cross the line on the three following bucks. Meds' big moment came in the third quarter when Barron and King plunged their way down the field and after parking on the School touch line, they lost the ball on a fumble.

For Meds, the plunging of Barron, Snelling and King was outstanding, while the punting and catching of Davidson, School's portside booter, were particularly good.

Jr. Meds — Quarter, Mustard; flying wing, Spence; halves, Slenson, Gould, King; snap, Allan; insides, Greene, Jung; middles, Barron, Snelling; middles, McNickell, Howes; alternates, Neilson, Graham, Hodge, Miller, Ryan.

Jr. S.P.S. — Quarter, Troster; flying wing, Ballantyne; halves, Jacobs, Davidson, McArthur; snap, Wood; insides, Pettis, Thompson; middles, Henry, Schmidt; outsides, Sherwood, O'Leary; alternates, Latimer, Dutton, Young, Mitchell.

Officials — Vaughan, Shippe.

KNOX TIE DENTS IN SOCCER TILT

Knox Had Advantage for Major Part of Game

FAIL TO PLAY BREAKS

Last night on the front campus, the Knox and Dents soccer eleven's tangled in a 1-1 tie. Knox had the advantage throughout the major part of the game but last year's champions failed to take advantage of their chances.

The Dents took the lead in the first three minutes on a beautiful pass from Linkin to Stapleton. Immediately afterwards, Knox took possession of the play and held it for the remainder of the half. D. Davidson tied up the game just before half time, leading a Knox rush.

The second half opened with some wide open playing, Knox again taking possession of the play. Several scoring chances presented themselves, but sensational goal tending by Cowan prevented Knox from adding to their score. In the last couple of minutes, Dents put on pressure and had the ball well down in the Knox half when the final whistle was blown.

For the Presbyterians, D. Davidson, Milroy and Jack starred, while Cowan, Linkin and Boyes were outstanding for the Dents. Numerous fouls featured the game, the majority of them being called on the Dents.

Knox — Goal, Stewart; backs, Jack, R. Davidson; halves, Long, Rowland, Young; forwards, Milroy, Cuthbertson, D. Davidson, Taylor, Weir.

Dents — Goal, Cowan; backs, Green, Sprott; halves Brown, Mackie, McNell; forwards, Linkin, Mason, Boyes, Stapleton, Valiquette.

Referee — McCullough.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By J. A. Rummels

The Wyelife harrier runners made history for their college last Saturday morning on the Upper Canada College course when they finished as a team, with the lowest number of points in a keenly contested race. Their 34 points were only two lower than Meds' 36, while Trinity came third and O.A.C. fourth. Not only are the runners proud of their feat, but the staff and students of Wyelife also appreciate it. For the first time in many years, Wyelife will go down in the athletic records as having won an interfaculty title. The records go back to 1920 and show no wins in that time. The reason of course is to be found in the low registration, the number of men approximating only sixty and considering this, it is a feat. The members of the team are Gilbert, Kibblewhite, and Huether.

The week-end football results were like the last chapter of a fairy story, at least for Varsity fans. Everything seemed to turn out as it should have. The series of fisticuff bouts that featured the McGill-Queen's game and that usually appear when these two teams clash, didn't serve any good purpose for the Tricolour. Western find themselves devoid of any title hopes and the Blue and White are once more in a position to command, if they can. Some time ago the statement was ventured that McGill would be an end-season factor to be reckoned with. The Redmen have that reputation and their smart recovery this year will serve to continue it. But at the present they are more than a factor—they are a vital threat. The loser team coming second? Coach Shaughnessy of the McGill team is justifying the of next Saturday's game is absolutely out of it and who cares about the powerful reputation he holds, with the press anyway, and if the brand of ball they are playing now is carried into Varsity Stadium next Saturday, the Blues will need everything they have to resist them. Western helped Varsity out last year by holding Queen's to a tie while we defeated McGill in Montreal. This year the Mustangs are very apt to help out again and leave the issue to the Toronto game. Warren Stevens is doing all in his power to shape up his men. So are the men. Nevertheless the fact stands that McGill at present is just as powerful a team as the Blues.

The University College footballers were favoured to win out against O.A.C. up in Guelph and the margin of points they secured in their 4-1 win is only a slight indication of their superiority all through the game. Two singles and a safety touch gave the U.C. men the leadership of the Mulock schedule.

TRINITY HAVE 6-3 EDGE ON PHARMACY IN BOXLA

Losers Falter Often When in Scoring Positions in Close Game

In a closely contested boxla game yesterday afternoon in the big gym, Hart House, Trinity chalked up a 6 to 3 win in Group II at the expense of Pharmacy. Pharmacy tried hard throughout but were ineffective when in a scoring position.

Some time after the game began, Allison sifted in to give Trinity the edge which they never relinquished. In spite of a penalty to Pharmacy, Trinity was unable to score. With both teams at full strength, Burchell took Allison's rebound and made no mistake in scoring. Shortly after Burchell scored again on a lone effort, making the score 3 to 1 for Trinity. At the beginning of the second quarter Allison counted a long one from centre floor. Inch scored on a nice play for Pharmacy, making the score 4-2 for Trinity at half time.

In the third quarter, Pharmacy were rewarded when Armour went in close on Knight to make the count 4-3. After several dangerous sallies on the Trinity goal had been held off, Allison scored his third goal of the evening. In a few moments Burchell duplicated, ending the scoring for the game.

For Trinity, Davis, Allison and Burchell were good, while for Pharmacy, Wilson, Armour and Inch showed up well.

Trinity — Knight, Davis, Allison, Burchell, Bell, Stewart, Grant, McLellan, Martin.

Pharmacy — Wilson, Armour, McDougall, Evans, Inch, McGregor, Gallagher, Poole, Armstrong.

OR. MOTT TO SPEAK

Dr. John R. Mott, who will preach in Convocation Hall next Sunday morning, is a figure of unusual interest to the student world. Since his graduation from Cornell over forty years ago he has won for himself a world-wide reputation as a student leader, author, orator, philanthropist and statesman. For many years he was General Secretary of the World Student Christian Federation, and Chairman both of the World's Committee of the Y.M.C.A. and of the International Missionary Council. He has several times had occasion to travel around the world and has thus maintained first hand contact with student life and thought the world over.

VIC SENIORS TAKE MEDICALS 30 TO 8

Both Teams Display Form in Combination Passing

At 8 o'clock last night in U.T.S. gymnasium, Meds were defeated by Vic Seniors with a 30-8 score in a women's interfaculty basketball game. In the first half the teams seemed fairly evenly matched, Vic being successful in sinking only 4 shots to make the score at half time 8-0. The rest of the game saw Victoria taking the lead although their shooting was very sloppy. Both teams displayed combination passing that was quite good for early season games.

Vic Seniors — B. Longley, M. Curistan, H. Smith, B. Jenkin, G. Becker, J. Fenton, M. Bernhardt, J. Harley.

Meds — C. Small, R. Bourn, B. Watts, J. Lang, I. Wright, M. Albertson, F. Catty, J. Caudwell.

Referee — Phyllis Griffiths.

ST. HILDA'S DOWN U.C. IN BASKETBALL GAME

Lack of Organisation in U.C. Team Contributes to 63-10 Defeat

U.C. freshmen played St. Hilda's in the second women's basketball game at O.C.E. gym last night and were defeated with a 63-10 score. At the beginning of the first period St. Hilda's had a complete walk away over U.C. who suffered from lack of organisation. In the second part of the game the U.C. team seemed to find their bearings and held the St. Hilda outfit down to scoring only 17 points.

U.C. Freshies — D. Colquhoun, J. Roney, M. Elmalie, D. Prowse, Y. Richter, R. Clark, Y. Kirk, E. Kennedy, C. Grant.

St. Hilda's — M. Rose, M. L. Carre, E. Ardagh, E. MacDonald, A. Butler, D. Lambie, E. Wilson, J. Kirk.

Referee — Phyllis Griffiths.

The service on Sunday morning will be held under the joint auspices of the Alumni Federation and the Student Christian Movement. It will be conducted by President Cody. Admission will be by ticket only until 10.50. A limited number of tickets are available from the office of the Alumni Federation and from the S.C.M. offices in Hart House and the Household Science Building.

JUNIOR VICTORIA DEFEAT SENIOR U.C. BY 31-16

Basketball Game Opens Evenly but Ends with Decisive Score

Last night Senior U.C. were defeated by Junior Victoria with a 31-16 score in a scheduled women's basketball game at O.C.E. gymnasium. Play in the first half of the game was very even the half time score being 8-4. In the second half Vic rapidly pulled away from their opponents and rolled in a decisive number of baskets.

INCONSEQUENCE

the Man. I do not by any means wish to say that Arms and the Man is not a good play, but after all, those who are even in a small way interested in the drama have seen that play in three forms. In this connection I quote Brooks Atkinson, dramatic critic of the New York Times: "It will do the theatre no good to truckle to a popular taste that is already gratified more inexpensively and conveniently by the talking pictures. That market has gone for good. Authors and producers who cannot think in any other terms are sitting up with a corpse. Just now the popular mood is for settling down to work under new conditions, conditions which allow distinction as the theatre's only merchantable asset today."

Where is Hart House Theatre fitting into the new pattern of today? Any sign of new life is not apparent. There are new plays that people here would be interested in. A list of plays that college theatres in the United States have produced would be a happy hunting ground for any person to discover plays of already accepted significance and at the same time being expressive of the new trends.

Not only something new in the line of plays but also something new in the line of playing material is needed. If some interest were taken by Hart House Theatre directors in the considerable dramatic work on the campus new and highly talented people could be found.

Hart House Theatre is not, as it should be, the centre of cultural life on the campus. It should be infused with a college spirit, not the rah-rah spirit, but the spirit of creative work experiment and progress. I can see no excuse for the stagnant atmosphere which at present pervades the Theatre. Perhaps no college theatre in America is as well equipped, and surely no little theatre suffers so little from organised professional opposition as we do in Toronto.

Hart House Theatre might well wake up to the conditions around it, and begin to work once more with some vision and with some understanding of the modern theatre problem. The Theatre is nothing to be ashamed of, that is sure, but it is nothing to boast of, and that it ought to be.

terests pulling in different directions, was of necessity, imperfect. But in spite of all its apparent faults, it is equal to any other treaty drawn up under similar circumstances.

Mr. Flentley does not think that war is imminent on the continent although the fear of a war has profoundly influenced France's attitude and actions in the League and in the disarmament conferences. Germany would have withdrawn from the disarmament conference without resigning from the League, he considered, and would have been better advised to do so.

With regard to yesterday's editorial in The Varsity, Mr. Flentley was in disagreement with the assertion that "there has been relatively no moral progress in 2000 years". He also criticised the opinion that pacifism promoted an intolerant attitude toward other countries.

"Although I myself would not join any pacifist movement which necessitated the taking of an oath never to take up arms for my country under any circumstances, I certainly believe that sane pacifism coupled with an intelligent understanding of other countries' positions cannot help assisting in developing a more civilised view of war."

mally intended as a pastime pursuit, was favourably criticised by Mr. Jones' professors, and subsequently attained a degree of popularity among the Winnipeg play-goers, to whom it was presented six times.

"Shaw is a great dramatist," Mr. Jones replied, when asked his opinion, "but his works are not so much emotional as social. Barrie, on the other hand, is one of our greatest emotional playwrights, in that he, with the intuition of genius, has captured the essence of Woman. The charm, the grace, the subtlety with which he develops his feminine characters is almost fairy-like in its fineness."

Mr. Jones believes Shakespeare to be ultra-modern in his character portrayals, and that to compare him with modern writers is unfair—to the modern writers. He earnestly deplores the manner by which Shakespeare's plays are being abused in the high schools. As to whether Shaw's characters could ever achieve as classic a significance as Macbeth, Hamlet or Shylock, Mr. Jones wishes to reserve his opinion until Shaw has been "granted a few years of grace underground."

"Mr. O'Neill's tragedies are impressive," he stated, "but intensely morbid—particularly Mourning Becomes Electra. I count this to be a failing of his."

affairs," stated H. G. Skilling, one of the editors, "that in a university of ten thousand students, only two or three hundred should take an active interest in political and economic problems—students who are themselves involved in these issues. Our objective," he continued, "is to replace the present capitalistic system with a socialistic state. To attain this end, we reject the method of violent revolution because of its theoretical injustice and its actual impracticability, and purpose to use purely constitutional means."

When questioned by The Varsity regarding the incompatibility of a socialistic state and a capitalistic farming system, Mr. Skilling replied that such a contradiction does not exist—that the farmer will be permitted to retain his land with the protection of the government. In the event of a crop failure he will be protected by a system of insurance, and low prices will be guarded against by an extension of co-operatives, and the control of middlemen. A general rise in wages and employment will be the result of the socialisation of the basic industries, which will be brought out by the state through the medium of public bonds.

The publication evinces a strong belief in democratic principles, a "conviction that taxation should serve the social purpose of reducing inequality, that pacifism and disarmament are im-

The state is held to be fundamentally (i.e. idealistically) an institution existing primarily for the welfare of the individual, and not, (as is at present held in Canada and other countries) an organic personality for whose perpetuity the individual is required to immolate himself and his goods.

Mr. Skilling informed The Varsity that another meeting of the C. C. F. Club will be held at the end of this month and it is hoped that Mr. Woods-worth will be present at that time in order to address the members.

economic recovery is made more difficult by the feeling of insecurity.

Due to Professor MacKenzie's delay in arriving, Mr. Leo Malania, a Russian student at Varsity, spoke for a short time to the club. He explained the Ralep and its control over Russian literature in the past few years. Since it has been recently abolished Mr. Malania said that we may look for a change in Russian literature.

An informal discussion on problems of the British Empire and other countries concluded the more serious part of the evening.

PENAL INSTITUTIONS NOT AIMED TO PUNISH

work in the open was the method to take all the bravado out of the youthful offenders against the law.

"The crime wave in Ontario reached its peak in 1929," said Mr. Challies. "In that year there were 641 convictions per 100,000 of population in the province, whereas up to August of this year there were only some 423 per 100,000 of population." This decrease the speaker believed due to three factors: the very efficient and effective police officers of the various forces, the realisation that our courts are fair and just, and the important work of our penal institutions. "These figures refute the statement that crime increases during depression," said the Secretary.

"I do think," said Mr. Challies in concluding, "that more than ever education is one of the important factors in dealing with juvenile delinquency. We should be thankful that we have so many Christian homes and educational institutions in Canada. Generally it is the type of young person who has had no contact with such homes or institutions who gets into serious trouble. We could consider the establishment of a course in good citizenship in our secondary schools which would instruct our young people in the principles of common honesty, decency and sobriety. That is my constructive suggestion."

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

it may please some sailors.

The rest of the exhibition is mostly landscapes and still lives which leave you with rather mixed feelings. As much as I like many works by L. Harris, and agree with his arts theory, I must admit that the paintings which he shows us now give you more the impression of a process than of a living experience. Besides, his "Georgian Bay Island" is simply awful. On the other hand, W. Weston has painted mountains that are wonderfully living and give you a strong longing to leave the city. True, his paintings may be too finished or decorative, yet they are not his last effort. G. Pepper's sombre "Rocks and Sea" from Nova Scotia is very strong and well composed, though too arranged, but his other paintings are not as good. The Group of Seven is criticised by some fine paintings by F. Carmichael, though in one landscape he rather destroys the fine effect of the sun's rays by his treatment of the clouds above. F. Lismer has a good study of trees, and some of the small works of Jackson, as well as MacDonald's "Sunset" may attract your eye right away.

Lack of space prevents me from mentioning many more works, yet I strongly advise anybody to see Varley's "View from a Window", B. Brooker's still lives and landscape, and Emily Carr's "Mountain" and "Trees". Some others should be noted, yet I feel rather glad not to be able to do it, for I might become unkind.

game had all the colour of a league fixture. There was plenty of speed, hockey, fights and everything which makes the game popular. Buzz Boll was the star of the game, netting four counters for the winners. Benny Grant was also good in the Marlboro nets and Hainsworth will have to step or Grant will perform the rearguard duties for the rest of the year. Ace Bailey and Red Horner were the big bad men. Bailey tried a right hook at the referee and got chased. Horner hooked everyone he came near. Priemay, Day, Clancy, Kilrea and Conacher all showed mid-season form.

SILICOSIS CURE IS NOT OFFICIAL STATES DOCTOR

Dr. Irwin Claims That Press Statement of Cure is Erroneous

IN EXPERIMENTAL STAGE

Disease is Caused by Absorption of Silica Dust into Lungs

Dr. Dudley A. Irwin, who has been collaborating with Drs. Franks and King in the study of a new method of preventing silicosis, stated to The Varsity that information in the Toronto press about their experiments was not officially from the Banting Institute, and was for the most part erroneous.

"This experiment is still in the experimental stage," said Dr. Irwin, "and it would be wholly incorrect for either us or the press to draw any conclusion from the work which we have done."

Silicosis is a disease caused by the absorption into the lungs of silica dust, to which workers occupied in crushing, cutting or grinding stone and rock are subject. The disease is not necessarily fatal, but it has severe disabling effects, and is recognised by the Ontario Workmen's Compensation Act. Dr. Irwin promised complete information to The Varsity when the experiment was complete.

Inconsequence

No longer is it possible to say as regards politics, "We must be broad-minded", or "We must be tolerant". This was only possible in the age of Laissez-Faire of the last century before the Capitalist System showed signs of cracking. In the twentieth century, the Age of Monopoly Capitalism, only by repressive measures to lower the working-class standards of living, can Capitalism underpin its tottering structure.

No longer is it possible to say that "England is different", or "Canada is different", or "Violent measures do not suit the Anglo-Saxon temperament". It is not a question of national temperaments but of the inevitable course of history. In the next few years those who doubt this will be swept along like their prototypes in Germany and Russia. Country after country is making its choice. While the Russian people have had the courage to break with all the old traditions and build a new order, in other countries Fascism is bringing every possible measure of violence in order to prolong the time before the oppressed classes rise to the top. When other methods fail Fascism can (or thinks it can) preserve the old order a little longer by plunging the world into the bloodiest war it has yet known.

Italy and Germany are already openly Fascist. Austria, Japan and the United States are approaching it more rapidly every day. For what else is the N.R.A.? Every day the administrators need to bring more repressive measures against the working-class. "Prosperity" means nothing more than increased profits for the capitalists. Profits can only increase when prices are rising faster than wages, i.e., when the general standard of living is falling.

And what of England? Mosley's Party grows, but there are more significant signs than this. At the recent conference of the Conservative Party one-third of those present voted for a "National Policy" and demanded enormously increased armaments, with

DR. EHREMANN-EWART SPEAKS ON AUSTRIA

Declares Unemployment is a Very Serious Problem in Austria

IS A REPUBLIC

"Although I have been in Canada for only a few weeks, and your large country is strange to me, I feel perfectly at home amongst this group of students," said Dr. Ehrmann-Ewart to the Commerce Club yesterday. The speaker is a native of Austria and spoke generally on conditions in that country.

Austria-Hungary before the war was a large nation for Europe with 55 million inhabitants, but by the Treaty of St. Germaine, Austria lost three quarters of her territory. Her present population is only about six and a half millions.

The unemployment problem is very serious and there is little or no organisation of relief. There have been as many as 400,000 unemployed out of the population of six and a half million. Relief is administered in the form of a dole amounting to approximately six Canadian dollars a week. While a single man might comfortably live on this, the situation for a family of four or five is often very serious.

SCHOOL MAGAZINES GET GOOD ADVICE

H. S. Editors to Exchange News, Views with Improvements as Goal

LOU MARSH TO SPEAK

The High School Editors' Convention on Nov. 17th and 18th will be opened by Canon Cody, Miss Helen McKee, president of Sigma Phi, told The Varsity. The department of University Extension will co-operate as usual with the women's journalistic fraternity in sponsoring the convention. For two days editors of high school publications will be in the city attending lectures and discussion groups on all phases of journalism. Lou Marsh will speak on sports writing, Stewart Thompson of Bridgen's, Ltd., on magazine make-up. Varsity students are invited to these meetings in Convocation Hall.

On Friday afternoon delegates will be given the opportunity to visit McLean's and Bridgen's, the engravers. In the evening they will be entertained at a banquet in Eaton's Round Room. On Saturday morning there will be more speakers and reports from the group discussions. A theatre party or a rugby game in the afternoon will end the conference.

High school teachers and Bridgen's say that there is no comparison between the magazines brought out in secondary schools now and those produced before the yearly conventions were organised. They show definite improvement in material, make-up and printing. There is keen competition for the four trophies, the Star trophy for make-up, the short story prize, the shield for cover design and the Dent trophy.

UNIVERSITY DRAMATICS IS TOPIC OF GREAT INTEREST ON CAMPUS

Students Claim Criticism of "Inconsequence" is Justified

STUDENT TALENT NOT USED

Students Should be Given Parts in Hart House Plays is Cry

In the opinion of the executives of dramatic societies around the campus, the criticism levelled by Inconsequence in yesterday's Varsity against the present policy of the Hart House Theatre is largely justified.

"The theatre management," said Robin Godfrey of the U.C. Players' Guild, "should be on the lookout for new talent in both the local and outside dramatic societies. As it is, the Hart House Theatre is becoming more and more a repertory house rather than an experimental one, as it should be. Of course, granted that the circumstances do exist as Inconsequence has outlined them, it must not be forgotten that Mr. Stone has considerable (Continued on Page 3)

A floor show arranged by Mel Keay, including Randolph Crowe's famous impersonation of Mae West, will be the feature of the Triennial Homecoming Dance to be held at Hart House on Friday, November 10, at 9.30. Other acts in the show, as announced by the Alumni Federation, are Mel Keay and Charlotte Cotter in "A Bicycle Built for Two"; and Frances Rostance in "Hope Deferred".

The music will be provided by Murray Griss' well-known orchestra and a sufficient number of dance places will be opened to accommodate all dancers comfortably.

Co-eds View With Fear Raising of Beards Mention of Growths Almost Bring Tears

To beard or not to beard? Some of Varsity's men smile tolerantly at the hair-raising antics of their brothers in British Columbia, while co-eds shrink back in horror at the thought. Tantalising pictures take form in many a feminine imagination, and happy, indolent plans spring full-grown to many a masculine mind.

A beard! Labouring collegians, fuming over razors and cut clins, here is the solution to your problem! A distinguished growth—bought at no cost and with no effort—surely the picture is intriguing to those of you who chafe at the frequent fussing about "the crop that never fails."

But what of the women on the campus? Are they content to watch the men flourish forth in bushy splendour of variegated hues? Will they stand by through the painful period of early growth and development? The answer is one unmistakable "NO!"

"The prospect is very amusing," says Jane Luvers, "but rather messy." And so say all. Wild images of beards galloping in the breeze of fuzzy cheeks and bawky chins blotting themselves on the view as a cloud on the landscape are in every co-ed's mind. Thoughts of youthful friends converted to matured he-men seem rather forbidding—like the relics of a barbarically virile past.

Helen Lieber confessed that she is fascinated by the possibilities the idea presents. "I should think it would be rather interesting," she declared, then added, "in moderation, of course." If the plan were tried at Toronto, rather surprising results might be obtained, she claimed. Her own preference would be the Van Dyke.

Anne Henrick was very emphatic in her declaration that it was "A crazy idea!" and described a few choice specimens of beards which had aroused uncontrollable impulses to laugh each time she encountered them. "It's rather a shock to have a young face thrust in view, with the incongruous frame of fuzz around it."

Several of the co-eds were frankly cynical. "How can our youthful freshmen get beards?" queried Fanny Goldhart. "With some of them it's still a physical impossibility."

In the meantime frenzied pictures of Varsity men keep popping into our minds. One bright miss in II Modems concocted the colourful fancy of "patriotism" at its extreme—that of "dying beards" in college colours. We are still struck by the awful potentialities of flaming crimson beards and snow-white moustaches.

CURRIE TO SPEAK ON MEMORIAL DAY

Victoria College Music Club to Lead Singing Again

The Service of Remembrance will be held before the Soldiers' Tower at 10.52 on Saturday, November 11. The C.O.T.C. band will be present and the singing will be led by the Victoria College Music Club. The short address will be delivered by Sir Arthur Currie, G.C.M.G., K.C.B.

The service is held to do honour to those men who made the great sacrifice in the Great War, who gave their lives for their country and for their country's ideals. The prayer suggested for the Two Minutes' Silence is: "In grateful remembrance of those who made the great sacrifice, O Lord, (Continued on Page 4)

Dry Law Nears End In United States

Repeal of the 18th amendment in the United States was almost a certainty this morning with the news that Utah, Ohio, and Pennsylvania had almost definitely voted for repeal, and if these three states follow the course they took at the outset they will complete the total of thirty-six states that are necessary for the repeal of the thirteen-year-old dry law.

A surprising feature of the day's returns was the fact that North and South Carolina had taken a definite stand against repeal and they are the only two states that have so far expressed their desire for the retention of the Eighteenth Amendment.

In New York City, Fiorello H. La Guardia, Fusionist candidate for Mayor, was elected by a plurality of probably 200,000 votes over both Joseph McKee, the Recovery Party candidate, and John P. O'Brien, the Tammany Hall candidate.

WESTERN STUDENTS WILL BAN HAZING

Collective Violence is Opposed by Committee Chairman

"LEANING TO PAGANISM"

London, Ont., Nov. 7. — Collective hazing, described as "a leaning toward paganism", will probably be barred from the campus of the University of Western Ontario in the near future as a result of the recent heavy damages secured against the University of Alberta, when one of the victims went insane from the treatment he received. R. S. Ferguson, chairman of this year's initiation committee, has recommended to the Students' Administrative Assembly that immediate steps be taken to end collective hazing, and the recommendation will be considered at the next meeting of the executive.

"I do not mean to abolish initiation entirely," said Mr. Ferguson, "but I mean to urge that physical tortures (Continued on Page 4)

DISCUSSION IDEAL IN STUDENT CLUBS

"Propaganda Primary Purpose of League of Nations Club"

MACKENZIE SPEAKS

"The purpose of the League of Nations Society is primarily propagandist, and I am not usually keen on students being propagandists," said Professor N. A. MacKenzie, in discussing the position of the League of Nations Club at an open meeting of the club at the Women's Union on Tuesday evening. Professor MacKenzie added that he felt that the members of a university club should confine themselves strictly to discussion, in order to prepare themselves for decisions in later years.

In accordance with this policy the evening was given up to an interesting discussion of international relations. Mr. MacKenzie was pitted with questions on the European situation as it affects Germany, Austria, Italy, France and Russia. He expressed the opinion that the situation is not at the moment as dangerous as many of the people suppose, but that in the future (Continued on Page 4)

BERTRAM THOMAS LIVES AS ARAB WHILE EXPLORING

Made Unprecedented Trip Across Rub'Al Khali Desert

MAPS DESERT

Grew Beard, Forswore Tobacco and Went Without Bath for Four Months

"Because I like to travel, meet the sons of men and see the works of God." This was the reason given by Mr. Bertram Thomas at Convocation Hall last night, for his unprecedented trip across the Rub'Al Khali, the vast unmaped desert in southeast Arabia.

Not as the dare-devil adventurer, but as the painstaking scientist, geographer and anthropologist did he hazard the dangers of that arid, trackless region, because he said, "It was a blank on the map. We wanted to fill it in." Measurements of heights of land, samples of water and sand, collections of flora, fauna and insect-life, head measurements from different tribes were his trophies. He "noticed differences which would challenge the conception of a single racial entity", differences in language, physical structure and culture which definitely distinguished peoples in the south from those in the north. He even discovered a language which he suspects of being that of the Queen of Sheba.

He grew a beard, forswore tobacco, went without a bath for four months, subsisted chiefly on camel's milk, in fact became a practising Arab. Travelling as a native, he was in constant danger since Arabs have not the slightest (Continued on Page 4)

CHANGES KEYNOTE AT NEW COLLEGE

Teachers College Introduces New Teaching Methods at Columbia

UNUSUAL FEATURES

A new note to college life was added this summer when sixty-five students and instructors of New College, a training school for teachers affiliated with Teachers College, Columbia University, opened a farm community in North Carolina as a regular part of the college courses. New College represented a distinct departure from the usual educational procedures when it opened in September, 1932, and the rural community (a required course, incidentally), is only one of the many unusual features of the institution.

Dr. Clarence Linton, secretary of Teachers College, who is supervising the college in the absence in Europe of Dr. Thomas Alexander, said the farm community was in keeping with the general policy of fitting the students to life situations. The college requires that each student spend a year of study in Europe, and the traditional point and credit system peculiar to virtually all schools has been abolished. Students are also required to spend a period of several months in some industrial experience.

"New College seeks to discover superior young men and women and interest them in education as a professional career," Dr. Linton explained. "Special emphasis is placed on a broad cultural foundation which is permeated by a professional viewpoint. To this end each student is urged to have as many contacts with life situations as possible. ## WANTED: LITERATURE

As you know, Christmas is coming; the departmental stores and the daily newspapers will soon begin to inform the world at large that the number of shopping days is slowly decreasing. This, contrary to general expectations, is not a gentle reminder that the more scholarly aspect of university life receive more attention but an announcement that The Varsity will follow the usual custom of printing a Christmas Literary Issue. Contests are held and prizes given in various departments for which contributions are accepted from any member of the student body.

This bold statement is for the benefit of those people who have found time to criticise the literary standard of The Varsity; it is an invitation to those, and to others who have been more generous, to submit their efforts to the judges. Also, it is frankly written in the hope of interesting the large proportion of the student body who are too apathetic either to criticise or to offer a contribution. This is undoubtedly the time to devote attention to a matter of this kind: time becomes more and more scarce as the Christmas season approaches and since there is no compulsion exercised except that of the spirit, those who would otherwise be interested do not bother about the matter when their time is limited.

In a university of this size it is taken for granted that there are many students interested in creative work of a literary character. Journalistic experience as offered by The Varsity is not always the opportunity that they desire, and this annual Christmas number is an effort made by the editorial board to provide the opportunity that an ordinary news issue is not able to do. Moreover, a reporter must of necessity make regular contributions; this is utterly impossible for some "would-be" journalists. If you are not moved by this exhortation please consider that it is your duty to allow the world in general and your fellow students in particular to enjoy your work,—a selfish plea, no doubt, but one with which you can sympathise.

THE VIC CLASS PARTY

The Editor,
The Varsity,
Dear Sir:

I notice in the issue of Nov. 6th that Mr. Robert Macdonald is quoted as having said that the reason for the large stag-line at the 317 party was the lack of good looking girls. As I was one of those present at the discussion of the question I feel that although this was not an actual misquotation it did not express the true feelings of either Mr. Macdonald or the rest of the party. The words were spoken among considerable other nonsense which was talked by those who were being interviewed unknown to themselves. I feel sure that no slight was intended against those of the fairer sex as I know by first-hand knowledge that Mr. Macdonald's opinion of the ladies of 317 compare more than favourably with those of other years.

Also I may add a word to the class as a body. Remember the over-worked executive can't be universal ice-breakers, so govern yourselves accordingly at the next 317 party.

Jack C. Cronin.

ARMISTICE SERVICE

The Editor,
The Varsity,
Dear Sir:

Considerable talk is heard on the campus with regard to the Memorial Service on Saturday next. Some of our more outspoken pacifist friends apparently believe that it is intended to glorify war, and that as such it should not be attended by believers in peace.

It seems to me that such students are mistaken. Surely the very fact that so many of Toronto's finest graduates and undergraduates were cut off in the prime of their lives is itself a powerful argument against a repetition of the ghastly mistake of 1914.

These men went overseas with varying motives—some from love of adventure, etc., but the best and dearest-thinking of them laid down their lives with the noblest of purposes—to make Canada and the world a safe and a happy place for those of us who follow them. The fact that the folly and selfishness of the statesmen left in control of the world tended in a large measure to nullify the sacrifice surely cannot be charged against those who made it!

No, let us rather remember their names with gratitude and pride, and let us resolve that insofar as we are able, we will work to bring about that happier state for which those who died in the War so willingly gave their all.

J. S. Brown,
I Victoria.

The Editor,

Toronto Symphony

PROGRAMME

Overture "Der Freischütz" ..... WEBER
A London Symphony ..... VAUGHAN WILLIAMS
Symphonic Variations ..... FRANK
Overture "The Russian Easter" ..... RIMSKY-KORSAKOV

One of the most restrained of the modern composers is Ralph Vaughan Williams. He writes quietly and soundly; this is perhaps partly owing to the fact that he began to write at a comparatively late date in his own life. A man whose musicianship is obviously mature possesses a great advantage. Youthful, blatant emotion can never be imputed to him, nor can he be charged with striving for that which he could not yet accomplish. Such charm and power as his music may have is to be accepted as genuine, not as the result of an irresponsible sort of genius playing on the imaginations and sentiments of his listeners. This may also be a disadvantage, for if the mind of the composer does not show overwhelming vitality, or his hand extraordinary cunning, he has nothing on which to fall back. The point concerning Vaughan Williams, however, is that in his music there is no fraud; a reasonably careful mind need not fear being misled or beguiled into finding anything but what is intrinsically sound.

These observations are surely applicable to A London Symphony. The composer himself has said that his work must not be judged by its programmatic implications; it must stand or fall as pure music. A London Symphony probably stands. It is a beautiful and attractive work, not revealing any great profundity of conception or subtlety of execution, but nevertheless of real excellence. The last movement especially possesses strength, perhaps not so bitter and perhaps not so terrifying as the programme notes like to suggest, but effective and well wrought. The performance last night was superb; the Toronto Symphony turned out a magnificent job, setting an almost impeccable standard. The orchestra is indeed justifying the high hopes of concert goers.

The other outstanding feature of the programme was the Franck Symphonic Variations, with Miss Wilma Stevenson as solo pianist. But here is the prologue to a heresy: I regard much of the reputation of the famous Belgian composer as a myth. A refined musical mind and considerable prowess in composition he undoubtedly possessed. But I cannot refrain from being sceptical about his celebrated mystical fervour and inner strength. No one will agree with me, so I shall not pursue the subject now. It may be revived later: for the moment put it down as a personal idiosyncrasy. Miss Stevenson played with excellent taste, and showed a genuine grasp of the piano; whether the absence of anything really affecting or musically very effective was owing to the composition or to the performance I cannot yet decide. But for all this, it must be recognised that this work was an important part of a concert of very great excellence indeed.

Hart House Theatre

George Bernard Shaw's popular comedy Arms and the Man will be presented tonight in Hart House Theatre, to run for the remainder of the week. Mr. Edgar Stone is directing the production.

It is not my purpose here to enter into the current discussion as to whether Arms and the Man is the proper vehicle for a Little Theatre company, but as to its merits as a play there can be no question. G.B.S. is always wittily amusing, and for sheer entertainment value Arms and the Man rates high, even by its own standard.

This is one of Shaw's earlier plays, and is perhaps more conventional in treatment than some of those which followed it. It was written before

It appears that there is great activity of high purport in the modest Republic to the south of us. As we go to press the N.R.A. is in full swing. Radios blare nightly with the speeches of Administrators, State Governors and would-be Senators eulogising Mr. Roosevelt and Baby Nina. An epidemic of code-signing is sweeping across the nation. The whole country is swinging into line, and in accordance with the good old American tradition, every time another manufacturer signs on the dotted line they hold a parade to celebrate.

C—C

Even the universities are not exempt. From Denver, Colorado, comes word that that focal point of the higher culture of the West, the University of Denver, played a striking part in the stupendous N.R.A. parade recently held in that city. Our informant is our eminent contemporary, The Denver Clarion, the organ of undergraduate opinion and moulder of student thought. Describing plans for the parade, The Clarion in a recent issue stated:

C—C

"The University unit will be composed of the Pioneer band in their brilliant crimson and gold uniforms, followed by the Parakeets, women's pep organisation, Phi Epsilon Phi and the co-ed equestrienne class mounted. . . . The unit promises to be the most spectacular of the parade."

C—C

It's things like this that make us feel so discontented with the quiet lives we lead snug in our little academic backwater. We have a band, it's true, but what chance have our modest blue and white against the "brilliant crimson and gold uniforms of Denver's alma mammy? And as for women's pep organisations and co-ed equestrienne classes, where are they? With eagle eye we have searched every nook and corner of the campus, with nary a sign of anything approaching a women's pep organisation, and ninety per cent of the co-eds wouldn't know what to say to a horse if they met one.

C—C

The trouble is that we just aren't progressive. Something must be done about it. We aren't so keen on horses ourselves, but this idea of a women's pep organisation is right down our alley. We are prepared to form one at a moment's notice. All we need is the women. The pep will be cheerfully provided by is as broad as life.

"In the farm community students and instructors are learning first hand what rural life is like in the attempt to establish a community life with an educational programme. Here sixty-five students and instructors divide their time between study and work. The community is located on an 1800-acre farm in the Blue Ridge mountains, eighteen miles from Waynesville, and about the same distance from Canton, and approximately thirty-five miles from Asheville.

"Most of the work of the community is done by students and faculty. Students of household arts plan menus, purchase, prepare, and serve the food. All co-operate in planting, cultivating and harvesting the garden and field crops, and in caring for the chickens, pigs, and cows which furnish food for the group. Others cut and bring in the wood, which is the chief fuel for cooking, while some assume the care of buildings and grounds."

The tables are turned in this informal academic environment. Students and instructors change places, and anyone who knows something that others do not may become a teacher. Much of the supervision is done actually by the students. The community is permanent and will be open all the year round.

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By M. A. F.

The commendation which was given to the U.C. freshmen in yesterday's "Sportswoman" was not intended to be in any way detrimental to the St. Hilda's team. The Saints quite outplayed the Freshies as the score indicates and as one would expect since the majority of the St. Hilda's squad are experienced intercollegiate basketball players. Even the team made up almost entirely of substitutes which represented St. Hilda's in the second half was able to pile up a 17 point lead over the Freshies. Edith Ardagh and Mary Louise Carre deserve special mention; their floorwork was good and their shot scores were high. Keep it up, Saints!

The Vic baseball team, as yet undefeated, overrode the St. Mike's aggregation last night by a score of 13-3. Vic's precision and organisation once again came to the fore and the Scarlets and Gold held their own undisputedly. Billie Fowler came up to her usual standard and pitched a very good game. The innings were short, making the play very snappy. St. Mike's put up a good fight, and both teams battled well, though neither one was given an opportunity to pile up much of a score.

The St. Mike's team showed true strength in managing to hold the Vic team so as to prevent them from getting a greater lead than 10 points, for so far this year Vic has completely outplayed all its opponents. The St. Mike's pitching was splendid and they did some very good catching.

Beth Jenking, 11 Vic, member of the Sr. Vic basketball team, and one of their best forwards, sustained a broken arm yesterday when she fell from a horse. Beth will be out of the game for the rest of the season, and we herewith offer condolences to Beth for her misfortune, and extend sympathies to Senior Vic in their loss of a good player.

BAD LUCK SWIMS WITH POLO TEAMS

Seniors Outplayed by C. S. C. but Junior Tilt is Well-Fought

TEAMS SHOW SPEED

Varsity's senior and junior waterpolo teams swam into a double reverse in two interesting and fast games against the Canadian Swimming Club played at Harrison Baths last night. The Blue senior natators made a vain attempt to overcome a 3-goal lead and suffered a 6-3 defeat while the junior team was nosed out by a last minute goal and lost 5-4.

The senior game preceded the junior and furnished ample proof of the superiority of the C.S.C. seven, both in speed and scoring ability. The Blue team exhibited a lack of team play and thus made no use of the few opportunities it had of penetrating the strong C.S.C. defence. Except for the first minute of play when Davey netted a long shot, the C.S.C. team was never headed and the final whistle found it with a 6-3 lead.

The junior game saw the defeat of last year's T. and D. champions in their initial attempt. Although marred by frequent arguments on the part of the C.S.C. this contest was the more interesting of the two. The junior Blues started off badly and half time found them trailing 3-0. Taking a new lease on life, they came back and chalked up four consecutive goals after Craig had scored for the C.S.C. to make the count 4-4. With only 50 seconds to go it seemed that the game would end in a draw but Craig, churning the waters vigorously, swam past the Varsity defence and netted a beautiful goal.

SENIOR SCHOOL LOSE THEIR FIRST GAME

Dents Score Early Touchdown and Turn Back S.P.S. Threats

DORE MAKES TOUCH

In a spirited Mulock Cup contest Dents defeated Senior School's unbeaten squad on the back campus yesterday afternoon by the score of 5 to 1. The game was well played by both teams, but Dents' early score kept Senior School under submission until the final whistle.

Late in the first quarter after Dents had pushed the ball to School's twenty yard line, Dore took the ball on an end run to score a touchdown. The kick failed but Dents kept School from scoring until the final quarter and the touch was enough to win the game.

During the second half in a desperate effort to score, Senior School passed repeatedly. Two of these passes were completed in the last quarter, but the Science men were unable to push the ball over, and garnered but one point on a rouge. Both teams were hindered by darkness in the last quarter, so that any last minute scores were impossible.

For Dents, Dore, Garrett, McCartney and Smith played well, while Bridgland, Monsaroff, Warring and Glover performed admirably for Senior School.

Dents — Halves, Dore, Wood, Cavannaugh; flying wing, Squires; quarter, Smith; snap, Garrett; insides, Tritte, Apps; middles, Twibble, McCartney; outsides, Mueller, Valiquette; subs, Ryan, Rey, Oswald, Schumacker, Rockman, Demster.

Senior School — Halves, Dawson, Bridgland, Walton; flying wing, Hallett; quarter, Warring; insides, Brigham, Pausland; snap, Monsaroff; outsides, Glover, Waldon; middles, McBride, Baker; subs, Childs, Hayhurst, Ellisworth, Baird, McLaughlin, Fineh, Gossworth.

U.C. DEFEATS O.C.E. IN VOLLEYBALL GAME

Murphy and Applebaum Star for Red and White Men

U.C. took the lead in their volleyball game when they won their second game from O.C.E. 15-7 and 15-5 this afternoon in the little gym, Hart House. The Red and White deserved the win, showing a better knowledge of the game in every department.

U.C. won both games by a wide margin. O.C.E. seemed unable to cope with the superior serving and spiking offered by the Redmen. The embryo teachers were guilty of a number of foot-faults and unfortunately it usually happened after they had dropped the ball over into an uncovered position. Murphy and Applebaum were the best for the winners.

U.C. — Applebaum, Cruickshank, Hazen, Murphy, Shulman, Ley, Klebanoff.

O.C.E. — Todd, Jones, Billingsley, Mason, Real, Stevens.

Referee — Vanderlick.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By B. J. McGuire

A rumour current for some time past to the effect that Lou Hayman would probably assume the duties of basketball instructor received official confirmation yesterday when he was appointed by the directorate as coach, succeeding Warren Stevens, who finds his time taken up between football and hockey. Hayman's appointment is certain to be popular as he is widely known as a player of ability and also as an efficient coach, as evidenced by the improvement the Argo football team has shown under his tuition. Lou also has devoted considerable of his time to coaching the Varsity teams and will go far as a basketball coach. The team will probably play in the Big Five although no definite arrangements have been made as yet. However, they will play a six-game intercollegiate schedule and will also include in their programme a Christmas trip, in the course of which they will meet six American college teams.

The past week-end was probably the most successful that Varsity has enjoyed for some time. Five intercollegiate fixtures all ended with the Blue teams heading the parade. Three of these victories were responsible for intercollegiate titles. The intermediates, the soccer team and the rugby team all brought glory to Varsity. The rugby team gave a good account of themselves when they defeated the Queen's team, who were rated as the strongest team in the East. This team will be seen in action again on Saturday when they will oppose the powerful MacDonald Club of Montreal in the curtain-raiser to the McGill-Varsity game. The game is an exhibition and is slated for 1 o'clock.

The fate of the intercollegiate football title will probably be decided this week. Varsity are facing the game of the season in their fixture with McGill. This team has certainly improved and are now dangerous contenders for the title that was earlier in the season supposed to be reserved for Varsity. The Blue team are so grateful to McGill for beating Queen's last week that they will probably have no heart to step out and mix it up with the invaders. However, if the Red team are as generous with their knees and elbows as they are reputed to have been when they were giving free samples to Queen's, Varsity will promptly forget their debt to the Redmen and go get them.

Don't be surprised if Western beat the Tricolour squad for the second time when they meet Saturday. They are a fighting team who never know when they are beaten. Whether they perform as well on the road as in their own park will about determine the winner of their struggle with Queen's. Incidentally, they have a real stadium up there. One of the most commendable features about it is a series of loudspeakers along the stands which keep the spectators informed of plays. It is certainly a brilliant idea when one considers the small number of players who are actually known to the public. The speakers were all made by the science class. Why not an arrangement like this at Varsity Stadium? It would certainly make the game much more interesting to the spectators if they knew who were making the plays.

The waterpolo teams have been meeting with little success in the city series so far. Three defeats in three starts is a rather weak beginning. However, every game has been close and the Blue team are probably due to break into the winning column any day now. The first home game of the season takes place tonight at Hart House tank and should be worth dropping in for a look.

SCHOOL TEAM PLAY WINS FROM MEDS

Medicos Determined to Win but Erratic Shots Lose Game

MILLER OUTSTANDING

Meds stepped into the speedy School juniors in the big gym yesterday afternoon and came out on the short end of an 11-9 score. Meds' individual efforts fell before the smoother-working School combination. The score fairly represents the play, with School having the better of it in the first half, holding a 6-5 edge at half time, which they increased to 9-6 at the three-quarter mark.

Although only outscoring the Engineers by 3-2 in the final quarter the doctors had most of the play, losing many chances due to erratic shooting and smart net-minding by Miller.

The game was clean, no penalties being handed out although Keys and Hamilton mixed it up frequently. Murray and Hamilton with 7 and 4 goals, and Miller in goal starred for School while Metzler, Keys and Coleman were the best for the losers.

School — Miller, Hamilton, Bruce,

STUDENTS CRITICISE

HART HOUSE THEATRE

Difficulty in filling the smaller parts from the undergraduates because of student unwillingness to take minor roles. He is also limited in his selection of plays by the Syndics, the copyright laws and the necessity of running the theatre on a paying basis. Godfrey did feel, however, that there was little use in throwing the theatre open to student talent if there was ample provision made for the direction and organisation of this talent. At the present time such assistance is not forthcoming.

Miss Betty Lawson, of the same organisation, agreed with the criticism of Inconsequence in general, although she qualified her opinion that the Hart House Theatre does not foster local talent by suggesting that there may be difficulties in introducing new players and new plays of which the undergraduate body may be unaware. Miss Dorothy Walker, also of the U.C. Players' Guild, was firmly of the opinion that there is talent in the society which she represents equally as good as that in the Hart House Players as composed at present, and saw no reason why it should not be given an opportunity to take part in the presentations of these players.

Speaking for the Victoria College Dramatic Society, R. S. Eberhardt stated that he agreed with the contention that some arrangement should be made whereby members of the undergraduate body could be given parts with the Hart House Players. According to him there are many players in his organisation which are as able, if not more able, than the present Hart House troupe. With regard to the production of plays, Eberhardt admitted that the Victoria Dramatic Society had been greatly aided by reduced rates for the use of the theatre. Professor Victor Lange, of the German Department at U.C., voiced his opinion in the following words: "As I see it, the criticism of Inconsequence is pretty well justified. In my three years at the University of Toronto I have witnessed a distinct change in the attitude of the Hart House Theatre toward student talent. I hardly think that today the work carried on represents the true function of a university dramatic centre. Of course, I realise that Mr. Stone is confronted with obstacles of no mean proportions which hinder his bringing about any revolutionary change in policy. I would propose, however, that since that theatre's audiences are made up largely of those affiliated in some way with the university talent, more extensive efforts should be made to co-operate with the young talent of the university, thus making the theatre to a greater degree a centre of undergraduate interest."

CDRESPONDENCE

graduate student from the University of Manitoba, I was distinctly surprised at the lack of truly university-wide organisations in the various branches of fine art. The magnitude of the student body may be a deterrent to the fostering of unity in the particular fields of debating, dramatics and music, but surely this cannot afford as great a handicap as the geographical segregation of the faculty units such as obtains in Winnipeg, where the student organisations operate over a "campus" some fifteen miles long.

The organisations to which I refer are the University of Manitoba Debating Union, the Glee Club, and the Dramatic Society. All three societies are wholly university organisations, and appeal to, and are administered by, members of the different student bodies. The Debating Union sponsors the regular university debates, and the Interprovincial, International, and Imperial debates. The Glee Club has, for the past six years, been successfully producing Gilbert and Sullivan, its entire organisation from principals to stage assistants being members of the student body. The Dramatic Society fosters the Faculty One-Act Plays in the fall, and the University Play in the spring. The Faculty One-Act Plays were started some ten or twelve years ago, and consisted of three one-act plays given in one evening by three separate faculty dramatic clubs, the original object being to develop talent which might be used in producing the major play in the spring session.

I might be said that considerable interest has been evidenced in the One-Act Plays, so that three years ago the number of faculty dramatic clubs participating was raised to five, and the next year to six. The directors of the major productions have been, of course, professionals, but a movement has been started recently whereby student directors have received training in the art of the theatre, and coached by the professional teachers, have successively directed some of the smaller plays.

I mention the above, sir, not in a spirit of blatant patriotism, but to demonstrate the fact that what others can do, the students of the University of Toronto should be able to do, especially since they have within easy reach a theatre as splendidly equipped as any little theatre to be found in this dominion. The articles in your paper to which I have referred, have stated the facts and the problem, and it is my sincere wish that something can be done in the near future towards the organisation of a students' dramatic society. In view of considerable personal experience in this field at Manitoba, it is my pleasure to volunteer any help I may be able to give.

L. E. Jones,
School of Graduate Studies.

CONTINUING! Insane Essays on Our Modern Institutions

By Milton Shulman

ON CELLOPHANE

I am writing this essay because I believe it is about the only thing that is going to save this world of ours from becoming a glorified psychiatric hospital. Yes sir, cellophane is a menace comparable only to those of Communism and the Yellow Peril. While the latter threaten to undermine our social institutions, cellophane is a deliberate and diabolical instrument invented by some monster genius to send our entire civilisation stark, staring mad. (I haven't written a sentence like that, since I wrote that essay on "How I spent my summer vacation.")

Do not think that I am trying to be funny when I say this. This article is the last desperate attempt of a man who is now on the very brink of insanity, suffering from that dreaded disease cellophaneosis.

Cellophaneosis is becoming an increasing factor in the huge death rate of our country today. The first symptom of this horrible malady is when the victim fingers thoroughly every article that is given to him. He runs his fingers over every inch of the surface of the article as if looking for a cover to take off. And who can blame him? I think it was a week ago last Monday when I innocently began chewing a stick of gum. Before long I noticed that the gum was somehow lacking in some of those important essentials that makes chewing gum a mouthful for every stenographer in the country. Furthermore I had a most unpleasant sensation of something limp and soggy sticking to the roof of my mouth and the more I chewed the limper and sogger it became until my gums began to feel like something my mother had washed the dishes with. By this time my jaws were so tired from the vigorous masticating I had performed that I involuntarily opened my mouth to draw in a bit of fresh air, when, before it or not, a series of small, transparent bubbles began to flow ceaselessly from between my lips until I looked like an animated bubble pipe. I never saw so many bubbles in my life, and now when I look back on the occasion I must have looked pretty silly since I was sitting in the Union Station at the time staring inanely at the pretty little globules as they danced merrily away. Now if the chewing gum manufacturers aren't going to stop wrapping their products in a deceptive cover that is going to put their customers in embarrassing positions, I would heartily recommend a boycott of these goods.

In the same class are cigarettes that are hermetically sealed in packages that only expert safe-crackers could possibly open. The victim innocently purchases what he hopes will result in a few moments of peaceful and pleasant smoking enjoyment. Little does he know, that before he even gets a glimpse at so much as a teeny-weeny cigarette he is going to go through one of the most nerve-racking, heart breaking experiences it has ever been his misfortune to endure. What makes this experience doubly trying is the fact that the manufacturers of these cigarettes brazenly advertise these cellophane wrappings as boons to humanity. They gleefully point out the sanitation and hygienic security that these covers give us (as if our fathers weren't healthy enough in the days when you had to spit on your cigar to prevent yourself from being called a sissy) and they also proclaim how simple and easy it is to open the new packets, thereby only making you more susceptible to a nervous collapse when you find that nothing short of T.N.T. will even make a dent in that stuff called cellophane.

When you get a package you go almost dizzy trying to find the flap that is hidden where only Houdini could find it and after hours of wrestling, and tearing and pulling at the cellophane that somehow or other has the resistance of corrugated steel, you finally throw the whole outfit into the nearest receptacle and go out and get drunk.

Of course I could mention some of the jokes about cellophane that are enough to drive anyone mad without the added stimuli I have described above. (You've heard of the cellophane umbrellas that they use so that they can tell when it rains, and then there's the proud father who on first seeing his new-born son exclaimed, "What! No cellophane?") But I think I've said enough to get action out of all my readers. If both of you will send a contribution to the Home for Cellophane Victims I will have done my duty towards humanity. I can now succumb to the disease peacefully and without a struggle. I'll be seeing you at the Home!

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

his inimitable stage technique had been fully developed, also before the importance of social problems had been so indelibly impressed on his mind. You will find less "propaganda" in Arms and the Man, and more wit for wit's sake, than in some of Shaw's later writings. Critics of Shavian philosophy may be tempted to reply, "So much the better." That also is a question I do not choose to discuss at this time. But no one will deny that Arms and the Man ranks high in any compendium of modern English comedy.

Musical Concert

On Thursday and Friday of this week, in Parkdale Collegiate Auditorium, music lovers of this city will be given an opportunity of seeing and hearing something different. It is a religious pageant, of a type not hitherto attempted in Toronto, entitled "Saul—King of Israel".

It is being presented by the choir of Parkdale Presbyterian Church, conducted by Mr. H. S. Reid and directed by Mr. Brownlow Card. Mr. Card, who directs for the Canadian Drama League, has full charge of the scenery, costumes and lighting. The price, too, is an added attraction, being only 25c. Altogether it is an opportunity which should not be missed by anyone.

INCONSEQUENCE

The old excuse that England can only keep the world's peace with the world's strongest army, navy, and air force. Those who voted for this were the young right-wing Conservatives who are chafing against the power held by the older, more moderate men. How long will it be before they form a "Nationalist Party" or openly support Mosley?

And what of the middle parties, the Labour parties and the Liberals? The answer to this lies in the failure of the Socialists in Italy, of the Social-Democrat and Centre Parties in Germany. The theory of the Inevitability of Gradualism has been exploded.

When "prosperity" is found to be round still another corner, this corner will turn out to be rather a rock on which the ship of nineteenth century "Democracy" is bound to wreck itself.

EDGAR STONE DISCUSSES UNIVERSITY DRAMATICS

any of the dramatic organisations on the campus, he might be more considerate. Hart House Theatre is classified in the production scope of markets in the United States and Canada as a first class theatre and as such cannot be allowed to play modern productions until the road show rights have run out. To get the rights to such productions means a terrific fight against the consistent effort of theatrical agencies to prevent their being produced.

"When queried about the suggestion in yesterday's editorial that there be a university dramatic organisation, Mr. Stone replied: "Four years ago I called a meeting of students interested in dramatic work in the university and suggested just such an organisation to them. They were rather cool and not much interest was shown. Next year a tentative organisation was formed known as the University of Toronto Dramatic Association, whose executive consisted of representatives from the various dramatic clubs on the campus. Its purpose was to foster experimental plays and playlets when they felt able. The Theatre with all its facilities was thrown open to them at no charge whatsoever that they might use it between the hours of four and six in the afternoon. It started off fairly well, though organised late and was successful in putting across a few plays. The next season I encouraged them to continue but they did nothing. I, personally, did not follow it up because I felt that if those to whom the students had entrusted the responsibility were going to let things slide, there was nothing more I could do.

"One of my greatest ambitions," stated the Director, "is to see on this campus a University Arts Association, which would include not only dramatics but music in all its phases. And such an organisation can find encouragement and a home in this theatre. As it is I welcome suggestions but I Politically, Austria has been since the war a republic. And although Austrians felt themselves to be the traditional custodians of German culture, there is a growing feeling that Austria should remain politically aloof.

Dr. Ehrmann-Ewart concluded with an invitation to Canadian students to come to Austria and enjoy the natural beauties and famed hospitality of that country.

"I wished to make it a point to have as many students in the Hart House productions as possible," said Mr. Stone in answer to the suggestion in "Inconsequence" that more undergraduates from this university be used in the plays, "but I had to give up hope. Students refused to play small parts to get their education in dramatics and we did not believe it fair to the Theatre, to the audiences or to the players themselves to cast them where they could not fill the parts of more experienced players."

LET'S WELCOME THE GRADS!

The Triennial Homecoming is expected to attract a number of graduates to the University this week-end. University of Toronto students have never been noted for sentimental patriotism; that is shown in the fact that the Homecoming is held once in three years, and not annually, as is the custom at many universities. This, then, should be the time for a demonstration of enthusiasm on the part of the undergraduate body, even if it is only to impress the alumni with our regard for old Varsity.

Saturday and Sunday they return to the campus, white-haired men of the classes of the last century, and smartly trimmed graduates of more recent years. Having spent an interval in the world of reality, they return to the alma mater which gave them inspiration and education.

Old times will be recalled as the graduates return, memories will be refreshed, and the spirit of youth revived. We know that the older folk of our family will not frown upon us, as others are prone to do. They will look back and remember, and smile and understand. For youth is always youth, and college days are essentially the same for each succeeding generation.

The undergraduates have not been asked officially to entertain the alumni during their visit, as is customary at many colleges. However, we should not need that invitation. Our welcome should be spontaneous, generous, and extended sincerely. There should be nothing formal about it. Our pride in the University and the accomplishments of its graduates should warrant the extension of the glad hand.

We at Toronto are not prone to wave the Blue and White on slight provocation, or shout boisterously when Varsity is mentioned. We have been accused of being too reticent. Our loyalty may be shown in more concrete ways. Let us convince our graduates that we are made of the same stuff as they, that we are capable of maintaining the fine reputation which they have given the University of Toronto.

Put aside all smugness and formality for the nonce. Let every person in each faculty join in saying sincerely, "Welcome grads, we're glad to have you back!"

as the depression broke, co-operative efforts were forgotten. Tariff and exchange restrictions developed, trade was still further stifled and unemployment augmented.

Besides the bad effects that unemployment has on the individual, it has serious social effects. It creates people with poorer industrial and social qualities. That is, "Unemployment breeds unemployment."

Unemployment revives radical movements, due to the adverse economic conditions that it brings in its wake. The Fascist reaction against Communism is based on the prevalence of unemployment and hopelessness of outlook for the majority of people. Fascism, in its turn, makes international co-operation less likely, prevents the success of disarmament hopes and tends toward war.

tural aspects, and, finally, pictures representing her diverse sports. When introducing the few cathedral scenes, Canon Plumtree said that he regretted the absence of Canterbury for, "I can imagine no vision more entrancing than that of approaching the great church through that small, narrow lane whose houses, as Dickens so aptly describes, bend eagerly over to see what is going on below—and then, passing through the great stone gate, to have the almost divine beauty of Canterbury unfold before you—surely a creation of nature rather than of man!"

"How little they know England who only England know!"—this, he said, is the explanation for the showing of the Everest expedition photographs. This venture was the supreme example of British pluck—a fact easily proved by the almost terrifying pictures showing Everest and its sister mountain from many seemingly impossible angles—some even at a distance of 100 miles. What seemed most tragically significant was that of the ridge on which Irving and Mallory met their death in 1924.

We hold these services to remember them as people—and to remember that we and others like us must not be offered at the altars of national hatred as they were."

The purpose of these services, as described by those in charge of the ceremonies, is "for the great honour of those who died and for the hope of future peace." Most people encountered and questioned seemed quite shocked at the "twisted interpretation of a sincere effort to maintain peace," and refused to treat the subject as other than a distorted form of pacifism. "We have no more lofty illusions about war," said a fourth year student,

Mr. Edgar Stone, Director of Hart House Theatre, was quoted yesterday to the effect that "Hart House Theatre is classified in the production scope of markets in the United States and Canada as a first class theatre." After sitting through three acts of Arms and the Man last night I find it hard to believe. You could scarcely ask for clearer evidence that there is something radically wrong with the Theatre than this production.

It is not a question of picking out flaws in the piece; there was scarcely anything right with it. The casting was, to say the least, careless; the stage direction, if there was any, was insane; there were several weak spots where the actors stumbled through their lines and went back unnecessarily to correct themselves like the veriest amateurs; and the costumes were highly reminiscent of the sort that are doled out for the Masquerade.

Jane Mallett, in an effort to appear young and romantic, gasped and fluttered like a high school girl. Lorna Rumball so overdid the part of the autocratic, "managing" mother as to make it ridiculous. Brendan Mulholland, who was supposed to be the reasonably young and dashing Saranoff, was far too old for the part, and hadn't an ounce of dash or fire in him. Alison Ewart (Lauka), Francis Peddie (Nicola) and Stewart Reburn (Bluntschli) were not too bad, though for Bluntschli at least that should be sufficiently damning; certainly they were not too good.

The only bright spot in the play was the acting of H. E. Hitchman (Major Petkoff). Mr. Hitchman is one actor who can invariably be depended on to give a good account of himself, and while he wasn't exactly the ideal type for the part, he did what he could to redeem the production from the abyss of utter inanity.

This criticism may perhaps be interpreted as just another shot in the barrage which has been laid down against present conditions in Hart House Theatre. It is not so intended. The question of whether Arms and the Man is the sort of stuff that a Little Theatre should be occupying itself with, or whether students should be preferred to semi-professional actors, is not affected by the success or failure of this play. I have not space to discuss that question here. But if Mr. Stone is to convince his public that he is justified in what he is doing, a few improvements are very much in order.

MEMORIAL SERVICE AT TRINITY CHURCH

Lt.-Col. Geo. A. Drew Special Speaker—Special Music Provided

The Ryerson Men's Club of Trinity United Church, Bloor and Robert Sts., have arranged a peace memorial mass meeting for Sunday afternoon, November 12 in the church auditorium, to which the public is invited. His Worship Mayor Wm. J. Stewart is acting as chairman and the special speaker is Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, K.C., A.D.C. Special music is being provided by the Imperial Singers and Lt.-Col. Geo. D. Fall and Capt. R. N. Burns, are also taking part. It is the kind of service which will help you to remember those who have gone on and will make you resolve to do your bit to promote world peace, the kind of service which helps to promote that spirit of brotherhood upon which peace can be founded.

How should you remember Armistice Day? This year as in the past there will doubtless be some who will celebrate Armistice Day by a wild jamboree, but to the more serious-minded it is certain to be a day of stock-taking, a day on which you can survey the past, a day to remember the friends who have gone, a day to remember the living, a day to resolve to do all in your power to promote peace in the world, the peace that "they" fought to bring about.

WOMEN SCRIBES MEET

The first Original Work meeting of the University Women's Press Club was held in the Women's Union yesterday afternoon. Tea was served at 4.30. The meeting was then called to order by the president, Miss Florence King, who announced a new literary contest for members of the club. Several short stories and poems were read and criticised and Miss King read an article by Lady Willison on the short story.

"We're right down on earth, even selfishly so. We, the individuals, want to live. We want to solve our problems—but not by war. That must be out of the question. By remembering each year the most personal of losses, we are kept from forgetting that it must not be repeated."

As we were coming in, one of those dear M.A. and P. students asked us to meet this eulogy in honour of the book that is giving him a great many nightmares.

Two hours later he dashed into the newspaper office and cried out, "Has the paper gone to press yet? I want to make some changes in my story. Am I too late?"

C—C

"No, buddy," replied the Editor, "but you'll have to hurry. In exactly" looking at his watch, "in exactly nine and one-half minutes the waste-paper basket will be emptied."

VARSITY WATER POLOISTS WIN FROM WEST END Y.M.C.A.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

Snow on the ground—at least it looked like snow—and yet we have discovered that all the birds have not gone south. Moreover some have even been discovered lurking about in odd corners in company with racquets (usually in need of restringing at this time of year). And there too, we have seen the odd net being dragged from its summer hideaway—which, when put together, adds up, dear friends, to the ancient and honourable game of badminton.

In this particular line of sport Vic are showing by far the most enthusiastic interest. Two meetings of the Badminton Club have already been held in Vic gym with an attendance of between twenty and twenty-five. The first year are giving the most support and a tournament is planned for the near future, although play is seriously handicapped by the fact that there is only one available court.

An organisation meeting is being held today by U.C. who were successful in winning the interfaculty tournament last year. Their games are held at the Women's Union, which does not fulfill the needs of a badminton club but nevertheless U.C. had some fine material last year and will probably put forth a real team again.

There is no need to get excited yet about the interfaculty tournament as it will not be run off till after Christmas. This is evidently the basis that both St. Mike's and Trinity are going on as, to date, they have made no move in the direction of badminton. Of course, there is the usual difficulty of finding a gym to play in. However, a great deal of pleasure can be derived from the game—if you have ever played you will more than back up that statement—and there is time for some real action on the courts between now and the tournament.

majority in the result. But the party leaders preferred to compromise. Mr. Brockway did not think it possible to achieve Socialism without a bloody revolution, but the I.L.P. wanted to minimise the bloodshed as far as was possible.

In reply to the question why the I.L.P. does not join the Communist Party he said that though they agree with the general line of the C.P. they think that in tactics the C.P. does not allow for the psychological differences between the workers in different countries. Moreover, they lay too much stress on the inevitable violence of the change to Socialism, when the I.L.P. recognises but does not often mention, since it is determined to do its utmost to minimise the bloodshed. The I.L.P. objects also to dictation from Moscow.

"The chief reason why Labour is unlikely to achieve much by constitutional means is the nature of their candidates. In order to raise the necessary cash they have to choose between Trade Union leaders who regard the House as a good club and young political careerists who see a future for themselves in the Labour Party and are rich enough to pay their own way. 'I have been in parliament and in prison,' said Mr. Brockway, 'and men deteriorate faster in parliament than in prison.'"

He said that he considered the 1931 financial crisis a bankers' coup in which the financiers took the opportunity of humiliating the Labour government.

POLO TEAM TRIMS WEST END 'Y' 10-1

Blues Obtain Revenge for Two Previous Defeats—Game Very One-Sided

FIGHT IN POOL FEATURES

Stinging from their two previous defeats, the Varsity water polo team drubbed West End Y.M.C.A. last night to the score of 10-1.

Due to the one-sided score, the game was very uneventful. In the closing minutes of the game, however, the spectators were treated to a rare spectacle—namely, a fight in a water polo game. As he had already played in a basketball game last night, Ernie Goble, well-known West End athlete, wished to show us he was a triple-threat man, so he started to mix it up with Middleboro. To put it mildly the effect was comic, as when Goble tried to punch he unfortunately sank.

Varsity started the parade in the first minute when Baneroff scored. The Blue team then began to swim West End dizzy and averaged a goal a minute. Learie got two, while McCatty, Hawke and Smith got singles. West End were unable to score so the half ended 6-0.

Baneroff again started the scoring in the second period when he netted two in quick succession. Penalties became quite frequent and the game slowed down considerably. McCatty got Varsity's final goal and then Sturgess broke through for the West End counter.

Burleigh, for West End, was the fastest man in the pool, but sloppy ball handling spoiled his effectiveness. The whole Varsity team played well and no one stood out particularly. Baneroff was high scorer while McCatty playing in pivot position started most of the plays.

Varsity — McLeod, Middleboro, Smith, Learie, McCatty, Hawke, Baneroff.

West End — Goble, Holmes, Smith, Newton, Burleigh, Sturgess, Sellars.

TRINITY, JR. MEDS BATTLE TO A TIE

Interfaculty Rugby Game is Fought in Snow Storm

In a close game which started in a snow storm and finished in darkness Trinity and Junior Meds fought to a tie in a Muelock Cup game on the back campus yesterday.

Meds kicked off to Trinity's 25 yard line. A'Court's kick, after two bucks, was blocked, and Meds fell on the ball. Meds in turn fumbled on an end run. After an exchange of kicks Meds pressed close to the Trinity line. Mustard fumbled going through the line. The ball touched a Trinity player and rolled across the line, where Trinity fell on it, giving Meds a safety touch. A Meds fumble was picked up by Trinity and A'Court kicked to the deadline for a point. In the third period Trinity intercepted a Meds forward pass and A'Court kicked almost to the deadline. Mustard received and in spectacular run fought his way out. In the last quarter Kirk of Trinity, plunged 25 yards, and on the next down, Welch went around the end for another 15 yards. A'Court's kick was wide and Meds ran it out. A'Court kicked to behind his line for a rouse. Final score 2-2.

Jr. Meds — Snap, Allen; quarter, Mustard; insides, Greene, June; middles, Snelling, Barron; outsiders, Graham, Hodge; flying wing, Spence; halves, Stenon, Neilson, King; subs, Ryan, McNichol, Miller, Gould, McCullough, Howes.

Trinity — Snap, Stratton; quarter, C. Welch; insides, Bosley, R. Wodehouse; middles, Fraser, Lash; outsiders, McLachlan, Scrivener; flying wing, Kirk; halves, A'Court, Parker, Brennan; subs, Holton, Osler, G. Wodehouse, Seaborn, Millyard, E. Welch, Belton.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Paul B. Smith

The Big Blue team is in a very precarious position. They must defeat a much improved McGill team here on Saturday or relinquish their inter-collegiate title. The Redmen have served due notice as to the seriousness of their intentions by drubbing Queen's quite decisively last week, and the tip is out that "Shag's" squad are going to be harder to take than any of the other teams in the union. Varsity will in all probability be without the services of McGuigge, Copp and Taylor, which is a severe blow. However, Warren Stevens is leaving no stone unturned to have his charges in fighting form. The Blues will have one thing to their advantage; they will be playing in their own backyard, and that means a lot to a team, particularly if they get a little support from the cheering section. McGill will be escorted to Toronto by a host of optimistic supporters, and that the familiar strains of "What's the matter with old McGill" will echo and re-echo throughout Varsity Stadium goes without saying. The Red team is apparently adept at blocking kicks, and unless Varsity present a more formidable system of protecting the kicker, they might find themselves on the short end of the score when the final whistle ends hostilities. Queen's were fast to scent a weakness in the Blues' kick formation in the first encounter of those two teams, and in the third quarter Zvonkin moved over to the other side of the line, making an extra man to charge Sinclair on his right side, where he should have been most protected, being a right footed kicker, and where, strangely enough, he was least protected, and offhand we can think of several predicaments in which we would rather be than to see Zvonkin and Hamlin charging at us with no one to stop them. Warren Stevens has a fine team at his command, and they should win on Saturday. However, there is a stipulation attached to this selfish prophecy; the Varsity student body must lend their unselfish moral support to a fighting Varsity team. In that event victory is assured; the boys will respond willingly and we will match Coach Stevens' wits against the redoubtable "Shag's" any day.

Varsity's senior O.H.A. entry faces the barrier for the first time next Monday night when it plays host to the newly formed Toronto club. The Torontos are composed mostly of last year's starchy Marlboro team, and are picked by many to win the O.H.A. The Blue hockey team is hard hit by the loss of last year's defence through graduation, but the forward line remains intact and is bolstered by a few notable additions. The team is in much better shape than when they lost to West Toronto Nationals a week ago and are anxious to see just how good the highly touted Torontos are. In spite of many pessimistic remarks by the would-be dopsters, Varsity will make things a lot more interesting for the several all-star teams than most people suppose. The forwards are not lacking in speed by any means, and will step with the best of them. The goal-keeping assignment is being ably taken care of, so a formidable defence combination is the main factor in rounding out a strong contender.

The University of Toronto's water polo team redeemed itself last night by outclassing the West End Y in a scheduled water polo game. The Varsity swimmers broke into the win column with a vengeance, scoring no less than ten goals to their opponents' one. Proceedings were enlivened by an attempt at fisticuffs by two of the players, while in the water. The belligerents were quick to realise that the water was no place to fight, as they both sank in attempting to swing at each other; in the excitement of rescuing themselves they forgot their former differences and peace was again restored. The Blue brigade gave a much improved display, which augurs well for the remaining part of the schedule.

VICTORIA SOCCERITES DEFEAT SCHOOLMEN

Victoria College defeated S.P.S. by the score of 2-1 yesterday afternoon on the front campus, in an interfaculty soccer fixture. The game was hard fought and replete with thrills, with the outcome being in doubt until the final whistle. Simpson and Rowlinson scored for the winners; the former in the first half and the latter in the last half. Shaw got the losers' lone tally in the first half.

Victoria — Dyke, Metcalfe, Cooper, Simpson, Campbell, Taylor, Grills, Rowlinson, Cochran, Stuart.

S.P.S. — Mitchell, Kearney, Johnstone, Davey, Bowen, Browley, Maynard, Jaffe, Shaw, Toke, Johnston, Carbone.

WYCLIFFE DEFEATED BY U.C. IN SOCCER

Schuett Scores Only Goal of Fast Interfaculty Game

University College defeated Wycliffe in an interfaculty soccer match yesterday afternoon on the front campus by the score of 1-0. The score pretty well indicates the play, the winners being held closely in check until the last half when Schuett scored a beautiful goal to give the U.C. team their slight margin of victory. Both teams played fast, hard soccer and the rival supporters were given plenty to cheer over.

U.C. — Hamilton, Lancaster, Cruikshank, Newell, Draper, Schuett, Smith, Aldridge, Rae, Garrette, Goulding.

Wycliffe — Simmonds, Crawshaw, Nickle, Geary, Rhodes, Wehnan, Philpotts, Toone, Donaldson, Smith, McKilhin.

S.P.S. WINS LACROSSE FROM FORESTRY MEN

Jr. S.P.S. won by a 7-5 score in a close and enthusiastic box lacrosse game from Forestry in the big gym in Hart House yesterday. Both teams were keen to win and referee Jim Kerr was kept busy checking up over-eager players. Play was not very polished and the shooting was often wild. On either side the whole team at times participated in the game with defence men and goalie going down the floor.

Led by Bell and Caldwell the School men were lucky to hold Forestry to a 5-all tie at half time, but in the third period came back with a rush to sink two more goals, which completed the scoring for the game. Webber and MacMillen turned in stellar efforts for the winners. The Engineers played a short passing game which had a slight edge over the fast rushes which featured the wood-choppers' tactics. The hard shooting Larsson and his teammates, Greer and Heggie, were the pick of the losers.

Jr. S.P.S. — Kennedy, Bell, Caldwell, Webber, Walters, Knapp, Lilley, Sommerville, MacMillen.

FRATERNITY MENACE NOT APPARENT HERE

as proven by the fact that those men elected are both fraternity and non-fraternity members.

"Fraternities are part of the present system, based on class distinction, and if looked on idealistically might possibly be called vicious," said Fergus Tobin. "The question is whether in a system where so many other branches of activity are based on the same distinction, one can hope to abolish such natural segregation of classes," he continued, saying in conclusion that he was of the opinion that the fraternity system would go eventually, but that any artificial attempt to abolish it would be merely harmful at the present time.

Queen's University is small compared to Varsity and the need for the means of closer association is not necessary, thought Bill Goddard of U.C. "Such a statement as that in the Queen's University paper is evidently part of a strenuous political campaign in which any statement reflecting upon the integrity of the opposition will naturally be made, regardless of the truth," he stated.

Bill Stobie, IV U.C., stated emphatically that he would not belong to a fraternity but that any such attempt as was being made at Queen's to abolish them was too narrow-minded to appeal to him due, perhaps, to his having spent three years in the tolerant, broadminded atmosphere of University College.

GERMANY RIGHTING HOME AFFAIRS FIRST

They have instituted a four year plan for agriculture, to help relieve the unemployment situation. They maintain that if the farmer is getting along the whole world is getting along. In Germany today, farmers are protected by a decrease in the income tax. This improvement of the condition of the farmer, is merely a beginning in the hope that it will carry over to industry. Germany must withdraw from world trade to steady its own home problems. Having improved itself externally, continued Mr. Grunwaldt, its work will then have a full value in foreign trade. Some day then, perhaps, the world will thank Germany for making world trade which now shows itself so complex, much simpler.

The meeting continued with the singing of the snitzelband, a song satirizing well known people. During the singing caricatures of the person being satirized were displayed. Refreshments concluded the evening.

liamentary parties, declared a dictatorship and squelched all opposition. In Germany the same factors are evident. Fascism triumphed in Austria, as well, although Dollfus opposes Hitler because the latter wishes to annex Austria. The other Central European countries are semi-Fascist.

Although armament works and General War Office staffs in all countries are working overtime, Mr. Brockway is doubtful of immediate war in Europe. Germany is not prepared other than in aeroplanes and chemicals and it will take her at least two years to build up her other armaments. Unless France starts a preventative war against Germany before she is fully armed, an unlikely development, due to English disapproval, or the Austrian situation comes to a head and explodes, war is not likely to occur until Germany is prepared.

Germany is unlikely to attack the French, as in so doing she will bring England and Italy about her ears. She will probably turn on Russia and so get the support of most of Western Europe and that of Japan. Mr. Brockway concluded with the statement that "The biggest deterrent to war in Central and Western Europe is the knowledge that out of the chaos of the next war is almost bound to result social revolution."

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

poser's genius for both orchestral and choral writings which range from simple but haunting themes to massive and serious contrapuntal paragraphs. The orchestra, where meant to form a rich tonal background in many passages, overbalanced and obscured the choir and sometimes the soloists. The organ blended beautifully and assisted a somewhat weak bass section throughout the concert.

The Adagio from Brahms' Symphony in C Minor opened with a serious and sentimental subject which progressed to complex variations, later picked up by the brass and accompanied by a pizzicato of the strings. The entire movement was typical Brahms in a solemn and serious mood which occasionally borders on morbidity and at other times impresses one as hopeful and plaintive.

The choir gave an excellent performance throughout "The Requiem" in the fact that it was well balanced and blended remarkably. Its style of attack was clear and crisp and each and every individual gave the conductor the best of attention.

George Lambert, baritone soloist, made an extremely bad attempt in the solo, "Lord let me know mine end", but excelled himself later in the evening by his rendition of "Behold I show you a mystery". Enid Gray, whose work was well done, failed to conceal her nervousness and self-consciousness when first coming on the stage. However the programme in spite of its occasional technical errors, was a complete satisfaction to the lovers of Brahms' music.

Toronto Operatic Society

It is a surprising paradox to admirers of Gilbert and Sullivan that the late Sir Arthur Sullivan, whose sparkling tunes and rollicking melodies made music history in the seventies and eighties of the last century, wrote some of his most vivacious lyrics under the strain of severe physical agony.

His physical handicaps were further aggravated by the hectic life he was forced to lead. Concert, after concert, a public appearance in Manchester one night London the next, a provincial appearance the next—all served to aggravate his suffering still further. But in spite of these obstacles Sullivan kept his spirit glowing amidst the agony of his infirmity, and succeeded in giving the world a heritage of merry music that belied his true state.

Many of Sullivan's most famous tunes will be interpreted at the Gilbert and Sullivan revival programme which the Toronto Operatic Society is staging at the Margaret Eaton Theatre beginning next week, Monday, 13th. After months of training under the direction of Mr. Alfred Kidney, a former London and Glasgow artist, and Mrs. Corda Ward Buchner, well-known Toronto musician, the society Stalinist group. It however, was recently suspended due to their declining to agree to conditions and regulations set by the university authorities. Any meetings are strictly forbidden as long as the suspension lasts. The club's supporters claim that it is entirely for the purpose of studying Communism and not to encourage it.

Miss Sally Lunn, graduate of Oxford University and former member of the October Club, emphasized the fact that the policy of this group, which, incidentally, has a membership of several hundred students, was solely for the studying of Communism and not for the promotion of it. Miss Lunn pointed out that the Labour Club, which has an extremely right wing tendency, was the cause of the subsequent formation of this particular group. Such clubs as the Federation of Students, which is Red, the Red organizations in Germany before the Hitler regime, the Cambridge Social Club and the Marx Society of the School of Economics, were among those which supported the "hunger marchers" during their activities last spring.

Though the university and its colleges no longer have separate companies, the traditional connection remains. During the War, battalions and companies recruited by these three famous regiments included many undergraduates of that time.

'CHANGE' RECEIVED NONCOMMITTALLY BY STUDENTS

C. C. F. Club is Considered Valuable Addition to University Life

BETTER THAN "THE SPARK"

Demonstrates What is Valuable in C. C. F. and Creates Student Opinion

Student opinion around the campus on the C.C.F. Club's new publication, "Change" was decidedly hard to obtain yesterday, those who were interviewed by The Varsity being very non-committal. However, it was apparent that the general sentiment was in favour of the issuing of such a paper although the particular issue which appeared yesterday did not draw very much approval. Many persons were found who believed the C. C. F. Club was a valuable addition to the campus, but some of those were not inclined to sympathise with the ideals of the C.C.F. party.

Elliott Auger, III Political Science, thought the general appearance of the paper was unattractive. However, he felt that it does fill a real need on the campus, although he stated that he was concerned about what the paper would have to say in future issues, as most of the C.C.F. ideas seemed to be set forth in the first issue. Compared with The Spark of last year, "Change" is much less sensational and less radical, he thought.

D. R. Trebell, II Political Science, did not consider the paper particularly admirable, though much more sensible and constructive than The Spark of last year.

WHY IS REMEMBRANCE DAY?

This article has been prepared by the Provisional Committee of the Anti-War Society in order to present clearly the Society's attitude to the University Remembrance Day Service.

References were made in yesterday's Varsity to "extreme pacifist criticism" of the University Remembrance Day Service which implied that supporters of the Anti-War Movement were unqualifiedly opposed to the holding of such a service. This is not the case. We are prepared to give our enthusiastic support to a form of service which will provide the remembrance which we feel the dead themselves would wish—remembrance of the horrors to which they were needlessly subjected, remembrance of the agony through which they passed to death, remembrance of the utter futility of the sacrifice they made.

What we do object to is the form of service which glorifies the martyrdom of those who died. Our protest is aimed at those who by appealing to the memories of "our glorious dead" would make us believe that war is noble, that death in battle is a worthy sacrifice. To speak such things is to speak a lie. None knew that better than those who died.

We, too, can remember friends and loved ones who are named among the dead. We, too, revere their memories. We know that they did what they believed to be a noble thing, a worthy thing, when they offered up their lives that mankind might be saved. We honour their memories for it. If we do not wish to parade our feelings in public, they are none the less sincere. Our duty, however, is not to the

POLAR EXPEDITION SHOWN IN FILM

Dr. Cody Pays Tribute to Brave Men Who Risked Lives to

ONE PARTY REACHES GOAL

"It is a terrible disappointment and I am very sorry for my loyal companions—great God, what a place!" said Captain Scott on reaching the South Pole only to discover the Norwegian emblem where he had ardently hoped to establish the English ensign. In a foreword to the film depicting Captain Scott's last expedition to the Pole, in Convocation Hall last night, Canon Cody paid tribute to the high courage and marvellous sacrifice of these men.

They were splendidly equipped with dogs and Siberian horses and even these felt that work was the only fun to be had and they were not far wrong. But besides bravery in facing almost insurmountable barriers, they also had the courage to be cheerful so that skiing and even football occupied their time.

On Nov. 12, 1911, divided into four parties, they set out on the primary expedition to their destination. After covering 400 miles the ponies met their end and thence man-hauling had to be resorted to. Day after day they struggled on, one party after the other being forced to turn back until only Scott and his three men remained. On Jan. 18, 1912, they reached their goal.

Now with hopes blasted they began their tragic return. Only 11 miles from aid they succumbed and Capt. Scott wrote his immortal message, a proof that "Englishmen can meet hardships, help one another meet death with as great fortitude as ever in the past".

F.C.C. CONVENTION AT NEWMAN HALL

Representatives from McGill
Queen's, Western, Toronto Expected

WORLD-WIDE MOVEMENT

Newman Hall is to be the focal point of the annual convention of the Canadian Province Federation of College Catholic Clubs to be held on Friday, Saturday and Sunday of this week.

"The Newman Club is a world-wide movement," Mr. D. A. Steele, past president of the Toronto Newman Club explained, "but we expect for the present convention only representatives from McGill, Queen's, Western and, of course, Toronto." There are more than 300 Newman Clubs in the United States and about 12 in the non-sectarian colleges in Canada. The Varsity was informed, and representatives from these will probably hold a joint convention in Toronto next summer.

The programme of the F.C.C. convention this week will include the election of officers, and discussion of the policies for the ensuing year, entering about the primary aims of the Newman Club Movement, which are religious, educational, and social.

On Saturday there will be a luncheon for the delegates in the Royal York, and in the evening there will be an informal at-home. On Sunday morning Father J. E. McGarry will say a Military Mass in the Chapel. Later in the day Mr. W. J. O'Brien will lecture to the delegates.

The Toronto Newman Club serves as a cultural centre for almost 300 undergraduates and about 250 alumni.

The Last Post

Notes that nearly two decades ago called the students of Toronto to arms for the great conflict will sound again over the campus, when trumpeter Ken G. Robb of the C.O.T.C. sounds the "Last Post" and the "Reveille" from the Hart House Memorial Tower at the annual Armistice Service tomorrow.

The same bugle that was first sounded in 1914 will pay tribute to the memory of its former owner, Lieut. A. Harrold Goodman, who was killed in action at Amiens in 1918, and his comrades from the university who paid the supreme sacrifice.

Since its presentation to the university by the parents of Lieut. Goodman, the instrument has been preserved in Hart House, and will be used tomorrow in the memorial service for the first time.

At the time of the foundation of the society, there were but 12 graduates of the school, and twice that number of students, and Dr. Thompson vividly recounted the story of the formation and early development of what is now the largest student organisation on the campus.

In spite of his seventy years, Dr. Thompson will play the following

On behalf of the undergraduates of the University The Varsity extends a cordial welcome to those graduates who have returned to spend the week-end with us. We hope that your stay is as pleasant as your fondest memories of the days spent at the University of Toronto.

STEVENS' SQUAD IN CRUCIAL TEST FOR SENIOR TITLE

Will Fight to Last Ditch to Retain Gridiron Laurels

SEVERAL CASUALTIES

By B. J. McGuire

The intercollegiate football series draws to a close tomorrow and all three of Varsity's teams will start the last struggle with more than an even chance of walking off the field with a title. The Big Blue team face McGill here in the crucial game of the season. The juniors and intermediates journey to Kingston where they clash with the younger Tricolour teams.

Lou Carroll has already brought his seconds through to an intercollegiate title and the result of Saturday's game means little to them. Lou has built up a powerful squad. He has a good kicker in Isbister, a heavy line and a fast backfield. This combination is hard to beat under any conditions.

The league leading juniors have only to repeat their victory over the Queen's juniors and another title comes to Varsity. They are in good condition and with Cam Gray back in action should have little difficulty in romping through to their fourth straight victory.

The seniors are on the spot. In their five starts they have looked like champions in three of them and like—well, anything but champions in the other two. A victory for them tomorrow will put them into a tie with Queen's, or if the Tricolour lose to Western, the winner of the Varsity-McGill game takes the honours. The team have been snowed in for the past few days and are confining their activities to light workouts in the gym. Copp, McGuire and Taylor will not be able to get in the game on Saturday, but the rest of the team are in good shape and stand a good chance of repeating the victory they scored over the McGill Redmen in the opening game of the season.

The weather conditions are not likely to be very favourable. Varsity have played in sunshine and rain, but a blizzard will be something new for them.

APPEAL FOR CLOTHING

Reverend N. Dixon of the Student Christian Association has been asked by the Neighbourhood Workers to draw the attention of students of the university to the fact that contributions of old clothing will be gratefully received.

This year there is a great shortage in men's clothing, especially in foot gear, suits and overcoats, and it is hoped that students will respond to the call with the readiness which they displayed last year. Reverend Dixon will be pleased to arrange for the collecting of the clothing, or students can bring it themselves to the S.C.A. office in Hart House.

SHAG'S GRIDDERS ARE PEPPED UP FOR ENGAGEMENT

AERIAL ATTACK?

By Frank Gorman

Sports Editor, McGill Daily
Montreal, Nov. 7.—Frank Shaughnessy's Redmen emerged from their bruising game with Queen's in good shape and will be at full strength for their crucial engagement with Warren Stevens' Blue warriors. At present the veteran McGill coach is the one who requires medical attention most, as he is suffering from a very severe cold that has confined him to his house since Saturday, but he will be back in action on Wednesday.

Herbie Westman, the tow-headed kicking marvel is getting ready for the game of his young life. He hopes to show Jack Sinclair that he was really not in top shape when the Blue team took McGill's measure here in Montreal a month ago, on which date the Varsity ace put on a kicking display de luxe while the McGill booters were comparatively ineffective. Since that time "Westy" has been blasting the pigskin 60 and 65 yards with astonishing regularity and has proven that he is one of the real good kickers in intercollegiate circles. In McGill's last four starts he has played brilliantly and his kicking has been the basis of the Red attack along with his forward passing.

Don Young is back in the game. In his first start since he was injured again in Kingston, he played havoc

Game Handicapped by Rough Weather

S.P.S. SCORES ON FUMBLE

Jr. Forestry at last broke into the winning column, taking last night's rugby game on the back campus from Jr. School by 5-1. The game was played in ankle deep snow, with a bitterly cold wind sweeping across the campus.

In the first half Forestry had the edge of the play, using the old two backs and a kick system, while School concentrated on kicking. Forestry came near scoring after recovering a fumble 30 yards out, but lost their chance on an offside on the third down.

In the second period Forestry soon had the play in School territory. Forestry blocked a kick from 10 yards out and Young fell on it for the only major score of the game. School opened up the game, getting a break when they recovered a fumble on the Forestry 25 yard line. Heggie, however, slid past three tacklers and managed to get the ball outside. School got its only point on a fumble and a long kick.

School — Snap, Wood; flying wing, Ballantyne; insides, Press, Thompson; middles, Brunett, Henry; outside, McArthur, Sherwood; quarter, Foster; halves, Davidson, Young, Clark; subs, Jacobs, Schmitz, Hall.

Forestry — Snap, Taylor; flying wing, Young; insides, Hyslop, Stanley; middles, Reave, Kantola; outside, McConnell, Noakes; quarter, Carlson; halves, Heggie, Stevens, Knobb; sub, Dyre.

LET US REGRET

Tomorrow we will raise a dirge for the dead, the still remembered, and the unknown dead. It is considerate and righteous of us to remember the brave self-sacrifice, the courage and the nobility of the manhood of our race, in this annual ceremony.

However, we refuse the issue. We admire the courage of men who do not fear death. But is that the question? Should we not admire, instead, the courage required of them in killing men, a most inhuman, heinous task?

That is a strange argument. We should admire the courage shown by fathers and their sons in all past wars, because of their gruesome endeavour to kill others! It is not Christianity. Nevertheless, did they not show marvellous bravery, to carry out a most nerve-racking duty, all because of a long-established principle?

The men who died in the Great War, died to end war! It would now seem that they died in vain.

But there is an analogy. They also killed to end war. We must also read that they killed in vain.

To kill in vain! It reeks of horrors such as armed gangsters who shoot down women and children in the streets because they happen to be in the way.

There is another point. The men who died for Duty, died nobly. We appreciate that. They died as individuals, heroically, and they have their reward. But the men who killed for Duty—or otherwise, killed in shame. It does not concern the individual. There were perhaps thousands who perished miserably by their hands. Will their rest be peaceful?

When we talk glibly of war, and defending ourselves, do we not shadow the facts? Do we not blind the minds of adolescents, and mislead them from the true merits of the case, if merits there be?

Passive Resistance. We cannot bear the term. It sticks in our throats. It is horrible, traitorous.

But, pretend it is noble. The man with courage to offer passive resistance, is far braver than the man not afraid of death—though not braver, perhaps, than the man who kills even for the sake of misguided principles. He must stand the torture of ostracism, and his own misgivings, because he is not of the majority. Yet, he has a wise and noble principle, a thousand times nobler than patriotism, because it encompasses the brotherhood of the world.

"Patriotism is not enough," said Edith Cavell, "we must have no hatred in our hearts towards anybody." We need to remember that. We are all brothers, we should not be misled by racial prejudice.

INCONSEQUENCE

dead, but to the living, and the generations yet to come. Beverley Nichols, in his book Cry Havoc, has pointed out the insidious dangers of Remembrance Services which are intended to surround the memories of our dead with an aura of glory, of honour and of nobility. The inevitable consequence is an implication that the agonies of war are justified. We who have never known first-hand the horrors of war are too prone to remember its glories. If we allow ourselves to view it through an aura of romantic emotionality, we may find ourselves too easily beguiled into making the same noble sacrifice when the call to arms is heard again—only to learn too late the criminal futility of that which we have done.

We who have openly declared our opposition to war have not forgotten our duty to them. We have not forgotten our duty to them to ensure that their sacrifice shall not have been in vain. Our service of remembrance is the service of doing all that lies within our power to make all future wars impossible. Part of that service lies in insisting upon the futility of war and the negation of all glory and honour which it entails. We would make of our Society a living memorial to those who died, by devoting our best efforts to the building up of a world in which war will be no more.

SHAUGHNESSY GRIDDERS PEPPED UP FOR STRUGGLE

with the Queen's attack, knocking down passes, dropping runners and generally showing that he is by no means all through. His all-round play was a treat and the passes he caught were beauties. Frankie Shaughnessy, the boy whose placement kicks have pulled McGill out of the fire several times, will make the Toronto trip fully prepared to repeat his favourite performance.

Bob Freeman will take his regular place at snap. He has been playing a whale of a game both at snap and on the secondary defence. Sid McMoran and Walter Stockwell will flank him. Stockwell was hurt in the game with Queen's but will be O.K. for Saturday. These three comprise a real stonewall centre division both offensively and defensively. George Hornig and Charlie LeTourneau, stellar middle wings, will occupy their positions, with George Degnan, former Californian and probably Al Krukowski manning the end zones. Lou Olker, Johnny Riddell and Krukowski will be available for quarterback duty. Don Young will be at flying wing. Gilbert Westman and Byrne will probably get the call to start on the half line. Wallie Markham, ground gaining star of Saturday's battle and Tom Richert, will be available for halfback duty as well.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

St. Thomas' Church

A programme of appropriate organ and choral works commemorating the signing of the Armistice and Remembrance Day will be given at St. Thomas' Church, Huron St., Sunday evening at 7 p.m. Among the organ works will be Sir Walford Davies' "Solemn Melody". It is interesting to note that this work is played by His Majesty's bands at the Cenotaph service in London, England, every year. Other works are MacFarlane's "In Memoriam", with choral effects by an invisible choir. The full choir will sing Sir Edward Elgar's setting of Cardinal Newman's poem "They are at rest", and Dr. Willan's eight-part setting of Longfellow's poem "How they so softly rest". The choir boys will be heard in a new Armistice Anthem "Earth does not hold the spirits of the brave" and the male chorus contribution is Dr. Ham's setting of "I heard the voice of Jesus".

Friday Afternoon Recital

The artist at the next Tuesday evening concert at Massey Hall, on November 14, will be Fritz Kreisler, famous violinist. Few musical celebrities are so unanimously acclaimed as Kreisler, and his appearance here almost inevitably assures a full house. To those who have heard him his musicianship and remarkable personality need no introduction; those who have not should miss no opportunity to do so.

Parkdale Choir

The presentation of "Saul", a religious pageant in five acts, by the choir of the Parkdale Presbyterian Church last night, though obviously an amateur production, contained some excellent singing.

The well-known theme, taken from the Bible, deals with the Israelites' choosing of Saul as their leader, his rise to prominent power, the tragic story of his reign, and his death by his own hand.

Saul, characterised by Mr. W. R. Black, is the only one of the cast who can really be said to act, and he plays the role well. The chorus of damsels were obviously not made to dance, but they attempted nobly. All through the production the piano accompaniment was too powerful and rendered the words somewhat unintelligible, but despite this disadvantage the voices were well-trained and of considerable merit.

We were somewhat disillusioned by the music itself, which turned out to be not our idea of accompaniment to a religious play, but a series of misplaced waltzes. Incidentally, we left after the third act.

Contract bridge can mark up another tally for a happy home wrecked, according to information received here by radio last night. Some months ago a New York woman sued for divorce, because her husband's caustic criticism of her bridge playing was becoming unbearable. The couple separated, and the ex-wife immediately started to take bridge lessons. After a short time she became so adept that her hubby welcomed her back into the family circle. Now, however, he is suing for divorce, because her caustic criticism of his bridge playing is becoming unbearable.

GEO. S. PARKER'S FAITH IN A SCIENTIST'S "FOOL IDEA"

Has Utterly Revolutionized Pens!

New Sacless Vacumatic Filler Holds 102% More Ink!

Reversible Point Writes Both Sides!

The hope and despair of pen inventors for nearly 50 years has been the quest for a sacless pen—a pen that would hold twice as much ink, yet without piston pump, valves, or other parts that fail to stand up in service. They referred to this elusive creation as the "miracle pen." And finally most pen makers gave it up as a "fool notion."

So rubber sacs for holding ink continued to be the ruling method. Meantime, a scientist at a great University came to Geo. S. Parker—world's leading pen maker—with a revolutionary idea—the Vacumatic Filler. It dispensed solemn pen traditions—it defied the thousand failures that had turned men gray.

Yet because it began where they had left off—because it repeated none of their mistakes—Mr. Parker accepted the challenge to develop it.

It took us five years to perfect it. Then months to put it through scores of machine-driven tests—more extensive, more grueling than all the human service it would get in 100 years.

Now this great Parker Vacumatic Filler supersedes all other pens in its price class. And there is nothing else like it at any price.

A pen with a twice greater ink capacity! A twice-as-useful point! A twice greater beauty and distinction. A twice greater value for the money.

VICTORIA COLLEGE AND U.C. TIED FOR GROUP TITLE

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. H. S.

And another basketball game passes into history. St. Mike's encountered U.C. Freshies last night and were successful in building up a formidable score. The footwork of the Freshies is not all it might be and as yet they are not showing many signs of a well-organised team. That, of course, is to be expected in a first year team and was more noticeable in contrast to the fast-moving accurate-shooting outfit from St. Mike's. Some of last year's team were back on the Saints' line-up and rendered a very good account of themselves.

The honours must go to Rosamond McCullough though, for turning in a stellar performance. Although in her first year at Varsity Rosamond eclipsed most of the old-timers and sank by far the most of the St. Mike's baskets. Last year she played defence for Sudbury High School which won the Northern Ontario championship.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By John T. Stubbs

"Red" Foster didn't seem very definite last night in making his prophecies on the games billed for tomorrow. About the surest way we know of right now is tossing a coin. That goes for the two intercollegiate games and the Montreal-Argo game too. Western will give Queen's a real battle in Kingston. We would like to remind the Mustangs that in 1931 Varsity gave them the title by trouncing Queen's in Kingston. Turn about is fair play and the Mustangs have the opportunity of returning the gift tomorrow. All Varsity would have to do then to win the title is defeat McGill. How about it Western? You came a lot closer to winning from the Blues than most people know so Queen's haven't an easy job on their hands by any means. Perhaps Queen's is a spasmodic team. Two wins over Varsity doesn't mean a championship.

The Blues will be handicapped with a few injuries but they are not so sadly depleted that they will be weakened badly. If Varsity can score points when they are in a threatening position they should be able to take McGill. Queen's are likely to have an advantage in kicking as Wing does well with a wet ball but not otherwise. Did you know that there were eleven penalties of five minutes each and two ten minutes coolers handed out in the McGill-Queen's game last week and all after ten minutes had passed in the second quarter? Nice clean sport don't you think?

Vic went into a tie for first place with U.C. in their group of the Mulock Cup series yesterday afternoon when they defeated O.A.C. 1-0 here. Now it's a battle with U.C. for the right to enter the playoffs. It will be a bitter struggle too. Feeling around the Searlet and Gold camp is rather high as a result of the importation of two Argo Jr. players and Grady Laing of last year's intercollegiate team to the Red and White ranks. It looks as though U.C. is willing to do almost anything within the bounds of the regulations to get the Mulock Cup. Those same regulations are rather weak in spots. It would be advisable to inject a rule for interfaculty competition to the effect that all players must not be repeating to be eligible. Several ticklish situations which have arisen in the past few years would have been avoided if such a rule were in force. How about it, Athletic Directorate?

The Hart House Squash Committee is inaugurating a new intercollegiate sport. A three-man team from McGill will play three men from Varsity tomorrow morning at 11.30 in Hart House. Two wins from three matches will decide the title. McIntyre, Burrell, and Corbett will represent McGill against three Varsity players to be chosen from Pinivick, Boegel, Uldridge, Draper, and McCutcheon. Considerable interest has been aroused in squash circles over this innovation in sport and it is hoped the venture will meet with the expected success.

but this season she is doing her bit at the opposite end of the floor.

Too bad you did not drop into Vic gym about six o'clock last night to the Meds-Vic baseball game. Quite a party. Just a little friendly get-together from what we could make out. There were enough bases stolen to last so far as to run each other off their own bases. However, the spectators that were there—all of four or five—would probably have frozen but for the amusement caused by people taking their "sliding" seriously and getting right down to it—on all fours. Meds show the effects of lack of practice as it is very hard, in fact almost impossible, for them to get their whole team together on account of labs. Anyway, a good time was evidently had by all.

VIC DOWNS O.A.C. IN MULOCK SERIES

Game Played in Blizzard Gives Score of 1 to 0 to Vic

FEW EXCITING MOMENTS

Yesterday afternoon on their home ground Victoria ploughed through two inches of snow, a blizzard, and O.A.C. to a 1 to 0 win and tied with U.C. in their group in the Mulock Cup series. Victoria scored early in the first quarter, and kept the ball in O.A.C. territory for the greater part of the game. A poor kick on the part of O.A.C. a few minutes after the first play, put Vic in a position to score. After a plunge, and a completed forward pass, Vaughn booted the single point of the game, and put Vic in the lead, which was never threatened for the remainder of the game.

In the second half Vic threatened to score twice, once in the form of a placement kick which was blocked, and again in the last quarter when a series of first downs took them deep into O.A.C. territory.

The second half furnished a little excitement in the form of a fight between Rac and Vaughn. The game ended shortly after this with O.A.C. fighting desperately to break into the scoring column.

C.C.F. PAPER "CHANGE"

C. W. Leask, III Arts, had almost the same kind of opinion to offer. "The C.C.F., through its paper," he said, "has a wonderful chance to demonstrate whether there is anything valuable in the C.C.F. by creating student opinion." Speaking of the issue of the paper which appeared yesterday, he asserted that it contained nothing very definite or concrete, but that that might be due to the fact that it was the first issue.

E. A. Wilson, III Vic, thought that the paper was a timely publication inasmuch as the C.C.F. movement was growing rather rapidly. He agreed with the others interviewed that the C.C.F. Club is supplying something worth while on the campus and he also stated that he was quite sympathetic with the aims and ideals of Socialism which the club is furthering. Information was obtained last night from M. M. Marks that the sales of the paper yesterday were quite satisfactory and that those engaged in the work of editing it were well pleased with the results. Mr. Marks said that of the 800 copies which went on sale, he was sure there were between 500 and 600 copies sold.

Thompson is still actively engaged in engineering problems, and although he boasts of a record achieved by few for his past work in New York on such structures as the Brooklyn Bridge and the city Municipal Buildings, his plans for the future are more comprehensive.

With the aid of lantern slides, Dr. Thompson traced the development of New York from the earliest times, and showed plans for reconstruction and new work involving several billions of dollars, including buildings twice the height of the Empire State Building, airports, and avenues with six thoroughfares, part of which is being undertaken at the present time. A brief discussion of damming the Niagara for power was also considered.

Impressive Scene Enacted

DR. CODY PRESIDES

This year the softly falling snow made the Service of Remembrance at the Soldiers' Tower even more impressive than usual. The Victoria Music Club led the large gathering in the singing of "O God our help in ages past". The happy, carefree voices of children sleighing on a nearby hill did not detract from the meaning of the service. Unfortunately Sir Arthur Currie, whose presence had been anticipated, was absent due to illness. However, the service moved with beautiful solemnity. Prayers for peace (Continued on Page 4)

Down in the southerly portion of the campus there is a hydrant. Exactly one Austin length away is a sprightly elm tree of considerable dimensions.

On Friday afternoon presumably some of the inmates of Applied Science spied the Austin and calculated the mean distance between the hydrant and the tree. Finding that the two corresponded to a fraction of an inch by calculation, the enthusiasts decided to put the matter to a practical test.

When The Varsity reporter appeared on the scene the Austin was still parked at the south end of the campus,

Varsity's Win Combines With Western's Loss To Force Playoff to Decide Senior Rugby Championship For 1933

By John T. Stubbs

What a game! What a storm! What a finish! In a football fixture that will go down in the pages of history, the battling Varsity Blues came from behind with six points in the last ten minutes of play when they were two points down to eliminate a game McGill team on a 7 to 4 count in the last scheduled game of the intercollegiate series. With Western losing a tough battle to Queen's 9-3 the Tricolour are now tied with U. of T. for first place. Kick after kick and fumble after fumble, both teams shared alike in a desperate struggle to secure and materialise on the breaks. Blinding snow and a frigid but spasmodic gale from the east made Saturday's football weather historic. The Redmen played a great game. They tried hard all the way and even though losing, they looked majestic in defeat.

The stars and heroes of the game were many for both teams. Jack Sinclair however, outshone them all. Although being out-kicked in the early stages of the game by Westman, the youthful Red booter, Jack stood out in the final quarter as one of the smartest kickers in the Canadian game. Placing two kicks right on the goal line and one at the posts caused two fumbles that went for safety touches and four points which put Varsity out in front. His two spectacular runs of 16 and 30 yards turned the tide and put Varsity in scoring position for two inside kicks just outside the line that might have meant touchdowns but counted for two singles.

Harold Arupp saved a sure touch when he brought down Westman two yards out after the latter had slipped around the end and had beaten everybody but the scrappy young Varsity half. On the next two plunges Varsity stopped them dead in their tracks and it was Jack Dawson who did the stopping both times with deadly tackles. On the third down McGill tried a forward and although two Redmen were ready to complete it Dawson again was in on it and knocked down the pass.

Bobby Coulter played a hero's part all afternoon. The way he ran back kicks, faking, twisting, jumping, and ducking as he ran was a treat that brought a roar of applause from the crowd time and time again. Henderson's tackling was superb. Keith, Alison, and Bryers, as well as Dawson, stopped many a McGill back from making dangerous gains. Captain Ken Peacock was moved over to middle in McQuigge's play with Bell at snap. The Blues' captain played a stellar game defensively on a weak line and the difference he made partly accounts for the fact that McGill did not make yards once on plunges. Burgoyne, filling Cope's shoes, made several gains through the line. Greco made yards once himself on two successive plunges. He was the biggest punch on the team when Varsity barged through the line.

For the Redmen Don Young was all over and in on every play that was aimed at his side of the line. Westman's kicking in the first half was beautiful to watch at times but in the second he faded somewhat.

A good many fans came away from that game with the idea firmly fixed in their heads that McGill outplayed Varsity and that the winners came through on the long end as a result of the breaks. In almost every department of the game the Blue and White warriors under Warren Stevens' masterly guiding hand showed themselves superior. Varsity moved the yard sticks four times, twice on plunges and twice on McGill penalties. McGill had the yard sticks moved for them twice on Varsity penalties and twice when they completed forwards for a total gain of 50 yards in their desperate last spurge. The Redmen tried nine passes and completed two. Six of these heaves came in the final fifteen minutes. Varsity tried none. Now comes an interesting pair of figures. Varsity kicked 52 times and McGill 45 times, with the former having an average gain on the whole of nine yards. Then again the Toronto student gridlers should get credit for their superiority in handling the ball. They recovered seven fumbles by the Redmen and the latter secured possession three times when Varsity let go of it.

The whole game was a kicking duel with both teams trying to get possession again when the receiver was brought down. It was a nerve-racking ordeal but the Blues capitalised often enough to win and that is (Continued on Page 3)

Varsity attempted 9 forward passes, and completed every one of them! One hundred per cent perfect.

It was discovered at the end of the game that McGill had been playing the entire last quarter with fourteen men but two of them didn't count as they were buried under a snow drift at centre field.

THE ELEVENTH HOUR

The clock was striking the eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month—fifteen years afterwards. A hush stole over the campus. Here and there groups of students hurrying belatedly to the Memorial Service slowed to a standstill as the last stroke rang out. Cars creeping on the icy cement came to a stop. The snow drifted down upon the bowed heads of those who stood to remember, and upon the ghostly forms of the guard of honour. A silent, simple, impressive ceremony.

Then there rang out—not the notes of the bugle—but the laughter of children. Children for whom the day was only Saturday—play-day. Children sleigh-riding on the hillside by the library yonder. Children who do not know—who as yet do not care.

We pondered the thought. Children who do not know, and do not care—just fifteen years afterwards!

THE CHALLENGE TO LEADERSHIP

It is gratifying to find a man of the renown and experience of Dr. John R. Mott expressing his faith in youth. The preacher at the Sunday service in Convocation Hall is known throughout the world for his leadership and interest in missions, as it is expected that the Chairman of the International Missionary Council in Jerusalem in 1928 might be. He is known for his work with the National Council of the Y.M.C.A., and his organising ability in connection with the World's Student Christian Federation. He is known as an author, lecturer, and international diplomat. He is also known as a friend to youth, one who seeks to approach and understand them.

Dr. Mott paid tribute to the graduates of this University yesterday in the statement that wherever he has met them throughout the world, he has without exception found them doing constructive work, attempting to contribute their little to the betterment of humanity. He expressed his opinion of youth in an interview with one of Toronto's dailies. But the real indication of his faith in the undergraduates of today was the challenge which he threw out in his address.

The challenge was to leadership—of the highest type. The calibre of youth will be shown in the way in which we receive the challenge.

WELL DONE, FOOTBALL HEROES!

Congratulations, Blue and White heroes! We are counting on you to display that final quarter fighting spirit all through the game when you meet Queen's—for we are still looking for Varsity to take the championship!

APPEAL MADE FOR COMMUNISM

The seventy eight year old English labour leader, speaking to an audience of 3,000 in Massey Hall on Saturday. The meeting was called by various working-class organisations to protest against imperialist war and Fascism and to strengthen the anti-war movement. The chair was taken by Annie Buller, recently released from Battleford Jail, where she has been for two years on charges arising from the Eastview strike. She appealed for a collection in aid of Lord Marley's fund for the relief of the victims of Nazi oppression and $360 was raised from an audience which was almost entirely working-class. Mrs. Tim Buck was also on the platform and was received enthusiastically.

At the beginning of the meeting the audience stood up in silence in memory of war dead.

Tom Mann was received with a great ovation and the singing of the "International". He is a fiery orator who talks like a character from a Shakespeare play. He gave an account of the International Anti-War Movement and then went on to point out the reasons for war, the fundamental one being the private ownership of property. Under the capitalist system nations are bound to disagree as was shown by the complete failure of the World Economic Conference. Only by a complete change over to Communism could war be stopped. The only nation in the world not in the depths of crisis and not seeking the way out by war was the U.S.S.R.

He told how he had been refused permission to visit Tim Buck in Kingston and described how he was put in prison last year for refusing to keep silent. "No one can stop me saying exactly what I like," he proclaimed. "I don't care a damn for their jails."

Art, Music and Drama

Friday Afternoon Recitals

The artists at last Friday's recital at Hart House were Dr. F. J. Horwood and Mr. Allan Sly. Dr. Horwood spoke on J. S. Bach, touching first on his life and times, and on the instruments of his day. He pointed out that Bach wrote nothing for the modern pianoforte, though it existed in an elementary form, even then. Bach composed for the clavichord and his works for that instrument have been adapted, for the most part very successfully. He described the introduction of the modern scale, and the chief features of fugue construction. He also explained the dance forms Bach used, and later the origin of the chorale prelude.

Dr. Horwood spoke with singular clarity, undoubtedly making plain points on which many music lovers have only hazy ideas. There is much value in having discourses of this kind at the Friday recitals, particularly when (as was Dr. Horwood's) they are entertaining as well as edifying. Following up the addresses of Dr. Wilman and Dr. MacMillan on the two preceding Fridays, this should greatly stimulate the interest in the series which has begun.

Mr. Sly played a representative Bach programme—Preludes and Fugues, dance movements, and arrangements of chorale preludes. Mr. Sly plays with a real mastery of the piano, and obviously has scholarship as well as technical skill. Especially beautiful was the performance of the two Sarabandes and the chorale preludes. The last number was the familiar prelude on Jesus, Joy of Man's Desiring; Mr. Sly, however, used an arrangement which in my opinion is much more effective than the better known adaptation by Myra Hesse. It is significant that the audience requested the repetition of this fine composition. N. F. L.

With the Theatres

Loew's—

Jimmy (Probusis) Durante and Jack Pearl (Baron Munchausen) form a very good team in Meet the Baron at Loew's this week. The plot is not particularly coherent, several scenes having been thrown in apparently because somebody liked them and decided they might as well go into this picture as any other. It doesn't seem to matter, however; it isn't that kind of a picture. The humour is entirely acceptable in a low comedy style, and surprisingly clean. One of the best scenes, about a reel in length, is that of the Baron doing a broadcast.

There is a fairly good travelogue of Malta and an interesting Screen Review. The rest is passable.

CANADA PIONEERS IN FIELD OF ART

"We Need Pictures Showing Youth that is Ours," Says Lismer

LECTURE AT GALLERY

"This exhibition belongs to the stride of the Canadian people," said Mr. Arthur Lismer in his gallery talk on Friday, speaking on the Canadian Group of Painters, a new association which has sprung from the Group of Seven of 1920.

"Canada has not yet settled down like European countries and hence the European style is not appropriate here. We need pictures showing the youth that is ours. Only by experiment can we form an art tradition essentially Canadian. Art is perhaps the only sphere where the pioneer spirit is still alive. The position of the Group of Seven now exemplifies how quickly experiment builds up tradition, for the members of that group today belong to an academic order compared with new work of a new generation. The process public opinion undergoes begins with ridicule and passes through tolerance to arrive at appreciation. The art critic should try to grasp the painter's motive, for he only projects onto the canvas what he has seen." Mr. Lismer then illustrated his remarks by mentioning specific paintings. Sara Robertson has humour, she gives dominance to the vegetable world, at the expense of the animal world, in her study of nuns in a garden; Ogilvie has a romantic conception of woman, he uses the figure as a symbol and does not conform to photographic standards, while the Russian impress of Pareskeva Clark has old world atmosphere.

The Lauren Harris composition of mountains compels a spiritual climb with the artist, his mountains are unearthly and imaginative. He rather rearranges the works of God. As a creative artist Mr. Harris has given the incentive to modern art in Canada, continued Mr. Lismer.

A. Y. Jackson has two characteristic paintings on view. In one he catches the rhythm of wind on fresh snow, and weaves a pattern of snow shadow; while his Alberta study is almost freeze-like—he makes the land pass by him in all its northern colour and monotony.

"Some of these paintings are good, many are bad, but all are interesting," concluded Mr. Lismer.

By E. H. S.

Everything to date points to a successful badminton season. Racquets and birds are much in evidence these days and the game is getting enthusiastic support in most of the colleges and faculties. University College held an organization meeting last week and opened with a record attendance. An executive consisting of Lolo Bochner, Dorothy Amsden and Leonore Fraser was elected. They are planning on some action very soon in the form of a tea and a tournament. With so much enthusiasm displayed in the beginning, the executive is confident that some accomplished players will result.

Friday nights are never fortunate dates for games and last Friday was no exception. A basketball game between U.C. Seniors and School of Nursing was scheduled to take place at O.C.E. gym at six o'clock but it was necessary to postpone it. The game will probably be played some time this week.

Tonight in O.C.E. gym the St. Mike's sextet clash with St. Hilda's in a scheduled basketball fixture. Both teams have well balanced lineups so it ought to be a real game.

Toronto Runners Tie with R. M. C. for Third Position

O.A.C. IN SECONDO PLACE

Plodding their way through snow that at times was up to their knees, the intercollegiate senior harrier runners from McGill completed the Montreal course in the slow time of 34 seconds on Saturday morning to finish in the lead and retain the Little Cup for another year.

Although the race was won by Moore from McMaster with Goode of McGill in second place, the McGill men finished with the lowest number of points. O.A.C. was second; R.M.C. and Varsity tied for third place and Queen's, fourth.

McMaster, running as guests of the harrier union, were not included in the point totals.

Promotions in the passenger department of the Canadian Pacific, consequent on the death recently of G. G. McKay, general agent at Detroit, are announced by the company as follows: M. E. Cook, general agent, Atlanta, succeeds Mr. Malone as general agent, Cincinnati; and S. E. Corbin, assistant general agent, New York, is promoted general agent at Atlanta in succession to Mr. Cook.

Mr. Malone was born September, 1887, and joined Canadian Pacific service in 1906 as traveling passenger agent at Cincinnati. He was transferred in the same capacity to Spokane in 1910 and was made district passenger agent at Nelson, B.C., in 1912. Since March, 1913, he has been general agent at Cincinnati.

Mr. Cook entered Canadian Pacific service as stenographer at Cincinnati in 1907, rising to the position of city passenger agent in that city in 1913. He was travelling passenger agent at Kansas City between 1914 and 1916, and in July, 1916, was chief clerk at the Chicago office. He was overseas on military service in 1918 and in August, 1919, returned as chief clerk to Chicago. June, 1920, when he was promoted travelling passenger agent at Detroit where he filled the positions of city passenger agent and assistant general agent until April, 1929, when he went as general agent at Atlanta.

Mr. Corbin joined Canadian Pacific service in 1916 as travelling passenger agent at St. Louis and became city passenger agent in that city in 1917. Between 1919 and 1932 he was travelling passenger agent at Cleveland and in 1926 was appointed assistant general agent at Chicago. In 1929 he was transferred to Toronto and in April of this year became assistant general agent at New York.

SENIOR POLOISTS SUFFER DEFEAT

St. Kitts Team Administer Third Trimming of the Season

MCCATTY STARS

St. Catharines, Nov. 11.—Bewildered by a whirlwind attack which the St. Catharines team initiated at the start of the second half, Varsity's senior water polo team suffered its third defeat of the current season in an exciting game played in the Y pool here, the final score being 6-3. Throughout the game a fast clip was maintained by both teams with the Blue natators gaining a slight edge in speed, evident in the fact that McCatty, U. of T. centre man, was never beaten to the ball after the toss in.

While both teams played brilliantly as a whole several men on each team deserve mention. For U. of T. McCatty, Bancroft and Learie played exceptionally well, while Cott, Clarke, with three goals, and Lorenzen were outstanding for St. Catharines.

Varsity — McLeod, Middleboro, Smith, Learie, McCatty, Davey and Bancroft.

St. Catharines — Cott, Storick, Lorenzen, Clarke, McGarackle, Pridy and Eyles.

THINKING LEADERS

senior Council, in his address at a divine service held yesterday morning in Convocation Hall under the joint auspices of the Alumni Federation and the Student Christian Movement in the university. The President of the university, the Hon. and Rev. Dr. H. J. Cody conducted the service. A large number of graduates as well as undergraduates were present.

Dr. Mott stressed the need of unselfish and righteous leadership which is becoming more insistent and more imperative every day. His recent visits abroad, he said, have impressed him with the fact that in every country problems have changed greatly in scope, character and complexity, and the demand for leadership that will meet the new "international" age is great indeed.

"The leadership we require must be a comprehending leadership," said the speaker. It must understand the present vast, critical world situation; the greatly changed psychology. It must see clearly what the real issues are. That leadership must see with a steady eye the destructive forces at work and understand the constructive forces. It must have an understanding of the possibilities of human nature and a larger understanding of our divine or superhuman powers.

"This is a time for thinkers, not for mechanical workers. There is a grave danger in our universities that the materialistic demands of the age are being given too large a place in the curricula," said Dr. Mott.

We need statesmanlike leadership, characterized by vision and foresight, by integrity of character, by ability to co-operate, by selflessness, and by a manifestation of love and brotherhood. It must be a heroic and challenging leadership. And, finally, it must be a leadership that acknowledges the lead-

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By John T. Stubbs

Now for another crack at Queen's. We hear from those who saw the game in Kingston that Western didn't have much luck. Too bad that the Mustangs didn't disappoint the Tricolour hopefuls as the Tigers did Ottawa. Official word comes through that the game with Queen's will be played here next Saturday afternoon. Arrangements have been made for a home and home series between Argos and the Winged Wheelers, the first one to be played in Hamilton next Saturday and the second in Montreal the week following. Varsity and Queen's play here as the result of a toss. The home and home games for the Big Four title will decide the issue with total points counting on the round.

Saturday's game turned the tide of student enthusiasm to a semblance of the support that the Big Blue team got last year. Injuries will be the only thing that can stop Varsity from taking Queen's here Saturday. The way those lads battled out there in the storm left no doubt as to their return to form and a fighting spirit. They were in there taking it and giving it with equal sincerity. The game was clean as games with McGill usually are. There was no sign of the rough stuff that has been so frequent in recent games and that has been played up for the over-excitement of a misinformed public by the downtown press.

McMaster and O.A.C. have been ordered to declare a winner in their group before the end of the week. It is also likely that Loyola College will play Varsity intermediates here during the week. Wednesday is the probable date for both games. The winners of these two games will play off for the intercollegiate intermediate championship of Canada. The Blue seconds were satisfied with a tie in Kingston Saturday as they had already won their group and were without the services of Islister. The juniors also defeated the Tricolour youngsters for their group title.

McGill, although losing out in the football race secured their fourth intercollegiate title Saturday when they romped off with the harrier crown. Varsity has three titles and they need the rugby headgear to tie the Redmen in this year's race for titles to date.

Tonight the Varsity hockey entry in the O.H.A. senior series plays its first scheduled game of the season against the Toronto at the Varsity Arena. These lads and Warren Stevens have a tough uphill grade to climb this year so give them all the support they deserve. It isn't likely that they will come through with any titles but you can count on them to try hard. We have the hope on the McGill hockey team for this year but time and space at this hour do not permit of more. We'll tell you about it in a day or two.

VARSITY SENIORS DEFEAT MCGILL TO TIE QUEEN'S FOR TITLE

what decided the issue. Sinclair's running for 30 yards on a fake kick turned the tide in the second half after the team had returned from the dressing room and a spirited speech by Mr. Stevens.

Varsity was in position for a possible touch three times and McGill once. Touches failed to result on all four occasions. McGill were stopped on their threat. The half-time whistle robbed the Blues of a chance to try even one play after they had secured on a McGill fumble one yard out. On the other two occasions outside kicks were sent up but a single was all that was secured on both tries.

In the opening moments of the game Sinclair kicked a single with Henderson getting an assist by his deadly tackle for the point. The Redmen came back in the first quarter and tied it up. Then in the second they counted two more singles. The third stanza went scoreless. In the final the Redmen scored another single while Varsity made two singles and two safety touches for six points in the last ten minutes of play.

McGill only used their third down twice in the whole game. Gilbert was carried off after the first play of the game and the same misfortune happened to him last week in the Queen's game. Stew Hennessy sustained a broken thumb and Jack Dawson after a gallant effort throughout his time in play, was carried off and it was later discovered that the ligaments in his leg had been badly torn. The Varsity victory and the Queen's defeat of the Mustangs places these two teams in a tie for first place with four wins and two losses apiece. The game here at the Varsity Stadium was a mighty struggle and one of the most sensational games played in the intercollegiate series in years. There was more football dished up in the last ten minutes than has been seen in any one game between the colleges this year. It was a mighty climax for the schedule. The teams:

Varsity — Flying wing, Dawson; halves, Arnuh, Sinclair, Burgoyne; quarter, Coulter; snap, Bell; insides, Warner, Bopp; middles, Peacock, Greco; outsiders, Bryers, Henderson; subs, Hennessy, Holden, Richardson, Harris, Alison, Keith, Copp, McQuigge.

McGill — Flying wing, Young; halves, Byrne, Westman, Gilbert; quarter, Olker; snap, Freeman; insides, Stockwell, McMorran; middles, Hornig, Letourneau; outsiders, Krukowski, Degnan; subs, Grae, Shughnessy, Wigle, Markham, Carsley, Drury, Savage, McLernon, Pierce.

Officials — Joe O'Brien, referee; Huddy Foster, umpire; Gar Kiell, head linesman.

ership of Jesus Christ, "the prince leader of the faith".

"Everywhere I am looking for young men and young women in our universities who are not saying 'How may I live the easiest life?' but are asking 'Where can I meet the greatest human needs?' Young men and women who will, if need be, make violent breaks with precedent, ally themselves with unpopular movements, and sacrifice themselves for what they believe to be right.

"We are summoned," concluded Dr. Mott, "to place ourselves at Christ's disposal because of who he is, of what he has done, and of the dominance of his power. We are summoned to engage in an unceasing and uncompromising warfare till death against everything that arrays itself against his reign."

score 2-0. This finished the scoring until Queen's tallied their lone point in the latter part of the game. The Tricolour were in an excellent position to pull the game out of the fire in the last quarter with a placement kick but Thompson's attempt was blocked. A series of forward passes placed Queen's in scoring position but they had to be content with a single.

Varsity — Flying wing, Powell; halves, Sweeney, Tafts, Stronach; quarter, Miller; snap, Jacobs; insides, Holt, O'Connell; middles, Thomas, Beedle; outsiders, Reid, Woods; subs,

TRINITY DEFEATED IN VOLLEYBALL GAME

Junior U.C. Decided Victors Despite Exciting Display of Opponents

With scores of 15-7, 14-6 and 11-4, the Jr. U.C. volleyball team won a close victory over Trinity in the upper gymnasium in Hart House on Friday afternoon. The game was, on the whole, exciting, though the losers were able to threaten their rivals only in the second game.

A fairly good brand of volleyball was displayed by both teams; there were, however, a large number of misjudged balls, and quite a few foot-faults were called on either side. Goulding played exceptionally well for U.C. and his team-mates, Grand and Blanchard also turned in sterling efforts. There were no slackers on the winning team; every man played fast and well. The pick of the Trinity team were Monteith, Whitbread and Gibbs.

U.C. — Lippman, Goulding, Gardstein, Weinstein, Savlor, Grand, MacFarlane, Blanchard, Damsky.

Trinity — Hayward, Monteith, W. D. Macdonald, Summerville, Whitbread, Gibbs, Blackford, Wykoff.

Referee — J. G. Vanderleek.

Cookfield, Rodway, MacLachlan, McPiersen, Buck, Phillips, Guy.

Queen's — Flying wing, M. Bews; halves, Turner, Young, Shepherd; quarter, Thompson; snap, Devlin; insides, Doherty, McAskin; middles, Park, Lewis; outsiders, Barry, Monteith; subs, Davoud, Corkill, Stein, Smith, Denny, Kingsmill, Delve, Niclde.

PLACE OF CROWN COUNSEL OUTLINED TO LAW CLUB

Mr. J. C. McRuer Exhorts Members to Conduct Cases Fairly and Tactfully

Thursday evening the Law Club was favoured with a stimulating address by Mr. J. C. McRuer, K.C., a lawyer prominent in local legal circles. Mr. McRuer outlined to the gathering in the junior U.C. common room the position of a Crown Counsel in prosecuting a criminal case, pointing out that at every turn in the preliminary hearings and the subsequent trial of an accused person the K.C. must guard against sacrificing fairness and unprejudiced treatment to the desire for proving a charge.

His exhortation to those members of the Law Club who hoped some day to be Counsels for the Crown was: "Conduct your cases fairly, and yet vigorously; tactfully, and yet not timidly. A lawyer will always strengthen his case in addressing the jury by being absolutely fair and by refusing to make any appeal to prejudice. Remember also to uphold the noble tradition of British law, that a man is innocent until proven guilty beyond a shadow of doubt. No man or woman should be convicted on a charge because of an inflammatory appeal by the prosecution to the emotions and prejudices of the jury."

FLIES STOP TRAFFIC

One of the strangest causes of traffic congestion occurred at Kirkaldy, Scotland, when a dense cloud more than a mile long of green flies known as aphids invaded High Street. Motorists had to drive with extreme caution, not only because the insects settled on the windshields, but because they got into the drivers' eyes.

GERMANY UNABLE TO PROMOTE WAR (Continued from Page 1)

take years. And another great war, with the world against it, with the possible exception of Austria, is not too favourable a prospect to the German nation.

The speaker told his audience that Hitler, in speaking of the Englishman, made comic on the stage, said: "We have underrated the Englishman, and we shall never do so again." For Hitler's view is that the amount of German propaganda during the war was appalling.

Mr. Bickersteth favoured his audience with a few reminiscences of the closing days of the war.

"We literally gasped," he stated, "when we heard the terms of peace proposed by Foch. Germany accepted the most crushing terms that any army in the whole of history has had to accept."

He told his hearers that after the war there was a great mental struggle and a spirit of unrest amongst those who had fought.

"We were the victors," said Mr. Bickersteth. "Put yourself into the position of the Germans, who not only had the mental strain, but also the agony of feeling themselves defeated."

The speaker said that the universities are all for Hitler now. A student does not get through his examinations unless he is in favour. "And," added Mr. Bickersteth, with his characteristic humour, "it is rather difficult."

Mr. Bickersteth stated in closing, that if we students were in Germany we would probably be Nazis.

"You may say you wouldn't," he said "But you haven't undergone all that the Germans have for the last fifteen years."

document, composed by a "brain trust" of the hon. lady member from Perth and himself.

"Ambition, which is to be found in every unit of society, the individual, the family, the nation, and even the race itself, would never tolerate annihilation," said Will Bradley in opposition to "Perth United". "Man may only be an infinitesimal spark of animated protoplasm (vide Hamlet), but his destruction is incalculable, on religious, aesthetic and ethical grounds."

The hon. lady member from Perth (Miss Ethel James) tried the effect of feminine blandishments on the blushing Speaker, John Anderson, who, susceptible lad, promptly increased her speaking time by ten minutes, while Miss Bernard, for the negative, was quite sure that the human race was progressing, but was uncertain in what direction.

After Owen Barrow had drawn a vivid picture of a certain member of the house, knee deep in a heavenly celery patch, dreaming of his fair one, the House decided to postpone annihilation for the present, and adjourned for refreshments.

MEMORIAL SERVICE

WELL ATTENDED

came from heart and minds that vividly recalled the horrors of war.

Before the snow-shrouded Soldiers' Tower, whose great bell pealed out in hollow tones the immemorial eleventh hour, students and faculty alike bowed their heads in silence for two minutes in tribute to the undying memory of those who laid down their lives in the last great struggle. The reverent hush spread like a spectre over the whole campus, all was motionless but for the slowly tumbling descent of the snow.

In front of the little wreath-strewn sanctuary, upon the walls of which are engraved the names of those of the university who lost their lives in battle, stood the venerable chancellor, Sir William Mulock, motionless and upright, beside a group of university leaders which included Sir Robert Falconer, the former president.

The services, led by Dr. Cody, the president, commenced at 10.52 a.m. A deep chord of music broke through the silence which had already gripped the solemn assembly, and the congregation, led by the Music Club of Victoria College, chanted out "O God our help in ages past", Dr. Cody, standing on a raised platform beneath the Tower, and pronounced the opening sentences. Then the assembly joined in the "Lord's Prayer". During the moments of silence a prayer, "In grateful remembrance of those who made the great sacrifice, O Lord, make us better men and women and give us peace in our time", was offered up in thought by the congregation. The two minute silence was broken by the shrill sounding of "The Last Post" and "Reveille".

The services were concluded with a benediction pronounced on the snow-muffled assembly by the president.

WOODSWORTH ASKS SUPPORT OF LEAGUE

Contents that We are Thinking Nationally in an International Age

CONOEMNS NATIONALISM

Special to "The Varsity"
Saskatoon, Saskatchewan (C.I.P.).—That we are thinking nationally in an international age was the keynote of the address by Mr. J. S. Woodsworth, M.P., in Convocation Hall here recently. Stressing the fact that the maintenance of the League is the only present safeguard for world peace, and that its breakdown will mean a return to national jealousies, and world war, the speaker pleaded for support of the League of Nations.

In continuing, Mr. Woodsworth claimed that nations were sacrificing the future good for present safety and gave as his opinion that the League of Nations, with four great nations on its withdrawal list, was in danger of breaking down. England, he stated, in her attitude towards the Manchukuo question, had taken a definite imperialistic attitude, and the League had failed to settle the problem because of selfish national attitudes. The members of the League were unable to do what everyone knew ought to be done, because of the political situation at home. Canada, he claimed, had followed England when a wonderful opportunity was presented to them as a disinterested party to stand out for internationalism.

Mr. Woodsworth said that economic nationalism is now developing, and that the German situation is simply an attempt to assert nationalism. Since Versailles we have failed to subordinate national to international safety. "We must do this," he declared, "regardless of consequences."

HONEST REPORTS OF NAZI ACTIONS LED TO EJECTION

Former Berlin Correspondent

PULITZER PRIZE WINNER

Forced to Leave Germany as Result of Despatches on Activities

Life under the shadow of the Swastika for a foreign correspondent—even an impartial, college-trained international observer—is no bed of roses, according to Edgar Ansel Mower, former Berlin correspondent of the Chicago Daily News, who will speak at Massey Hall Thursday.

Mr. Mower's vivid dispatches depicting conditions in post-war Germany were sufficient to win him the 1932 Pulitzer prize for foreign correspondents, but they also provoked the enmity of the Hitlerites, and in August he was banished from the Reich under threat of death. He is a graduate of the U. of Mich., the Sorbonne and the Univ. of Chicago, and for 20 years a foreign correspondent.

"Is there any freedom left the press in Germany under Hitler," The Varsity asked Mr. Mower in a mail interview, arranged when his visit was announced.

"There's very little freedom of anything," he answered. "And as for freedom of the press—there wasn't even enough to allow me to stay in the country."

"Is Hitler writing a new chapter in German history?" he was asked.

"Yes—he's writing a new chapter—but he's writing it backward. Germany is turning back the pages of history to the era of medieval barbarism," he replied.

"Would you say that university-trained writers, writing only impartial observations and news reports, were refused governmental sanction for their observation?"

"It's the truth that hurts, I'm afraid," he said. "My reports were not denunciatory editorials upon the German people but merely uncoloured news dispatches and reports of events that, while they did perhaps illustrate some of the inconsistencies and failures of Naziism, gave nothing but straight facts. Yet I was warned to leave the country."

"Do you bear any grudge against the German people or government as (Continued on Page 3)

LEONID SHOWER DUE THIS WEEK

University Observers Will be Stationed at Dunlap Observatory

EXPECT GOOD DISPLAY

The famous Leonid shower of shooting stars is due this week and unless it is much smaller than is expected we will witness one of the grandest spectacles of nature. One hundred years ago people were wakened out of their sleep to behold in the early morning hours, tens of thousands of shooting stars, all radiating from a point in the constellation Leo. There were so many of these meteors that they looked like a huge luminous umbrella covering the whole sky.

Although this phenomenon appears about every 33 years, the showers are not always as sensational as this. This year scientists are hoping for a fairly good display and expect we shall see them at the rate of several a minute at least. The three best nights for observation are Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, November 14, 15, 16, and the meteors should be the most numerous on the central date. The Leonids may be observed any time after midnight and the numbers per hour will increase until dawn.

A party of observers from the university will be stationed at the new David Dunlap Observatory. Mr. Ken Wright of the Astronomy Department will be in charge. Many elaborate preparations have been made, but they all depend necessarily on a clear night. Observers are to be equipped with star maps, and they will record the exact time and path of the Leonids. Mr. Wright stated that photographs will be made with small, fast cameras, some being equipped with prisms. These will give a spectra of the meteors and from this their composition can be ascertained. There are many other stations in United States and Canada and it is hoped that their combined results will be of great value astronomically.

CENTRAL BANK SCHEME MEETS WITH FAVOUR

Idea is in Keeping with the Times, Says Professor Parkinson

AIOS CREDIT CONTROL

Adequate Safeguards Needed to Prevent Political Interference

"I consider that the recommendations of the Commission are in line with the more intelligent and progressive thought on matters of monetary policy today," stated Professor J. F. Parkinson of the Department of Economics, when interviewed by The Varsity yesterday on the report of the MacMillan Commission on banking which recommends the immediate establishment of a central bank in Canada.

When asked by The Varsity as to whether he thought the central bank should have the right to issue notes, Mr. Parkinson replied: "To the ordinary man in the street or in the bank the establishment of a central bank will make no difference to his relations with the commercial banks. Borrowing will be just as difficult to some as it is easy to others."

"Do you think that Mr. Beaudry Leman's contention that the time for a central bank in Canada is at present inopportune because of the existing economic conditions is valid?" The Varsity asked.

"It is the unsatisfactory nature of present economic conditions that supports the case for independent, non-profit making monetary control," replied Mr. Parkinson. "It is hardly to be expected that we should get reform (Continued on Page 3)

NEW ECONOMIC SYSTEM ADVISED

Commerce Club Hears Mail-land Address on Current Problems

RELIEF WORK DISCUSSED

"If nothing in the capitalist system can put things straight then another system should be and will be tried," stated Sir Arthur Steel-Maitland, Chairman of the Governors of the London School of Economics, in an address before the Commerce Club.

Deplored the fact that no one took the same trouble with political difficulties as they did with a private business of their own he went on to show how our present system of inaugurating public works campaigns during times of depression was only a camouflage for relief works. As an extreme example of what he meant he cited a case in Norwich, England, where one group of men were employed to dig up a bit of earth and another group later employed to level the same earth.

England was rather more fortunate than the other countries during the depression, he thought, and Russia perhaps suffered more than any other country during the depression but the Russian plan will, he feels certain, ultimately succeed although it must take longer than five years. A communist government by virtue of its dictatorial power can, by a trial and error method, rule a country and make such mistakes as would result in a change of government in our system, he explained, tracing something of the results of a communist system.

"The only policy is a sort of midway one," he went on to explain.

GERMAN ELECTIONS HAVE NO MEANING

Result a Foregone Conclusion, Says Professor N. A.
Mackenzie

LARGEST VOTE IN HISTORY

"The elections in Germany last Sunday have absolutely no significance to any student of the situation. The result was a foregone conclusion among the nations of the world," was the opinion of Professor N. A. Mackenzie of the Department of Law.

Nearly forty-four million Germans flocked to the polls during the day and over ninety-three per cent of the electorate was in accord with Hitler's withdrawal from the League of Nations and the disarmament conference. It was the largest vote in the history of the nation—and six hundred and sixty Nazi candidates were elected, to form a one-party Reichstag. Although the outcome was startling, it was preceded by such a campaign, utilising all the devices known to propaganda, that great things were expected. Chorus, drums, bugles and church bells called every person to vote. Banners bearing the required word "Ja" were everywhere in evidence and the response, in many cases, was so great that people waited in line for hours to reach the polls.

"The results are a high tribute to the efficiency of the Nazi government in conducting their elections. But an election, strictly speaking, is a matter of choice for the voter and this, being a one-way affair, really ceased to be a true election." The only manner in which opposition to the Nazi slate could be shown was by invalidating the ballot. There were over three million who so spoiled their ballot. "But that has no significance either, for among so many there is bound to be a few who are against any measure put up."

When asked why there were so many seemingly contradictory statements issuing from Germany with regard to war, Professor Mackenzie said that these reports were intended for two factions: While in power Hitler must live up to the expectations of his people and lead Germany back to the place she once held among the great nations of the world. Hence we hear of his election patriotic campaign appealing for support to "fight for Germany's honour" to a battle to wipe out all memory of her defeat in the Great War and her "dishonour" in the Treaty of Versailles which followed. On the other hand the Chancellor must issue statements to pacify other (Continued on Page 3)

Special Convocation

At a special convocation to be held in Convocation Hall on Monday, November 20 at 8.30 p.m. the University will confer the honorary degree of Doctor of Architecture on Sir Raymond Unwin, immediate past president of the Royal Institute of Architecture. ### SENATE MAKES SPECIAL AWARDS

Medical Advisor for Colonies Receives Honorary Degree from Toronto

SCHOLARSHIPS ANNOUNCED

The Senate of the University held its regular monthly meeting last Friday evening and conferred degrees upon 119 candidates. The proceedings were watched with interest by the friends of the candidates.

The first degree to be conferred was the honorary degree of Doctor of Science, which was conferred upon Dr. A. T. Stanton, C.M.G., M.D., C.M. (Trin.), Chief Medical Adviser to the Secretary of State for the Colonies. Dr. Stanton was to have received this degree at the opening of the Banting Institute in 1930, but was unable to be present on that occasion, and the degree has now been conferred upon him in absentia by special statute of the Senate.

The following awards were made: The David Dunlap Memorial Scholarship in Psychology (Graduate)—J. D. M. Griffin.
